

Forsaken

Story: Forsaken

Storylink: <https://www.fanfiction.net/s/10503231/1/>

Category: Kick-Ass

Genre: Romance/Friendship

Author: skca54

Authorlink: <https://www.fanfiction.net/u/5783556/>

Last updated: 07/16/2018

Words: 1059008

Rating: M

Status: In Progress

Content: Chapter 1 to 366 of 366 chapters

Source: FanFiction.net

Summary: Mindy is on the run. Running further than ever before. She was safe, she had freedom; now all that has been taken away. A tangential variation on 'Solitude'. This story is a universe unto itself and has spawned eight other stories, not to mention a cross-over with 'Gotham' and another with 'Stargate:Atlantis'. As of January 2018, early chapters have been updated (1-40).

Chapter 1*: Forsaken

Author's Note: This is my fourth story. As I have mentioned before, I was inspired to write these stories by the many amazing Authors on Fan Fiction who write Kick-Ass Stories. We all know who they are. However, my top author and inspiration has to be Makokam and his epic saga Precocious Crush. I am sure many readers will agree with this.

This story is intended as an alternative, tangent, version based on my other story 'Solitude'. This story takes over at the end of Solitude Chapter 6 - Training. It replaces Chapter 7 - Found, and the chapters that follow. I am not expecting the two stories to come back together. If you haven't read Solitude - please read it. However, the synopsis is basically that Mindy has left New York, Dave and everything behind. I have taken some artistic licence as to events that may or may not have occurred between the two movies.

Also, please excuse any geographical errors as I am relying on Google Earth! I have been to the USA, but that was many years ago.

As usual I look forward, with some trepidation, to any reviews. I promise to accept any and all criticism. Also, I am still British so my spelling and grammar may look and seem strange to some.

I was running.

I was scared.

I was alone.

I had nothing, but the clothes on my back . . . and the blood on my hands.

My safety, my freedom, it had all been forsaken.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 2*: Found

Day 41

New York City

My cell was ringing.

I checked the name on the phone; it was Marty!

"Hi, Marty, been a while," I offered cheerfully.

"Hi, Dave. I think I might have unwelcome news," Marty said slowly. "I'm in Chicago, you know, getting away from all that shit a few weeks back. Well, I was in a cab on the South Side of Chicago and I saw the cops were doing something near an apartment block. Something caught my eye and I told the cab to stop. Dave, I don't know how to say this, but. . . The cops were loading a motorcycle onto a flat bed. It was a purple Ducati with. . ."

". . .the initials 'HG' on the side," I finished.

Oh, God.

Mindy.

"See . . . see what you can find out, Marty . . . but just keep it quiet: no names, okay," I said. "I need to go, I'll call you later . . . and Marty – thanks."

I couldn't hold it any longer; I sank to the floor and I cried – I lost control completely. I had lost Mindy. She'd been in Chicago, that phone call. . . It had been her – it just had to have been.

Where was she now? Arrested?

The Police had her Ducati . . . how could she travel?

Oh, God.

Oh, God.

Marcus' House

I knocked on the door.

"Who's there?" Marcus' voice called, after a minute.

"It's me, Dave," I replied.

The door was unlocked and thrown open. Marcus quickly pulled me in and closed the door.

"What is it, Dave? It's trouble, I can see it in your face. Please . . . not Mindy?" Marcus asked with some trepidation.

"Her motorcycle was just impounded by the Police in Chicago," Dave said quietly. "I don't know what to do . . . I need help. I have a friend in Chicago; he saw the cops take the Ducati. Marty, he looked about and . . . well, there was a murder . . . a man . . ."

"Oh, God! No!" Marcus fell back onto the couch. "I . . . give me a minute."

Marcus got out his cell phone and started making a call. I noticed some papers on the table; they were pictures of vehicles. I recognised the car on the top page: it was red and black; a custom Mustang. It was the fucking 'Mist Mobile'.

Marcus came back after a few minutes.

"I called in a favour. There was a murder, on the South Side of Chicago and they did seize a purple Ducati. The Police think it may have been gang related; the victim was stabbed in a very professional manner - their words, not mine. The Ducati was found abandoned, near the body. This happened very early this morning, I believe."

"So, they haven't linked anything to Mindy, yet? Or to Hit Girl?" I asked and I felt relieved at Marcus' expression.

"Not, yet," Marcus replied. "It must have been Mindy; she must have been surprised and just reacted. Oh, God!"

"Marcus, that car . . . why is it there?" I asked pointing at the papers.

"What? Oh, that. It's going for scrap, in the next few days; its been at the pound for almost five years. Belonged to one of those Hero idiots," Marcus said offhandedly.

"I know. But do you know who the last person to drive it was?" I asked. "It was Mindy."

"What?" Marcus looked incredulous.

"Can the car be bought?" I asked.

Two days later

I now had a car.

Mindy, I am sure, will be mad; assuming I ever get her back.

I had just spent $68,000 of her 'retirement fund in a suitcase'. But I'd worry about Mindy's anger, if I ever get her back. At least I now had transport; I had had a garage change the fluids, plugs, and filters as it had been sitting still for quite a while. I packed my gear and grabbed some 'special items' from the Safehouse. That evil bastard, Red Mist, had shown me some convenient hiding places in the Mustang. Not exactly low key, but it would do. The garage also disabled some of the weird lighting, to at least make the car a little less conspicuous. My gear also included the full Kick-Ass suit and armour, as well as some other items that I considered might be needed down the line.

My first job – find Marty. My second job – find Mindy's apartment. My third job - find Mindy.

I was never going to stop.

I would find her.

No matter what.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 3: First Step

Day 45

Chicago, Illinois

I had finally met up with Marty in Chicago.

After he had stopped drooling over the Mist Mobile – I really needed to change that fucking name – he showed me where he had seen the Ducati being recovered by the Police. I soon found myself standing, almost exactly, where the Ducati had been found on East 78th Street, on Chicago's South Side. There were quite a few apartment blocks nearby; could Mindy have had an apartment in one of them? Possibly, but we had nowhere else to start.

I gave Marty a photo of Mindy and he started checking out apartments while I drove around the area, in the slim hope that I might see my Mindy. I really was grasping at any straw I could get my hands on. Four days had passed since the Ducati had been seized; was Mindy even still in Chicago? Would I even recognise her? Marcus would let me know if she was picked up by the Police; an altogether bad outcome. Every time I saw a petite girl with blonde hair, I slowed to check. None of them was Mindy – I needed to be careful, though, or I'd get myself arrested for kerb-crawling. Chicago was a fascinating city, but also being a city, it was very large. Mindy could be anywhere – if she was still in Chicago at all. Finally, I took Marty back to his folks, at around six in the evening, and then went back to my motel. We had agreed that I would pick Marty up in the morning and we would continue working through the apartment blocks on East 78th Street.

I spent the evening thinking about Mindy. I also considered how much I missed her and I was determined to find her. The drive to Chicago had seemed to take forever, but I had had to keep to the speed limits as much as possible to avoid attracting any Police attention to the Mustang – which attracted enough attention as it was. Before I went to bed, I contacted Marcus to say that I had arrived safely and that so far, I had nothing. Marcus commented that, in this case, no news was also good news.

I went to bed feeling very down that night.

I was really miserable.

The room I was using stank and I mean, it really stank. I'd not even seen any cockroaches but that might have only been because cockroaches had better taste, I thought sourly. It was however cheap and slightly off the grid and at that point, I needed anonymity.

Thanks to the room, I stank. I needed to get some different clothes; I'd worn my current clothing for over four days. I had a total of $163 in my pocket: a big come down from $3million in a suitcase! I had even managed to lose my fucking purse; it must have fallen out during the attack or soon after. I had never thought to check at the time which was so stupid. At that moment, though, I thought about calling Dave again but I decided against it; it would only drag him into the shitty situation that I had found myself in.

I had really fucked up, this time – no question about it. As I looked back, I wasn't really sure why I was even going out on the Ducati. I had just wanted to get out for a bit, maybe; it was early on, on that morning, and I would not easily have been noticed. I definitely had not expected some fucking cunt to try and take the fucking Ducati off me. He had made a mistake, a big mistake: he had pulled a knife and I had then made an even bigger mistake as my training had taken over. Within seconds, the guy was dead on the floor with his own fucking knife embedded under his sternum. My hands were covered in blood; the knife must have ruptured his heart and then I must have panicked.

Why the fuck did I panic? I was better than that! I ran. I didn't stop to think. I didn't stop to grab my gear. I just ran. Stupid, so stupid! I was so fucking stupid. I had a Balisong in my pocket and that was it – no other weapons. I'd had less, though; Daddy had taught me well. Nonetheless, I was going to need every skill that I possessed to survive; I had no idea if the Police were hunting for me . . . yet.

Should I leave the city, or should I use the city to hide? So many questions with so few answers.

I went to bed feeling very down that night.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 4*: Second Step

Day 47

Chicago

It was ten in the morning.

Marty and I were checking out the last two apartment blocks on our list. The next block of apartments had four floors and a flat roof. Marty started work on the first floor and asked if anybody had seen Mindy. I drove around the block, having a last look before I parked the car by the kerb. As I got out of the Mustang, something caught my eye. I looked down at the base of a bush, tucked almost out of sight was something purple.

I felt my heart skip a beat.

Purple equalled Hit Girl which in turn equalled Mindy – at least I hoped so. I grabbed the item which turned out to be Mindy's purse; I recognised it instantly. It wasn't large or all that feminine – apart from being purple – but it was very Mindy. My hands shook as I opened the purse. Inside were some assorted dollar notes and loose change, two keys and a driver's licence with Mindy's photo, but a different name - Megan Williams, and she lived . . . the address on the licence was in New York City; crap! I found a letting agent card in the purse with an address written on the back: East 78th Street and the apartment building directly in front of me which Marty had just entered.

Holy, fuck!

Jackpot: one of the keys fitted the main door to the building. So, the other key. . . I grabbed a blustering Marty and hauled him up to the third floor. I stopped outside apartment 309 and I inserted the key, paused, and then tried turning it. The key turned easily in the well-oiled lock.

I pushed the door open.

..._...

The apartment was empty, but there was a familiar scent in the air.

There was also a beeping sound coming from beside the door; an alarm panel. Oh, shit! I quickly pulled Marty into the apartment and closed the door quietly. There was only one thing I could try; I punched in the code from the Safehouse in New York. The panel beeped once and the green 'disarmed' light illuminated. I breathed a sigh of relief; that had been close!

I looked in the fridge and that told us that nobody had been in the apartment for a number of days. Mindy would never leave a mess; she was too tidy. It was obvious that she was gone and gone for good. I searched the apartment, easily, considering it was so small – not to mention that I knew some of Mindy's habits. I grabbed her pack and started packing all of her clothes and other things into it. I found her Hit Girl costume and I stared at it for a few minutes before carefully folding it and placing it into the pack. During the search, I had also found a number of weapons and a large amount of cash which I also stuffed into the pack. I hoped that I had found everything that Mindy had in the apartment as I did not want to leave any trace, in case the Police found the apartment. Once I was happy that nothing was left, I locked up the apartment and placed the pack in the Mustang's capacious trunk. Marty and I then drove off.

We drove around Chicago for an hour, thinking hard and trying to find where to go next to track down the elusive Mindy. Suddenly, I remembered something which Mindy had told me during my many training sessions: Mindy had said that drug dealers were the vigilantes ATM. Mindy would need cash and I knew that Mindy could fight; even without her weapons.

Feeling a little happier, I called Marcus and informed him that we had found Mindy's apartment and that we had cleaned it out. I also asked him to let us know if he had heard of any drug dealers being turned over or killed anywhere near Chicago over the past week.

The day had been a bit of a blur.

During the morning, I went out and bought some hair dye. By lunchtime, I had gone from being a petite blonde, to a petite brunette. It was a start at least and I had also managed to pick up some cheap looking, but clean clothes – I binned my old ones. How did I pay for it all? I had managed to increase my available cash thanks to a generous drug dealer who happened to fall unconscious in front of me a couple of days ago. I had had one weird moment, when I could have sworn that I had seen a red and black car that looked extremely familiar; but I just could not remember where from. Anyway, that car would be of no use to me whatsoever.

I had been running the streets, after dark, each night to keep myself in trim. I flipped the Balisong around most evenings to relieve the boredom – actually managed to nick myself the other night; first time that had happened since I was eleven! Other times I just sat there and cried; I just could not stop it. I felt complete despair. I needed to kill someone, go back to my predatory ways; it would help alleviate the despair, channel the rage and anger elsewhere.

..._...

It was dark.

I went out wearing black combat style trousers, a black shirt, boots, and a dark purple hooded top. I had fashioned a mask, very similar to that which I had worn when I was eleven. I left via the window and I headed towards what, for me, would be Chicago's more pleasurable areas. It did not take long to find a target; the cunt was busy raping a woman in an alley. He never knew what hit him, as I drew the Balisong across his throat, from behind, and soaked the woman, below, in blood.

"Go!" I snarled at the woman who screamed and ran.

I searched the body and found a nice Glock 26 automatic pistol. It was small and compact, a nine-millimetre. The magazine currently held six rounds instead of the usual ten. It wasn't the newest model and not in the greatest condition, but I would give it a good clean and it should be fine. I would need to find some more rounds, though, but it was a very common calibre so that should not be much of a problem. I wiped the Balisong on the man's clothes and folded it, before returning it to my pocket. I also found a decent sized roll of cash on him which found a new home in my pocket. I briefly looked for any obvious blood on my clothes but could not see any. I left the alley quickly after that.

I made my way back to my room, quickly but via a roundabout route and had a shower. I checked my clothes, again, and myself for blood – all appeared okay. I counted the cash – over twelve hundred dollars which was not bad for a night out. I then lay in my skanky bed and thought about my life to that point and I tried not to think about New York and Dave.

Dave.

I could not believe that he was eight hundred miles away – might as well have been a million.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 5: Searching

Day 55

Chicago

The searching continued.

It had been almost two weeks, now, since Marty had first seen the Ducati being seized.

Marty had gone back to New York and I was currently alone again. Marcus had been in contact and he had advised me that there was somebody who was busy taking out or attacking drug dealers plus one or two rapists. Not surprisingly, there were no witnesses to the attacks; any survivors never saw anything, of course. Marcus emphasised, that no innocents were attacked; it had to be Mindy.

Marcus was worried, very worried. He felt that the forced exile and loneliness could be affecting Mindy mentally and as a result, bringing out her more psychotic behaviour as a defence and hence resorting to a more predatory behaviour to survive. Marcus was concerned that if this went on, unchecked, Mindy might be lost forever, or worse, the Police would catch her and probably shoot first, ask questions later. I had to find her. She was obviously going out at night so I would need to do the same. Over the past week or so, I had been walking all over Chicago, learning the streets and routes.

Kick-Ass was about to visit Chicago's seedier locations that night.

I was wearing the full Kick-Ass costume with body armour.

I kept to the shadows, as I moved about the City. What would Mindy be dressed like? I would have to be careful whom I approached as it might be Mindy and she might attack first, out of pure feral instinct. This was my third night out and so far, I had seen nothing more than a few lowlifes who crept through alleyways carrying out their nefarious activities. One man told me, reluctantly, of a part of town which had gained a reputation over the past week or so, as a bad place for criminals to be. There was a black and purple menace, apparently, who was killing and maiming.

At last, information – useful information! Mindy was wearing black and purple, not overly surprising, I thought. Purple would make her feel comfortable, something she could feel in touch with, and something that she could relate to and, I hoped, keep some of her sanity. Purple had been a part of her life since she was six. That was good news, keeping in touch with her past life should be mentally stabilising, my amateur psychologist skills told me.

Without a thought for my own personal safety, I headed for the indicated part of town.

..._...

Over the space of three hours, I moved from alley to alley. By ten o'clock, it was getting late and I was not having much success.

I was resting between two dumpsters when I heard a scuffling sound; somebody was moving up the alley. I looked out – carefully – to see a man with a hood pulled up over his head. The man was shuffling through the alley and then, without any warning, something appeared out of nowhere and kicked him to the ground. Before the man could utter a word or put up a defence against his attacker, a Balisong knife was driven into his throat and twisted. I could hear the man's gurgling, as his life ebbed away within seconds.

I moved to stand up and I opened my mouth to call out, but the attacker instantly turned to look in my direction and then fled.

..._...

A thought suddenly occurred to me, as I ran after the attacker: what should I call out?

Should I yell 'Hit Girl' or should I yell 'Mindy'? Using her real name could get her into shit and she would not forgive me for doing that. However, did she want her Hit Girl identity shouted around Chicago? I could, of course, be completely wrong and it might be somebody else. Although the chances of another teenaged, blood-thirsty vigilante running around Chicago were very slim. Finally, I chose just to yell something generic.

"Hey!" I called loudly and I saw the 'attacker' hit hesitate for just a few seconds, before she continued running.

I felt joy inside me.

It had been Mindy; I could tell from the body language. The attacker was petite, with a feminine figure, despite the baggy clothing. She moved like Hit Girl and I knew that Mindy's favourite small blades were her Balisongs and she always kept them razor sharp. Most important of all: she was alive. Even better, she was not taking risks. She had not stopped to fight me; she had simply fled the scene. Clever girl.

I was so close; I had her in my sights.

I shot out of the alleyway and across the, thankfully, deserted street. I followed the fleeing girl into another alley where she dodged down a side passageway. She obviously knew where she was going, whereas I did not. I followed her down the same passageway. She was fast, but I was faster with my longer legs, however, Mindy was more compact and therefore more manoeuvrable. I also wore body armour, which was heavy. Nevertheless, I gave it my all but even then, I was losing ground on Mindy.

I was just in time to catch sight of Mindy, as she jumped upwards and with acrobatic ease, she grasped a fire escape and then scrambled nimbly upwards. I ran hard to the same fire escape and easily jumped upwards, but the climb was sapping my energy reserves at an alarming rate. I hauled myself upwards and saw Mindy's shoes vanishing over the parapet at the roof level of the apartment block. I rushed up the remaining levels of the fire escape and leapt over the parapet to find a very empty rooftop. I looked in every direction and down into the alleys that I could see.

She had vanished.

Nevertheless, I still felt joy inside me. I had seen my Mindy. Now, I just needed to find her again and I hoped, talk to her.

I slept well that night.

I missed my score that night.

Somebody had been watching me. They had watched me kill that dealing bastard. I had decided, days ago, that I would pick my fights and only fight where I had the upper hand and where I could guarantee success; an unknown assailant was not a fight to pick, not right now. Strangely, though, the interloper had appeared vaguely familiar in the darkness and that voice – no, that was impossible. I would try again tomorrow night. I was enjoying the killing; it was keeping my anger and my despair in check. But as Daddy had taught me, I had not hurt a single innocent – only the fucking scum that deserved to die.

I did not sleep well.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 6: Contact

Day 57

Chicago

It was not until two nights, and many hours of searching later, that I was finally able to find Mindy again.

Unfortunately, it did not go well, nor was it the meeting up that I had had in mind. I had heard the shouting from the other end of the darkened alley as I was checking out yet another dark and smelly alley or which Chicago had hundreds, if not thousands.

It had been Mindy's 'Hit Girl' voice.

"You fucking cocksuckers! Get the fuck off of me! I'll fucking. . ."

She was in trouble!

I ran towards her voice as fast as I could. As I came around a dumpster I could make out three dark shapes rolling about the alley floor and I figured that the smallest of the three was Mindy – unfortunately, she was at the bottom of the pile! I ran in and kicked the top man in the kidney with my boot, before throwing him against the alley wall where he collapsed, unconscious. I grabbed the next man and pounded his face against the concrete floor of the alley until the concrete started to turn red, only then did I finally let him go.

I turned to face the person in the final layer only to find Mindy glaring up at me, ready to pounce at this new assailant – me. The moonlight glinted, momentarily, across her face. I knew it was her; despite the mask and clothing, I would recognise those adorable green eyes anywhere. There was a brief flash of recognition in those eyes and then she scrambled to her feet.

"What the fuck do you want? I don't need your fucking help, cunt! I was managing those fuckers!" she growled at me in feral anger.

Every word stung me. What the hell, had gotten into her?

"Mindy, are you okay?" I asked, feeling a surge of happiness that I had found Mindy and that I was finally able to talk with her.

"Yeah, Dave, everything's fucking peachy!" Mindy retorted angrily and the happiness within me started to fade.

"Can we go someplace to talk?" I asked, tentatively as I looked around the darkened alley where it felt anything but safe.

"What the fuck do we have to talk about?" Mindy retorted and she walked off down the alley while I just stood there; I was stunned at her behaviour. "Well, are you fucking coming, or are you just gonna stand there looking like a dick?"

Not even a smirk, no emotion. I followed her, thoughts racing through my mind with one at the foremost: 'this was not my Mindy!' This was an older version of the vicious little girl that I had first met, years before, just after her Daddy had died. I followed Mindy through various alleyways, until we came to a shitty-looking building where she climbed two floors up a dodgy-looking fire escape and then levered open a window, before jumping through. I followed her up and then through the window.

After stepping through, I closed the window and the blinds before turning towards Mindy.

..._...

Mindy flipped the main light on.

She looked a fucking mess – nothing else came to mind. Her clothes were covered in grime as well as dried blood. She pulled off the hooded top and her mask. Her face looked just the same as I remembered it but she was now a brunette, instead of her beautiful blonde colour.

"Had a good fucking look?" Mindy snapped.

Again, no emotion. I pulled off my mask and I smiled at her. She did not smile back.

"I missed you, Mindy," I began and I took a step towards her; Mindy stepped back, away from me, like I was somebody to be avoided.

"I missed you, too, Dave. But that's in the fucking past!" Mindy said and this time I heard a slight crack in her voice.

My Mindy was in there, somewhere; there was still hope.

"What the fuck are you doing here, anyways?" Mindy demanded nastily. "How did you fucking find me? If you found me then fucking anybody can!"

That fucking stung!

"Mindy . . . I came to Chicago looking for you. I found out you were here; I was told about your Ducati being seized and I found your apartment. I've been searching Chicago for two weeks . . . looking for you," I explained calmly – even thought I was feeling angry.

"Why the fuck would you want to come after me?" Mindy retorted like I was some demented idiot. "I'm a fucking fugitive, Dave!"

"Cut the crap, Mindy!" I snapped - she was really starting to piss me off now. "You fucking know why I came after you; I fucking care about what happens to you."

"Nobody fucking cares about me!" Mindy yelled back at me. "It was your fucking fault. You were the reason that I had to leave New York. It was your fucking fault my Daddy died. Just fucking stay away from me!"

I snapped – she had crossed the line.

"Okay, I can take it," I retorted. "Throw all the shit at Dave; just like you always fucking do! Why the fuck did I put up with you and your crap? I let you beat the crap outta me for fucking weeks! I am beginning to wish that I had never fucking met you, Mindy Macready. I have wasted way too much of my fucking life on you. Maybe I should have left you, cowering, in that fucking kitchen cupboard and let you be blown the hell up! You want to be a psychotic, bad-ass bitch, then good luck to you; have a nice fucking life!"

I turned towards the window, angrier than I had ever felt.

I tried to reply, but I couldn't.

My throat had gone dry. I watched as he pulled back the blinds, threw open the window and then . . . he was gone. I started shaking and I mean shaking; I'd never felt like that way before: I was scared. Why the fuck did I shout at Dave? Dave was the only person that I had left; but now he was gone.

Well done, Mindy, that was your best fucking decision yet! You stupid, fucking bitch! I lay on the bed and I cried and cried. I could not stop shaking or crying. Fuck the bastard; if he was gonna abandon me, too, then I did not fucking need him.

I'd survived so far, on my own.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 7*: Wounded

Day 58

Chicago

I woke up still raging about the previous night.

I had found her.

I had found Mindy.

But not my Mindy.

I had meant every word which I had yelled at her. I felt like packing up and going back to New York and giving up on her; I'd lost her, for good. But . . . I decided to give her one more chance.

Just the one.

I started to gather my thoughts and figure out how I could get through to Mindy. I called Marcus and I told him that I had found Mindy. He was overjoyed, but he could tell by my tone that there was a catch. I explained the catch to Marcus and he wasn't exactly surprised. It was as we had discussed: Mindy had withdrawn into herself mentally. She was on autopilot.

I advised Marcus that I was going to have another go at getting through to her and he wished me luck.

..._...

That night, I sat in the darkness of a rubbish-strewn, stinking alley, watching Mindy's window.

Her room was empty, I'd already checked, earlier that evening.

At about ten that night, I clocked a movement in the alley beside the fire escape. It might have been Mindy; the build was right. However, something looked off; the person was staggering. Suddenly, the person collapsed onto the floor of the alley amidst the rubbish and God only knew what.

Oh, shit! Please, not Mindy.

I ran down the alley and found a black and purple clad Mindy; she was breathing, but not moving and her eyes were closed. I scooped her up, just as I had done all those years before and I carried her up to her room, via the fire escape and the window. I placed her down, gently, on the bed before I closed the window and the blinds. Finally, I pulled off my mask and dumped my pack on the floor. I then turned on the light. The sight before me did not look good.

I pulled off my gloves and touched her top – my hand came away red; the purple top was soaked in blood. I pulled the top off, over her head. Underneath she wore a black shirt and it too, was sodden with blood. I felt a surge of panic as I ripped open the shirt and my heart sank; her pale skin was covered in blood. I searched her pockets, found the Balisong in her pants pocket and I used it to cut the shirt off her. I searched for the wound, working my way down her left side and then across her stomach to her right side. There, I found the wound; it was under her right arm, just below the level of her breasts and it looked like a bullet wound. I checked the shirt. Yes, two holes, one in and one out. Thank God – there was no bullet stuck in her.

Mindy, what the fuck did you get yourself involved with, tonight? I searched her room and found some antiseptic liquid, sterile gauze, and a bandage. I cleaned the wound as best I could; the bleeding seemed to have eased, which was a good sign. I then covered the open wound with the gauze and wrapped the bandage, tightly, around her chest; thankfully, the bullet just seemed to have grazed her.

Next, I pulled off her boots and pants then checked the rest of her body for wounds. She had some vicious bruises on her left thigh and a small bruise on her forehead; but no more bullet wounds and no other visible, major injuries. Quite a few smaller bruises and cuts, but otherwise nothing else.

Finally, I pulled the sheets and blankets over Mindy and then I sat down in a chair over by the window and I watched her for the next hour or two before I finally fell into a relieved asleep.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 8: Final Step

Day 59

Chicago

I awoke with a start and something was not right.

Something cold was pressing against my temple, it felt like cold steel. I opened my eyes to find a wild-eyed and half-naked Mindy staring down at me; she held a pistol to my head.

"What the fuck are you doing in my fucking room, asshole?" She growled, dangerously.

"You were shot, so I carried you up here," I explained, calmly.

"Are you fucking deaf or just an idiot?" Mindy growled, more dangerously. "Did you not hear me, the other fucking night? I don't need your fucking help, cunt!"

Now Mindy had gone too fucking far! I pushed the gun away from my head and I stared up at her.

"Get that gun away from my fucking head, girl! You want to fucking shoot me, then go ahead if you've got the guts, otherwise fucking shut up and listen!" I snarled, viciously, at Mindy, who took a step back and she looked like I had just slapped her.

She did not say anything, but she did lower the gun.

"Mindy, you are a fifteen-year-old girl, but you're fucking behaving like a fucking twelve-year-old! It is time to grow the fuck up! I am fucking sorry that I caused you to leave New York! I am fucking sorry that I had a hand in your Daddy dying! I'm fucking sorry for caring about a fucking little bitch, like you!" I yelled at her.

Mindy dropped the gun to the floor and she backed away from me; she was shaking. I stood up and took a step towards her but Mindy flinched away from me.

"But I am not fucking sorry for coming back here, last night to give you another chance to come to your fucking senses!" I roared, almost directly into her face. "I am fucking overjoyed that I was here last night, because a stupid little girl got herself fucking shot! Didn't you, Mindy?"

I turned around and grabbed something from my pack.

"You, Mindy are making mistake after fucking mistake. Mistakes this girl would never have fucking made!" I yelled and I threw the top of Mindy's Hit Girl costume at her.

She flinched again; just as if I had just thrown a knife at her.

"I'm also overjoyed that I was able to clean up your wound and make sure that you were safe! However, . . . I don't know you anymore. You are not the Hit Girl or even the Mindy Macready that I once knew and loved, yes loved. I'm sorry for getting in your fucking way; you can go back to being a heartless, psychotic, bitch!" I continued, without any emotion in my voice.

I turned, picked up my pack and I started to pull back the blinds.

I was out of there.

It was over.

"Dave – please – don't go . . . I . . ." I tried, before I broke down and I started to sob as I sank to my knees.

I couldn't stop shaking; every word that Dave had uttered had hit me like a knife, I had felt every word and I fucking deserved every word.

My chest hurt; I was starting to feel light-headed and I felt something running down my right side. I touched my side with my left hand and as I pulled it away and looked at it, I saw that my hand had come away red. Dave grabbed hold of me and laid he me down on the bed, none too gently.

"You, stupid bitch, you've opened the damn wound back up!" Dave snarled as he ripped the bandage off.

I screamed, as he wiped the wound, very roughly, with antiseptic, then he covered the wound with gauze and wrapped the bandage back around me. I still held my Hit Girl costume in my left hand and I brought it up to my face, so I could look at it. Dave was right; Hit Girl would not have made all of those fucking mistakes and, yes, it was time for me to fucking grow up; I was going to be sixteen in two weeks, for God's sake. Yes, I had fucked up the previous night and managed to get myself shot. If Dave had not been there for me . . . then I would have bled out and I would probably be very dead right now.

I owed Dave, again; he had saved my life and he was about to do it again. I fucking hated being a teenager, it sucked big time. I had never seen Dave get so mad before and he scared me; I could hardly believe that I was scared of him, but I was fucking scared of him right at that moment.

"Well, Mindy! What the fuck is it going to be?" I snarled, nastily, looking down at her.

I was really wound up now; I was raging. Mindy was trying to force her way down through the bed, away from me. What was that in her eyes? Fear? What the fuck?

I thought that I might have finally got through to the real Mindy Macready, not Hit Girl or that fucking freak from the other night. Before me was the real, fifteen-year-old girl underneath; the girl who had climbed through my window on the night of the 'date-ditch'.

My rage started to die as I sat down on the bed, grabbed her hand and held it tightly.

"Look, Mindy. I didn't come all this way to hurt you or to yell at you. I just wanted you back, I need you and I've really missed you," I explained, quietly.

Mindy stopped crying and she sat up, grimacing with pain.

"I'm really sorry, Dave. I've been a complete bitch to you and I don't know how I can ever make it up to you. I know that I've made some whopping mistakes since I left New York and thanks, thanks for saving my life, again. I'm really, really glad you've been in my life, Dave. I could never have got by my Daddy dying or my other problems, since, without your help. Please forgive me. Please forgive me for everything I said to you the other night – I was being childish and stupid," Mindy said, looking very ashamed.

I hugged her, tightly. She dropped the Hit Girl costume, wrapped her left arm around me, and she held on tight. I could feel her jerk as she started to sob again, into my shoulder.

I had my Mindy back, now.

I had found her, finally.

I thought that there would still be an uphill struggle, but I would be there with her, all the way.

Author's Note: Okay! I have been persuaded to continue this story. Let's see where it goes...

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 9*: A Fresh Start

Author's Note: Okay! I am creating more chapters for this story. I only have a very vague idea, at this point, of where I want to go for the moment, so we shall see how things go. I will also be updating and correcting the previous eight chapters, to bring them up to a good standard. Anyway, please read on. . .

Day 64

Chicago

Thursday

My head was pounding.

However, the pain in my side was even worse. I was alone, again; Dave had left, yesterday, to head back to New York. He was going to see what the current position was, concerning 'Mindy Macready'. Dave had promised to return by the weekend. Until then he had made me promise to stay in my crappy room and rest, to let the wound heal. I fully intended to do exactly as I was told.

For once!

New York City

It had taken a day or two to perform a thorough-ish reconnaissance of Marcus, to ensure that he was not being followed or watched.

I thought it best that I visit as Kick-Ass so if I were seen, nobody would know that 'Dave' had visited. The idea was to protect both me, as well as Marcus. It was late at night. Marcus had returned home at around ten o'clock that evening as I watched from a convenient, but cold, hiding place. Marcus was alone, as usual. I had crept to the side door and silently opened it using a key that Mindy had given me. The Kitchen was empty. As I moved through the kitchen, I could see Marcus sitting in an easy chair, in the living room.

I placed a hand on Marcus' right shoulder; he jumped.

"Don't move Marcus. Just listen."

I spoke with a slight growl. Not quite as good as Hit Girl's growl, though - I needed more practice. I took my hand away from his shoulder and he turned to look at me.

"Kick-Ass! Err . . . Dave! What are you doing here?" He was astonished but he seemed relieved that it was me.

"I am here as Kick-Ass for our protection. Now, don't ask any questions," I directed. "I need to know what the current situation is, concerning Mindy."

Marcus paused to gather his thoughts.

"Simple! She is a wanted felon. She appears on the streets of Manhattan and she will be arrested. There is nothing I can do to prevent it! I'm not being investigated, not anymore; it was my gun but I had been injured in the explosion. Although, most importantly, nobody links Mindy to being Hit Girl," Marcus explained. "I won't turn her in, if that's what you might be thinking."

"Okay. Therefore, Mindy is still wanted but nobody knows her connection to Hit Girl. She can't come back to New York," I stated simply.

"Have you seen her? Do you know where she is?" Marcus asked, with genuine concern.

"Yes. She is okay; I managed to get through her mental state. I got through to the girl underneath. Marcus, she was shot. But she's okay – I treated the wound; it was only a scratch. I need her and I'm going back, to be with her." Marcus did not appear too happy at that last sentence. "I love her, you know, and I will protect her. I will bring her back, but only when I know that she will be safe in New York City. Till then, we stay in Chicago, at least for now."

Marcus turned away as he took a deep breath and just said, "Please, just keep her safe. You know . . . She will be sixteen in two weeks. On the 3rd."

I had not known that her birthday was coming up, Mindy had always refused to tell me the date.

"I will always keep her safe, Marcus, always!" I promised.

..._...

I made a detour via Safehouse C, where I collected a large amount of cash and some weapons, including Hit Girl's trusty, and very lethal, bō-staff. Marcus had also given me a case of Mindy's clothes. I had already arranged to put my Dad's house up for sale and that would be taken care of while I was in Chicago. I started driving back to Chicago, that night. I would stay in a motel, when I was too tired and I hoped to get to Mindy by Friday evening.

I had booked us both in, for a few nights, at a decent hotel in Chicago. Mindy could not stay in that shithole, where she was now. We would need to look for an apartment to buy or rent. I intended to stay with Mindy and support her, as she healed, both mentally and physically.

I did not care how long it took; I would stay with her.

Chicago

I was really starting to miss Dave.

My mind was still reeling from the things he had said to me. I really did not know what had caused me to go so mentally bad. The solitude was getting to me again, but I knew that Dave would be back with me very soon. I trusted him. Until then I had my Hit Girl costume to help keep me sane. Every time I touched it, I remembered what Dave had said: '. . . Mistakes this girl would never have fucking made!' and that helped me, inside.

I noticed that I needed to get some more hair dye as blonde roots were starting to appear; I was happy to stay as a brunette for the moment. What would I do, if I could not go back to New York? I would be alone again; maybe Dave would visit. Then a thought hit me: I suppose I could be Hit Girl in Chicago; I would need to learn the City, though – but I was well on the way with that.

I knew New York really well, as I had grown up there.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 10*: Together

Author's Note: Please be aware that this chapter includes some smut!

Day 66

Chicago

Saturday

I opened my eyes and I saw Dave smiling down at me with those luscious blue eyes of his.

It took a moment to properly register in my sleep-fogged mind.

"You're back!" I squealed which surprised both Dave and myself.

I sat up and hugged Dave. I was still very sore on my right side, although it was no longer bleeding.

"Hi, gorgeous," Dave said back, giving me a kiss; a deep kiss.

Wow – my second kiss! I felt emotions that I had never felt before as they coursed through my body. I started to feel a bit like that day I called Dave; I was trembling. All that shit the other night was worth it just for this. My love for Dave was reaching out as I pulled Dave down onto the bed and I ignored the shooting pain in my side. Dave looked a little stunned that I was reciprocating.

I just assumed that that was how it was done but he did not seem to be complaining. . .

Mindy had squealed; never heard that before!

However, her smile was intoxicating – she must have been glad to see me. Damn! I had only intended to give her a kiss, to say that I was back; I had not expected Mindy to respond in kind. To be honest, I had actually expected a bitch-slap for kissing her. Now, she was pulling me down onto the bed, beside her. . . I had just arrived from New York and it was almost one in the morning which was not exactly the time for that sort of thing, but hey, she seemed happy to see me which had to be good . . . right?

"Hi, gorgeous," I said, gazing down into her green eyes. God, I loved those eyes.

We kept kissing each other, until we both fell asleep.

..._...

I woke up around eleven, later that morning.

I must have really been tired. Mindy was still asleep, beside me – so I prodded her awake.

"What?" Mindy grumbled, as she came awake.

"Time to get out of this dump, gorgeous," I said and I smiled into her green eyes as they fluttered open.

"What?" Mindy, repeated.

"I have booked us into a hotel. Then you can heal somewhere clean and a little more hygienic," I replied as I looked around the room with disgust.

"A hotel?" Mindy asked.

"Yes, a hotel. Then we can start looking for a proper place to live," I suggested.

"We?" Mindy responded.

"Am I going to get more than one or two words out of you?" I laughed. "Yes 'we'. You and me. Dave and Mindy. Kick-

Ass and Hit Girl."

"Let's go!" Mindy said excitedly as she jumped out of bed and grabbed her clothes in a show of unbridled excitement!

..._...

We cleared out Mindy's dingy room, which did not take very long, and I threw her bag into the back of the car.

"Please, tell me that isn't the 'Mist Mobile'," Mindy groaned, when she saw the car.

"It is the 'Mist Mobile' but now it's yours. I needed transport and this thing was available, so I bought it. We need to get it resprayed and renamed, though," I explained.

"Okay. Been a while since I was last in it, but then I suppose I was the last person in it," Mindy said, offhandedly.

..._...

We checked in at the hotel and went up to our room which was enormous and much cleaner than the previous place = which wasn't exactly hard.

"Is my suitcase a bit lighter now?" Mindy asked, as she looked around the plushly decorated and furnished room.

"Only a little," I said, apprehensively.

"It's okay, Dave. I'm just fuckin' with ya!" Mindy giggled.

Mindy giggled – that was new, too.

"Let's get that bandage changed. Go get a shower – you really need one – and I'll put a fresh bandage on," I suggested as I threw a towel at Mindy who scowled.

..._...

Twenty minutes later, I heard the bathroom door open, behind me.

"I'm ready, Dave," I heard Mindy say, in a rather seductive voice, which was a surprise in itself.

"Okay," I replied as I got up from the couch, turned around, and then received the shock of my life.

Holy fuck!

Before me was the most beautiful sight which I had ever seen. Mindy stood in the bathroom doorway and she leaned casually against the doorframe. She was smirking. She also looked more than a little bit shy. Above all, she was completely naked!

"Mindy, what the hell has gotten into you?" I exclaimed. "I'm not complaining, but wow!"

My brain was not the only thing that was saying 'wow', right at that moment.

"Like what you see, Kick-Ass!" Mindy growled, somewhat seductively and she stared, wide-eyed, at the growing bulge in my trousers.

After a few quick steps, I swept her up and dumped her on the bed. I rapidly applied a fresh dressing to her wound, which had begun to heal reasonably well and did not need a bandage anymore. After that, I could think of only one other thing to do. So, as I stared into those stunning green eyes, I pulled off my shirt and trousers, before I lay down next to Mindy and pulled her towards me for a kiss.

I had absolutely no idea what made me pose naked for Dave.

I'd never, ever, done anything like it, before. However, what a fucking turn on. Not just for me, but apparently, I turned Dave on, too. He kissed me and I squirmed, the feelings that coursed through me were like electric shocks. They seemed to originate from between my legs before they moved up my body to my breasts. From there they headed for my brain. The sensation was totally new to me – I had not felt so alive as I did at that moment.

Dave's kissing; his tongue . . . wow! Then his hands started to explore. I was starting to feel a little nervous. How far was I going to let Dave go? How far did Dave want to go? Oh, well, I supposed that I was committed. . . I squealed! Dave had just touched a nipple. I squealed, again, as Dave touched the other nipple. Damn, they were very sensitive! I hoped that I could satisfy Dave; I knew my tits were not very big, especially when compared to his previous conquests. Mind you, he seemed to be enjoying himself at the. . . Fuck! Oh, Fuck! Those damn electric shocks; they were out of fucking control!

I could feel one of Dave's hands, as it moved down across my stomach and the nervousness was back as his fingers continued south. I felt his fingers as they moved through my pubic hair and searched, before they found. . . Wow! Oh, Wow! I felt very damp, between my legs: was that normal? Dave didn't appear to mind! I could not help but wonder if a certain something else could give me more enjoyment than Dave's fingers, but that needed more thought – before I went that far. I could feel my muscles start to contract and I felt myself starting to shake; I was losing control of my limbs. Damn . . . the electric shocks were completely immobilising me.

Dave suddenly lay back, away from me, as I pulled my legs up to my chest to ride out the shocks that coursed through my body. I could not breathe, for what seemed like hours . . . then I screamed; I could not stop myself as I took in huge lungfuls of air.

"Fuuuuck!" I exclaimed, once I could finally breathe again.

My first fucking orgasm!

"You enjoyed, that, didn't you?" Dave asked as he grinned at me.

"What the fuck did you do to me?" I asked as I produced an embarrassed giggle. "That was . . . unbelievable!"

"Glad you liked it," Dave commented. "First orgasm?"

"Fuck, yeah!" I replied, with another embarrassed giggle.

Dave pulled me to him and he started to kiss me. I could feel a part of him prodding my stomach so I reached down and I pushed my hand into his shorts. . . Wow! It was both soft but very hard and it felt almost hot to the touch. I could hear the catches in Dave's breath, each time I caressed him. I felt pleased . . . I was pleased that I could pleasure him just as much as he had pleased me. I kept rubbing and touching – it fascinated me; it was my first cock! I pulled everything out and I gently ran my hands around, causing Dave to start moaning.

A thought suddenly came to me. I had done a lot of things, way out of character over the past few days; so why not something else, I thought! Without further conscious thought, I dived down the bed and grabbed Dave in my mouth, sucking and licking him.

Dave just muttered, "Oh fuck!"

I continued with my ministrations and then suddenly, I heard Dave shout out.

"Oh, shit, I. . ."

Then, seconds later, I felt a hot substance hit the back of my throat and I leapt back, but not before I received another dose, directly in my face and then onto my chest. I swallowed some and spat the rest. I felt something dribbling, very slowly, down my face. It felt . . . I had no idea . . . it felt . . . icky. My hand, which had not let go of Dave, was covered in a sticky, gooey, mess.

Dave just lay there, breathing heavily, unable to say anything. I started to giggle which turned into laughter as all the time I stared at the stuff on my hand. I always thought that such degrading behaviour was something completely gross. Now, though, it felt . . . I did not know . . . erotic? Was that the word? Whatever, I really fucking enjoyed it. The taste was a bit weird, though . . . but I would do it again in a heartbeat! I grabbed some tissues from beside the bed and I had a go at cleaning myself off. Dave looked up and the fucker laughed.

"You look a little sticky, Mindy!" Dave commented, with a smirk as he watched me wiping the area in between my breasts which passed as cleavage.

"You could have fucking hinted about . . . this stuff," I growled, indicating the sticky stuff, currently dribbling down my body.

"Sorry!" Dave laughed with very little sincerity. "You caused it!"

"I suppose, I did!" I agreed.

"Thanks, Mindy. I really do love you," Dave said, giving me a kiss, after I had wiped my face.

"I love you, Dave," I replied. "But right now, I need another fucking shower!"

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 11: First Night Out

Day 72

Chicago

Friday

We finally had an apartment.

It was small, but it had two bedrooms and it was located on the third floor of the apartment complex. There was also a secure parking space for the 'car' – we both refused to call it the other name. I was now really happy, not to mention that I had Dave! The events of almost two weeks ago were now a distant memory, thank God. I was to be sixteen in two days; shame Dave did not even know but I decided that I would tell him on the day.

I thought Dave was a little concerned with the 'new' me. I had shocked the hell out of him the other day, by posing naked and then making out with him. To tell you the truth I had shocked the hell out of myself, for having done that. Only a few days before, I had held a pistol to his temple; I still couldn't believe that Dave had stayed with me, despite everything that I had done and the way that I had treated him. Nevertheless, I supposed that was the kind of guy Dave was; gentle and caring.

Unless, of course, he was in a wetsuit and wore a jetpack equipped with Gatling guns!

I was very pleased with the new apartment.

It should suit us well, until we get a more permanent place, of course, and Mindy liked it. Talking of Mindy, or rather the new Mindy, she had dyed her hair brunette again; to cover up the blonde roots but she had left a single blonde streak on her left side. I considered that it would remind me that this Mindy was different to all the ones which had come before. I was not saying that I did not like the new Mindy, but I thought that she would take some getting used to – to put it mildly! She seemed to enjoy spending time with me, naked. No sex yet, but lots of other very enjoyable activities. She was definitely not the shy girl, who had kissed me, a couple of months back after sneaking into my bedroom one dark night.

I had just come up from the 'car', with a surprise for her. I placed it on the kitchen table and called to her, in the bedroom. Mindy appeared, wearing only panties and a bra; nothing surprised me about that girl – not anymore!

"Present for you, on the table," I said and I stepped back a safe distance.

Mindy approached the table, then her eyes bugged out and she squealed and she squealed.

"Thank you! Thank you! Thank you!" Mindy squealed, as she picked up her bō-staff and she deftly broke it in two, before she weaved the blades in circles, around her.

"You happy, now?" I asked as laughed hard at the smile on her face.

Mindy was as giddy as a kid on Christmas morning!

I was complete!

I had my swords . . . I loved Dave! He knew not, just what I needed, but what I wanted, and liked. I really could not have picked a better guy, all those years ago. I knew then that he had potential and I was right!

After twenty minutes of holding my swords, I thought it best to put them away, so I reconnected them and placed the bō-staff in a cupboard, behind some jackets. Dave was already smirking at the time I had spent with the swords.

"Well done!" Dave teased. "Didn't think you'd ever put them down!"

"You know me too well, Dave. Anyway, what makes you think I love them so much?" Mindy asked, with a playful look in her eyes.

"Oh, come on, Mindy. The first time I saw the miniature version of you, you were bouncing around Rasul's apartment like a demented Angry Bird, slicing and dicing with those damn swords. I could tell you enjoyed every fucking second of it and you had that ridiculously insane grin on your face, the whole damn time. I know, because I couldn't do anything else, at the time, but watch you!"

"I did not . . . okay . . . I admit it, yes, I suppose . . . I was enjoying myself," Mindy replied but then she paused before continuing.

"I was also showing off to you," she admitted in a reluctant tone as she looked down at the floor.

"I saw you as a potential friend. I had never had one before and you were the first superhero we had found, other than ourselves. That kiss, I blew you, it wasn't a joke," Mindy added and she blushed, furiously.

The memory of Mindy, blowing me that kiss from my bedroom window, reminded me of something.

"When mini Hit Girl and Big Daddy visited my bedroom that night, Big Daddy called me 'Ass-Kick'. Did your Dad call me that a lot?"

"All the time!" Mindy admitted, looking a little ashamed. "I think Daddy was worried that I might get involved with you. He kept trying to stop me showing off to you but he did like you though and he thought you had potential, too."

"Well he was right; you did get involved with me," I teased.

"I wonder what Daddy would think of us, right now?" Mindy said, with a faraway look in her gorgeous, green eyes.

That night, we kitted up and went exploring.

We drove the 'car' towards Englewood and parked up around nine in the evening. It was only a couple of days from being a new moon, so the night was reasonably dark. Dave had his full armour on and seemed a bit nervous, but then so was I. It was the first time out, together, for months.

We found ourselves in a freight yard, full of containers, with limited lighting and many dark shadows. We were also beside the main train line and passing trains created a large amount of noise. As expected, we found our first score of the night. Between a pair of large containers, we found two men. They were so busy beating another man, they never saw or heard our approach.

Their loss. . .

"Hey, Cunts!" Hit Girl growled, loudly. "Got a minute to die!"

The two men spun around and dropped the other man to the ground.

"What the fuck are you?" one yelled, as he pulled out a large knife.

"Whatya want kid?" The other man called as he pulled out an equally large knife.

"So, you wanna play!" Hit Girl growled, menacingly.

I could see the two men start to reconsider their bravery. I stood behind Hit Girl and drew my batons as Hit Girl broke her bō-staff in two and she twirled the vicious looking blades. Understandably, the two men started to move backwards, just as Hit Girl swept forward, re-joined her swords and severed the hand of one of the men, letting the hand and knife fall to the ground together. Then she gracefully span and drove a blade into the same man's chest before flipping backwards and driving the opposite blade into the other man's back at chest height. Both men sank to the ground, dead. It was all over in mere seconds.

I could see Hit Girl was smiling, she could not have been happier! She reminded me a bit of Rasul's apartment. I stowed my batons and ran towards the fallen man: he was dead! That pissed me off; I kicked the dead body of one of the men, hard.

"Hey! At least these two won't be hurting anybody else," Hit Girl commented. "Let's go!"

"Okay!" I said, but I still felt unhappy about the situation.

..._...

After we left the immediate area, we kept to the shadows and it was not long before we heard a scream. We ran towards the noise where we heard scuffling behind some thick bushes.

A man was raping a woman.

"The bastard's mine," I insisted as I drew my batons and advanced while Hit Girl stood back, looking a bit uncertain.

I came up from behind the man and grabbed his hair then hauled him off the woman.

"What the fuck!" The man yelled and he tried to reach me with his hands.

Hit Girl ran forward and pulled the woman away before she helped her to cover herself. I threw the man against a tree.

"Rape a defenceless woman, will you?" I snarled as I drove a baton into the man's groin and I felt joy when I saw blood and the man screamed. I swung my other baton, hard against the man's head, killing him. The corpse fell to the ground and I felt no emotion, nothing.

"All done!" I snarled, as I re-joined Hit Girl.

"I've called an ambulance for the lady," Hit Girl advised and she looked a bit concerned.

"Thank you, both of you. That man has raped two of my friends – the cops couldn't hold him. He deserved to die, the bastard!" the woman said, trying to control her tears of relief.

We could see and hear the ambulance now and there was a Police car behind the ambulance.

We blended into the shadows and headed back to the 'car'.

When we were safely back at the apartment, I turned to Dave.

"What the fuck was that about?" I asked.

"He deserved to die!" Dave replied.

"You scared me, tonight. I've never seen you like that. Where did that rage come from?" I asked.

"That first man died. I wasn't going to let this guy get away, to rape again. The woman was right; he'd have probably have got off again," Dave replied.

"I'm the psychotic killer, remember," I reminded my partner. "Not you, Dave!"

Dave looked at me, through tired eyes. I hugged him tightly.

"I suppose I've had a lot of pent up rage, built up over the past few months," Dave admitted. "I actually feel better after tonight."

I hoped that Dave was okay. I thought it was me with the mental issues. Mind you, Dave had never killed until he had met me. Kick-Ass just helped people, defended people. Dave was pure, unlike me. I'd been killing for ten years now and considering I was almost sixteen that was something really disturbing, to most people, at least!

"Come on, Mindy! Let's get to bed," Dave said, with a smile, but his eyes were dark.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 12*: Sixteen

Author's Note: Please be aware that this chapter includes some smut!

Day 74

Chicago

Sunday

I felt myself being shaken, violently and it hurt.

A high-pitched squeal reached my ears . . . it fucking hurt, too.

"You knew!" Mindy squealed loudly, and then she kissed me.

I looked at the clock.

"For fuck's sake, Mindy. Just because you are sixteen, does not mean you can wake me up at six o'clock in the fucking morning!" I growled.

Mindy jumped off me and ran into the living room. I decided that I was not going to get any more sleep, so I got up and walked to the kitchen for a coffee. On the way, I noticed a destroyed, purple present, on the couch. Mindy had obviously found my present – three, titanium, 6.5-inch, throwing knives.

"Hello, birthday girl!" I called.

Mindy turned and I swore that she could have been a fucking eleven-year-old. She had this enormous grin and she looked so fucking happy. Mindy ran towards me and she jumped up with her legs wrapped around me. She proceeded to kiss me.

Finally, she said, "Thank you for the knives; I love them. I really do. And thank you for knowing about my birthday."

"You know, I want nothing more than to make you happy," I mumbled back.

..._...

Around nine, we went out and had a 'birthday' breakfast. Mindy was still feeling giddy.

We walked around Chicago, getting to know the neighbourhoods and streets. We were learning what and who were associated with the seedier side of Chicago. Mindy called them potential targets – amongst another dubious comments. After lunch, we returned to the apartment where I turned to Mindy and checked my watch.

"Oh, by the way, I have a surprise for you," I said.

"Tell me or I rip your throat out!" Mindy shot back, excitedly.

My cell rang. I tossed it at Mindy and she caught it, looking confused.

"Answer it, dumbass!" I suggested.

"Hello?" Mindy asked, hesitantly. "Marcus!"

The smile on Mindy's face was enormous, so I left Mindy as she chatted to Marcus.

..._...

Almost an hour later, Mindy handed back my phone. There were tears in her eyes, tears of joy.

"Thank you, Dave," Mindy said, giving me a kiss.

"Everything okay?" I asked.

"Yeah. It was great to talk to Marcus; I did kinda run out on him," Mindy said. "He still has that damn swear jar, though."

"You had a swear jar?" I asked, incredulously. "What was it? A fifty-gallon drum?"

"You saying I have a small problem with profanity?" Mindy said, trying to keep a straight face, but she still chuckled.

"Small!" I exclaimed.

"You bastard," Mindy said and laughed. "Thank you for today."

"Anything, for the girl I love," Dave said.

I was struggling.

"I want you . . . Dave . . . I want you to be . . . to be my first. . ."

I felt myself get hot as I blushed furiously and I could not continue. Luckily, Dave understood what I was getting at.

"That's a big decision to make, Mindy. Are you absolutely sure? I definitely wouldn't say no; I love you, but that is why I'm asking, because I do love you," Dave cautioned.

I blushed again and I felt all warm and tingly inside. That confirmed it for me – Dave was the right guy; he cared. He really cared and he really cared about me! Dave was the only person alive, who did not care if I was Hit Girl or Mindy Macready; he cared for me whoever I was.

"I want it now, Dave," I said, impatiently, as I looked into his hypnotic, blue eyes.

It was there. I could see the happiness, the love, the desire. The desire for me!

I squealed!

"Are you sure? I know you're sixteen – still not legal – but I suppose, how many of the things we have done together were legal?" Dave asked.

"Yes. It feels right," I replied as I smiled up at Dave with a very suggestive expression.

..._...

We started on the couch, where we kissed passionately.

Dave pulled off my shirt then my bra and he gently teased my nipples with his fingers. Oh, God, the electric shocks again – they ran down my body towards my crotch. My breathing started to hitch. It felt so good, damn him! His lips caressed my neck, tickling me as they moved over my skin, towards what passed as my cleavage. The lips moved down and stopped at my breast before pouncing on my right nipple with a vengeance. The electric shocks were almost unbearable. I could feel his hand on my stomach and I shuddered at his touch.

I squealed!

I could not help it; Dave kept pressing buttons and things happened, for fuck's sake. The electric shocks were getting worse, but they felt so good.

"More! More!" I shouted, without realising it.

I bit my lip and felt a bit embarrassed.

"You want more?" Dave responded, enthusiastically.

Dave picked me up and he carried me through to the bedroom. Somewhere along the way, my pants vanished, before Dave dropped me on the bed.

"Do you want Mindy or Hit Girl, tonight?" I asked.

"They are both the same to me," Dave replied nonchalantly.

I loved this man; he saw me for what I was. He saw me as both Mindy and Hit Girl; he did not distinguish between the two. Dave kicked off his shoes then pulled off his shirt and trousers before jumping on top of me and he started to kiss me from my forehead, past my chest and stomach, down to my. . .

I yelped; a rather strange noise to make, I thought, under the circumstances. I felt my panties slide down my legs. Dave was kissing me and his tongue was doing something wonderful. The electric shocks got faster and much closer together. I started to thrash about on the bed. My fists were clenched and I could not keep my hips still. I could not fucking breathe. Suddenly, my legs came up to my chest and I hugged them tightly. I felt like I was having a fucking seizure, every part of my pelvic region burned. I screamed and I took in a breath of air. Damn those orgasms!

"Bloody Hell!" I shouted. "Again!"

Was I fucking serious! Those orgasms felt like they could kill!

Dave had found my only weakness!

"Again?" Dave asked with a smirk.

"Fuck me, Dave! I want you, in me!" I begged. "Please!"

"You're absolutely sure?" Dave asked, seriously.

"Fucking stick it in me, Ass-Kick!" I growled and I laughed.

Dave reached over and he opened the drawer, beside the bed. He brought out a condom; it was green!

"Sorry, I couldn't find purple," Dave said, apologetically.

"Close enough; looks like Kick-Ass!" I said and I giggled uncontrollably.

..._...

I pulled Dave's shorts off and I helped roll the condom onto him – it was my first condom.

I was feeling apprehensive at that moment. What was this going to feel like? That was quite a big thing to stick inside me: would it fit? Would it hurt? I did not believe that I still had a hymen left, due to all the gymnastics and martial arts over the preceding decade.

Dave lay down on top of me and he gently inserted himself as I spread my legs for him. It felt . . . I was not sure . . . it felt like nothing I had ever experienced and it felt good. I felt no pain as he eased fully inside me. Good, cherry already popped! One less worry. It started to feel good, the more he moved and the faster he moved. My breathing started to hitch again. The electric shocks began again, originating at my crotch and rushing up to my breasts, as Dave massaged them with his fingers. I squealed, out of control, and then I started to squeal non-stop.

God, I must have sounded ridiculous. Nevertheless, damn it, it was worth it. The shocks started coming closer together. Dave was groaning and his eyes were tight shut. My fists were clenched and pounding his back, hard. Dave went faster and harder; the shocks became faster and sharper. I started to get short of breath and I could not focus on anything, but surviving the shear enjoyment of what was happening to my body.

Suddenly Dave froze as I felt him pulsing inside me – then the orgasm hit. It hit full fucking strength and way stronger than any that I had experienced to that point.

"Fuck! Fuck! I can't. . ." I screamed.

Dave collapsed on top of me and he rolled off to one side. I felt a tremor inside me as he pulled out. The electric shocks were still strong. I did not know if I was going to be able to survive the sensations but it felt so good, so fucking good. Dave, what the fuck have you done to me? I could not fucking move; my legs were numb and my crotch was on fire. My heart was pounding, pounding for Dave. I clenched my eyes shut, tight, to ride out the shocks that still coursed through me body which was used to many things but not limb shattering orgasms.

"You bastard!" It was all that I could say . . . once I was capable of speech.

"Huh?" Dave muttered as he breathed heavily.

"You fucking almost killed me! Fuck it was good! I never fucking knew!" I stammered.

Dave leaned over and he kissed me before he pulled the duvet up over us. I turned and smiled at him. I could look straight at him in bed, unlike when he was standing up. I kissed him back. Disjointed sentences started spilling from my mouth.

"Thank you for everything, Dave. I owe you my life. I don't deserve a man like you. You are too good to me. I'm sorry for treating you like shit, for so long," I said with an apologetic tone.

"Are you talking like a bitch? Because, I remember someone a few months back telling me what happens, if you talk like a bitch!" Dave said with an evil smirk.

"I can't believe you'd use that against me!" I groaned as I laughed hard.

We just lay in the bed and rested.

I thought Mindy had enjoyed herself.

Mindy turned to me.

"I want you to be my partner, Dave; you are more than capable and those abs are to die for!" she said with a brief giggle.

I blushed a little but nowhere near as much as Mindy blushed. She was really hot when she blushed and I loved it when she went all shy, not to mention when she talked about my body.

"We have to make this work," I responded. "Yes, I want to be your partner."

"I want you to be an equal partner, Dave – none of this Robin crap. I may be NFL, but I think you aren't too far behind. I want a partner to respect me as I respect them. If I fuck up, I want you to tell me I fucked up. If you fuck up, I will tell you the same."

"Nothing new there," I quipped.

Mindy glared at me and she scowled.

"I love you, when you scowl," I needed. "So, if I tell you that you fucked up, you won't hit me?"

"I promise, I will try not to hit you," Mindy growled in reply.

"Growling does not work with me. You should know that by now," Dave continued.

"Okay, Ass-Kick," Mindy smirked back at me.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 13*: Upgrades

The following day

Monday, November 4th, 2013

Chicago, Illinois

It finally felt like I was back with Dave!

No more counting the days of separation. No more being alone. We were together, in the same city, as a couple. Dave and Mindy. Kick-Ass and Hit Girl. Two badass super-heroes, fighting crime as a team.

Dave had made me feel like a woman, yesterday. I was still feeling light headed and I felt like I wasn't touching the bed, Dave had made me melt at his touch.

Mind you, my crotch was sore, to say the least!

That evening

We went out again.

It did not go well, not well at all. We had walked straight into a fucking shit storm.

It was dark, very dark.

As we came around a corner, we came across eight young men. They were obviously part of a gang and just as obviously, they were out to cause trouble. The moment we saw them, they had had also seen us and we all reacted together. Kick-Ass and I flew at them as escape was not an option. In that instance, though, we did not really want to kill any of them.

It was complete chaos.

I did not really know what happened, but I managed to knock out three guys and Kick-Ass got two, before guns were drawn by two of the men, and I was shot twice in the chest while Kick-Ass was shot about six times. The rounds that hit me, they forced me to the ground, where I was quickly pounced upon. The rounds that hit Kick-Ass' armour, just ricocheted off and pushed him back a bit. Kick-Ass waded in to rescue me and at some point, I was hit on the head, which made me see stars.

The remaining men, after having seen bullets bouncing off Kick-Ass' armour, grabbed their unconscious pals and they ran off into the darkness. Twenty minutes later, we were back in the 'car' and we headed back to the relative safety of our apartment.

We changed in the 'car' as we had before, returning to the apartment in normal clothes.

Back at the apartment

"Fuck!" I exclaimed as I pulled off my shirt to inspect the bruises. "That was a complete pile of shit!"

"You're not kidding!" Dave replied as he checked out my chest where vivid bruises were appearing.

It dawned on me that we could have both been killed; Chicago was a dangerous place.

"You thinking the same thing as me?" I asked.

"We need some proper suits," Dave stated and I nodded as he looked at the impact marks on his armour.

"Damn straight," I replied, as Dave checked out my head, to make sure it was only a small bump and that there was no blood.

We went straight to bed, feeling a bit depressed.

The next day
Tuesday, November 5th

I got up, mid-morning, to find Dave on the couch and I looked over his shoulder as sat there and he scribbled away furiously on a pad.

I was curious.

"Whatya doing?" I asked.

Without saying a word, he turned the pad towards me:

1. Lightweight and flexible enough to allow full range of movements.
2. Stab, slash and bullet resistant to as high a level as possible but still satisfying 1.
3. Head protection without affecting movement or hearing/vision.
4. Ability to be worn under normal clothing (not essential, but useful).
5. Ability to store/carry weapons and other accessories.
6. Scare the shit outta them looks.

"New costume ideas?" I asked.

"Yeah. Just a short list of key requirements that have come to mind," Dave replied.

"Expensive!" I commented.

"We could always borrow Marcus' swear jar," Dave teased. "We'd have thousands within a month!"

"I don't need a fucking swear jar!" I retorted but then I paused, and I felt my cheeks warming up. "OK, maybe I fucking do. But we aren't getting one, cunt!"

We needed time to recover from that bad night out, so I gave some serious thought to our new costumes.

Money was not a major issue; Dave had brought a substantial amount with him. The rest of my funds were safely hidden at the Safehouse, back in New York. If we were going to be digging into that cash, we would need to be able to top it back up, afterwards. However, that would be easy, as we would be able to use drug dealers like an ATM.

..._...

A few years ago, I had needed to upgrade my suit as I was growing. Not growing in places I would have liked, but growing just the same. After some substantial digging through Daddy's files, I had eventually found a reference to a guy that had made my Daddy's suit. The guy was called 'The Armourer' and, apparently, he could supply almost anything, off the books, for a price.

I had contacted the guy and arranged for my new costume. All he needed were my specifications and sizes. He asked no unnecessary questions while being very discrete and he treated me with respect. The goods had arrived as requested. Expensive, but the quality of his work was very good. Therefore, I contacted the guy again, advised him of what we were after and gave him Dave's requirements.

He said he had something that might do the job and he would get back to us in a few days.

Three days later
Friday, November 8th

The Armourer called back.

He asked to meet.

I thought this was a bit irregular, but he explained that the suits we were after needed accurate measurements. I agreed to the meet, but with my choice of location which I would be able to scout out ahead of time. I thought quickly and gave him a time, a location - and a challenge, so we could identify him.

Dave, naturally, was a bit concerned about meeting up with a total stranger. However, The Armourer had a reputation to uphold and he would very quickly go out of business, should it got out that he could not be trusted.

Three more days later
Monday, November 11th

On the day of the meet, Dave and I scouted out the location.

In this case, it was an abandoned warehouse, just outside of Chicago. Dave and I had scouted it and seen no activity and no immediate problems, apart from a little damp and a lot of dust and dirt.

..._...

We were in our full costumes with weapons, just in case, and we waited in the darkness until the designated time.

A few minutes early, we heard a van pull up outside the warehouse.

It was a plain black, panel van without markings and it did not show any lights, either. Only one man was visible in the cab and the driver's window was open. I silently crept up and as the driver turned to look to his right, towards the building, I shoved my silenced pistol into his left ear.

"Ow! For fuck's sake!" he exclaimed as he turned slowly. "Oh, it's you."

He gave me the challenge that we had agreed on the phone. I opened the van door and checked him for weapons. He had none. I told him to open the van's back doors and he did so while I stood back. The van was empty except for a few items on the floor of the van's load area.

"Okay, what have you got?" Kick-Ass and I asked.

"I thought this might involve both of you," The Armourer said with a disgusting smirk and I took an immediate dislike to the man.

He removed some pictures and samples of material from the van to show us. The pictures showed two matte-black suits. One was obviously for a male and the other for a female. The suits were quite different.

..._...

The male suit was, we were informed, made up of a stab and slash-proof composite material, with additional ballistic protection up to Type II which provided protection against anything up to and including nine-millimetre and .357 Magnum rounds. The back and chest plates would provide additional ballistic protection up to Type IIIA which provided protection against rounds up to a .44 Magnum. The suit provided reinforced carbon-fibre, padded joints for elbows, knees, ankles, and shoulders, as well as groin protection. There were also carbon-fibre composite grieves for the lower legs.

Carbon-fibre, composite material was also used for the sides of the body, above the hips and across the chest at the level of the chest bone; it was used in the area of the collar bones, too, as additional protection. A flexible padded neck shield protected the nape of the neck without restricting movement. The suit included armoured and padded gauntlets that could grab a double-edged blade, without damage or injury. The gauntlets incorporated carbon-fibre composite armour along the outside of the lower arm and full circle below the elbow. A slash-proof, full-face mask, with padding around the top, back and side of the head finished off the suit, along with custom lightweight, armoured boots. The suit was fire retardant and was designed to let the wearer's body breath.

..._...

The female suit was made out of the same composite material, except that it did not have the large chest and back plates. The suit conformed much more to the wearer and it was ultra-flexible. The shoulder, elbow, and knee joints were reinforced and padded. The chest and back plates were made up of multiple sections that flexed together like reptile scales which allowed the suit to move with the wearer without any movement restrictions. The composite protection continued up the neck. A partial facemask went from the crown of the nose, then over and around the head to the nape of the neck. The mask was padded and slash-proof.

The overall protection was less than that which the male suit provided, but still more than my current costume. The ballistic protection was up to Type II. The suit was finished off with conformal gauntlets and boots. The gauntlets could grab blades without damage or injury and had carbon-fibre composite plates to protect the lower arm. Carbon-fibre composite grieves encased the lower legs and carbon-fibre composite panels protected the outer thighs and the upper arms.

..._...

The male suit had obvious locations for weapons and equipment carriers which were inter-changeable. The female suit was much more subtle with the weapon locations; it used small slots between the scales and on the carbon-fibre plates for holsters and equipment carriers.

"I can customise both suits to include the relevant purple or green/yellow highlights," The Armourer explained. "I can also incorporate a weapons carrier, high in the middle of the back for your batons," he added as he looked at Kick-Ass.

The Armourer then proceeded to take measurements of Kick-Ass and myself. Some measurements were, to say the least, very personal and made me squirm.

"When and how much?" I finally asked having had enough of the man.

It would take about two weeks. The cost was high, but I thought it would be worth it. Our current costumes were of absolutely no use, as the other night had demonstrated rather painfully. There was also a good chance that we could raise hell in Chicago, before people worked out it was Kick-Ass and Hit Girl.

The new suits would allow us to hit harder, much harder, without fear of injury.

Author's Note: I have given Kick-Ass and Hit Girl combat suits in my other story: 'Solitude'. I am using a similar design here. I have tried to describe suits that I believe are realistically possible with current technology. I may have taken some artistic liberties, but hey this is fiction and we are dealing with a universe that has an eleven-year-old assassin! While the ballistic protection described is real, there is more to ballistic protection than just being able to stop certain calibres, but I did not want to go into major, boring, technical detail. I hope you like my ideas for the new suits and I apologise to any writers, if my ideas are similar to their own. I am aware of only one other writer, at this point, who designed new suits for Kick-Ass and Hit Girl. That writer is 'forcedInduction' with his brilliant story 'Fall Damage'. I give full credit to this writer for any similarities between the suits.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 14*: Ready for Combat

Monday, November 25th, 2013
Two weeks later, evening

We received the call and we met up with The Armourer at the same place and using the same procedure as before.

The Armourer threw open the back doors of his van where two packs were visible. He reached in and pulled out the first one, before opening the green-tinted pack.

"Okay, Kick-Ass; try this on for size," he suggested.

Dave pulled out his new combat suit, his face full of geeky, unconcealed eagerness. The base was matte black while the carbon-fibre sections were mainly green-tinted with yellow highlights. The combat suit was in two basic sections: the under-suit, which consisted of the composite material parts and the over-suit, which was made up of the major carbon-fibre elements. Finally, the mask, boots, and gauntlets were added. Keeping his Kick-Ass mask in place, Dave stripped and put the new under-suit on.

It fit like a glove; a padded glove. The elbow, shoulder, knee, thigh, and groin carbon-fibre composite elements were all part of the under-suit. The carbon-fibre grieves slid into place and locked to the knee sections. The boots then locked onto the grieves. The outer-suit, of carbon-fibre composite armour, was put on over the head and locked together between the collarbones and below the sternum. Dave then went behind the van to change masks.

The mask, like the under-suit, fit like a glove and the padding was both light and comfortable. The mask had a green-tinted, carbon-fibre composite surround that would protect the forehead and temples and had a wide strip that ran around behind the head. There were cut-outs to allow him to hear without any problems. The carbon-fibre, this time yellow-tinted, also ran down behind the eyes like side burns and protected the cheekbones.

An adjustable baton carrier was attached to the upper back of the suit. Dave clipped a holster to his left hip so he could grab the pistol with his right hand. He also clipped four other equipment carriers to his lower back before he came out from behind the van.

"Wow!" I exclaimed. "You really Kick-Ass!"

"Good to know," Kick-Ass replied with a smile. "Your turn."

"Okay, Hit Girl," The Armourer said, as he pulled out and opened the second, purple-tinted, pack. "Try this."

With barely concealed eagerness of my own, I pulled out my new combat suit. It was matte black, but the carbon-fibre sections were purple-tinted. As with Kick-Ass' combat suit, the colour was quite vivid. The combat suit was, like Kick-Ass', in two sections. However, this time, top and bottom sections. Keeping my mask and wig in place, I stripped and pulled on the bottom section which came up to a point just below my chest. The bottoms were tight, but very comfortable. I pulled on the top section, which overlapped the bottoms. The whole suit felt weird; it seemed to 'flow' as I bent and twisted – I thought it was cool. I pulled on the boots and they felt like a second skin. The gauntlets, again, were like a second skin for my wrists and hands. I went behind the van, just as Dave had done, and swapped my mask and wig.

It felt great, my hair fitted underneath without a problem, as the mask flexed easily and the padding was very comfortable. On closer inspection, the combat suit scales were actually made up of carbon-fibre with a flexible composite material. I clipped two holsters to my waist in front of my hips and a pair of knife carriers to my left and right thighs. Four slim equipment carriers fitted around the back of my waist. My existing cape would attach around the neck, a final embellishment to finish the suit off.

I stepped out from behind the van and Kick-Ass exclaimed, "Wow! That's hot, Hit Girl!"

The Armourer smiled in his creepy way; I really did not like the guy. The suits allowed silent movements and we could both move without any restrictions.

"You do good work," I offered, somewhat reluctantly, and I paid the man, so he could leave.

"Okay, Kick-Ass, happy?" I asked.

"Fuckin' A!" he responded.

We stuffed our old costumes into the empty packs and left.

The apartment

After taking a devious route back to the apartment, we dumped the packs and checked out each other's new combat suit.

"You look so mean, Dave. Wow! Can I get my .44 Magnum out, again?" I asked.

"You can fuck right off, Mindy. I don't know why I allowed you to shoot me in the chest, let alone in the fucking back; bitch!" Dave grumbled.

"Okay, hit me!" I ordered and I expected Dave to hesitate, just as he had before.

This time, though, Dave did not hesitate. I had not expected that. He spun around, hard, and his right griever hit me, on my left thigh. The two pieces of carbon-fibre armour came together hard and I was pushed back, but it did not hurt anywhere near as much as I thought it should. I spun around and Dave blocked my leg with his protected lower arm. The weird scales and the underlying material absorbed the blow without effort. We checked the carbon-fibre and scales, closely. There were no marks, no scratches, nothing! We looked at each other.

"These combat suits are fucking cool!" we both exclaimed together, and started laughing.

Mindy started to run around like a kid on Christmas morning.

She grabbed two of her purple gripped pistols and shoved them into her empty holsters before she proceeded to practicing drawing, dry firing, and returning them back to the holsters. Mindy then inserted loaded magazines into the equipment carriers, behind her back, along with the other equipment that she usually carried on her utility belt. Six throwing knives were inserted into the relevant carriers, three per side. Mindy could really move in the new combat suit and she looked very hot, doing it. The suit highlighted the curves on her petite frame.

I had decided, reluctantly, that I needed to be armed if we were going to go after the serious criminals. I hated guns, but I would be stupid not to at least carry one. I examined the weapons that I had brought with me which were now hidden in a cupboard. I selected an automatic pistol at random and tested the weight and feel. I liked it.

"Glock 17 Gen4. Nice choice. Nine-millimetre Parabellum. Seventeen-round magazine capacity. The rail beneath the barrel can accept tactical lights and tactical laser illuminators. I have both, at the Safehouse, back in New York. I also have a suppressor for it, too," Mindy elaborated as she came across the room.

"Little Miss Weapons Specialist," I quipped. "I like the weight and feel."

Mindy grabbed three seventeen-round Glock magazines and she showed me how to clear the weapon and make it safe. She then moved onto showing me how to strip the weapon, clean it, and then reassemble it again. Mindy grabbed a box of nine-millimetre Parabellum and she showed me how to load the magazines. She took her time and she ensured that I was happy with each step before she moved onto the next one. One magazine was inserted into the pistol and the other two into carriers behind my back. Mindy also insisted that I carry a suppressor. My weapon's instructor then showed me how to draw and hold the weapon correctly, including the correct stance. She was a great teacher – patient and calm - keeping things at my level without making me feel like a novice idiot.

Mindy carried her usual pair of SIG SAUER P232 .380-calibre pistols. Mindy explained that my pistol had better stopping power than her SIGs did. She went on to explain that she needed the more compact pistol to suit her smaller hands and because it was easier for her to control and in most cases the pistol was only used to put a bullet into a man's head, after they were already on the ground.

"We'll need to arrange some target practice for you," Mindy commented. "At least your foot is armoured so you won't hurt yourself!"

"Cocky, bitch!" I muttered as Mindy grinned.

It was getting late, so we reluctantly removed our new combat suits and went to bed; I still felt excited. Mindy, though, was a damn sight more excited.

I tried to help her calm down once in bed, although I might have just wound her up a bit more.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 15*: A Good Night Out

Wednesday, November 27th, 2013

Dave had come up with a new name for the old Mist Mobile.

He wanted to call it 'Mindy' because he enjoyed riding in her. I did not think that was very funny, but he said he was joking and instead suggested, 'Speedy'. It was a little lame but it would do for the moment.

Over the past few days, we had been looking for a proper place to live. Somewhere we could have privacy and a secure place for weapons, as well as an exercise area. Dave had also been informed that his Dad's house had been sold. That had given us some more operating capital which we could use to buy a place to live: preferably a house with a basement. Marty had been back in touch and he said that he would come to visit when we had a place sorted out.

It would be good to see Marty; if it were not for him, Dave would never have found me and I would have probably been very dead. In the meantime, Dave had also got himself a job: he was working at a gun store of all things. Now, that was amazingly good thinking on Dave's part: I had to admit, grudgingly, that I would never have thought of that.

Yesterday, we picked up Speedy. She – yes, Speedy was a girl, I checked – had been resprayed a pleasant navy blue which made it almost invisible at night.

We also needed to try out our new suits.

That night

We crept down the darkened street.

About twenty yards ahead of us was the car and inside the car was the dealer. Across the street was the runner. Kick-Ass was on the other side of the street, heading towards the runner. Several streetlights were out, presumably on purpose to cover the dealer's nefarious nocturnal activities.

I crept towards the car where the dealer was in the driver's seat and the window was down. I nodded towards Kick-Ass who attacked the runner. At the same time, I separated my swords and just as the dealer started to react to his runner being clubbed to the ground, I swung my sword against the dealer's throat. He froze. I could see a bag on the floor, over on the other side of the car.

"Where is your boss?" I growled.

"Fuck you, bitch!" the dealer snarled.

I increased the pressure on the sword and the man braced up. I watched as a trickle of blood ran along my blade.

"Where is your boss?" I growled, again.

"Fuck you. . ." The dealer started, before I slit his throat preventing him from completing his last ever sentence.

I went around to the other side of the car, yanked open the door, and checked the bag. It was full of cash and drugs. I took the cash.

Kick-Ass joined me and we moved on.

"It was a bust; he wouldn't talk," I complained.

"Brave bastard," Kick-Ass responded without emotion.

..._...

Two streets over, we came across something bad, really bad.

Two Chicago police officers were being threatened; they both looked very young: rookies most likely. The two officers had been forced out of their car at gunpoint. There were five cunts, all with pistols, and the cunts wore masks. Both officers had their backs to their car while the five cunts formed a semi-circle around them. We took a moment and I conferred with Kick-Ass, to work out a strategy. The best solution was for me to go in hard and drop as many cunts as possible, in as short a time as possible.

Kick-Ass would then get the Police Officers to safety.

..._...

"What the hell do you want?" Officer Mason shouted and he sounded scared.

None of the cunts replied. Neither officer had his personal weapon; they had been thrown onto the sidewalk. As Officer Mason watched, a large blade projected through the chest of the second cunt from the left, before being withdrawn which allowed the cunt to drop to his knees and then the pavement. In his place, there was . . . what? An apparition? The apparition was black, but it had some very nice curves and parts of the suit were a vivid purple, especially around the mask. The apparition had an evil smirk and seemed to be enjoying itself. The other four cunts spun around to face the purple apparition.

"Okay, you cunts, let's see what you can do now," the purple apparition growled as it grinned insanely.

The cunt to the apparition's right started to move, but he received a blade in his chest for his trouble and he quickly dropped to the pavement with barely a whimper. The two officers felt themselves hauled from beside the car and pushed behind the car into cover. They looked up to see a very large black apparition with green and yellow features on his armour.

"I believe these belong to you," the apparition snarled as he held out two pistols, one in each hand.

The officers took the pistols, with looks of intense confusion.

"Stay here, I'll be right back."

..._...

As I came around the car, Hit Girl was fighting the last two cunts; there were three bodies on the pavement, one of which was still moving. Until, I kicked him in the head, before bringing a baton down onto the head of one of the cunts fighting Hit Girl; he crumpled to the pavement. Hit Girl then drove a blade of her bō-staff into the chest of the final cunt.

"What the fuck?"

We turned and saw the two officers who had glanced, astonished, over the bonnet of their car.

"You guys okay?" Hit Girl growled as she walked over.

"Yeah – thanks!" both Officers replied. "Who are you?"

"For now, we're not ready to reveal who we are, but we're on the same team as you guys," Hit Girl growled.

"Stay safe, guys," I snarled as we left the area.

We headed back towards Speedy and we both felt very happy about saving the two police officers.

As we came around a corner, we came across three gang members, very similar to the other night. This time, though, as soon as they saw us, they drew pistols and they started shooting. I braced myself and felt several rounds hit my chest and bounce off. The impacts pushed me back, but I did not lose my balance. Kick-Ass also received several rounds, all of which bounced off his armour. The men looked shocked at their weapons' apparent ineptitude. I quickly took advantage of the lull as I drew both my pistols and shot each man in the legs.

"Who the fuck, are you?" one man screamed out in pain.

"Your worst fucking nightmare!" Kick-Ass snarled back.

Another man appeared around another corner; he raised a MAC-10 and pointed it directly at me. Kick-Ass sprang into action as he wrapped his arms around me and turned his back to the MAC-10. He shielded me with his heavier back armour while I braced him as thirty rounds pounded his armour, starting low, but rising up his back. The rounds sounded like nine-millimetre, not .45-calibre, which substantially lessened the impact. Seconds later, once the shooting had stopped, I raised a pistol and I shot the man in the head.

"You okay?" Kick-Ass asked as he grimaced in pain.

"Yeah. You?" I asked.

"I think I might have a few new bruises, but I'm still in one piece," Kick-Ass replied.

"You're one lucky cunt," I observed. "Not many people survive having a full MAC-10 magazine emptied into them – let's get the hell outta here."

"Damn straight," Kick-Ass said and he smirked at me.

Once back at Speedy, we changed and headed back to the apartment.

Tonight, had gone well and I think we had done some good. At least it was better than the last time we had gone out – which was not all that hard.

Tomorrow, was Thanksgiving and we had a lot to be thankful for that day.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 16*: Watchdogs

Wednesday, December 4th, 2013

One week later

We had found a house!

It was a foreclosure in northern Chicago, so it was not expected that the sale would take long to go through.

The house was a three-storey, four-bedroom house with a large attic and an equally large basement. The house had a main level, just above the ground and a lower level. There was also a two-car garage round the back. I was working on plans to convert the lower level to an overt training area with mats, and the basement into a covert training area, with a secure armoury and a place to store other . . . err, 'less legal' equipment.

Marty, apparently, was a tech geek and said he would help with the security, once we got the house.

Mindy was starting to get giddy.

We were in the first week of December and Mindy, apparently, loved Christmas. Our biggest problem, at the moment, was training as we did not have a proper training area and we could not pound on the floor in the apartment without upsetting the tenant below. We did what exercise we could at the apartment, including some very limited weapons training. When I was not working, we went out running. Mindy would be really happy, when we could train in private and properly in the new house. For the moment, though, the best workout was when we went out at night. We had been out almost every night, not always in our combat suits. Some nights we simply cruised around in Speedy and checked out the districts of Chicago. One essential area to be checked out was the area around the house that we were buying.

The area appeared reasonably nice and safe and it was also close to the Chicago River and Channel Runne Park.

I had spoken with Marcus a few times over the past weeks.

Amongst other reasons, it felt comforting to me to hear his voice and I think he enjoyed hearing my voice, too. I knew that he was living alone – just him . . . and that damn swear jar! Dave had also raised another subject. Not a very appealing subject, neither. Dave wanted to start a College course and he had suggested that maybe I should complete my High School education which I had quite literally walked out on. I definitely was not going back to school, but I agreed to finish my education from home.

At least I would have something to do while Dave was at work and we could both do our 'homework' together.

Tuesday, December 10th

One week later

The weather was really shitty.

It had been snowing for three days and the temperature was very low. One good thing, though, was that we found our combat suits provided very good insulation and protection from the elements.

For that night, we were intending to shut down a key drug dealer and his immediate boss. Despite the weather, the drug dealers were still plying their trade as we watched from halfway up an apartment block. The snow was swirling, quite heavily, and we were almost invisible in the darkness. Between us, we had counted six men, four of whom were the expected watchdogs armed with pistols which looked to be SIG Sauer P226 automatics. The watchdogs appeared very professional and they were not engaged in unnecessary chatter nor distraction. Approaching them would be difficult, but not impossible.

The weather was to be our ally that night and we used it to cover out approach as we moved to within ten yards of the first watchdog where I stopped to study him. He was large, very large. I had to put him down hard and I was not going to take any risks, so, I drew a pistol and fitted a suppressor to the barrel. With the suppressor in place, I aimed and I fired. The watchdog dropped instantly and silently, to the snow-covered ground, leaving a bright red patch of snow which was being rapidly covered in the fresh flakes which dropped out of the dark sky. We moved forward, to where the next two men stood; then it all went to shit.

..._...

The next watchdog was better than I had given him credit for

He must have caught some movement, because he drew his pistol and fired twice – all in one smooth movement; no challenge, nothing. Both rounds hit me, dead centre in the chest, and they knocked me down. Kick-Ass smoothly drew his Glock, just as I had taught him, and without any hesitation, he double-tapped the watchdog in the head, before he swiftly changed target and double-tapped the next watchdog in the chest, just as the fourth watchdog fired three rounds directly into Kick-Ass' chest. I recovered quickly and drew my other pistol as I had dropped the first one, and shot the fourth watchdog in the face. When the first shot was fired, the other two men had started to run. Kick-Ass stopped just long enough to check that I was okay, before he gave chase. The boots on our combat suits proved to be very well suited to the snow and they provided superior grip.

I checked the dead men. They did not have anything special on them, but the other two men had left two large bags behind. I opened the first to find . . . surprise, surprise: drugs. I moved onto the second bag and my eyes lit up. The bag was full of the green stuff: lots of neatly bundled $100 bills; there must have been tens of thousands of dollars, there. A few minutes later, Kick-Ass returned; he was dragging one man behind him.

"Missing one?" I asked, looking beyond Kick-Ass.

"He didn't survive," Kick-Ass replied coldly as he dumped the man on the ground; the man was still breathing, but unconscious. "The Boss-man."

"Oh, good," I replied triumphantly. "I have his bag of cash."

I searched the Boss-man, not finding all that much, but I did find a business card with a name and a Chicago address. We left him on the ground and headed out of the area, going via Speedy to deposit the bag of cash.

The streets were very empty; as you could reasonably expect at that time of night and in the current weather conditions.

Just drug dealers and vigilantes. As far as possible, we kept to the shadows, the flurries of snow helped to conceal our presence, too. After a short walk, Kick-Ass nudged me and pointed across and further up the street. I followed his pointing gauntlet and I could see two groups of two men each. They loitered either side of a small convenience store that was just closing up for the night. It was blatantly obvious what was about to happen.

I motioned Kick-Ass to move across the street, behind the closer group and I would deal with the far group. Ten minutes later, the lights in the shop went out and an elderly gentleman came out. He closed the door behind him and proceeded to secure his shop. The man had a small cloth cash bag under his arm.

The two groups moved forward, towards the shop owner.

..._...

"You cocksuckers have just one chance to make a career change," I snarled. "What's it gonna be, cunts?"

The two cunts closest to me spun around; they both had knives. The other two cunts looked over towards me; they too had knives. The shop owner just stood there and he looked scared.

"Who the fuck, are you, sweet chops?" One cunt, who seemed to be the boss, demanded.

"I am your worst fucking nightmare," I growled and I emphasised that fact as I swung my swords in a menacing fashion.

"We're not scared of some jumped up bitch!" the cunt replied and he turned back to the shop owner.

"You had your chance," I responded and I re-joined my swords, then embedded one blade into a snow drift.

A cunt flew backwards with a Hit Girl sized boot print on his chest.

He hit the side of the shop hard which knocked him out. The boss cunt spun around and he received a boot to the side of his face which flipped him backwards into the snow on the sidewalk. While that was happening, my pair each received a baton to the head and they both crumpled to the sidewalk. I smiled at Hit Girl and she smiled back as she grabbed her bō-staff out of the snowdrift.

"You okay, sir," I growled gently.

"Yes . . . thanks to you two," the shop owner replied.

"You going far?" Hit Girl growled.

"Just to the bank at the corner," the shop owner replied, motioning down the block.

"We'll watch your back till you get there," Hit Girl growled back.

"Thank you, young lady, and good night," the shop owner responded with a smile as he walked off down the street.

"I'll call the police for these idiots," I said as I pulled out my cell.

We headed down the street a short distance behind the shop owner and we watched him deposit his takings at the bank's ATM.

The man then caught a cab and, presumably, headed home.

"Tonight, has been fun," I commented to Kick-Ass.

"Yes, it has," Kick-Ass replied.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 17: Settling Down

Thursday, December 17th, 2013

Just over one week later

We had the house!

Did I say, we had the house? I was over the fucking moon – Dave said I was giddy with excitement, maybe I was, but for fucking good reason! The builders started work directly. They would stop over Christmas, but they hoped to be completed towards the end of the first or second week in January. We had asked for half of the basement to be walled off and kitted out as a panic room with a secure, and hidden, access door. The ceiling and walls of the room, would also be reinforced. We already had discreet internal and external CCTV throughout the property, thanks to the previous owners. The builders would install similar exercise mats to those that we had at Safehouse C, to the main area of the lower level of the house. The 'panic room' and the associated lower level training area would also get the same wall storage as the Safehouse too. We intended to use the 'panic room' as a secure armoury and as somewhere to keep our combat suits and any other illegal, vigilante related items, safe. The front, side, and back external doors to the property would also be upgraded and reinforced.

The lower level would be really cool, when it was finished. Not only would it have sufficient space for a large training mat and other training equipment, there was also a shower, a small kitchen, a steam room as well as a sauna, not to mention the main laundry room. Speedy would have a space in the garage and we had plenty of room on the main level. There was a living room and dining room, as well as a family room, and an office. The kitchen had a large counter for eating. Dave and I had never lived in such a house like this one before; it was huge and very luxurious. Luckily, the previous owners had left plenty of furniture, which was a big help.

Once the builders had finished, Dave would move all his gear from New York, along with selected items from Safehouse C.

I walked around the new house with Mindy, that morning.

I had to admit, the house would do us really well. We now had a permanent base in Chicago. We had bought the house for a lot less than it was worth and that small fact had allowed the budget to go a lot further. I particularly loved the enormous master bedroom; it had an enormous hot tub. Mindy said that she wanted to start doing some real cooking, once we moved in, and this worried me a bit as I knew that Mindy could not cook . . . at all. Up until then, we had been eating takeaways and whatever fitted into the microwave. I had cooked a few things, but not very much. We would just see what happened, I supposed. Mindy's insistence on cooking had mostly stemmed from a few weeks previously, when I did cook and we had pizza. Only it was not quite what Mindy had expected.

"What the fuck is that?" Mindy had exclaimed as she looked down at her plate. "You said we were having pizza."

"It's a Chicago pizza, Mindy," I replied with a smirk, expecting trouble.

Mindy was not a big one for change.

"It is not a fucking pizza; it's deeper than most swimming pools . . . and it looks like a fucking casserole!" Mindy ranted. "I'm from fucking New York – I want a proper fucking pizza, cunt!"

"You finished!" I asked and just laughed.

Mindy had not finished – not by a long shot; she was just getting warmed up.

"The fucking sauce is on top, for God's sake!" Mindy continued. "My God, I've gone to the dark side! You should be ashamed of yourself, too, Dave; you're a fuckin' New Yorker for fuck's sake!"

"You sound like Jon Stewart," I quipped.

t was safer just to let her rant, so I just ate my pizza and listened to Mindy.

..._...

I was looking forward to Christmas morning as I had a big surprise, or two, in store for Mindy . . . both with the help of Marcus. The plan was to spend Christmas Eve in the new house.

The builders would finish on the twenty-third and start again on the twenty-seventh, which gave us some time... Together!

Tuesday, December 24th
Christmas Eve

West Ridge

We moved into the new house on Christmas Eve, as planned.

Mindy was all giddy! Did I say that Mindy was all giddy? It was actually a great feeling. We had left Speedy parked in the garage and then come into a lovely warm, cosy house. The builders were well advanced with the basement and they had almost completed the lower level, in fact, the mat was actually ready to be used and we looked forward to testing it out. For the moment, though, we had the place to ourselves. Mindy went around every room, checking into every corner and every cupboard.

That afternoon we changed and we went to try out the mat.

Dave and I faced each other, at each end of the mat.

Neither of us moved, we just looked at one another.

"Well, who's going first?" Dave asked.

"I'll let the pussy, go first," I smirked.

"Off you go then," Dave suggested and he grinned smugly.

The fucking cunt!

He was winding me up, on purpose. I would teach him to wind me up and, at the same time, I would remind the green asshole who the fucking boss was! I started to move towards Dave and he started coming towards me. I waited until Dave had covered most of the distance to the centre of the mat, before I flew at him, executing my carefully planned assault. I raised my leg towards his shoulder, then reached out for his arm – I had intended to execute a flying arm bar and bring him down hard . . . only Dave, apparently, had other ideas.

Suddenly, and completely unexpectedly, my world turned upside down as Dave kept his elbows in and he grabbed my hips, then twisted me and put me down, very hard! The air was knocked out of my lungs and the next thing I knew, Dave had me pinned to the mat. He had executed an almost perfect defeat of my flying arm bar attack . . . I was shocked, stunned even!

Nobody had ever beaten me when I used that attack – that bitch Mother fucking Russia did not fucking count! I was furious, more with myself for having let myself be put down, than with Dave for beating me. How the fuck could he have known what I was going to attack him with? He was getting good, too fucking good! I had spent months feeling sorry for myself in a dingy shithole in Chicago while Dave had obviously spent months bettering himself.

Fuck me, I was the fucking loser now. I had just had my ass handed to me, just like I always did with Dave. I did not like being on the receiving end – talk about a dented ego! Then it occurred to me . . . I had noticed something in Dave's eye, just before I had attacked. The bastard wound me up and he had known that I would try a flying arm bar attack, just to get my own back on him: the cunt knew me too fucking well!

"Let me the fuck up!" I growled at Dave; I tried to be angry, but I just giggled instead.

Dave released me and he stood back so I could get back onto my feet. He still smiled, smugly.

"How the fuck did you know how to do that?" I asked Dave.

"I've been practicing that manoeuvre for a while; months ago, but I've had nobody to try it out on. Besides, I knew you wouldn't break!" Dave said, meekly.

"Congratulations, Dave – you beat Hit Girl! Not many people manage that. However, being reminded that I am not invincible, from time to time, is a good thing, I suppose," I replied.

I smiled and felt very impressed, but tried not to show it, so I just punched Dave, reasonably hard, in the upper arm.

"Do that again and I rip your fucking throat out!" I growled at Dave, but I could not stop smiling.

"Ego healing, bitch?" Dave asked, with an annoyingly knowing smile.

"Yeah, cunt!" I replied, then gave Dave a big kiss.

"I love you, too," Dave said, as he swept my feet out from under me and dumped me on my backside, none too gently!

"Fucking cunt!" I yelled out, but then I leapt up and flew at Dave.

I started small. I let Dave defeat my attacks, then I started to move faster and harder. Dave was actually holding his own, very well, but I was determined not to be put down again. I put Dave down several times, but he managed to put me down, too; at least three fucking times! We continued to spar for another twenty minutes, but then I called it a day and rubbed my chest where Dave had kicked me, earlier on. Dave's stamina impressed me, just as much as his strength. Dave was capable of pushing on, despite feeling tired, plus he was able to put considerable strength and weight behind his attacks. That had resulted in the rather vicious kick to my chest which had put me down and winded me for a few minutes. Dave was very apologetic, but I told him to stop being such a pussy and that I had had worse fucking bruises.

I had to admit that Dave had finally made it to the NFL!

Dave suggested that we try out the new sauna and steam room, both of which he had turned on earlier in the day.

I thought that that would be a great idea and I rather shocked Dave, again, too: I stripped off all my clothes and dove into the very steamy, steam room! Dave dumped his own clothes and he followed me into the swirling steamy mists. We cuddled up on the wooden bench; thankfully Dave had thought to put towels down as the wood was very warm.

Dave's hands started to wander which was somewhat enjoyable in my sweaty, naked state. My own hands wandered too and I started to rub things. One thing ultimately led to another and we started to kiss and stimulate one another. Eventually it got too fucking warm so we left the steam room and rolled around on towels that we had spread out on the mat. Dave then produced one of his green condoms from his seemingly inexhaustible supply; well, we had to thoroughly test the mat somehow. . .

Twenty minutes later, I felt very satisfied, both inside and out as I struggled to get some sort of feeling back into my overly-stimulated lower regions. My hands shook and I was still breathing heavily from the major orgasm which I had just endured. Dave was also breathing like a fish out of water and he lay flat on his back. I really did love Dave; he really knew which buttons to press, again and again. Unfortunately, the shower in the basement was only big enough for one person which was very annoying; so, we bolted upstairs – still naked – to make use of the much larger shower in our bedroom.

Forty minutes later, we both felt much cleaner and even more satisfied, if that were actually possible. Twice, in one afternoon was definitely a record for me: I did not think that I would be able to walk straight for several days, though. We had proper pizza, that evening, not that Chicago crap that thinks it is a pizza and we went to bed early.

For some reason we were both very tired!

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 18*: Festive Hit Girl

Wednesday, December 25th, 2013
Christmas Day

West Ridge

It was cold and snowy outside, but toasty warm inside.

I felt happier than I had in a long time; I loved Christmas. I turned from the window and looked over at Dave; he was sleeping soundly.

I could not have that.

For fuck's sake, Mindy!

I opened my eyes to find that I had a slim blonde girl jumping up and down on the bed shouting, "It's Christmas!" like she was Noddy Holder.

"Move it asshole!"

I looked over at the clock. Fuck!

"It may be Christmas Day, Hit Girl, but it is also fucking six in the fucking morning and Kick-Ass is fucking tired!" I growled.

"Come on, Dave; I've got a present for you," Mindy begged.

She was sixteen and she could kill a grown man, any one of a hundred ways and without a moment's hesitation. But when it came to Christmas, she was just like any normal fucking ten-year-old. I supposed that was why I loved her so much.

God, Mindy.

I threw back the duvet and sat up. Mindy was wearing nothing but an oversize T-shirt and she looked very appealing. I grabbed her around the waist and pulled her down onto the bed. She screamed and then she giggled.

"Happy Christmas, Mindy," I said a moment before I kissed her, deeply.

I loved Dave.

He put up with me being a big kid and yes, he moaned, but I knew that he loved me. That kiss was . . . well, it had sent shocks right through me, all the way down to my toes. I was really excited; Dave must have thought that I was a fucking ten-year-old, the way that I was behaving, but I could not help it and I did not give a shit, to be honest. It was only one day a year; what the hell could it hurt?

I placed a large box in front of him; it was wrapped in green paper with a yellow ribbon. Dave laughed when he saw it.

"Come on, Kick-Ass, open it, already!" I growled as I bounced on the bed; I could not keep still. I hoped he would like them – I had not been able to think of anything else to get him.

"Wow, that's heavy," Dave commented as he hefted the box in his hands.

Mindy was bouncing on the bed; talk about a hyperactive child!

I pulled off the ribbon and attacked the paper; Mindy was very good at wrapping things. Under the paper was a plain, but solid, white box. I opened the box carefully; knowing Mindy, it could be anything. Inside the box were two, hard black cases. I pulled the top one out and placed it on the table. Mindy looked like she had ants up her fucking backside.

I opened the case.

"Wow!" I could not say anything else, but my weapons specialist could not keep still, or silent, a moment longer.

"It's a custom Glock 17 Gen4, in nine-millimetre Parabellum. In the case are three seventeen-round magazines, a speed loader, a cleaning kit, and a manual – not that you'll need it," Mindy spat out at high speed, like a machine gun.

The pistol had a subdued green frame, matte black slide, and a subdued yellow backstrap. I checked the other case; it held an identical pistol and accessories. Mindy then passed over another, smaller box; wrapped in the same way. I opened it. It looked like a small torch, but it had a rail which allowed it to fit beneath the barrel of the Glock 17 pistol. Again, my weapons specialist, chipped in.

"It's a Glock GTL-52, combination Tactical Light and Laser Illuminator. It has both a visible laser and an infra-red laser, which can only be seen when you wear NVGs. The IR laser and light are dimmable," Mindy finished as she calmed down . . . slightly.

I was a bit shocked, but very pleased, with the pistols.

"Thanks, Mindy, they're cool," I said, then I got up and gave her a big hug and a long, long kiss.

She started to blush, furiously.

"I have my own custom pistols; now you have yours. I know you only carry one, but it gives you a spare and you never know when you might need to take two pistols out into the field," Mindy explained.

..._...

"Your turn, gorgeous," I said.

"What?!" Mindy exclaimed, excitedly.

"You might want to put some clothes on," I suggested.

Mindy scrambled to pull on some underwear, a pair of purple shorts, and a smaller T-shirt.

"Ready!" Mindy stated, just as excitedly.

"Come on," I laughed and I dragged Mindy downstairs.

"Okay, big present, or little present, first?" I teased.

"Big!" Mindy exclaimed, jumping up and down.

"Okay," I said, then pulled Mindy into the garage. "You missed this last night, didn't you?"

I pushed Mindy towards a large object which was covered in a black tarpaulin. I pulled the tarpaulin off with a flourish, quickly and in one go.

"Oh, my God! It's. . . Oh! Fuck! How?" Mindy stammered, incoherently, as she stared at the object in front of her.

"The police were getting rid of it; it was no longer required for the investigation. Marcus pulled some strings and, well, here we are," I explained.

The 'object' in question, was a very purple Ducati Panigale, with the initials 'HG' on the sides. It took Mindy several minutes to get her mind into gear and to finally reach out to touch the motorcycle.

"I can't believe it. I never thought I'd ever see it again!" Mindy said quietly, as she ran her hands over the purple paintwork with reverent care.

I could not help laughing. I could see tears welling up in Mindy's eyes and they started to spill down her cheeks. Mindy turned around, jumped up, and wrapped her arms around me in a big and rather painful hug. She hugged me for quite a while, until her tears of joy were brought under control.

"Thank you, Dave. You don't know what this means to me," Mindy said, s she looked into my eyes.

"Yes, I do know what it means to you, gorgeous," I replied and I felt very happy inside.

..._...

Mindy suddenly dropped down and she stared up at me.

"You said there was another present," Mindy said, pointedly.

"I did?" I teased.

"Yes, asshole, you fucking did!" Mindy growled, impatiently.

"Dining room," I said, before I was almost bowled over as Mindy shot out of the garage at high speed.

I followed the Mindy tornado and found her in the dining room where a long box sat on the table, wrapped in purple paper. Mindy looked like she might explode with all her pent-up excitement.

"You get any more excited, you'll blow a gasket, girl," I quipped.

Mindy just glared at me and then she attacked the wrapping on the box, which did not take long. Inside the paper was a long, glossy, black box. I think Mindy knew what was in it, as I could see that her hands were shaking. She eased the lid open and she started to squeal. Inside the box, there was a long, thin, purple bag made of silk. Mindy, very carefully, opened the top of the bag and eased out the contents. Her eyes went wide and I could see tears forming again.

Her mouth started opening and closing much like that of a goldfish.

..._...

Mindy pulled the Katana from the bag and she held it out in front of her with two hands.

With cautious movements, she moved the Katana very slowly as she checked out every inch of the weapon before she then removed the sword from the Saya and watched the lights reflect off of the highly polished blade. The unbelievably sharp, mono steel blade was made from high carbon (T10) steel, with a 2.80 Shaku, double Hi and 1.7-centimetre Sori. The blade was finished in a straight Hamon and had been stone polished by hand. The point was formed in a long O-Kissaski. The Habaki and Seppa were of Red Copper. The blade was attached to a twenty-six-centimetre Tsuka which was wrapped in a purple cotton Tsuka-ito combined with black ray-skin. The Katana was finished off with black Fuchi, Kashira, and Tsuba. The Katana was housed in a matte black Saya with purple highlights. The Koikuchi and Kirigata were wood and the Sageo was purple silk.

Mindy gently weaved the sword through the air and she watched the light as it glinted off the highly-polished blade. After a few minutes, I asked Mindy if she and her new sword needed some time together, in private. Mindy blushed and she carefully replaced the sword in its Saya and left it on the desk.

"Who?" she asked tentatively.

"Both of us; Marcus and I," I replied.

We thought it would be the right present for her; two-thousand dollars. Mindy ran and hugged me. When she finally let go, there were tears in her eyes again.

"I don't know what to say, but thanks," Mindy stammered.

"Just seeing you with that sword is enough for me," I replied.

..._...

Mindy immediately got on the phone to Marcus.

I checked my watch; it was not even seven in the morning yet. That meant it was before eight in New York. Not quite as bad as six in the morning. I went to get a coffee while Mindy rattled on about the Ducati and the Katana. She was still very excited. Some forty minutes later, Mindy handed me the phone without a word and skipped, yes, skipped, off to the dining room.

"Merry Christmas, Marcus," I said.

"Got you up at six, did she?" Marcus asked.

"You could have warned me," I complained.

"Where's the fun in that?" Marcus countered.

"She loved the bike and the sword; she was in tears," I said.

"She sounded happy, earlier. Glad that worked out. I hope you are both keeping safe, up there," Marcus said.

"We're fine, Marcus," I replied. "Don't you worry."

"I will always worry about you two," Marcus replied.

"We'll call you in the New Year. Have a good day," I said and cancelled the call.

Author's Note: I hope I have described Mindy's new Katana sword accurately. Describing the sword features in English did not do them justice, so I used the Japanese terms for what I see as a very powerful weapon which deserves respect. For those who don't know about Katana Swords, I will explain some of the terms described:

The Shaku is a traditional measurement - 2.80 = 84.80-centimetres.

The Hi is a groove at the top of the blade.

The Sori is the curvature of the blade.

The Hamon is a pattern created by heat-treating the blade.

The Kissaki is the type of tip at the end of the sword. O being the biggest.

The Habaki keeps the sword from falling out of the scabbard (Saya).

The Seppa are installed top and bottom of the hand guard (Tsuba).

The Tsuka is the hilt or handle.

The Tsuka-ito is a material used to wrap the handle or hilt.

The Fuchi is a hilt collar between the Tsuka and the Tsuba.

The Tsuba is a hand guard.

The Kashira is a butt cap or pommel on the end of the Tsuka.

The Saya is the wooden scabbard for the blade.

The Koikuchi is the mouth of the Saya.

The Kirigata is a knob on the side of the Saya for attaching the Sageo.

The Sageo is the cord used to tie the Saya to a belt.

If any of the above is incorrect, please let me know and I will correct the mistakes.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 19*: New Year, New Hit Girl

Tuesday, December 31st, 2013
New Year's Eve

Christmas was over.

Not a bad thing, really, as Mindy had actually calmed down, quite a bit. It was New Year's Eve. We had considered going out, but had decided to stay in and enjoy ourselves, instead, in every possible way. The builders had been back in between Christmas and New year and they had finished most of their work. They would be back on the second of January and they expected to be finished by the Friday.

I had arranged for both of us to hire a U-Haul truck, at the weekend, and we would go get what was needed from the New York Safehouses.

West Ridge

The day was fun.

Now the lower level was finished, we were able to use all the exercise equipment which included the punch bag and two treadmills. Dave managed to sabotage my treadmill which kept accelerating, slowly, but surely. Therefore, I was completely exhausted after we had spent time on the mat, time pounding the bag, and time spent on the treadmills. Dave though, was not exhausted and he wanted to play. Honestly, I did not have the energy to stop him, so he practically stripped me naked and started doing the most wonderful things to me by exhausted body. I was not complaining or anything, but I was getting even more exhausted, what with the orgasms. Yes orgasms, plural; Dave was very good to me. It was a shame that I was physically incapable of easily returning the favour, but I needed to at least get some feeling back into my arms before I could do that.

Anyway, by ten minutes to midnight, we were lying in bed, having had a very passionate hour or so. I really was incapable of moving and Dave's supply of green condoms was reduced by one. Dave himself was flagging a bit now too as I had remembered that my mouth could help where my hands could not.

We sat on the end of the bed and casually watched the countdown on the TV.

Once the countdown got to 'one', a naked Mindy dived on top of me and yelled 'Happy New Year' at the top her voice, followed by a very deep and passionate kiss.

When we separated, I responded with a 'Happy New Year' of my own, before I flipped her over and returned the kiss, plus something else wrapped in green which caused Mindy's eyes to bulge out.

Wednesday, January 1st, 2014
New Year's Day

Now, that was a damn good way to start the New Year.

It had just occurred to me that at that time, the previous year, I was still very much a virgin and I had never even kissed a boy. I had not even wanted to kiss a boy; not until I saw that stupid 'Union J' thing with those evil bitches. My life had really changed over the past twelve months. Okay, I went through a lot of shit, including that fight at the warehouse alongside Justice Forever. Then, my escape from New York to Chicago, my weeks of sinking into a feral lifestyle, before yet again, I was saved.

I owed my life to one person and one person only, at that point.

I owed my life to Dave Lizewski.

The one person in my life who got me. The guy who had fucked me, both sides of midnight. The guy who had pressed all my buttons, a few short hours before – last year. The guy who was lying beside me, snoring.

"Ass-Kick!" I yelled as I prodded Dave awake.

Dave awoke and he instantly wrapped his arms around me, in a bear hug, and he held me tight. I could not fucking move. Then I felt a finger, moving slowly up my side; it tickled. I started to giggle, the giggle gave way to laughter, and I could not stop. I tried to swear at him, but I could not produce any coherent sounds. It did not help that Dave was whispering wonderful things into my ear which just made things happen down below and those feelings then clashed with the other feelings that were moving throughout my body from the tickling and the whispering.

When I could not take anymore, I forced my way out of Dave's arms and just lay there panting. Dave stared down at me with an insane grin. He was staring into my eyes and I was sinking into his fathomless blue eyes. I could see his desire and his deep love for me. I could never be separated from Dave, not ever. I really could not believe that I was ever able to live without Dave, both around me, as well as inside me. My God, what was going on with my mind?

I know, I have a not-so-clean vocabulary, but my mind was generally, well. . . out of the gutter. I never used to have thoughts like those, never. Again, I supposed, it had all started that night of the sleepover. I was not complaining, far from it, as I did enjoy those thoughts – I was a dirty bitch, after all.

..._...

Oh, crap!

Dave's hands were wandering again! This had to stop; my body could not take any more of it. I was so wound up; I thought that my next fucking orgasm could go off like a nuclear bomb and fucking rip me apart. I rolled over onto my front and Dave looked a bit unhappy with that.

"I can't take anymore! Hit Girl is completely wiped the fuck out!" I groaned.

"Is it a happy Hit Girl?" Dave asked, grinning.

"Fuck yeah!" I exclaimed with another giggle as I reached over and pulled him into a deep kiss.

We lay there for another hour and exchanged strange, disjointed sentences that did not really make any sense.

..._...

"I'm hungry!" I said finally and sat up.

"Oh, yes! Ready to go again?" Dave responded and he also sat up.

"For food . . . food!" I exclaimed.

"Okay! I could do with some, too," Dave acknowledged.

I could barely move; my joints were still sore and as for my crotch, well. . . I made it downstairs after getting dressed with Dave's help. It was almost noon, so while Dave put the coffee on, I called Marcus.

..._...

"Happy New Year, Marcus!" I yelled down the phone.

"Happy New Year, to you, Mindy!" Marcus replied with a chuckle. "Did you and Dave have a good evening?"

"Oh, yes! We. . .," I started, then I felt a bit embarrassed as I remembered what we had been doing. "You don't wanna know."

"Oh, a bit of that. I see. No, I don't want to know!" Marcus said, sternly.

He sounded a little embarrassed, too.

I watched Mindy on the phone to Marcus.

I saw her blush, badly.

I think Marcus must have asked her what we had done that previous night. Oh, that was so good, last night . . . and this morning. I thought that I got Mindy really, really, wound up. I had a lot fun and I think Mindy did, too. I shoved a cup of coffee in front of her and I started to cook a very late breakfast. The rest of the day was spent resting and recuperating, as we needed to be fit for moving kit out of New York at the weekend.

Plus, we needed to start the year off kicking some real criminal butt.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 20*: Road Trip

Saturday, January 4th, 2014

Three days later

The builders were finally finished.

We now had a secure armoury in the basement. Officially it was a 'Panic Room', but the security was basically the same. Both rooms were designed to keep whatever was inside, safe and secure. When you came down the stairs from the lower level and if you did not know about the new room, you would never have known it was even there; which was the idea. The door to the new room had been blended into the brick work at the end of the, now smaller, basement. Access was controlled via a discrete keypad which opened the door. I had already moved all of our Kick-Ass and Hit Girl combat suits, weapons, and other equipment into the armoury. The walls had the same layout as in the New York Safehouses and I intended to fill the walls with weapons. So far there was not all that much on display.

I was feeling good about this year. I intended to not repeat a lot of last year's mistakes. This year I had Dave, to guide me. I may be more skilled at being a vigilante, but Dave is much more experienced at life in general.

..._...

We had picked up a medium-sized U-Haul truck, on the Friday evening, before setting off, early on the Saturday morning.

It was cold and it was wet; pretty miserable really. It was going to be an interesting trip which the fog and the snow would not exactly help. We had a very long drive ahead of us, eight hundred miles each way. It was nearly nine in the morning when we stopped outside of Toledo, Ohio for gas. Dave had driven and he desperately needed a rest; he was completely exhausted. Dave gassed the truck while I grabbed some food and coffee to help keep us going. I then took over the driving while Dave slept after he had eaten and he had had some coffee. The damn truck was not comfortable, but that's what you got when renting on a budget.

We still had five hundred and sixty fucking miles to go, too.

The truck

I awoke with a start as the truck stopped suddenly.

Mindy's driving could be a bit erratic at times. I groaned; my back was sore from the position that I had slept in – cheap, shitty truck!

"Where are we?" I asked as I noticed that we had stopped at a gas station.

"Dubois, Pennsylvania," Mindy stated, simply.

She looked very tired.

"Only another two hundred and eighty miles to go," I commented and I opened the door to go gas the truck.

Mindy vanished, very speedily, to the bathroom. She came back with food and coffee. I took over the driving again and we finally arrived in New York at around ten that evening. We were tired, but we decided to make use of the darkness and we started to load the truck with our, not so legal, cargo. Mindy had smeared the unmarked truck's registration plates with ice and snow to conceal where we had come from. As arranged, Marty had met us at the Safehouse to help us load the truck. All of Dave's stuff, from his Dad's house was there too, and all went in the truck.

Mindy seized all of the weapons she needed and quite a few that she did not. There were many unopened boxes of new weapons and boxes of ammunition stacked in a store room which we also threw into the truck. The Safehouse walls were almost empty by the time we had finished. Some weapons remained, just in case we ever came back to New York and needed them. By the time, the truck was loaded, it was nearly four in the morning. We desperately needed sleep.

The truck was locked in the secure parking area beneath the Safehouse and we went to bed, very tired.

Sunday, January 5th

We awoke the following morning, slightly refreshed.

It was almost noon!

We immediately headed out, hailed a cab, and made for Central Park. We found a late breakfast and started to feel a bit more human. Marcus had arranged to meet us that afternoon, before we headed back to Chicago.

It was mainly for Mindy; she had really wanted to see Marcus.

Marcus' House

"Marcus!" Mindy almost screamed.

"Mindy!" Marcus said happily as they both hugged.

"Good drive, Dave?" Marcus asked.

"Crap," I replied. "Too damn long!"

"Well, I'm glad you made it, safely, and I don't envy you the trip back," Marcus responded.

We chatted for another hour, before it was time to go.

Mindy gave Marcus another big hug and she was crying when we went our separate ways.

The truck

The trip back felt even longer as the truck was quite heavily loaded and therefore slower, if that were actually possible.

We stopped twice on the way back, for gas, and at Toledo, we stopped for sleep, too. I woke up first and stretched to bring my body back to life. I tried to look out the window, but I had to wipe it first as the glass was all misted up. I wiped one hand across the very cold glass and then I froze. Were my eyes deceiving me? Was I still asleep? I saw. . . No. . . Not fucking possible. . . He was fucking dead! Eaten by his own fucking shark. What sort of a fucking idiot keeps a shark at his hideout, anyway?

Chris fucking D'Amico!

..._...

I punched Dave, a bit too hard obviously, because he jumped up and bumped his head.

"What the fuck, Mindy? Fucking bitch!" Dave almost yelled, before I clamped my hand over his mouth.

"I just saw Chris fucking D'Amico! The Motherfucker!" I spat out, excitedly and I pointed through the cleared section of window.

Dave looked out, dubiously.

"Fuck! He's supposed to be fucking dead! That fucking shark ate him!" Dave stammered.

"Obviously, not!" I responded, angrily.

We both watched, as Chris D'Amico was helped out of his wheelchair and into the back of a limousine. He seemed to be missing his lower legs and some other parts, but we could not see much detail. The limousine pulled away and we looked at each other.

"The fucking bastard is still alive! He needs to fucking die!" Mindy snarled.

"Hey, Mindy. Calm the fuck down," Dave said, as he pulled me into a hug. "We both want his fuckin' legless ass. We will get him. He obviously isn't going far like that."

"Sorry. It was a hell of a shock, that's all," I said, smiling up at Dave. Then I recalled earlier, "Hey! Did you call me a fucking bitch, cunt?"

The cunt just laughed at me and started the engine to demist the glass. We still had two hundred and forty fucking miles to go and the truck was still not comfortable. My fucking ass hurt. God, it was quicker and a lot more fun on the Ducati.

"Did you notice the limo's registration plates?" Dave asked.

"No. Why?" I replied.

"They were from Chicago," Dave said, simply.

The truck

Mindy drove the last hundred miles or so.

I decided to sit back and read a New York paper that I had picked up.

"Fuck, Miranda!" I yelled and almost caused Mindy to swerve off the road!

"What?" Mindy asked, angrily.

My hands were shaking and I could feel tears welling up.

"Miranda Swedlow. You knew her as Night Bitch. She was murdered on New Year's Eve; her body was found in an alley, badly beaten," I said.

"God, I'm sorry Dave. I know you were close," Mindy said.

"I'm sorry, Mindy," Dave said. "I know what you thought of her."

"No, Dave, you don't know what I thought of her. I don't give a shit that you were fucking her last summer. I know that you love me," I responded. "Miranda helped us out at the warehouse and I respect her for that; she fought really well."

The rest of the trip back was a bit subdued and it was dark when we pulled up outside the garage at home.

We quickly unloaded everything into the garage, beside Speedy, before Dave parked the truck and we went to bed.

..._...

I felt sorry for Dave.

I knew that Miranda had been the woman that Dave had been 'plugging', the previous summer. Night Whore! I admit, I had felt a little jealousy build inside me when he had said her name, but then I had remembered something else; Dave had told me that it was just sex and that there had been nothing else in it, no love. I had instantly felt better, and also, Miranda had been another Hero; she had fought with us against The Motherfucker and I did owe her for that.

Well, we were finally back home. Nearly everything, 'vigilante', was now with us in Chicago, our new home. New York only had a limited use now as a bolt hole. Tomorrow, we would need to get all the weapons into the armoury.

I fell asleep thinking about Dave, Miranda, and my weapons.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 21*: Ninja Attack

Friday, January 10th, 2014

We suited up soon after seven that evening.

Mindy had checked out my combat suit and equipment and I had then checked hers, before we left the armoury. Once we were ready, we headed out in Speedy. We had to be careful that the neighbours did not see anything. On that thought, we had discussed finding a Chicago safehouse where we could suit up and go in and out secretly. That would take time which for now, we did not have. Anyway, we needed to raise some funds if we were going to buy and equip a Safehouse.

We parked up and left Speedy to venture into the dark alleyways of Chicago.

It was not long before we found some business.

But not the business that we had expected to find. Down a broad alleyway, we came up behind what could only be described as 'ninjas'. We remained in the shadows and, for the moment, undetected. Arrayed in front of us, but facing away, were six black-clad ninjas – they even had Katana swords in their belts. The ninjas appeared to be staring down four Chicago police officers; all four officers had their pistols out and aimed towards the ninjas.

Suddenly, the six ninjas took a single pace forward and drew their Katana swords. The police officers issued a challenge, ordering them to put the swords down but not one ninja reacted. I could see the police officers exchange worried glances and two conferred. Then a pair of shots rang out and two of the ninjas stumbled backwards before returning to their places in line. The ninjas wore body armour – not a good sign. One ninja drew a knife and threw it at the police officers. The knife flew straight and true before it embedded itself in the shoulder of one officer who fell down and screamed out in pain. The other officers started to retreat, but the ninjas advanced.

I drew my Katana and Kick-Ass drew his batons. I told Kick-Ass to stand back and watch for any backup that the ninjas might have as I ran forward and sliced my blade horizontally through the necks of two ninjas; their heads flew across the alley like bowling balls. Hot red blood erupted from the severed necks as the two bodies sank to the ground. The other ninjas were slow to react to my attack from behind them, but all four ninjas turned around, towards us. This gave the police officers time to drag their wounded colleague to safety.

Four to one. I had faced worse, much worse.

..._...

Two ninjas came at me together. I back-flipped out of their way and drove my blade into the chest of the first ninja as I flew past. I pulled the blade out and the ninja sank to the floor of the alley. The second pair of ninjas charged. I fended off one strike with my Katana blade and took another strike on the armoured gauntlet of my left arm. There was a lot of force behind those strikes. The air was full of a very strong, metallic, smell.

Blood!

The smell and sight of the blood, gave me an adrenalin burst. The smell was intoxicating and I loved it. I had always liked the smell, the sight, and even the feel of warm blood. Although I drew the line at drinking the stuff – I was not a fucking vampire!

I span around, swinging my blade at calf height and my action caused two ninjas to jump up and thus avoid losing their feet. While they were in the air, I kicked out, sending a ninja flying. He recovered quickly, before he re-joined his colleagues. The remaining three ninjas encircled me. Their faces showed no emotion and they appeared to be of Asian ethnicity. One ninja came too close, up behind me, and he received my Katana blade in his stomach which left him rolling on the ground in agony. I faced the remaining pair for a second, before I charged forward, fending off the sword blows with my blade and my armour.

One ninja fell back, lost his balance, and crashed to the alley floor, where I severed both his legs above the knee, sending more blood to join the literal river of blood that flowed down the alley drains. The man screamed and screamed. I whirled around and fought off the last ninja's attacks. He was good and I was tiring. The ninja got inside my sword radius and we came together where neither of us could wield our blades. I stared directly into the man's face. I saw several emotions flicker across his face, before one emotion remained.

Fear!

..._...

I stared into the man's eyes, as I plunged a throwing knife deep into his stomach which cut his internal organs and caused massive haemorrhaging. The man stared back into my eyes as he died. I saw respect amongst the fear. I allowed the man to slide to the floor of the alley, blood, and intestines spilling from his gaping wound.

The two other ninjas that were still alive screamed in agony. I took the same throwing knife and cut their throats. Both men died, quickly; I could show mercy when it was required and those ninjas had fought well. I looked down, as I replaced the knife. I was covered in blood, but I felt good. I had overcome; I had won!

Kick-Ass ran up.

"You okay?" he asked.

"Hell, yeah!" I replied.

I had never felt so alive; the adrenalin that was still pounding through my veins and the smell of the blood was keeping me going. I turned towards the police officers, who were watching in abject horror as I cleaned off my Katana and replaced it in its Saya on my back.

"Are you all okay?" I growled as I approached them. I studied the four men; one had a knife still embedded in his shoulder.

"Christ! I've never seen so much blood!" One blurted out.

"Better their blood, than yours!" I growled, in reply.

"She's right!" the wounded Officer agreed, grimacing with the pain. "Thanks!"

"We need to go," I growled, before I turned and walked away from the scene; but not until I had picked up each of the six Katana swords and their scabbards.

I had to admit, I had not seen so much blood, since Rasul's apartment!

Hit Girl really did enjoy herself when the blood flew. Psychotic . . . that was the only word for it. Nevertheless, I loved her just the same. I managed to find a functioning hosepipe to wash the blood from Hit Girl's suit, on the way back to Speedy. The six extra Katana swords went into the cavernous trunk. I persuaded Hit Girl that we should call it a night, as she was exhausted. We drove back home and I helped Mindy get out of her combat suit and then to clean it; I was okay, I had not got any blood on me. Mindy still buzzed, from the adrenalin, and I knew that she loved the sight and smell of blood.

She was quite the mini vampire!

Saturday, January 11th

The following night

We went back out.

It was a Saturday, so we had hoped for some more business and we were not to be disappointed. It seemed that we might have poked a hornet's nest. We had no sooner appeared on the street, than we heard screaming. A man ran around a corner; he had a large wound in his upper arm and blood running down his arm.

"That wound was caused by a sword," I commented.

We ran towards the screams.

As we rounded the corner, we could see ordinary people, running and screaming. Several, had blood on them; one man was sitting on the sidewalk, cradling a severed arm. I had a bad feeling, about the scene. There were eight ninjas and they were terrorising the street; they attacked anybody that came near.

"This stops now, cunts!" I growled loudly as I drew my Katana.

Four of the ninjas broke away and moved towards me. Kick-Ass circled around to prevent any of the other ninjas from interfering, brandished his batons and trying to look menacing. As the ninjas closed, I checked out each one. They were all dressed the same way as those from the previous night. However, that night, I had an ace up my sleeve, or rather on my back.

..._...

I had spent a few hours, that afternoon, practicing with two Katana blades.

I had selected the best of those recovered the previous night. Each of the ninjas appeared to have the exact same blades with an easily recognisable colour scheme and type of manufacture. I drew the second Katana from the Saya on my back which also drew a response from the ninjas. They instantly recognised the blade as one of their own. I expected anger, but instead, I saw respect in their faces. Obviously, they now knew that I was the vigilante who had killed six of their colleagues the previous night.

They kept their distance, at least at first. They all knew what I might be capable of and that was with only the one blade. I just hoped that I could manage two blades together. 'Only time would tell', I thought, as I closed with the first ninja. He brought his sword up high and then down, fast, towards my head. I was expecting the attack, so I was able to move sideways and block the descending blade before I was cut in half, lengthways. I was then able to drive my second blade into the man's stomach, drawing it from left to right and spilling his intestines into a steaming heap across the sidewalk.

Almost immediately, a second ninja came close and he narrowly missed my shoulder with his blade. I struck back with both blades, parallel to each other, forcing him back, before bringing both blades across, right to left and cutting the ninja cleanly in half. As the man fell in two directions, I heard a sound. Surprisingly, I could hear cheering! I took a chance and looked around me. Members of the public were cheering and shouting. Some even jeered at the ninjas while others shouted support for me and I could just about hear what they were shouting.

"Go, Hit Girl!" and "Gut the bastards!" There were other comments, too, but I could not make them out. Although, I did hear Kick-Ass' name being shouted too.

I briefly wondered how he was doing with the other ninjas.

Kick-Ass

The fuckers were good.

I was fighting the ninjas, hand to hand. So far, I had been able to pull the Katana out of the hands of one ninja, before flipping the blade and stabbing the same ninja in the chest. The other three ninjas kept their distance as they weighed me up. My heavy armour should protect me from the Katana blades; at least I hoped so. One ninja ran forward and I dodged him, cracking him around the face with a baton for his trouble. He fell to the ground, his face covered in blood; I drew the Glock and shot the ninja in the head – I was surprised for that gunshot to receive cheers from the growing crowd. The next ninja ran in while the other ninja went to attack Hit Girl. I had no time for extended combat, so I simply shot the oncoming ninja twice in the head, again to rousing cheers.

I ran after the other ninja with a Katana in hand.

Hit Girl

I heard more cheers, then a much more urgent shout.

"Look out, behind you, Hit Girl!"

It was Kick-Ass voice.

I spun around, and saw another ninja; he was running towards me, Katana in hand. I just had time to slide across the sidewalk, on my knees, before I was caught between all three ninjas. As I went past, I severed the lower legs of one ninja, but the other ninja was out of reach. I sprang back up, blocked the blade of an attacking ninja, before I drove my other blade upwards, through the man's crotch and then pulled the blade out, just before it reached the rib cage. Blood and intestines were spilt out, across the sidewalk. I was galvanised by the metallic smell of the fresh, warm blood, as I pushed my attack on the last ninja. I could feel myself tiring, despite the adrenaline that pumped through me. Handling two blades, at the same time was exhausting. Not to mention, that it was the second night of ninja shit in a row.

I struck out with the hilt of the Katana, directly into the face of the ninja and the collision broke his nose. Unfortunately, this did not provide the distraction that I had hoped. I managed to kick the ninja in the side of his knee that caused him to go down onto one knee. I span around keeping both blades close together and severed the ninja's head; the inertia of the strike sent it rolling down the street, spewing blood. His body dropped to the pavement, adding another steaming river of blood to that which already flowed to the drains. I felt immense relief; relief that it was all over.

I checked on Kick-Ass; he was uninjured, but he seemed worried about something. I proceeded to collect Katana blades and scabbards, before I re-joined Kick-Ass and we prepared to leave the scene. The whole event had lasted only fifteen minutes.

We could hear sirens, so we left while the crowds cheered us as we vanished down an alley!

Kick-Ass

"You enjoyed that, didn't you?" I said rhetorically and I smiled at Hit Girl as she cradled her stack of Katana blades.

"That makes fourteen blades," Hit Girl replied, happily.

"Keeping score?" I asked.

"Seemed like a good idea," Hit Girl growled.

We placed the haul of Katana blades into Speedy's cavernous trunk, before we headed out again.

..._...

Thankfully, we came across some normal cunts – for a change.

They were just the usual, run of the mill, low-life scum. The three men raised automatic pistols as soon as they saw us approach, so Hit Girl drew her Katana and advanced on the men. They opened fire, the rounds had no obvious effect on Hit Girl as her armour absorbed the impacts and she pushed through the force of the impacts. Then, she struck the first man with the hilt of her sword which knocked him out. The next man tried to pistol whip her, but I caught his arm in one hand and punched his lights out with the other. The cunts did not deserve to die; they just needed to be encouraged to change their career aspirations. The third man fell to the ground, tripped up by Hit Girl's Katana. He looked up to find Hit Girl's face a mere two inches from his own and he almost shit himself.

"Time for a career change, maggot!" Hit Girl snarled, before she pulled herself away from the man, walked off up the alley and stowed her Katana.

"Life is good!" Hit Girl, growled.

..._...

Life almost changed as we rounded a corner into another alley.

A man had just finished beating up a woman; he held her purse in his hand and the woman sobbed, uncontrollably. We moved towards the man. Maybe we were high with the successes of the night. Whatever the reason, we did not check the area around us; the man had backup. I heard gunshots and Hit Girl was pushed forward, but she caught herself as she went down to one knee and I heard her cry out with pain. I deftly pulled Hit Girl back to her feet and into cover while at the same time I drew my Glock. The man we had seen had also moved into cover and the woman was running away, down the alley. Behind us, four men entered the alley; they were armed with Heckler & Koch MP5KA4 sub-machine guns, thankfully nine-millimetre, which would not penetrate our combat suits. Hit Girl drew both her SIG pistols.

"Ready?" she asked.

"I was born ready!" I responded with a smile, causing Hit Girl to shake her head but I caught her smirk.

The four men were closing. We stood up and opened fire. The bastards had body armour, so we simply adjusted our aim. We felt rounds hitting our own armour, the impacts pushed us back, but we were braced for that. Two men dropped with head shots - messy but satisfying – while the other two men dived behind a dumpster. Hit Girl dumped her magazines and inserted fresh ones. I did the same.

"Time to die, cocksuckers!" A young voice, snarled, followed by an exclamation from the men. We then heard the sound of wood striking a skull, twice.

"All clear!" The same young voice called.

We stood up and looked around. Standing before us was a very short, ninja, who stood proudly and examined her work. Just as we were about to reply, a shot rang out and the little ninja flew backwards and landed heavily on the alley floor. Hit Girl and I span around and we fired together. The other man fell to the ground in a puddle of blood with half a dozen bullet wounds in his chest. He was not wearing body armour.

We turned back, towards the fallen mini ninja.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 22: When Worlds Collide

Author's Note: 'West Ridge' refers to the home of Dave and Mindy as that is the part of Chicago where they live.

Saturday, January 11th, 2014

West Ridge

Kick-Ass and Hit Girl were down on the lower level, standing a few feet away from a couch which held their latest acquisition – an unconscious vigilante.

"Okay, what do we do with her?" Kick-Ass asked.

"I don't fucking know, but she did take out those cunts," Hit Girl replied, suggestively.

"She's too young," Kick-Ass said as he understood what Mindy meant.

"She's older than when you first met me!" Hit Girl exclaimed, indignantly.

"You're just . . . different," Kick-Ass responded.

"Different? Okay," Hit Girl said and she sounded a little confused.

"She does have some great skills," Kick-Ass admitted. "What was that stick she used?"

"It's not a fucking 'stick', dumbass! It's called a jō, its part of Aikido, specifically Aiki-Jō," Hit Girl lectured with her usual exasperated tone when she was lecturing me on things that she thought I should know.

"She was able to defeat two cunts at a time," Kick-Ass commented with a little awe.

"So, can I, dumbass! It's not all that fucking special, you know," Hit Girl growled and she sounded hurt.

"'She' can fucking hear you, assholes!" a voice called from the couch and we both span around.

..._...

"'She', is called 'Shadow' and 'she' is getting a bit pissed off!" the girl on the couch stated.

"Okay . . . Shadow . . . how's your head and chest?" Kick-Ass asked.

"My head is fine; it just hurts a bit . . . ow, so does my chest. What the fuck happened?" Shadow demanded as she reached up with a black gloved hand and held the side of her head.

"You fought really well, kid," Hit Girl complimented.

"I am not a damn kid, Pretty Girl," Shadow growled.

Kick-Ass laughed.

"Bitchy!" Hit Girl commented, approvingly.

Shadow stood up, somewhat shakily. She was wearing a black Aikido Gi with lightweight black boots. A lightweight stab vest could be seen under the Gi. She wore a simple black ninja facemask that showed only her eyes. Her hands were covered in padded, black gloves.

"Take it easy, Shadow. You took quite a knock to your head . . . after you were shot," Kick-Ass cautioned.

"Shot? I'm fine. I just need to go home. . . ." Shadow said, before she swayed and fainted.

Kick-Ass quickly grabbed her, before she hit the floor and he laid her back down on the couch.

..._...

Kick-Ass left Hit Girl to check out 'Shadow', seeing as she was a girl.

"She has a big bump on her head, right side, lower down," Hit Girl said, after she had examined Shadow. "She'll have a large bruise on her chest, too. Luckily her vest stopped the bullet."

Hit Girl held up a squashed bullet, between two fingers.

They had agreed to leave her mask in place, to protect her identity, at least initially. However, now that she had fainted, there might be a need to find out who she was and where she belonged. Neither of them wanted to violate her identity, but they might not have any choice. Hit Girl assumed Shadow to be about twelve or thirteen, so she must have a parent somewhere, who was expecting her home.

"We can't stay in these combat suits, all night," Kick-Ass said, reasonably.

"We'll take it in shifts. I will take the first shift. You go get some sleep and I'll wake you at six," Hit Girl suggested.

Sunday, January 12th, 2014

Everything was dark.

It must have been still night time which was weird.

A gloved hand reached up and touched the masked face. Relief swept through the young girl as she found that she was still wearing her mask and gloves as well as her full costume. She felt like she was lying on a soft couch. But, where and why? The thoughts were cut off as she felt a pain in her chest hurt every time that she breathed and it felt bruised. Her head hurt as she lifted it to look around. She really could not make out much of anything, though she thought that she could hear breathing, from across the room.

"Hello," the girl called out, apprehensively.

A light clicked on, followed by a voice – a female voice.

"Hi, Shadow, how are you feeling?" The voice asked, kindly.

"How do you know my name?" Shadow asked, tentatively.

"You told us," the voice replied. "Before you fainted."

"Who are you?" Shadow asked and she felt a little scared.

"Me? I'm Hit Girl," the voice responded.

Shadow froze. Hit Girl! Could it be? Hit Girl was her heroine and ultimately, her reason for being.

"What happened to me?" she asked.

"You were hurt, when you came to help us. Thanks, by the way," Hit Girl said as she came over and knelt beside me, she smiled.

"You left my mask on?" Shadow asked, confused.

"Your identity is your own; it's not up to me to violate it," Hit Girl said. "However, you are very young and I'm sure your parents will be missing you."

"Okay. My Mom thinks I'm at a sleepover; my best friend covers for me. Can . . . can . . . I trust you?" Shadow asked, as she came to a decision.

"Of course," Hit Girl replied.

..._...

Shadow reached up and pulled off my mask.

"I'm Chloe, Chloe Bennett," she said as she smiled shyly. "And I'm thirteen."

"You did really well . . . for your age," Hit Girl, replied.

"Thanks, Hit Girl," Chloe said and she felt herself blush.

Hit Girl helped the younger girl up; it felt good to get that mask off, she also pulled off her gloves. Hit Girl led Chloe went upstairs and sat down in a kitchen. Hit Girl started making coffee.

"Coffee?" Hit Girl asked.

"Okay," Chloe replied.

It was all very surreal, Chloe thought; Hit Girl, the teenaged assassin, was making her coffee! Once the coffee was made, Hit Girl placed two cups down on the counter, before she sat down herself. Chloe really could not believe that she was sitting down, just a few feet from Hit Girl and having coffee with her - oh, dear, fan-girl time.

"So, why did you become a Hero?" Hit Girl asked.

"My best friend . . . he was murdered, back in New York. A couple months back. My parents left New York and moved to Chicago, soon after," Chloe replied, quietly. "His death hit me really hard."

"I'm sorry," Hit Girl said and her tone was genuine.

"I felt I had to do something, to stop these things happening. Josh . . . that was his name . . . he once told me about a young girl, who killed those who deserved it, by the dozen. That girl became my heroine and I wanted to be as good as her, as good as you, Hit Girl," Chloe explained.

That was something new to the sixteen-year-old vigilante.

She had no idea that people knew all that much about her. However, by the look on Chloe's face, she could tell the boy had meant an awful lot to her.

"I miss New York, but Chicago is now my home – I just want to be out there, in the real world, making it a better place," Chloe explained.

Dave had once said, almost the same thing to me.

"Shadow's right, you know," Kick-Ass said as he grabbed a coffee and leaned against the counter.

"Kick-Ass, meet Chloe Bennett," Hit Girl said and Kick-Ass nodded. "Chloe is a very young, thirteen."

"I once said very similar words to Hit Girl, not that long ago," Kick-Ass said with a smirk.

Hit Girl ignored her partner's blatant attempt to goad her.

"Do you feel well enough to go home?" Hit Girl asked.

"I don't know," Chloe responded. "I still feel a bit light headed and my chest hurts."

"Will your friend cover for you?" Kick-Ass asked.

"Yes. Can I call her?" Chloe asked, pulling out a cell phone.

"Do it," Hit Girl said and got up from the kitchen counter and pulled Kick-Ass into the dining room.

..._...

"I trust her," Mindy said as she pulled off my mask.

"You sure?" Dave asked and he pulled off his own mask.

"She spills, I kill her," Mindy said darkly, but with a smile.

"Not funny, bitch!" Dave replied. "You know, you two look very much alike. Did you notice?"

"I did," Mindy replied. "Weird, huh?"

..._...

Just as we went back through to the kitchen, Chloe finished her call.

". . . Thanks Abby. Let me know if there are any problems. Bye!"

"Abby?" Mindy asked, curiously.

"Abby is my best friend. She knows that I am Shadow and she covers for me," Chloe replied. But then she frowned as realisation dawned. "Where are your masks?"

"You trusted us, so we'll trust you. I'm Mindy and that over there, is Dave," Mindy said with a sweet smile.

"Hi, Mindy. Hi, Dave," Chloe said and she smiled back just as sweetly.

..._...

Dave grimaced.

Those two girls were going to be trouble; he could feel it. They could almost pass for twins! Chloe was about the same height as Mindy, maybe two or three inches shorter and also of the same build as Mindy, but with very short blonde hair and she had a purple streak in her hair, on the left side. She seemed to have a fire inside her, for fighting against criminal scum. A little like the younger Mindy, Dave thought. Mindy took Chloe upstairs and showed her to a bedroom, then left her to get a shower and some sleep.

It was still only five in the morning, so Dave and Mindy both got out of their superfluous combat suits and went to bed.

Later that same morning

West Ridge

Dave woke up at about eleven; Mindy was still asleep beside him.

He got up and knocked on Chloe's bedroom door; there was no answer, so he gently pushed the door open. Chloe was still fast asleep. The kid must have been tired, Dave thought as he headed downstairs for a late breakfast and some coffee.

..._...

About half-an-hour later, a girl came down the stairs and into the kitchen. At first glance, it could have been Mindy, but it was Chloe. She wore a T-shirt and shorts.

"Morning, Chloe!" Dave offered, cheerfully. "Hungry?"

"Yeah," Chloe replied and she eagerly eyed the cereal and toast that Dave had almost finished eating.

"Sit down; I'll get you some toast and cereal," Dave chuckled as he saw the girl's expression. "Coffee?"

"Please," Chloe replied.

A very polite young lady; very different to her behaviour several hours previously. Then, she was behaving very much like Mindy.

"How are you feeling, now?" the ever-conscientious Dave asked as he pushed a bowl, milk, and cereal towards the girl.

"Much better, thanks. My head doesn't hurt now," Chloe replied, with a smile. "But my chest is very sore and I have a massive bruise."

"I suggest you ask Mindy to check you out," Dave said. "You seem a very polite, young lady."

"I try to be polite; I don't like swearing," Chloe said and she blushed slightly.

"Well, last night, Shadow didn't seem to mind a few bad words!" Dave commented sardonically.

"Sorry, I sometimes embellish Shadow a bit; make her sound more of a bad-ass," Chloe said and she really blushed.

"Not a problem," Dave conceded and he laughed. "Mindy's mouth isn't exactly the cleanest, either."

"Got a problem with my mouth, Dave?" Mindy asked, as she came into the kitchen and sat down beside Chloe.

'God, they looked so much alike,' Dave thought.

"I was just commenting on Shadow's vocabulary, last night," Dave elaborated.

"Oh. Shadow does have a bit of a foul-mouth," Mindy said and she nudged Chloe, who blushed a bit more.

"You can talk!" Dave exclaimed. "Chloe needs you to check out her bruised chest."

"First time getting shot?" Mindy asked.

"Yeah and it hurt," Chloe admitted, then rubbed her chest and grimaced with pain.

"It does hurt, doesn't it? I'll check you over, later, but the bruise will heal, in time. We've both experienced being shot," Mindy said with a smile and she looked over at Dave.

"Our combat suits protect us better than vests," Dave said.

"Yeah; I've only got a few small marks from last night," Mindy commented as she pulled her T-shirt up, to show several red welts on her abdomen.

"Better than my bruise," Chloe commented.

"What about those?" Dave asked as he pointed at the other red welts, on Mindy's lower arms and below her collarbone.

"That's where I was struck by a Katana," Mindy admitted.

"Your combat suits protect you from Katana blades?" Chloe asked in amazement.

"Our combat suits are top of the line," Dave pointed out.

"Can I get one?" Chloe asked and she smiled sweetly.

"They're expensive!" Mindy growled. "We'll see. Once you're back to full health, we need to see what you can do."

"Till then, no more going out as Shadow and definitely not out on your own," Dave cautioned.

I saw a flash of defiance in Chloe's eyes, but it faded, before she nodded.

"Okay, I'll put Shadow on hold, till I heal," Chloe agreed, somewhat reluctantly.

"Sensible girl," Mindy said and she smiled at Chloe.

..._...

They let Chloe stay another hour or two while Mindy checked out her bruise which was nothing to worry about and would heal, in time. Mindy suggested that Chloe not let her parents see the bruise. On the subject of Chloe's parents, Mindy also had a quiet chat with Chloe, concerning secrecy and the consequences, should she let anything about Mindy and Dave, slip. We told her that she could not reveal anything about us and, in return, we would keep her secrets.

"How do I contact you?" Chloe had asked.

Mindy smirked and started to say something. Dave interrupted as he had a feeling that what she was about to say, most probably would have involved shining a signal in the sky, shaped like a certain body part. The scowl on Mindy's face told Dave that he was right.

"You can call us on this number," Dave said with a laugh and he gave Chloe the number of a cheap cell phone. They dropped Chloe off, near to her friend's house and headed back home.

Kilbourn Avenue

"Chloe!" Abby exclaimed, as her best friend came in.

"Hi, Abby!" Chloe replied.

"Where were you?" Abby demanded.

"I can't say, but I helped Hit Girl last night and then she saved me! She actually made me coffee and Kick-Ass made me breakfast," Chloe explained.

"Wow!" Abby exclaimed. "You met the real Kick-Ass and Hit Girl?"

"I did!" Chloe replied and she smiled broadly.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 23*: Marcus

Three weeks later

Saturday, February 1st, 2014

West Ridge

February dawned, typically cold and wet.

Mindy was happy for two reasons. Firstly, Chloe's new combat suit had arrived. Secondly, and most importantly, Marcus was coming to stay. Admittedly, they had seen Marcus, just the previous month, but Mindy was desperate to show him the new house, top to bottom. In addition, Marcus would stay for the week and not just for an hour in Central Park.

Chloe had been over several times, in the preceding three weeks. During that time, Mindy had assessed her capabilities and she had been suitably impressed.

The first time Chloe had come over was actually a lot of fun.

Almost three weeks previously

West Ridge

Dave sat on the couch, down on the lower level, and he watched Mindy join Chloe on the mat.

Both were bare foot and wearing an aikidogi. Mindy's was black, while Chloe's was white. Dave was amazed at how similar the two girls were: Chloe was about three, or so, inches shorter, than Mindy which showed while they were both bare foot and face to face.

"Now girls, keep it clean: no bitch slapping," Dave teased and he received a glare from both girls.

Mindy started the sparring.

"Hit me!" Mindy commanded.

Chloe hesitated for a second and Dave had a good idea what was about to happen.

"I can't . . ." Chloe started.

Mindy reached out to bitch slap Chloe, just as Mindy had with Dave, the previous year. Only, this time, unlike Dave, Chloe deflected the blow. Mindy tried again with the other hand and Chloe again, deflected the blow. Mindy tried several front snap kicks and side thrusting kicks. Chloe defeated one in three successfully and interfered with most of the rest. Chloe in return, managed to place some good solid kicks on Mindy, one of which resulted in Mindy landing on her back which knocked the breath out of her. Chloe was good, very good.

Chloe, Dave noticed, could handle pain quite well. Many times, Dave would have expected her to be in tears, but she controlled her emotions well. Dave was glad that both girls wore different colour aikidogi as it was getting difficult to see who was who as they span, very fast, around the mat. Yet again, both girls successfully threw each other. There was fire in Chloe's eyes as she attacked Mindy. Mindy also had fire in her eyes, and she was enjoying the sparring, although Dave could tell that Mindy was going easy on Chloe which had to be good.

..._...

After a half hour, Dave decided that it was time to call a halt to the sparring and he had to physically separate both girls and dump them on the mat.

"Enough!" Dave almost shouted as he smirked at both of them. "You both did well."

"Well done," Mindy said as she got up and reached down to help Chloe stand up.

"I enjoyed that," Chloe said. "Shame you weren't actually trying!"

Mindy scowled at Chloe. Dave had to laugh; Chloe had the same temperament as Mindy and he decided that it was probably going to be fun having Chloe around – at least he thought so. Mindy had eventually agreed that Chloe could join us, but only on the less-dangerous nights out, at least to start with. Mindy and Chloe had then started to talk about a combat suit. Chloe was happy with what Mindy wore, but she wanted some changes.

There were going to be fun days ahead!

Back to the present
Saturday, February 1st

West Ridge

The new Shadow stood before us.

On the outside, she looked like a mini-ninja.

She wore a dark blue aikidogi with a dark blue hakama. Her face was covered, except for her eyes, with a black ninja scarf. Underneath the aikidogi, Shadow wore a female combat suit, with blue highlights. She carried a fifty-inch, composite wood, aluminium, and carbon-fibre-reinforced Jō. Dave had to admit, she looked very dangerous and in darkness, she was just a shadow. The girl loved the new suit; she had spent the entire morning practising her movements. Mindy said that she would train Chloe to use a pistol, most probably the FN Five-SeveN Mk2 pistol which was small enough for Chloe's hands, but also provided much reduced recoil when fired.

While Chloe and Mindy sparred together in their combat suits, Dave went back upstairs to start lunch. He had just reached the kitchen when there was a knock on the front door.

..._...

"Marcus!" Dave exclaimed. "You're early."

"Yeah, traffic wasn't as bad as I thought," Marcus replied. "Nice place."

Marcus had flown in that very morning and caught a cab to the house, but he was not expected for another hour.

"Mindy's downstairs sparring with . . . err . . . a new friend," Dave said cagily and he took Marcus downstairs to the lower level.

"Wow! This house is awesome," Marcus commented as he followed Dave down the stairs. "Who are the two crazy midgets on the mat?"

"I think you might know the purple one: Mindy!" Dave shouted and Hit Girl span around, before squealing with joy and she ran to hug Marcus.

"Err . . . hi . . . err . . . Hit Girl?" Marcus queried.

"Oh, sorry – new suit," Mindy replied, pulling off her mask and she hugged Marcus again.

"Marcus, meet Shadow," Mindy said and she waved Shadow over.

"You can take off your mask. This is Marcus, my guardian, and he knows all about Dave and me," Mindy said to Shadow.

Chloe slowly removed her ninja scarf and mask.

"Hi, I'm Chloe Bennett," Chloe said and she held out her hand to Marcus.

"Marcus Williams," Marcus replied and he shook Chloe's hand.

"Chloe's joining us," Mindy said slowly.

"Oh dear. I was right; your father was starting a 'fucked up super hero club'!" Marcus exclaimed, dubiously.

Dave took Marcus back upstairs, while the two girls got themselves changed.

..._...

After Chloe and Mindy had showered and changed, they headed upstairs.

There, they found Dave and Marcus, deep in conversation. They both had their backs to the two girls and they appeared to be examining something on the kitchen counter.

"Is that what I think it is?" Dave asked.

"Damn straight!" Marcus replied with a chuckle "Oh, and she'll be using it, in about five minutes."

"It'll be full in a day!" Dave exclaimed.

"Her record was fifteen minutes," Marcus replied and he laughed.

"You must have made millions!" Dave commented.

"It was quite lucrative!" Marcus acknowledged.

"Well, she does have a slight profanity problem," Dave commented sarcastically.

"Slight, are you kidding me?" Marcus replied and he laughed again.

"When you two assholes have quite finished!" Mindy growled angrily and both Marcus and Dave turned around to face the raging teenager.

"Hi, Mindy. Marcus brought us a little present, all the way from New York," Dave said, with his dorky grin several times larger than usual.

As the two of them moved apart, Mindy could see that a certain glass jar sat on the counter. She started to feel an intense rage build inside her. The jar had a label.

"Swear Jar . . . cool!" Chloe exclaimed with a laugh. "Bet that didn't take you long to fill!"

"I can't believe you brought that, all the way from New York!" Mindy growled and glared at Marcus.

"Thought you'd like it!" Marcus teased.

Mindy emitted a sound, somewhere between a growl and a scream, before she stormed off into the living room and dropped onto the couch, all the while muttering obscenities under her breath.

..._...

"Sorry Chloe, we just really enjoy winding Mindy up," Dave explained.

"Don't worry; that was fun," Chloe replied with a chuckle.

"How old are you, young lady?" Marcus asked.

"Thirteen," Chloe replied.

"Bit young, Dave," Marcus commented.

"Chloe's a bit like Mindy," Dave replied. "She doesn't like taking no for an answer."

"Another one," Marcus said, dryly.

..._...

Chloe went through to join Mindy and they started to chat together.

"Chloe looks very like Mindy; I was a bit surprised at first," Marcus said.

"I know," Dave replied. "They have very similar temperaments, too. It's hard enough dealing with one Mindy, let alone another."

"I agree; Mindy can be a handful," Marcus acknowledged.

Later that afternoon
West Ridge

Once Chloe had gone home, Mindy had insisted on taking Marcus on a full tour of the house.

Marcus was very wide-eyed. If he was impressed by the sauna and stream room, he was completely bowled over by the armoury.

"Just like Damon! You're a complete nutcase, Mindy," Marcus said, and he laughed at the sight of all the weapons that were arrayed around the walls.

Mindy just beamed with pride, so much so, Dave actually thought that she might explode!

"What's with the fourteen swords?" Marcus asked, as he eyed the identical and highly polished Katana blades, neatly lined up at the end of the armoury.

"Accounting," Mindy said and she blushed.

"Those are from Hit Girl's recent victories," Dave explained. "We seem to be having a minor ninja epidemic."

"Impressive!" Marcus acknowledged, then he cast his eyes over the Kick-Ass combat suit. "Good heavy armour."

"It has come in handy once or twice," Dave said, with a smirk at Mindy.

"Yeah! A full MAC 10 magazine," Mindy agreed.

"A MAC 10! I'm glad to see that you are both taking things seriously and looking after yourselves," Marcus said, approvingly.

..._...

They all sat down for dinner that evening and they had pizza.

"Proper pizza!" Mindy exclaimed, happily.

"What?" Marcus asked.

"You don't want to go there," Dave warned.

"Dave tried to feed me a fucking casserole! He said it was a pizza and it so fucking wasn't a pizza!" Mindy ranted.

"Oops!" Marcus apologised, as Mindy continued to rant.

Mindy finally calmed down and we enjoyed a good meal together. The first ever for the three of us! Halfway through the meal, Marcus stood up.

"I would like to say something," Marcus said as he stood up. "It is wonderful to be sitting down with my daughter . . . I've really missed her and I know that sitting down is not her strongest suit." Mindy blushed.

"But above all, I am so very happy, that Dave found Mindy and while she could not come home to New York, at least Dave ensured that she was safe. Without Dave in Mindy's life, I just can't contemplate what may have happened. Now, I don't know all the things that you have both been getting up to since Mindy was eleven and I don't want to know, but I am certain that without each other, you both would not be here today," Marcus continued as he raised his glass to Dave. "Dave, thank you."

Dave stood up, as Marcus sat back down.

"Thanks, Marcus. She is violent. She is hormonal. She has the foulest mouth this side of the US and she is Hit Girl. But to me, she's the most wonderful girl in the world and without her, I wouldn't be alive today. Therefore, I have to thank both Mindy, and you, Marcus. You helped to create a strong, independent, and caring, young woman. Thanks!" Dave said.

Mindy blushed deeper and she sank down in her chair.

"Thank you, Dave," Marcus acknowledged with a laugh at Mindy.

..._...

Mindy had put Marcus into the bedroom at the front of the house.

Marcus had noticed that this room allocation had put him as far away from Dave and Mindy's bedroom as it was physically possible to get. He start to mention it, but then quickly thought better of it and he just said that he did not want to know.

"Mindy, you are evil," Dave said, once they were in bed.

"Why?" Mindy asked.

"You wound up Marcus, by putting him in the front bedroom," Dave stated. "He'll think we're fucking!"

"Not right now, but that can always change," Mindy growled, seductively as she dropped her bra and panties to the floor.

"Crafty, little minx!" Dave laughed as he cuddled into the naked Mindy.

The following day
Sunday, February 2nd

It seemed that Marcus had been busy.

He had surprises for both of them. Apparently, he had heard that Hit Girl and Kick-Ass were now public knowledge in Chicago. Marcus, evidently, had friends in the Chicago Police Department and he had convinced some that Hit Girl and Kick-Ass were only after the nastiest of criminals. That had been backed up by their current activities in Chicago . . . saving the lives of several Chicago Police Officers had not exactly hurt, either. Marcus had also identified a possible Safehouse for Dave and Mindy. Marcus did not really like helping them, normally, at least not directly, but helping to protect them was different and anyway it was not even in his city; therefore, not his problem.

They all drove over in Marcus' car to check it out. The potential Safehouse was in the south of Chicago and in an area which should give them some anonymity, if not class. The building in question was single storey and it had a fenced yard around it. Internally it was open plan, with a small office area. It would be perfect for storing vehicles and changing before and after nights out. The building was currently full of machines and crap, but that could all be moved out. A price was agreed with the realtor and Marcus set things in motion. It would take a lot of work to re-equip the building with security and everything else that it would need to be a secure Safehouse.

Dave and Mindy hoped that Marty could help out with the security and the other electronic stuff that would also be required.

..._...

Next, Marcus had a surprise for Dave.

"Can you ride a motorcycle, Dave?" Marcus asked.

"Not a chance!" Mindy said, laughing.

"I've ridden, once or twice, before I met psycho, over there," Dave replied and he indicated Mindy, who glared back in return.

"Good, well I suggest you take an MSF course, or two, as you're gonna need it," Marcus suggested, cryptically.

"Mindy has her Ducati; you need something that suits Kick-Ass. Now, I thought about a Harley . . . how about a Fat Boy. You can always give it a Kick-Ass make over . . . eventually," Marcus said and he explained further.

"Cool bike!" Mindy said, approvingly.

"I'll be able to practice on Mindy's Ducati," Dave suggested.

"Just 'cause I let you ride me, doesn't mean I'll let you ride my bike!" Mindy exclaimed, before she clamped her hand over her mouth and went very red.

Marcus put his hands over his ears and he closed his eyes.

"I did not just hear that," Marcus said, grimacing.

"She has such a way with words," Dave said and he laughed at Mindy's discomfort.

"You'll need to learn to ride a motorcycle first and get the Safehouse set up. You probably don't want your neighbours to see a motorcycle that could be tracked back to Kick-Ass," Marcus said. "Once you are ready, I'll get it shipped up to you. Mindy can also store her Ducati at the Safehouse; it isn't safe keeping it the house."

Three days later
Wednesday, February 5th

West Ridge

Overall, it had been a good couple of days.

Mindy had apparently been shopping online, again. A large, long package was delivered on that Wednesday morning, during breakfast. Mindy opened the packaging very carefully. Inside were several long wooden cases. The longest of which contained an almost identical twin to Mindy's own Katana.

"I needed a second blade," Mindy said simply.

Next, Mindy selected a shorter wooden case.

"It's called a Tanto – a mini version of my Katana, if you like," Mindy explained as she opened the case and removed a silk sword bag.

She pulled the Tanto from the bag and she moved the Tanto slowly as she checked out every inch before she then removed the blade from the Saya and watched the lights reflect off the, highly polished, blade. The sharp, mono steel, blade was made from high carbon (T10) steel, with a 1.01 Shaku, no Hi and 0.5-centimetre Sori. The blade was finished with a straight Hamon and had been stone polished by hand. The point was a long O-Kissaski. The Habaki and Seppa were Red Copper. The blade was attached to a 16-centimetre Tsuka, which was wrapped in a purple cotton Tsuka-ito with black ray-skin. The Tanto was finished off with black Fuchi, Kashira and Tsuba. The blade was housed in a matte black Saya, with purple highlights. The Koikuchi and Kirigata were wood and the Sageo was purple silk. Apart from the size, it looked identical to Mindy's Katana.

Next, Mindy pulled out a large flat wooden case and she passed it to Dave.

"Me?" he asked in surprise.

"Yes, dumbass!" Mindy replied and she laughed.

Dave opened the case.

"Fuck!" he exclaimed and Mindy laughed.

He was speechless.

Inside the box were two green sword bags, made of silk.

"They are Ko-Wakizashi, a shorter version of my Katana, but just as lethal," Mindy explained.

I pulled the first Ko-Wakizashi from its bag and held it up in front of me and moved the Ko-Wakizashi slowly, from side to side, as I removed the sword from the Saya and watched the lights reflect, off the highly polished blade. The sharp, mono steel blade was made from high carbon (T10) steel, with a 1.52 Shaku, no Hi and 1-centimetre Sori. The blade was finished with a straight Hamon and had been stone polished by hand. The point was a long O-Kissaski. The Habaki and Seppa were Red Copper. The blade was attached to a 16.5-centimetre, Battle Wrapped, Tsuka which was wrapped in a green cotton Tsuka-ito with black ray-skin. The Ko-Wakizashi was finished off with black Fuchi, Kashira and Tsuba. The blade was housed in a matte black Saya with green and subdued yellow highlights. The Koikuchi and Kirigata were wood and the Sageo was of green silk.

There was an identical Ko-Wakizashi, in the other sword bag. Dave turned to stare at Mindy, who was starting to look a little uncomfortable.

"We are facing some very nasty cunts, Dave, including ninjas. I decided a little while ago, that you needed something a lot more lethal, than just a pair of batons," Mindy, said quietly.

"Wow!" Dave replied. "I don't know what to say. . ."

"I will need to train you to use them and I have ordered additional combat suit attachments, so you can carry them along with your batons," Mindy said.

"On the subject of batons," Marcus said. "Mindy asked me to source some new batons for you. Back in a moment."

Marcus went upstairs and he came back down a minute later with a long cardboard box in his hands which he placed down beside Dave. Dave put the Ko-Wakizashi back into their case and he moved the case to one side and then he opened the cardboard box. The batons were black with subdued green and yellow highlights and they appeared to be made from a carbon-fibre based compound and a light steel. They were a bit heavier than Dave's current batons, but the balance was very good.

"They should be almost unbreakable. Mindy said your current batons are getting a bit worn," Marcus said. "Look at the Harley and the batons as a sort of house-warming gift."

"Thanks Marcus, you are a lot cooler than Mindy gives you credit for," Dave said.

He grinned at Mindy, who scowled back.

A further three days later
Saturday, February 8th

The previous few days had been spent touring Chicago with Marcus.

Mindy, especially, enjoyed the time out. She really had missed Marcus and Dave was pleased to see her so happy. Marcus insisted on having a Chicago pizza, which Mindy was not amused about, but she went along with it anyway. That time it was in public so Mindy could not rant as she normally would have done.

Marcus was due to leave the following morning, so they had a good dinner out, to enjoy themselves that last evening.

..._...

The dinner was good and by the time they left the restaurant, it was well after nine and they headed back towards Speedy. That was when Marcus got a weird feeling.

"We're being followed," Marcus whispered.

Dave had to admit he was a bit surprised that Marcus had gotten the feeling before Mindy and her 'Spidey senses'.

"You sure?" Mindy asked as she casually looked around.

"I've been a cop, a lot longer than you've been a vigilante," Marcus replied.

Dave could hear the footfalls of more than two people behind him and they were closing.

"We turn on three," Marcus directed. "One . . . two . . . three."

They all span around to find five men in front of them. Three of them pulled knives as Dave, Mindy, and Marcus turned. The street was empty and dark.

"Evening folks," The man in the centre ordered. "Empty your pockets."

Mindy was standing between Marcus and Dave and she looked at each of the five men in turn before she looked up at the men either side of her and she nodded.

They each nodded back and then they attacked.

..._...

Mindy delivered a roundhouse kick to the man who had challenged them which sent him crashing against a building, before he crumpled to the sidewalk. Marcus went for the man on the far left as he pulled out and extended his Asp baton. Marcus struck the man hard on the wrist, causing the man to drop the knife and scream out in pain; Marcus then struck the man in the right knee and the man crumpled to the pavement, screaming. Dave took the man on the far right and he delivered a swift and powerful kick to the man's chest which sent him backwards and Dave quickly disarmed him; he took the knife and dropped it down a drain. The man got up and ran for it. By that time, Mindy had floored the remaining two men.

"You two are so lucky that I'm in a good fucking mood!" Mindy snarled at them.

"You two okay?" Marcus asked.

"I'm cool!" Dave replied.

"I enjoyed that" Mindy commented.

"You would," Marcus said with a grimace.

They made it back to Speedy without any further trouble and Mindy drove home.

"I'm still not happy with you driving this car," Marcus grumbled.

"For fuck's sake, Marcus; I drove this fucking car when I was eleven!" Mindy exclaimed. "We've been through this!"

"Okay! Okay! Anything for a peaceful life! But I'm not bailing you out if you get arrested," Marcus replied.

Sunday, February 9th

The next morning was a bit tearful, for Mindy.

Dave also thought that Marcus was unhappy, too, but he did not show it. Mindy was not good at goodbyes, to say the least. Dave and Mindy both thanked Marcus for his help with the Safehouse and Dave promised to start his motorcycle training straight away. Mindy wrapped her arm around Dave and she stayed close as they waved Marcus off in the cab.

They fervently hoped that he would be back in Chicago that Easter.

Updated: September 2017

Chapter 24: Moving Forward

Two weeks later

Saturday, February 22nd, 2014

In the two weeks since Marcus had gone home, a lot had happened.

Marty had been in touch and, apparently, he had been accepted onto a college course at Chicago University. He was intending on taking a major in Computer Science, with a minor in Mathematics. He would be in Chicago for a few years so Dave had offered to give him a room, until he found a place of his own, and Mindy had agreed.

Marty said that he would help provide technical support for their other activities. He would come and stay for a week or two in March, then he would see about finding a place of his own and a job. His course did not actually start until the third week in September.

..._...

Dave had his motorcycle permit.

He had managed to complete the Basic RiderCourse and he had been able to pass the M Licensing Exam. That had given him the Class M endorsement so he was legal to ride a motorcycle. Mindy was actually very impressed that Dave had passed first time. Dave thought that she had expected him to fail. He intended to take the Basic RiderCourse 2 in the coming weeks to get some more training and experience. For that course, he would need to hire a motorcycle and he would then be able to gain experience with increasing sizes of motorcycle before he tried the big Harley Davidson. Dave was able to wind up Mindy as he had a real licence and not just a fake as she had.

Chloe had spent the past week begging Mindy to allow Shadow to go out on a patrol with Kick-Ass and Hit Girl. In the five weeks, since they had first met Chloe, Mindy had assessed and monitored Chloe's abilities as well as planned Chloe's training, to improve her strength and agility. The past week had also been spent training Chloe on the FN Five-Seven Mk2 pistol which Chloe proved to be a natural at using.

So far, there was not much that Chloe was not a natural at, just like Mindy.

..._...

That night was to be the night that they would take Shadow out with them.

Mindy went through the ground rules with Chloe, for about the twentieth time. Chloe had started to complain, but Mindy had cut her off, each time.

"If, you get hurt, I am not dragging your sorry fucking ass, all over Chicago!" Mindy stated, very seriously. "This will be your audition. Fuck up and we forget we ever knew you."

"Okay. But we'll see who fucks up tonight," Chloe challenged.

"Tonight, is going to be so much fun," Dave said, sardonically.

..._...

They intended to patrol the area around the new Safehouse which was still going through the final legal stuff, before it became theirs.

They wanted to know what the area was like and if it needed to be cleaned up before they moved in. With Chloe being so new to them, they did not tell her why they were patrolling the area. Yes, they trusted her, but she needed to prove herself, to become a full part of their team. It had occurred to Dave that their little team needed a name. So far, nothing workable had come to mind. He had not asked Mindy about a name as he was more than a little scared of what she might suggest!

..._...

It was a twenty-three-mile, forty-five-minute, drive from the house down I-90 and I-94.

The Safehouse, itself, was surrounded on all sides by other industrial units. Eighty metres to the east, was a train goods yard and across the two hundred metres of goods yard, was a residential district. A hundred and sixty metres to the west, was a large high school. It should be possible to approach and leave the area anonymously. Public transport in the area was also very good.

Not surprisingly, they found business while they were walking up a badly lit alley, between some industrial units, and not far from the Safehouse, when six men jumped out.

"What the fuck do we have here?" one asked, loudly.

"Halloween ain't for fucking months," another said and he laughed.

Kick-Ass, Hit Girl, and Shadow instinctively spread out; Shadow was in the middle with Kick-Ass on her left. Hit Girl drew a Katana, slowly, and she allowed the light from a building to shimmer along the length of the highly polished blade.

"You think you're a fucking ninja, little girl?" the first man jeered.

"Okay, you cunts, who's gonna die first?" Hit Girl growled.

The smile quickly vanished from the first man's face.

"Fuck this!" a third man exclaimed as he pulled out a pistol and shot Kick-Ass in the chest.

Kick-Ass just took a pace back which absorbed the impact from the bullet.

"Fuckin-A! Let's get the fuck outta here!" the second man yelled and they all ran for it.

"Come back, we kill ya!" Hit Girl yelled after them.

"That was interesting," Shadow commented and she laughed, nervously.

"Not all our work is killing. You need to use appropriate force; not every criminal deserves to die. Some just need to look into a career change," Kick-Ass explained.

As they continued their patrol around the top border of the industrial area, some four hundred and thirty metres north of the Safehouse, they passed by a closed store, an Aldi. Some cars were still in the parking lot and as could be expected at one in the morning, there were some idiots trying to steal a car.

There were three of them, teenagers.

..._...

"Go on then, Shadow," Kick-Ass directed, quietly, and he prodded the young girl forward.

Shadow took a good grip on her Jō as she stepped out of the shadows. She felt really nervous, but she took a deep breath and shouted at the men.

"Hey! Cheap shit losers! Stop screwing with a car that somebody probably worked their fucking ass off to pay for!"

The three men turned and one smirked.

"Who's the fucking little ninja?" the man asked, and he laughed, but he stopped suddenly, as Shadow felt Kick-Ass step out of the shadows behind her and prod her forward.

"Fuckin' hell, I think it's that Kick-Ass dude, you know, the one who wasted all those fucking ninjas!" another man exclaimed and he pulled out an eight-inch blade.

The other two men did the same. One of the men came at Shadow with his knife. Shadow ran forward and she struck out with her Jō. The blow smashed the man's wrist, before she spun and drove the end of the Jō into the chest of the next man and the other end of the Jō, she rammed into the remaining man's back. All three men were on the ground and the man with the smashed wrist was screaming. One of the men looked up at Shadow.

"Who are you?" the man asked, incredulously.

"I'm Shadow!" Shadow growled back.

She felt a hand gently squeeze her shoulder.

"Good work, kid," she heard Kick-Ass say from behind her.

..._...

"So?" Kick-Ass asked.

"I was impressed. Shadow handled herself well," Hit Girl replied.

"She was nervous, but she fought them off herself. I think she did good for her first night," Kick-Ass said.

"That was good, letting her have a go herself; she needs to build up her self-confidence. I saw her hesitating, but then I remembered that I had felt the same, back when Daddy sent me out alone, for the first few times," I responded.

"I was a little jumpy, my first few times out, too; not to mention meeting a little, psychotic eleven-year-old," Kick-Ass commented.

Hit Girl smiled, and she felt warm inside as she thought back to Rasul's apartment.

..._...

The trio continued their patrol and headed back south, towards the Safehouse and then on to where they had parked Speedy. They each removed their masks and covered over the top half of their combat suits. After driving home, they pulled directly into the garage and once the garage door was closed behind them, Mindy turned to Chloe, only to find that the girl was fast asleep on the back seat. Mindy prodded her awake and Chloe reluctantly got out of the car, before she headed upstairs to bed. Chloe had the bedroom on the opposite corner to Dave and Mindy and she had been keeping some spare clothes there, over the past few weeks. Mindy checked in on her, before she went to bed. Her combat suit lay discarded on the floor and Chloe was fast asleep.

Mindy actually felt very happy as she slid into bed, beside Dave. She received a kiss and then he fell asleep.

Mindy followed seconds later.

The following morning
Sunday, February 23rd

Chloe woke up late; it was almost eleven in the morning.

After a refreshing shower, she got herself dressed and headed downstairs for breakfast from where she could smell something delicious cooking. As she walked into the kitchen, she could see Dave standing at the stove and he was shovelling some bacon out of a frying pan onto a plate, beside which, there was also a plate of fried eggs and another of fresh pancakes. Dave turned around and he saw Chloe.

"Morning, kid! Sleep well?" he asked.

"Great thanks," Chloe replied.

"You did really well, last night, Chloe. Well done!" Dave said.

"I second that," Mindy agreed, as she sat down at the kitchen counter.

"Thanks," Chloe said, and she felt herself blushing.

"Hungry?" Dave asked.

"Damn straight!" Mindy and Chloe said together.

..._...

After breakfast, Dave asked Chloe to come into the living room where they both sat down on a couch; Mindy seemed to vanish.

"Okay," Dave said, smiling. "Crunch time."

Chloe felt a bit worried and she had a feeling that Dave must have noticed.

"Don't worry, Chloe," Dave said pleasantly. "Just thought it was time for a chat."

"Okay," Chloe replied, somewhat apprehensively.

"We want you to join our team," Dave explained. "But we have rules. Now, Little Miss Assassin tries to bend and sometimes break the rules and when she does, I come down on her like a fucking ton of bricks. Being a teenaged Hero, sucks. I know from personal experience and Mindy bitches about being a teenager, every other day. However, you will have responsibilities; Mindy always thought she knew everything about life and that her age was irrelevant, but she has learnt the hard way, that she is not invincible and despite her physical and mental skills, she is still a sixteen-year-old girl and in a few cases just needed to grow the fuck up. You will fuck up, just as Mindy did and I will jump down your throat, or kick your fucking ass, to bring you back in line. That is for both your safety and ours. Understood?"

Dave paused in his lecture and Chloe nodded her agreement.

"You will be part of a team, where you will be an equal partner. Yes, Mindy and I are the senior partners, but we are all equal. Basically, what that means is that if any of us fuck up, we expect the others to tell us we fucked up. When you fuck up, and you will, we will tell you that you fucked up and we will tell you why and teach you how to avoid making that mistake again. I've fucked up more times than I care to think about and the famous Hit Girl? She has made her own fair share of fuck ups, most of them due to her age and lack of worldly experience. Therefore, if one of us says, you fucked up, do not take it to heart; learn from it. If you fuck up badly I will tell you that you fucked up badly and, if necessary, stop you coming out with us.

"I'm used to being kicked, punched, and sworn at; Mindy has tried everything, but when she acts like a stupid little teenaged girl, I tell her that and she tries to look cute and wriggle her way out of it, but that doesn't work with me - not anymore – nor do her threats of bodily harm. While on that subject, Mindy will never intentionally hurt you – she may threaten to dismember you or something similar, but that is just her way. Don't get me wrong; she is perfectly capable of carrying out her threats. She will hurt you during sparring sessions, but you get used to that and just learn to avoid her kicks and punches. Injuries are a part of our lives, now, and we have all suffered a lot of damage to our bodies . . . but we're still here. You still want in?"

"Yes!" Chloe replied, with a big grin on her face. "I promise to do my best. I know I'm young, but I listen, and I learn."

Mindy reappeared within seconds.

"You sticking with us?" she asked.

"Throw away a chance to work with 'Little Miss Assassin'?" Chloe exclaimed. "Never!"

Mindy glared at Dave, but she smiled at me.

"Welcome aboard, Shadow," Mindy welcomed, with a huge grin.

..._...

Next, they discussed the obvious.

How to keep Chloe's activities secret from her parents and the kids at school. Chloe explained that her Dad was usually off at sea; he was a Commander, in the Navy. Her Mom, so far had not commented on all of her sleepovers with Abby. As for Abby, she lived with her mother, who worked nights, so nobody had noticed Chloe missing at night, so far. Abby's father was in the Navy, too, another Commander.

"You will get hurt and you will get bruised, out there. We will need to come up with cover stories, or somebody will think that you're getting beaten up, regularly," Dave said.

"I heal quickly," Chloe offered.

..._...

There was a knock on the door, the side door.

Chloe was a bit surprised to see a small pistol suddenly appear in Mindy's right hand. Mindy went over to the door, checked the spy hole, and then she frowned before she opened the door a crack.

"Go away!" Mindy suggested, before she shut the door.

The knocking continued.

Mindy opened the door again. Chloe could just about make out that it was a young girl who stood outside.

"Go aw-," Mindy started.

"Abby! What the hell!" Chloe yelled, interrupting Mindy.

Mindy stared at Chloe for a moment before she yanked the girl, who was apparently called Abby, inside and closed the door. Mindy put her arm across Abby's throat and pinned her to the wall. The pistol appeared to have vanished, just as quickly as it had appeared.

"What the fuck are you doing here?" Mindy growled, dangerously. "How the fuck did you find this house?"

"I was worried about Chloe. She never called last night. I pinged her cell; not difficult," Abby explained, quickly. "No need to go all Hit Girl, on me . . . jeez!"

Abby seemed to be a bit of a geek . . . a bit like Marty.

"Mindy, let her go!" Dave directed.

Mindy glared at her partner, but she released her hold on Abby.

"You two must be Kick-Ass and Hit Girl!" Abby said with a smile.

Mindy looked mad and so did Chloe.

"Look, I won't spill; you have my word. I spill, you kill, right?" Abby said still smiling.

"You've got that fucking right!" Mindy growled, angrily.

..._...

After another minute Mindy calmed down.

"Hi Abby, I'm Mindy," Mindy said and she held out her hand.

"Dave," Dave said as he held out his hand.

Abby shook each of their hands, in turn.

"Hi, I'm Abigail Hunt," Abby said.

Abby was about the same height as Mindy, with a slim build and long brown hair.

"Sorry, guys . . . my fault, I fucked up," Chloe said dejectedly and she looked ashamed.

"No Chloe, you didn't. Your friend is just very clever and she obviously cares about you," Mindy conceded. "What does your Dad do in the Navy, Abby?"

"He's an Information Warfare Officer and he spends a lot of his time with computers; I picked up some things," Abby replied. "Need a hacker?"

"A hacker?" Mindy mused, and then she chuckled. "Could be useful. We might need someone to help provide support and comms. You think you could help with that?"

"Definitely!" Abby replied, enthusiastically.

"We'll see," Mindy said, laughing.

Authors Note: Both, Dave and Mindy's home and the proposed Safehouse, are real properties in Chicago. Admittedly, I have not left many clues, but it would be interesting to see if anybody could identify the area where the proposed Safehouse is located, or even the proposed Safehouse itself. No prizes, but I will let everybody know how clever you are.

Updated: December 2017

Chapter 25*: Smack Down

A week later

Saturday, March 1st, 2014

West Ridge

In retrospect, it was probably overdue.

Mindy started to get complacent and she let her guard down. She never even realised that she was doing it. Thankfully, she supposed, she found out during a sparring session and not during a fight with a hundred ninjas. It had been a week since they had gone out with Shadow. Naturally, Chloe was itching to go out again, but as Mindy already knew, Chloe was a stubborn bitch, just like Mindy and she was not taking no for an answer. Chloe also wanted to try some 'real' fighting with 'real' cunts. Therefore, the idea had been to show Chloe that she was not ready.

It was a Saturday morning and Chloe was on the mat, in her white aikidogi. Mindy came down the stairs, in her similar, but black aikidogi, ready to fight. Abby was over on the couch. Chloe's friend was looking forward to seeing a 'real' fight. Dave was upstairs, on the phone to Marcus about the Harley.

..._...

Mindy and Chloe squared up to each other.

"So, you wanna play," Mindy growled.

"No, I wanna win," Chloe growled back.

Yes, the little bitch had learnt to growl, really well, too, in Mindy's opinion.

"Anything goes," Mindy challenged, and she allowed Chloe to open.

The thirteen-year-old began with a front kick which Mindy easily deflected. Next, came a roundhouse kick which, again, Mindy was able to dodge with a flip backwards. Mindy then returned the favour and she spun her protégé around and down onto the mat, but Chloe kept a good grip on her mentor, and she smoothly flipped Mindy around before she then pinned Mindy to the mat. Mindy felt Chloe's pressure on her ease, only slightly, then Mindy took advantage as she grabbed Chloe's leg, pulling her down and that allowed Mindy to roll out from under Chloe who was then flipped her over onto her front while Mindy kept her right arm bent behind her and vertical. Chloe yelled out in pain and Mindy eased her hold before she allowed her friend to stand up.

Chloe was raging, and Mindy could see she that was in pain, but the girl simply ignored it. She sprang towards Mindy, who flipped Chloe high over her head, but Chloe caught herself and expertly landed on her feet, before she reversed herself and skidded onto the mat and swept Mindy's feet out from under her. Chloe then continued with her attack, striking Mindy, none too softly, in her back and it was Mindy's turn to yell out in pain. Chloe let her mentor up with an evil smirk.

Mindy, understandably, was angry and her first decision was to wipe that shit-eating smirk, off her protégé's face. Mindy ran at Chloe, who dodged and threw Mindy down hard, over her shoulder. 'Fuck that hurt!' Mindy thought to herself as she absorbed the pain. They both got back to their respective feet and adjusted their aikidogi, then squared off again. They both raged, and Chloe still had an evil smirk on her face.

Before Mindy knew, what was happening, Chloe threw a very powerful punch into her left side and then as Chloe allowed her weight to settle on her rear leg, she lifted the other leg to the side and whipped it at the knee, which drove her foot into Mindy chest.

The veteran vigilante flew backwards and then she felt nothing.

"You've killed Hit Girl!" Abby screamed.

"Mindy!" Chloe screamed.

'What have I done?' Chloe thought in horror as she ran over to Mindy who was lying on her side, one arm out in front of her and she was out cold. Chloe's kick had sent Mindy into a pillar just off the mats; she could see a hole in the plaster where Mindy's head had hit. She had also heard something crack, when she kicked her.

Dave came thundering down the stairs.

"What the fuck is going on down here!?" he demanded and then he saw Mindy. "Fuck! What happened?" he asked, looking directly at Chloe.

"I kicked her a bit too hard," Chloe replied dejectedly, and she could feel tears running down her face.

"Don't worry," Dave said. "Shit happens – at least around here it does!"

Dave knelt down beside Mindy.

Mindy did not look good. Dave pulled Mindy, carefully, onto the mat and laid her on her back. He checked her head and he could see a large bruise, plus some blood from a few cuts. She was well and truly knocked out, but her breathing was okay, for the moment. A minute or so later, Mindy's eyes flew open and she took a deep breath, then she screamed, and tears started to pour down her face.

"What the fuck!?" Mindy yelled, when she had finished screaming and then she passed out.

"Oh dear, I must have missed something!" Dave commented as he undid Mindy's aikidogi and he was a little shocked by what he found.

Mindy's left side was badly bruised and there was a lot of bruising and swelling on the right side of her chest. The bruise spread from below her collar bone, down to below her right breast.

"Abby, three ice packs, fridge over there," Dave instructed, and he pointed at the kitchen a few yards away.

Abby jumped up and she came back with three ice packs moments later. Dave pulled out a knife and cut off Mindy's sports bra, before placing a thin towel over her chest, followed by two ice packs, which he held in place with bandages. He applied another towel and icepack to Mindy's left side, again held in place with a bandage. He then placed a blanket over her and left her to rest. Chloe was sitting on the couch, sobbing her eyes out. It was obvious that she was feeling immense guilt.

"It was an accident, Chloe . . . shit happens." Dave said, as he sat down beside her.

"Do you remember what I said, two weeks ago? Injuries are a part of our lives. She will be fine, believe me. She may kick your ass, when she wakes up, though!" Dave said with a smile and Chloe hugged him, still crying.

When Chloe finally stopped crying, Dave asked her to help him get Mindy upstairs, to bed. He picked up Mindy and took her upstairs, to their bedroom, where Chloe helped get her trousers off and into bed.

Chloe stayed in the bedroom, sitting on the couch, while Dave went downstairs to tidy up and Abby went home.

Two hours later

Mindy screamed, and Chloe ran over to her and knelt beside the bed.

"Mindy, it's Chloe . . . you okay?" she asked.

"Stupid fucking question!" Mindy growled.

"Sorry," Chloe tried.

"I owe you a fucking kicking, bitch!" Mindy growled, angrily.

"I'm really sorry, Mindy. It was an accident; I didn't mean it. Please believe me!" Chloe begged, and she felt tears as they began again.

"Fucking cut it out, you evil bitch!" Dave said to Mindy as he came into the bedroom.

Mindy glared at Dave, but then she relented.

"Sorry Chloe. I didn't mean what I said. Not many people get to put down Hit Girl . . . congratulations!" Mindy said, magnanimously.

"I still feel guilty," Chloe said truthfully.

"I'll be fine. Really! I just need some rest," Mindy said with a grimace.

"Can I stay tonight?" Chloe asked.

"No problem, kid," Dave said and smiled at me.

The next morning
Sunday, March 2nd

West Ridge

"You are a damn good fighter, Chloe," Mindy said.

"I didn't mean to hurt you, I just got carried away," Chloe said. "But, you did say 'anything goes'."

"I did, didn't I?" Mindy replied. "Not the first time that my mouth has got me into trouble."

"Nor the last, unfortunately," Dave suggested as he sat down beside Mindy.

Mindy had awoken that morning in a lot of pain. Dave had changed the ice packs and the swelling was going down, slowly. The bruises though, were horrific, Mindy had also broken at least two ribs, and those would take time to heal. She did, however, feel sorry for Chloe. It was not her fault; she had just caught Mindy out. Chloe was a very good fighter, especially when she was all riled up.

"Am I ready?" Chloe asked, defiantly.

"Well, I'm fucking stuck here for the duration, so you'll have to shadow Kick-Ass," Mindy replied. "If he wants a cocky little bitch with him."

"It'll be just like you were there with me, then," Dave commented as he looked directly at Mindy, with an evil smirk.

"Fucking cunt! Ow . . . that fucking hurt!" Mindy yelled as she gripped her ribs.

Updated: December 2017

Chapter 26*: Shadow Patrol

One week later
Friday, March 7th, 2014

West Ridge

"Well, how did it go?" Mindy asked on their return.

"Boring!" Chloe responded.

"Nothing," Dave commented.

"Sorry, kid, but that's what happens some nights," Mindy commiserated.

Dave and Chloe had gone out on patrol together, near to the Safehouse. It seemed that the idiots that they had all met, the last time had taken the offered advice. Admittedly, Dave and Chloe had only been out for a few hours, but most of that time had been spent travelling.

"The walk did us good," Dave commented, smiling.

"Speak for yourself!" Chloe grumbled.

"Okay, grumpy teenager; must be bedtime," Dave chuckled as he pushed Chloe towards her bedroom.

"Night guys!" Chloe said.

It had been a thoroughly boring week, as far as Mindy was concerned. She had been unable to do much, thanks to her healing ribs; however, the bruises were healing nicely. On the plus side, the sale of the Safehouse had gone through; it was now theirs. Marcus had recommended some out of town builders who had a security clearance and could be trusted to keep their mouths shut. The plan was to clear out all of the existing crap from the Safehouse and demolish the existing office space. Then, a new, self-contained, structure would be built, inside the main building. This would have accommodation that could sleep six people, complete with a kitchen and dining area, plus showers. Below that, would be office space and a 'panic room'. The 'panic room', of course, would become an armoury. The existing doors and windows would be retained, but upgraded internally with reinforced glass, to keep the outside looking normal.

They would also have a decent, functioning, climate control system installed, too. The main floor of the building would allow for the storage of motorcycles and have space for a few other vehicles as required. There would be space for a large training area, too. From the outside, the building would be almost soundproof; nobody would be able to hear what went on inside. It would be another, very anonymous, industrial unit. The unit would be owned by a shell company, which had in turn been set up by Mindy's daddy. The building work would be expected to take around four weeks.

Mindy soon drifted off to sleep, and she dreamed of her new Safehouse.

The next morning
Saturday, March 8th

West Ridge

Chloe joined Mindy for breakfast.

The thirteen-year-old still felt a bit guilty about Mindy getting hurt, but Dave was right; it had been an accident. Now that she was a permanent member of the team, Dave had shown her the new Safehouse, just the previous night. It sounded really, really cool, to have a Safehouse, Chloe thought.

Chloe noticed that Dave was absent.

"Where's Dave?" she asked Mindy.

"Dave went to the airport, to pick up Marty," Mindy replied.

Chloe had forgotten all about Marty. She was looking forward to meeting him; Dave had mentioned that he was a geek, just like Abby, but that they had been friends for years.

"I'm looking forward to meeting him," Chloe said. "Dave said that you like him, too."

"If it weren't for Marty, Dave would never have found me, and I would, most probably, be dead, right now," Mindy replied with a faraway look in her eyes. "I'll tell you the story sometime."

..._...

About an hour or so later, Dave and Marty appeared.

"Marty, this is Chloe," Dave said. "Chloe this is Marty."

Chloe shook hands with Marty. He had a big dorky grin on his face which she liked.

"Hi, Shadow," Marty said. "Welcome to the team! I'm Battle Guy."

"Hi, Battle Guy," Chloe answered.

Somehow, Chloe could not quite see Marty as a Hero; nevertheless, Mindy had assured her that Marty had fought alongside her and Dave, just the previous year, with distinction. Battle Guy no longer fought, but he would provide technical support when required.

..._...

Chloe enjoyed chatting with Marty; she thought that he was really funny, and she liked that he loved winding Mindy up. Marty thought it was very funny that Hit Girl had been put out of action, and by a thirteen-year-old girl! Neither Mindy nor Chloe saw the funny side, but Dave did.

"Look, cunts! Keep it up and I'll have Shadow break some of your fucking ribs!" Mindy growled, dangerously.

"Sorry," said Marty.

Dave just smiled at Mindy and he received a glare in return.

"Okay, Marty and I have some things to discuss, see you two later," Dave said.

..._...

"I'd have thought you'd have hurt Marty, by now," Chloe commented.

"Like I said, earlier, I owe Marty and he is scared of me, but he has a lifetime free pass," Mindy said.

"I'll remember that."

"You wanting to go out again, tonight?" Mindy asked.

"Yes!" Chloe replied in obvious excitement.

Later that night

They were expanding our patrol, but still near to the Safehouse.

It was just Shadow and Kick-Ass, but for the very first time they could talk back to Mindy and Marty, back at the house. Marty had brought with him some advanced communications sets, but he would not tell his friends where he had got them. The radios had throat mikes and slim receivers for the ear which would work with the masks of the combat suits. The radios were encrypted, and they could even broadcast the wearer's GPS position to a map on Marty's laptop. Marty had wired up Chloe and Dave, so that they could talk to each other, or back to base. Marty had also explained radio procedure, to both Chloe and Dave. Mindy also had a radio as well as Marty. They would each use their Hero identities as call signs.

"Battle Guy, Kick-Ass. Kick-Ass and Shadow, heading west, away from the Safehouse," Kick-Ass called over the comms.

"Battle Guy copies heading west. I have you both on my map."

'So far, so good,' Kick-Ass thought to himself. The streets appeared deserted, with just the occasional car. Shadow kept to his right and she seemed happy to be back out on the streets. As far as possible, they both kept to the shadows. Kick-Ass checked his watch, it was almost ten-thirty and it looked to be just another boring evening.

"You okay?" he asked Shadow.

"Yeah, I'm okay," Shadow, replied.

..._...

Ahead of the two vigilantes, a young kid came racing around a corner and he cannoned straight into Kick-Ass. Naturally, Kick-Ass stood firm, but the kid fell backwards, onto the sidewalk.

"What's the rush?" Kick-Ass snarled gently.

"Who . . . who are you?" The kid stuttered.

"I'm Kick-Ass!" Kick-Ass replied, and he smiled down at the kid.

"Cool!" The kid's face lit up with a smile. "I need help . . . two men attacked me; they took my stuff!"

Kick-Ass looked over at Shadow and her eyes lit up.

"Wait here, kid," Kick-Ass snarled. "Shadow, stand to! Battle Guy, Kick-Ass. Shadow and I are engaging," he called over the comms.

"Battle Guy copies Kick-Ass and Shadow engaging."

They both walked around the corner and in front of them, they found two men, talking and laughing. They both looked up, as the vigilantes approached.

"Fuck off!" one man shouted. "Before we drop both of you idiots!"

"Try it!" Shadow growled.

The second man raised an automatic pistol and shot Shadow in the chest. The impact of the bullet knocked her backwards off her feet and onto the sidewalk.

"Now, for you!" The second man shouted and pulled the trigger, twice more.

Kick-Ass braced myself and he felt the two rounds collide with his armour. Beside him, Shadow slowly regained her feet.

"You fucking cunts!" Shadow yelled and she launched herself forward, towards the astonished men, with her Jō extended out in front of her.

Neither man knew what hit them, as the pistol clattered to the sidewalk, closely followed by the two unconscious men.

"That was totally wicked!"

The two victorious vigilantes turned to look at the kid; he was peering around the corner all amazed smiles. They dutifully returned the kid's 'stuff' and called the Police. They quickly left the scene before the Police arrived and Kick-Ass called in to explain what had happened.

"Shadow, Hit Girl. You okay?"

"Yeah. My left boob will be totally bruised, though," Shadow replied without thinking.

"Oh dear! Battle Guy just fell off his chair, laughing," Mindy said, with a chuckle. "See you guys later."

Kick-Ass looked down at Shadow.

"Do all of us really need to know about your left boob?" he asked.

"Too much detail?" Shadow responded with a chuckle.

"Yeah . . . just a bit," Kick-Ass replied. "Well Done! You put those two down, good and fast – I was impressed."

He could not see Shadow's face, but her eyes lit up with joy and pride. Her reply was smiling, though.

"Thanks," she said.

..._...

The rest of the patrol was relatively lifeless.

A few people recognised Kick-Ass; yelling 'Go Kick-Ass', otherwise it was peaceful. Around one in the morning, they headed back towards Speedy and then home. Again, Chloe fell asleep on the drive back. Dave was very proud of her, as despite being shot, she still managed to finish off the opposition. Once back home, Dave prodded the youngster awake and he guided her upstairs, where Mindy helped her get out of her combat suit. The bullet had not penetrated her aikidogi, which was made of a similar synthetic material to the combat suits.

"Must have been a .38 round; not much power. Well done, Chloe," Mindy said as she helped the girl into bed.

There was apparently, a bruise on her left boob. Once Chloe was sorted, Dave turned to Marty.

"You fell off your fucking chair?" he asked, incredulously.

"Sorry. It was very funny," Marty replied, with a chuckle.

"You have to admit, it was a bit funny," Mindy said, and she chuckled.

"I hope Chloe sees the funny side in the morning. That bruise will be hurting by then," Dave replied, knowingly as he rubbed his own upper chest.

"Let me kiss it better," Mindy said, seductively.

"Okay, time for me to go to bed," a cringing Marty suggested quickly and he left the room at a run.

"You watch your fucking ribs, crazy bitch!" Dave said as he pulled off his combat suit and other clothes.

The next afternoon
Sunday, March 9th

West Ridge

Mindy insisted on debriefing Chloe about the previous night.

Chloe explained everything that she had seen and everything that she had thought and felt. Mindy went through each item to find out Chloe's thought processes, not to mention what her senses were like. Of course, Mindy had grilled Dave the previous night and that morning, for his take on the evening's events. Overall, Mindy was happy that all had gone okay. Chloe was a little concerned about being shot, but Mindy explained that the risk of being shot was why they had expensive combat suits. The comms gear had also performed flawlessly. Marty and Mindy had been able to follow every movement, as Kick-Ass and Shadow had patrolled, via the GPS feedback. Marty also played back the route which they had travelled the previous night, which was 'very cool', according to Chloe. Chloe was not amused when Marty laughed about her bruised boob, but she relented when Mindy started to laugh.

"At least you now know what it feels like to be shot and won't worry about it happening again. I had to train Dave myself for that," Mindy said, smirking.

"Yeah. Think yourself fucking lucky, that some psycho bitch doesn't just shoot you in the back, with a .44 Magnum, without a fucking warning!" Dave exclaimed, with a glare in Mindy's direction.

"She didn't!?" Chloe exclaimed, incredulously.

"Oh yeah! She so fucking did!" Dave replied, and he grimaced.

Mindy actually blushed, while Chloe and Marty, both laughed.

Updated: December 2017

Chapter 27*: Harley Safehouse

Three weeks later
Sunday, March 30th, 2016

West Ridge

Mindy awoke feeling very tired.

Dave had insisted on keeping her awake for hours, but admittedly, he had made himself useful. Her legs were still tingling from the electric shocks and she was fucking glad that her ribs no longer hurt because they had taken a fucking (no pun intended) pounding on the bed, the previous night. Mindy really was not sure of the occasion that brought on all that attention, not that she was complaining in any way. Dave woke up, just then and she could feel his hand . . . Mindy screamed; he was completely insatiable, but then so was she.

She casually reached over with her hand and she found something nice waiting for her.

..._...

"What was all that in aid of?" Mindy asked, an hour later while sitting at the kitchen counter with a coffee.

"Do I need a reason, to satisfy the woman I love?" Dave replied.

"No, of course not, but this was more than usual," Mindy said, and she grimaced a bit; she was still feeling the aftershocks.

"Well . . . today is special . . . very special," Dave teased.

"Why?" Mindy asked, feeling somewhat confused.

"This is the anniversary of that completely fucking insane evening, at Rasul's." Dave replied with his usual dorky grin. "You might remember it?"

"Of course, I fucking remember it; I blew you a kiss," Mindy replied, and she giggled at the memory.

"Do I still have potential?" Dave asked, still grinning.

"Oh yeah! But you are most definitely, NFL now Dave," Mindy replied as she leant over to kiss him.

"That night may have been horrific, but it was also the start of a new part of my life. My life with Mindy Macready and Hit Girl . . . my life with you. That's why I wanted to celebrate last night, I wanted you to know that I love you," Dave explained.

"You fucking managed that!" Mindy exclaimed happily.

"Had to make sure I wasn't losing my touch!" Dave teased.

"Your touch is fine; no fucking complaints there!" Mindy replied honestly.

Two days later
Tuesday, April 1st

West Ridge

"Dave! Why is the bathroom covered in plastic . . .? You fucker . . .! Open the damn door!" Mindy yelled, and she started to pull at the door in a panic, but Dave easily held it shut.

BANG!

BANG!

BANG!

Mindy screamed.

"Dave, you are so fucking dead!" Mindy yelled.

Dave released the door and took several paces back. The door was thrown open. He thought Mindy was a little pissed, but he couldn't see her expression as Mindy was covered from head to toe in purple and red paint with an additional layer of white powder.

"April Fool!" Dave yelled before he almost pissed himself with laughter (and took a photo).

"Okay," Mindy admitted, somewhat reluctantly as she turned back into the bathroom to clean off. "That was creative."

..._...

Dave had secured three plastic bags to the ceiling; one held red paint, one purple paint and the other baby powder. Each bag had a very small remote-control explosive (supplied by Marty) which he had detonated one after the other. Dave had covered the entire bathroom in plastic, including the ceiling, as protection. Twenty minutes later, Mindy reappeared, and she looked a little cleaner, although her lovely blonde hair was lightly tinted with red and purple.

"I hate you right now!" Mindy growled as she headed out of the bedroom.

Dave figured that he might just live long enough to regret his actions, but it had been well worth it!

..._...

The pain!

So much, considering his limited nerve endings.

Mindy had just finished letting Dave know exactly what she thought of his prank, earlier that morning. His leg was burning as was his chest. Mindy was staring down at her partner with an enormous grin. Dave reached out, grabbed her ankle and pulled. Mindy crashed to the mat with a small scream, and then he rolled over and started to kiss her.

Mindy growled and started to kiss him back.

Dave figured that he was forgiven.

..._...

After lunch, Dave went to sooth his aches and pains in the steam room.

Mindy joined him; Dave had a feeling that she was feeling guilty for all the bruises – but probably not. While Dave was in there, he had some inspiration. No idea where from, but Dave figured that he had a name for their fledgling team; that is for the team of Kick-Ass, Hit-Girl, Battle Guy, and Shadow. Mindy actually agreed with his suggestion, which was also a surprise.

They called ourselves: Fusion. Definition: 'Fusion - the result of joining two or more things together to form a single entity'.

The four of them were a single entity, a team, bringing criminals to Justice.

Four days later
Saturday, April 5th

The Safehouse

Both Dave and Mindy were jumping with joy, that morning.

Mindy, because the Safehouse was finished and Dave, because his Harley had been delivered. They had signed off the builders, only the previous night and Dave had taken delivery of his Harley at nine that morning. They were both down at the Safehouse; Mindy had ridden her Ducati down, during the night for safety, and it was now parked to one side of the open area with a cover over it. The Harley was delivered in a large wooden packing case, ready to go. For the moment, they placed the crate off to one side, near the Ducati. That previous night, they had slept at the Safehouse, to try it out. Unfortunately, they had neglected to get any food in; so that morning they went shopping, stocked up the cupboards in the kitchen, and the freezer. They then had a late breakfast before they went to check out the mat.

Dave and Mindy were both very impressed by the quality the work. The building, inside, at least, was completely different and felt comfortable and clean. The accommodation consisted of three bedrooms; two twins and a double. Theirs was the double and had a bathroom; the other two rooms would have to share a bathroom. The kitchen was large enough for a table that could comfortably seat six. Downstairs, they had a briefing room with comfortable couches and a large screen TV. There were also a pair of computers for general use, plus a desk with a computer that was set up for the GPS system on the comms equipment. The armoury was the best bit. It had a reinforced steel door with a code lock. Inside, the walls were set up in much the same way as the Safehouses, back in New York. The next problem was that they needed to move some of the weapons and equipment into the Safehouse, from the house, and that would also include their combat suits.

They would do that, later in that day when Chloe arrived.

..._...

After lunch, Dave arrived back at the Safehouse with Chloe, having gone home to pick up some weapons and equipment as well as Chloe.

He drove straight inside the Safehouse and closed the door, remotely, behind him.

"Love the hair, Mindy," Chloe said, and she smirked cheekily.

"Dave's little joke," Mindy replied, and she smiled sweetly. "Don't worry, I got my own back."

"Yeah, the limp will go away by Easter," Dave quipped. "I hope."

They proceeded to move the weapons and combat suits which Dave had brought from the house into the armoury. It took a while to arrange things to Mindy's picky satisfaction, but she was finally satisfied when the fourteen Katana Blades all went up on one wall. Dave showed Chloe around the Safehouse and he also gave her the relevant codes, to de-activate the complex security system and open the door to the armoury, insisting that she memorise them perfectly. Chloe picked out one of the bedrooms as her own. That meant Marty would sleep in the other room, between Chloe's room and the suite which Dave and Mindy would use.

Chloe wanted to know what was covered up, over by the wall.

"Go take a look," Mindy suggested.

Chloe gently eased back the cover on the Ducati. She got halfway before she dropped the cover and squealed.

"Oh my God! It is a Ducati Panigale . . . in purple . . . I love it!" Chloe said before she squealed again.

"You like it?" Mindy asked, and she smiled at Chloe's excitement.

"When did you get it?" Chloe asked, excitedly.

"Had it almost two years," Mindy replied.

"It's fucking cool!" Chloe exclaimed.

"Wait till you see what's in the crate," Dave said.

Together, they removed the top of the wooden crate and the inside cover, revealing the Harley-Davidson Fat Boy, in black.

"Fuck me!" Chloe exclaimed.

Dave and Mindy both looked at Chloe, curiously.

"Sorry!" Chloe apologised, and she blushed furiously.

"So, you like bikes?" Mindy asked unnecessarily.

"Yeah!" Chloe confirmed with barely concealed enthusiasm.

The rest of the afternoon was spent checking out Dave's new bike, including removing it from its pallet and starting it up. The engine sound was glorious and even Mindy was excited and Chloe positively drooled. As for Dave, he looked like a kid at Christmas. Mindy insisted that he put on his combat suit, so that they could see him on the bike properly.

Dave did as directed and Kick-Ass looked 'fucking cool' - Chloe's words – on the Fat Boy.

Updated: December 2017

Chapter 28*: Spring Vacation

Author's Note: I have been asked why I used red and purple paint, in the last chapter. Purple should be obvious as Mindy is Hit Girl. Red is because Hit Girl has a thing about blood. Also, if people ask questions in a review, it would be nice if they register, then I can reply. I am always happy to reply to questions about my stories as I know that I may not always explain things properly, or that I may leave gaps.

I must also thank 'adm-frb' for his continued feedback and ideas, which help considerably with improving my story writing and content.

One week later
Saturday, April 12th, 2014

It was Chloe's turn to be over the moon.

It was the start of Spring Vacation and Chloe had somebody that she wanted everybody to meet. She was very cryptic, and sounded a bit shy over the phone, but she said that she would be coming over on the Saturday morning. She also mentioned that she had a 'little problem' which would be coming with her too. For security, they also agreed that Mindy would be Chloe's Aikido/Taekwondo instructor which would be good cover for Chloe spending time at the house. Mindy was looking forward to the next Friday as Marcus was coming up for Easter. She really wanted to show him the new Safehouse that he had helped them to obtain. Dave also wanted to thank Marcus, personally, for the Fat Boy. Mindy could not wait for Dave to be ready to go out on his Harley, so she could go out with him on her Ducati. They would be able to patrol larger areas and Chloe could ride on either bike. Which reminded Mindy; she would need to find a helmet for her.

..._...

Just after ten in the morning, there was a knock on the front door.

Mindy pulled the door open and on the step outside, was Chloe, looking very shy and standing beside her was a boy. Mindy invited them both in.

"Dave, Mindy. This is Kyle, Kyle Andrews," Chloe said, introducing the boy and her cheeks went a little red.

"Hi, Kyle," Dave and Mindy replied.

Mindy led them both into the living room, where Dave and Mindy sat on one couch while Chloe and Kyle took the other couch. Mindy looked questioningly at Chloe.

"Okay, Kyle is my boyfriend!" Chloe admitted, and her cheeks went very red.

Kyle was an inch or two taller than Chloe, but otherwise he was slim with brown hair and brown eyes. He looked to be athletic and currently a little shy.

"What's the other problem?" Mindy asked.

"Back in a minute," Chloe said, somewhat reluctantly and she got up and headed back outside.

She was back within a minute.

"Here is my little problem," Chloe said.

The 'little problem', was about four and a half foot tall and must have been about ten-years-old.

"Hi, I'm Curtis," the boy said with a not so sweet smile.

"This little brat is my cousin and I'm stuck with him for the holidays," Chloe explained, and she looked thoroughly disgusted with the fact.

"I'm a little angel," Curtis insisted.

"You make people want to drink acid," Chloe retorted as she sat back down, next to Kyle. Curtis perched on the arm of the couch, beside Chloe.

"Hello, Curtis. I'm Mindy and this is Dave," I said.

"Hi," Curtis replied politely.

He sounded nice enough, but I was very sure that he could be annoying when he wanted to be.

"I want to see Chloe fight," Curtis said suddenly.

"That could be fun to watch," Agreed Kyle.

"I'd take a piece of that action," Dave added, and he smiled at Chloe.

Chloe scowled at Curtis for a moment before she then looked at Mindy.

Mindy just shrugged and nodded.

..._...

Chloe was unhappy.

"I really hate that little shit!" she thought out loud. "He always winds me up; I just wish I could kick the shit right outta him!"

Chloe explained to Mindy while they were changing, that her Dad was home for the holidays and that her Uncle was over with his wife and Curtis for the week. It was to be the first time, that Mindy and Chloe had sparred. At least since she had broken two of her ribs. Chloe must have looked a bit awkward because Mindy looked directly at her friend.

"I'll go easy on you!" Mindy said, with an evil smirk.

"Thanks," Chloe replied sarcastically, and she began feel a little bit anxious.

..._...

As Mindy and Chloe came down the stairs into the lower ground floor, they could see Dave, Kyle, and Curtis sitting at the side of the mat. Dave seemed to be enjoying himself and Chloe could see that Kyle was too. Both of them appeared to like the idea of watching girls fight. Chloe and Mindy were both wearing their normal aikidogi; Mindy wore black and Chloe wore white. They both squared up to each other on the mat. Chloe was determined not to make things easy for Mindy; she had a reputation to uphold.

"Okay, bring it on!" she challenged Mindy.

Mindy dived forward and before Chloe knew it, she was on her back looking upwards while Mindy grinned down at her. Chloe promptly kicked the side of Mindy's left knee and brought her down onto her other knee. She then wrapped a leg around her neck and brought her down hard. For some reason or other, Mindy did not appear to like that, and she forced her way back up, throwing Chloe most of the way across the mat. Chloe landed on her ass and apart from the humiliation, it hurt. She got up quickly and moved towards Mindy before she lashed out with a spinning hook kick and caught Mindy's left shoulder which sent her spinning across the mat and onto her ass. Chloe smirked down at her mentor and she could see the fire building in her mentor's eyes. Maybe that was not such a good idea.

Suddenly, without warning, Dave threw Chloe a three-foot training Jō which she caught and readied myself for Mindy's next attack. The attack came almost immediately, as Mindy jumped up and attempted a flying armbar which almost worked, but Chloe was able to make good use of the Jō, to alter Mindy's attack vector so she still brought Chloe down, just not as hard as it could have been. Chloe did not hesitate, and she immediately got up and attacked with the Jō which Mindy avoided by using her incredible speed and flexibility. Then Dave threw Mindy another three-foot training Jō, to even the odds.

Chloe barely gave Mindy time to ready her Jō, before she attacked. The sound of wood, against wood, continued for a few minutes before Chloe started to tire. Then Mindy made a tiny, tiny error and that error allowed her protégé to trip her up with her Jō. Chloe sent Mindy crashing to the mat with a yelp of pain. Before either of them could attack again, Dave jumped in between them.

"Good fight, girls! Let's call it a draw," Dave said quickly, as he smiled at the two agitated females.

"Thanks, Mindy," Chloe said, and she pulled Mindy back to her feet.

"Good fight, Chloe," Dave commented.

"Whose side are you on, anyway?" Mindy accused Dave, who just shrugged.

It seemed that both Kyle and Curtis had enjoyed the fight.

Curtis had a stupid grin on his face as usual.

..._...

"That was cool, Chloe!" Curtis admitted.

"Not bad," Kyle said, and he gave Chloe a quick kiss which made Chloe blush and Curtis pretend to throw up.

Dave took Kyle and Curtis back upstairs to the living room while the girls went to their bedrooms to get themselves changed. He grabbed Cokes for everyone from the kitchen.

"I assume you go to the same school as Chloe?" Dave asked Kyle.

"I do, we're in the same year," Kyle replied.

"Thirteen?" I asked.

"Yeah, I'm about two weeks older than Chloe," Kyle replied, and he seemed to be getting nervous.

"You into the Martial Arts?" Dave asked Kyle.

"A little, I've tried a few things, but never really got into it. I wish I was as good as Chloe," Kyle admitted.

"She is good," Dave confirmed.

"Chloe said that Mindy is her Aikido and Taekwondo instructor. Could Mindy train me?" Kyle asked.

"Can she train me, too?" Curtis asked, chipping in.

"I'll have to ask her; I'll let you know," Dave replied, to both of them.

Maybe, Mindy had an alternative career as a Martial Arts instructor.

..._...

Chloe, Kyle, and Curtis left around two that afternoon. Once they had gone, Dave mentioned to Mindy what Kyle and Curtis had asked.

"You think I should train Kyle and that little brat?" Mindy asked.

"You trained me, you could train anybody," Dave replied, grinning at Mindy.

"Well, that's true," Mindy confirmed, with a sly grin in return.

"You could make some legal cash, on the side," Dave suggested.

"Maybe, I'll try them with an introductory lesson. But only if Chloe agrees," Mindy replied.

The next day
Sunday, April 13th

West Ridge

Chloe was back on Sunday morning.

This time with her Dad.

That in itself was not a surprise as Chloe had let Dave and Mindy know the night before. Apparently, when her Dad had heard that Chloe was being taught advanced Aikido and Taekwondo, he had wanted to check out her teacher. That seemed perfectly acceptable, so Mindy had agreed.

"Dad, this is Mindy. Mindy, meet my Dad; Commander Ryan Bennett," Chloe said.

"Commander," Mindy said, shaking his offered hand.

"Hi, Mindy. I just wanted to meet you and see how good you were. Curtis says you're awesome and Chloe has only good things to say," Commander Bennett replied.

"You fight, Commander?" Mindy challenged.

She saw Chloe nod.

"I do," Commander Bennett replied, and he removed his jacket. He was wearing a T-shirt and jogging pants.

"Let's go, Commander!" Mindy suggested, and she led him downstairs.

..._...

"Commander, this is Dave, my partner. Dave, Commander Bennett," Mindy said.

"Good to meet you, Commander," Dave replied.

"You too," Commander Bennett said in reply.

The Commander kicked off his training shoes and squared up to Mindy on the mat. She was barefoot, wearing jogging pants and a T-shirt. The Commander was a complete unknown. Mindy had no idea of his skills or experience. Should she let him win? Should she kick his ass? Should she hurt him? Oh well, he wanted to see how good Mindy was? His mistake.

"Ladies first," Command Bennett offered.

Mindy sized up the Commander; naturally, he was not scared; not of a little girl like Mindy. But then he did not know what really lived inside the teenage girl. Mindy faked a roundhouse kick, before striking with a spinning hook kick. The Commander was successfully faked out; avoiding the first kick before the second kick caught him on the left shoulder and sent the Commander crashing to the mat with a yell of pain. Chloe actually cheered which earned her a glare from her father which Chloe seemed to ignore. The Commander regained his feet and he nodded approvingly before moving in for an attack. He came at Mindy with a feint, followed by a combined roundhouse kick and back kick, which Mindy correctly identified, and she was able to dodge the initial kick, but she was caught by the back kick, but only just, as she flipped away. Mindy still landed on the mat hard though. That time, Dave cheered, but Mindy did not waste her time glaring at him as she knew that he would have just ignored her anyway.

They squared off again, and then it was Mindy's turn to attack. She started with a push kick, immediately followed by a double roundhouse kick. Then, before the Commander could recover from those strikes, Mindy executed a roundhouse kick, followed by a back kick, which sent the Commander down onto the mat, very hard, together with a spray of blood from the Commander's nose. Mindy immediately followed up and she pinned the Commander on his front, holding his right arm up vertically behind him, causing the Commander some pain.

..._...

"Good enough, Commander!" Mindy hissed into the man's ear as she let go of his arm and stepped back.

Chloe was jumping up and down, excitedly, overjoyed that Mindy had won.

"You are damn good, young lady," Commander Bennett confirmed as he got up, rather painfully.

"Thank you, Commander," Mindy replied, and she smiled.

"Thanks for the support, daughter," Commander Bennett said to Chloe, who ignored her father and ran over to hug Mindy.

"So, can she train me?" Chloe asked, walking up to her father and handing him a towel. "Mindy good enough for me,

Daddy?"

"Yeah, yeah. If Mindy wants to put up with a little teenaged brat, then good luck to her," Commander Bennett said with a laugh.

"I can handle jumped up teenagers!" Mindy said, and she shook the Commander's outstretched hand. "Good fight, Commander."

"A hundred bucks a month and I hope she learns some new skills!" Commander Bennett replied.

"Oh, she will learn lots of new skills," Mindy advised the Commander with a smirk. Well, Chloe had already learnt to shoot, that was a new skill.

It seemed that Mindy had passed that little test.

..._...

If the Commander only knew that his daughter was running around the streets at night, wearing body armour and fighting crime as a vigilante.

If the Commander only knew that his daughter had recently been shot. Not to mention that she had then successfully taken down two armed attackers, single-handed.

If the Commander only knew that Hit Girl was training his daughter.

Updated: December 2017

Chapter 29*: Hit and Run

The following morning
Monday, April 14th, 2014

West Ridge

"You enjoyed that fight with Chloe's Dad, didn't you?" Dave asked.

"It was fun; fighting an unknown, like him. I was not sure if he let me win or not. Maybe he just didn't want to hurt a little girl," Mindy replied.

"You are not a little girl," Dave stated. "You're Hit Girl."

"I know," Mindy said, cuddling into Dave.

"You going out tonight?" Dave asked.

"I am, with Chloe. Her motorcycle helmet should come this morning; they promised," Mindy replied.

"What about your new apprentices?" Dave asked, smirking.

"Well, Chloe sees it as a good opportunity to hurt Curtis without getting into trouble. They are all coming over in a couple of hours," Mindy said, grimacing.

"You'll be fine, you always are." Dave offered encouragingly.

A couple of hours later

Ten o'clock came with a knock on the door.

On opening the door, Mindy found Chloe, Kyle and Curtis. She invited them in and told them to head down to the basement. Both Kyle and Curtis had come dressed for Taekwondo, wearing T-shirts and jogging pants. By the time Mindy was ready, they had taken off their shoes, ready to start, and they were both standing in the middle of the mat. Chloe stood beside Mindy; both wore an aikidogi.

"Okay guys, this is not the 'Karate Kid' and you won't become a black belt by washing cars," Mindy began.

"Karate Kid?" Curtis asked.

"Google it, kid!" Mindy replied, sharply.

"Sorry!" Curtis mumbled.

"I am not going to turn you two into vigilantes. What I am going to teach you, are skills that are to be used for self-defence only, never as an offensive weapon," Mindy said, seriously.

Mindy glanced over at Chloe who was smirking. Mindy glared at her, until she wiped the smirk off her face.

"Just so you are both clear and to give you both a chance to back out. You will get hurt. If either of you can't take a little pain, then now is the time to leave," Mindy advised the two boys, but she could not resist smirking.

To their credit, neither of the two boys said anything. Therefore, they spent the next half-hour, or so, on warm-up exercises. Next, Mindy showed them the basic stances and demonstrated, using Chloe, how the stances helped to maintain balance and generate power for kicks and strikes. Initially, just the ready, walking, and back stances. Then she let them experiment with punches, primarily the Jab. Mindy demonstrated some punches on Chloe, much to Curtis' amusement. Then, Mindy used Curtis to demonstrate some further kicks which she applied to him, very gently of course. Chloe had wanted to do that, but Mindy had correctly decided that she might break the little kid's ribs or kick him all the way across the room. Mindy then explained about the basic blocks and she had Chloe demonstrate a few of those.

By noon, the class had finished for the day.

"You two enjoy that?" Mindy asked.

"Yes; it was way cool," Curtis replied, excitedly.

"Not bad, thanks, Mindy," Kyle said, smiling.

"You both did well. Keep practising what I have shown you and you will get better. Most of this is learning by rote and repeating what you have learnt. Want to try again on Wednesday morning?" Mindy asked.

"Okay," Both boys replied enthusiastically.

That same evening

The Safehouse

"You staying in?" Mindy asked as she pulled on her combat suit.

"Yeah, got some things to do. Chloe like her new helmet?" Dave asked, changing the subject.

"She loves it," said Shadow from the door.

Dave turned to look. Chloe was in her combat suit, but wearing her new motorcycle helmet. The helmet was black with dark blue highlights. It was full face with an internal sun visor.

"That looks really good on you, Shadow," Dave confirmed.

"I agree," Mindy confirmed.

"Thanks, Mindy," Shadow grinned from behind her visor.

..._...

It was dark outside so, as the triggered the main door, the interior lights for the open area turned off. No exterior lights were currently lit. The door opened just four feet and then stopped as did the gate to the compound. With a shallow roar, the Ducati shot out onto the street, the main door and compound gate closing automatically behind the departing motorcycle.

Hit Girl and Shadow cruised through the dark streets, ignoring the attention which they drew.

They were out looking for trouble – not to cause trouble, but to prevent it. Shadow was holding on tight behind Hit Girl and keeping a good look out. Her Jō was secured across her back. Hit Girl had been winding her motorcycle through streets and alleys for an hour and both were hungry. It was almost nine-thirty, so Hit Girl pulled into a McDonald's Drive-Thru, on Archer Avenue, and ordered two coffees from the startled server. They parked up in an alley, removed their helmets and sipped the coffees.

"What the fuck?" Shadow blurted out after a few minutes.

"What did you see?" Hit Girl asked urgently.

"I could have sworn it was Kick-Ass," Shadow said.

"Here? We're over five miles from the Safehouse," Hit Girl replied, dubiously.

"I swear he was standing over there, leaning against that lamp post," Shadow insisted.

"Drink up and let's move on," Hit Girl replied, laughing.

Shadow must be seeing things.

..._...

The man was running down the dark alley.

He could hear the two police officers, not far behind, and they were both yelling for him to stop. The end of the alley was only tens of feet away and once out of the alley, he could vanish, and the police would not be able to find him, at least not that night. The man kept running. Suddenly the man heard the screech of brakes and tyres. He looked up and he saw a purple motorcycle, stopped, at the end of the alley, but what was more worrying, were the apparitions sitting on the motorcycle. The apparition in front had its right arm extended towards the man, at the end of the arm was a gloved hand, and in the gloved hand was an automatic pistol with purple grips.

"Stand still!" the apparition growled.

It was an order, not a suggestion, so the man did as he was told, raising his hands to his sides. He could hear the police officers getting closer behind him. Less than two minutes later, when the police officers were only feet away, the apparition nodded, holstered the pistol, and accelerated away.

..._...

"That was cool!" Shadow exclaimed over the discrete comms channel, that only the two girls were using; the circuit was voice activated.

"It was, wasn't it? Fuck . . ." Hit Girl shouted, slamming on the brakes and skidding the Ducati to a halt.

Hit Girl immediately looked behind her, but she could not make out what had first drawn her attention.

"What was that about, Hit Girl?" Shadow asked.

"I'm sorry I didn't believe you earlier, Shadow. I could swear that I just saw that green asshole," Hit Girl exclaimed.

"You sure? We're even further from the Safehouse now," Shadow commented.

"I smell a rat. That green asshole is up to something," Hit Girl growled.

Dave was having trouble keeping a straight face.

It was so cool; Mindy would kill him, but what the hell. He saw the Ducati roar past him and then skid to a stop. Hit Girl turned, and she looked directly at where he was standing less than a second after he had ducked into an alley, the moment he had seen the motorcycle's brake light illuminate. He watched as Hit Girl and Shadow accelerated away, down the street. 'Mindy must be so pissed,' he thought.

She was not stupid, and she must have been on to him by that point, so Kick-Ass needed to up his game.

'What was my man playing at?' Hit Girl thought.

How was he appearing all over Chicago? Was he out on his Harley? That was the only possible explanation, but the motorcycle was not ready, not yet. They rode around for another forty minutes before Shadow complained that she was hungry.

"Shadow, there's a McDonald's not far from here. South Lake Park Avenue, I think. We can get a burger there," Hit Girl offered, turning right, down another alley.

They were diverted, assisting a lady that had been mugged. They had been able to call the police for her, but the assailant was long gone. It was almost another twenty minutes before Hit Girl turned the Ducati into the almost empty McDonald's Drive-Thru. They were both hungry, so she ordered a Quarter Pounder with Cheese, plus a coke, each. She paid and then pulled up at the window to pick-up the order.

"Thank you for your order, please come again!" The server growled, passing out a bag.

Growled? Oh, fuck! Hit Girl looked up and she saw . . .

"You fucking green asshole," she growled dangerously.

"Gotcha!" said a grinning Kick-Ass, leaning out of the Drive-Thru window.

Behind him were two grinning McDonald's employees.

..._...

Kick-Ass joined the two girls in the parking lot; he had his own burger and coke, too.

"How the fuck, did you arrange tonight?" Hit Girl demanded, swallowing a bite of Quarter Pounder.

Shadow leaned in, eager to hear the answer.

"Simple, I used this," Kick-Ass said, holding up his cell which showed a map, on which were three, red dots, all sitting at a McDonald's, in southeast Chicago.

"Fucking Marty! The radios . . . you were listening in . . . you cunt!" Hit Girl exclaimed, as realisation finally dawned.

"Well done! But, how did you get around?" Shadow asked, sounding annoyed.

Kick-Ass waved at a cab, parked just a few yards away – the driver waved back.

"A fucking cab! Sometimes I really underestimate you!" Hit Girl offered admiringly.

"Time for me to go; the meter must be in the thousands by now. See you back at Headquarters, Hit Girl, and Shadow!" Kick-Ass said, pompously.

Hit Girl had to laugh. It had been a great night out, to that point. They finished their Quarter Pounders and Cokes, before accelerating away. The girls patrolled around for another hour, working their way back towards the Safehouse. As they approached the Safehouse, they checked out the area; nobody was about. Hit Girl clicked the button on a transmitter, attached to her belt. The compound gate opened four feet, followed almost immediately by the main door of the Safehouse.

The Safehouse

The lights went out and Dave watched as the Ducati with Hit Girl and Shadow entered the Safehouse.

The main door closed immediately, and the lights came back on. Both girls looked tired as Hit Girl parked the motorcycle, turned off the engine and the girls dismounted, stretched their legs and removed their helmets which went into a locker beside the two motorcycles. Both girls removed their masks and comms as they headed towards me.

"Hi, girls. Good night, out? Anything exciting happen?" Dave asked, innocently; he had discarded his combat suit much earlier.

"Yeah! We bumped into this green asshole, moonlighting in a McDonald's!" Mindy growled before she gave Dave a kiss.

"It was a very memorable evening," Chloe confirmed, smiling.

They all headed upstairs, where Chloe went straight to bed.

"You were very good, Ass-Kick. Very good indeed," Mindy said as they slipped under the duvet.

"Thank you, gorgeous," Dave replied.

The following morning Tuesday, April 15th

The Safehouse

They woke up late in the morning as they were all very tired.

Dave had to laugh when he saw the two girls appear as they both looked exhausted and very bedraggled . . . definitely a bad hair day, he thought.

"Don't say a fucking word, asshole!" Mindy growled.

"I second that," Chloe growled.

Oh, fuck! Something clicked in Dave's horrified mind.

"Not both of you? Please, not at the same time," Dave asked, feeling distinctly concerned with his health.

"If it makes you feel any happier, then yes, both of us," Mindy growled, dangerously.

Chloe blushed a little.

"I think I will go find something useful to do, somewhere safer," Dave suggested, leaving the kitchen rapidly.

..._...

Dave generally avoided the two girls, all morning.

Eventually, it was time to get Chloe back over to Abby's, where she had supposedly spent the night. Mindy and Dave then headed home where they chatted about the previous night and Mindy was actually quite pleased that the hi-tech kit which Marty had provided, actually worked.

Thankfully, Dave thought, she did not batter him senseless, despite his having played a joke on her and Chloe.

The next day
Wednesday, April 16th

West Ridge

Chloe, Kyle, and Curtis arrived around ten, as agreed.

Although, it appeared that Curtis was not happy. He sported a very nice bruise on his left cheek and he was glaring at Chloe, who just looked a little annoyed. A slightly embarrassed Kyle admitted that Chloe had smacked Curtis when Curtis had commented on her grumpiness and then hinted at Chloe being on her period. Mindy decided to be nasty, so, after they had spent some time on warm-up exercises, she suggested that they should separate into pairs. Mindy selected Kyle which allowed Chloe to partner with Curtis. Naturally, Curtis was not very amused.

Chloe and Mindy spent the next hour instructing their partners on some basic blocks and kicks. Chloe enjoyed this as Curtis spent a lot of the time on his back. Mindy was a little nicer to Kyle as he had not annoyed anybody yet and he seemed to be very aware of why Chloe and Mindy were both grumpy, so, he kept his mouth shut. 'Clever kid,' Mindy thought. By the end of the morning, Curtis was thoroughly pissed off and Kyle was actually doing very well. Kyle had potential; he was a fast learner and he only needed to be shown a movement or stance, a few times before he grasped it. Kyle asked if I would train him; he wanted to continue and learn Taekwondo.

Mindy suggested that he check with his parents first, but if that was what he wanted, and his parents were okay with it, then she would train him, for a few hours, each week.

Updated: December 2017

Chapter 30*: Easter

Two days later
Friday, April 18th, 2014

West Ridge

"For fucks sake, Mindy!" Dave implored, for the twentieth time. "Will you calm the fuck down?"

"I can't; I'm too excited!" Mindy exclaimed with an enormous grin on her face.

"Look, Marcus will get here when he gets here and not before," Dave tried.

Mindy had been jumping up to look out of the window for over an hour and it was getting more than a little annoying. Marcus was not actually due to arrive for another half an hour, but Mindy . . . well, she was Mindy. Originally, Marcus was going to fly, but he had called on Thursday to say that he was driving up with a surprise for Mindy. Marcus had refused to elaborate, so Dave was as much in the dark as Mindy. He knew for a fact, that Marcus let slip about the surprise because he knew that Mindy would then behave as though she had ants in her panties.

Marcus liked his little jokes.

..._...

About forty minutes later, Mindy squealed and jumped.

She then threw open the front door and ambushed Marcus as he was about to knock.

"Your fault Marcus; you did wind her up," Dave called out quite reasonably.

"Yeah, good point!" Marcus agreed, grimacing as he staggered in almost carrying Mindy. "Well, I think she's happy to see me."

"It's good to see you, Marcus," Dave said, shaking the outstretched hand and smirking. "Mindy, get down off Marcus."

"Sorry!" Mindy replied, blushing.

"Here, read this," Marcus said, handing me a newspaper article.

I read the article with Mindy peering over my arm. The article concerned the death of one Lieutenant Gigante, in New York, two weeks previously. It detailed how Gigante had been a dirty Cop for many years with links to various members of the D'Amico family.

"That bastard became corrupt when your Father refused D'Amico's offer and he was framed. Gigante deserved to die; we believe he upset Ralph D'Amico and was killed on his orders," Marcus explained. "But his death brought great joy."

We both looked at Marcus, a little confused!

Marcus reached up, removed his NYPD badge from around his neck, and he threw it at Mindy.

..._...

It took Mindy a few seconds to realise that something was different; she had seen Marcus' badge loads of times, but the badge in her hand was very different.

"Fuck me! Lieutenant!" she yelled, and she hugged Marcus.

"Whoa! Congratulations, Marcus," Dave said.

"Thanks! The Captain was very pleased when Gigante died; he knew Gigante was dirty, but there had never been enough evidence. I took the Lieutenant Exam months ago and was just waiting for a slot. Gigante made that slot available," Marcus explained happily.

"That is so cool!" Mindy exclaimed.

"I'll be back in a moment, need to get something from the car," Marcus said rather cryptically.

"Lieutenant, now that is cool," Dave agreed.

Marcus was back in a couple of minutes. Mindy froze, staring down to the right of Marcus. Dave stared, too.

It was a dog.

..._...

The dog, a very beautiful looking German Shepherd, was looking up at Dave with a somewhat curious expression.

His mind went back a few months, to the previous summer. He suddenly had the glorious picture of Chris D'Amico, with a dog on his balls. Dave envisioned the German Shepherd with a mask and he thought back for a minute before the name jumped into his head.

Tentatively, Dave knelt down and he looked directly into the dog's eyes.

"Sophia?" he asked cautiously.

The dog barked, bounded towards Dave and then started licking his face.

"Good to see you, girl!" he said, stroking her happily.

"You know her name?" Marcus asked, curiously.

"We've already met; Sophia is a Super Hero – otherwise known as Eisenhower," Dave explained, and he received another bark as soon as he mentioned her Super Hero identity.

"Oh, for fuck's sake!" Marcus groaned. "Dogs are Super Heroes now?"

"This dog is special," Dave explained. "Eisenhower is a highly skilled crime fighter, who attacks with just a single word."

"This wouldn't happen to be the mutt who likes chomping on dick?" Mindy asked, with an evil smirk.

"Just like you do," Dave whispered to Mindy, causing her eyes to bug out and her to blush deeply.

Marcus scowled - he must have heard Dave's comment.

"Where did you find her?" I asked, changing the subject, quickly.

"She was handed in, several weeks ago. Nobody wanted her, so she was due to be destroyed. I thought Mindy might like her," Marcus said.

"Well, they're both bitches," Dave agreed, moving away from Mindy very fast.

"I'll give you that one, asshole," Mindy said, pleasantly, which rather surprised Dave.

"Mindy/Hit Girl – meet Sophia/Eisenhower," Dave said, patting Sophia.

Mindy actually looked nervous and she was biting her lip as she knelt down. Sophia looked Mindy up and down and sniffed Mindy's outstretched hand, before she wagged her tail, barked twice, then looked up at Dave as if to say, 'She'll do'. Sophia allowed Mindy to pat her and give her a brief hug. Mindy got a big sloppy 'kiss' in return and she started giggling.

"Thanks, Marcus," Mindy called out from the floor.

"Another Hero, for the Fucked Up Super Hero Club," Marcus exclaimed, putting his head in his hands.

After a late lunch, they took Marcus to see the Safehouse.

"Wow! It's a totally different place," Marcus exclaimed once they were inside.

Mindy gave him a guided tour of the entire building, including the armoury. Sophia enjoyed the tour, too, and she made herself at home on one of the couches downstairs. Dave had a feeling that they would need a larger vehicle, than Speedy, as they now had three people and a dog to transport. Dave had asked Chloe to meet them at the Safehouse and she arrived during the afternoon.

"Marcus, you remember Chloe?" Mindy asked.

"I do," Marcus said, smiling. "Hello, young lady."

"Hi, Mr Williams," Chloe replied, smiling sweetly.

..._...

Dave and Chloe had spent several hours over the previous week spraying the Harley-Davidson Fat Boy.

They had refused to let Mindy see what they were doing, and Dave had insisted that Mindy wait for the grand unveiling; which was that afternoon. While Marcus and Mindy watched, Chloe and Dave pulled off the motorcycle's cover. Chloe looked very excited; Dave just had his usual dorky grin. What had originally been, a jet-black motorcycle, had changed completely.

The front and rear mudguards were 'Kick-Ass' green on the top, with half-inch wide, 'Kick-Ass' yellow stripes, curving around the vertical surfaces which were black. The teardrop shapes, on the sides of the fuel tank, were now 'Kick-Ass' green, along with a 'Kick-Ass' yellow outline. The licence plate, above the tail light, read 'KICK', and when you saw the Fat Boy, side by side with the Panigale, the two plates read, 'KICK HIT N RUN'!

The paint finish was perfect and looked fucking cool. Dave was in his combat suit and once he was astride the Fat Boy, Mindy could only think of one thing to say.

"Fuck! You Kick-Ass!" she exclaimed.

Not original, she knew.

"It really does suit you, Kick-Ass," Marcus said, with an enormous smile.

"It is very nice," Kick-Ass confirmed. "Thanks for your help, Chloe!"

"It was my pleasure, Kick-Ass," Chloe said, giggling with excitement.

..._...

After the tour, everybody headed back home to put their feet up, dropping Chloe off at home on the way. Marcus was very tired after his long drive, so he was looking forward to the rest. Sophia curled up, happily, on a couch and she soon fell asleep. Marcus had brought some dog food with him and a pair of enormous bowls, one of which was filled with water and was left in the kitchen.

The three of them had a very late dinner and then they all went to bed. Sophia insisted on following Dave and Mindy upstairs and she fell asleep in one corner of their bedroom.

The next day
Saturday, April 19th

West Ridge

They all got up late and had a big breakfast.

Chloe, Kyle, and Curtis were coming over for their weekly training session, that afternoon. Marcus said he wanted to go and see a cop buddy, so he headed out soon after breakfast.

..._...

Around two in the afternoon there was a knock on the door. Sophia appeared from somewhere and she started barking.

"Sophia, quiet! Sit!" Mindy ordered and Sophia sat obediently, in silence.

She opened the door and invited them all in.

"Guys, this is Sophia," Mindy said, pointing at the dog. "Sophia, meet Chloe, Kyle, and Curtis," she said, pointing out each one to Sophia.

Sophia got up and checked out the kids, sniffing each of them. When she got to Curtis, she growled which drew a laugh from Chloe!

"Sophia, no eating Curtis!" Mindy ordered.

Sophia whined, and she started licking Curtis' hand.

"Be good Curtis, or you may be doggie dinner," Chloe said, laughing.

Curtis did not look happy. Chloe thought Sophia was lovely and Kyle agreed. Curtis though was a bit wary of her.

Mindy decided that it was not quite the right moment to show them Sophia's little party trick.

..._...

Curtis was just being kicked down, by Chloe, for about the tenth time when Marcus came down into the basement.

"Hi, Chloe," Marcus said.

"Hi, Mr Williams," Chloe replied.

"Hi, Marcus," Mindy said. "This is Kyle and the little brat on his back is Curtis. Chloe's boyfriend and cousin, respectively."

"Hi, Mr Williams," both boys chipped in.

"Hi, kids," Marcus replied, looking at Mindy questioningly.

"I'm being paid to train these boys in basic Taekwondo and Chloe in advanced Aikido," she explained, quickly.

"I see," Marcus replied, somewhat dubiously, before sitting down to watch.

Mindy finished the days training, forty minutes later. Curtis was a little sore but was not being put off by all the rough treatment. Kyle was progressing very well, and Mindy noticed that Chloe had difficulty keeping her eyes off the boy. The three visitors went home, leaving just Dave, Mindy, and Marcus. Dave had spent the past couple of hours shopping for food.

"The boys don't know about Chloe being Shadow?" Marcus asked.

"No, they don't!" Mindy confirmed.

The following day
Sunday, April 20th

It was Easter Day.

Everybody was up early, and Marcus was starting to cook. Mindy had offered to cook, but Marcus had refused, saying that he wanted to actually eat the food after it had been cooked. Mindy honestly did not have anything to say to that comment, so she just sat down and scowled at Marcus. Dave suggested that Mindy looked adorable which just annoyed the girl even more. There was an enormous ham and loads of other food to go with it. Marcus had Mindy helping to prepare the vegetables – he thought that Mindy was very good with a knife.

While the food was cooking, they chatted about recent events, including the death of Gigante and Marcus' promotion. Marcus wanted to know what Dave and Mindy had been up to with Chloe when they were out being vigilantes. Dave took him through each night and especially enjoyed telling him about the wind up at the beginning of the week, plus the unfortunate discovery the following morning. Mindy insisted on telling her side of the story, too. Dave also got the opportunity to properly thank Marcus for the motorcycle.

Once the food was cooked, they sat down to an enormous meal. Even Sophia got a big chunk of ham, which she was very grateful to receive. Marcus insisted on making another speech.

"It is truly wonderful to be back here again with my family. It gets very lonely in New York. I am very happy to see that you have a life now, both of you, here in Chicago. Admittedly, not a very normal life, but hell, it could be worse," Marcus said. "Mindy could be pregnant!"

Mindy's mouth dropped open in shock and her face went bright red. Dave had to laugh and so did Marcus while Mindy just glowered at them both.

"Sorry, Mindy. I couldn't resist that last comment," Marcus apologised, not very sincerely. "Anyway. Happy Easter to us all."

"Happy Easter!" they all said, raising their glasses.

..._...

It felt really good having Marcus in Chicago and being able to sit down to a proper meal together.

It really gave Mindy a warm feeling inside. She really did miss Marcus; a lot more than she would ever admit to him. Marcus and Dave were her life, all she had, and she would never let either of them go . . . ever. After lunch, they took Sophia for a walk over to the park and Mindy enjoyed running around after the large dog. Dave kept throwing a frisbee for Sophia to fetch. He could throw it a lot further than Mindy could which typically annoyed the girl. She tried to race Sophia, once or twice, but she always lost against the very powerful animal. Marcus also seemed happy to be out with his family and Mindy was really pleased for him that he had got a promotion; it was a long time overdue. By the time they returned to the house, they were all thoroughly exhausted and they just collapsed onto the couches.

Sophia though, she just drank a gallon of water and laid down, staring at Mindy. Mindy thought that she must have dozed off as she awoke with a start and she saw that it was dark outside. Dave and Marcus were snoring and so was Sophia. Mindy looked at the time; it was two in the morning. She decided that she was not comfortable, so she kicked Dave and Marcus awake.

"Come on, you two, it is bedtime," Mindy called out, pulling Dave up the stairs.

Marcus reluctantly followed.

Author's Note: For those who have not seen Eisenhower attack Chris D'Amico, you can view this attack on YouTube: just search for 'Eisenhower Gets It Started'. I believe this extended scene only appears in the British DVD/Blu-ray. It is a cool scene and I personally think it was better than the scene they did use.

Updated: December 2017

Chapter 31*: Kick, Hit and Run

The next day

Monday, April 21st, 2014

They got up close to lunchtime.

Falling asleep in the living room, had not been a very good idea. After a late breakfast, they all went out to the park again, with Sophia. Unfortunately, Marcus had to leave late that afternoon. Yet again, Mindy looked thoroughly miserable and she hugged Dave tightly as Marcus drove off. Then, Mindy spent a couple of hours feeling sorry for herself on the couch with Sophia.

"Come on, gorgeous," Dave suggested. "Fancy a night out on the town?"

"Hell, yeah!" Mindy responded enthusiastically.

Later that evening

The Safehouse

Chloe would not be with them for the night as she was back at school; Chloe was okay with that as Curtis had now gone home.

They took Sophia with them down to the Safehouse, where she made herself comfortable on a couch and went to sleep. A large bowl of food and plenty of water was left for her should she wake up. Dave and Mindy both pulled on their combat suits as usual. Sophia soon woke up and she wandered over to investigate; she had a good sniff at the combat suits, but otherwise wasn't upset by them. Dave had thought that she might have reacted badly to the black combat suits. Her reaction was good as it meant that they could use Sophia as a part of Fusion should her participation be desired. They let Sophia have the run of the main building, but not the accommodation.

Kick-Ass climbed onto the Fat Boy and he started the engine. The sound really was magnificent, and Hit Girl quickly jumped onto the Panigale and started her own engine which sounded different: Kick-Ass' was deeper in tone. Hit Girl pushed the door remote; the lights cut out and they both accelerated through the open door.

..._...

It was wonderful, to be finally out with Kick-Ass on his Fat Boy.

They cruised side by side, down the streets of Chicago and between them, they attracted some very appreciative looks and comments. Kick-Ass not only had a new motorcycle, he also had a new mask for his combat suit.

The new mask gave Kick-Ass the option to wear an open front or a modular motorcycle helmet, at that moment a Shark Evoline 3 ST MoovUp Helmet, in black with green and yellow highlights. The new combat suit mask was identical to the original, but full face with the carbon-fibre composite armour wrapping around the back of the head, over the eyes, then down to the bridge of the nose, and around the side and bottom of the eyes, covering both cheek bones. Another piece of carbon-fibre composite armour extended from the nape of the neck, to the bridge of the nose, over the top of the head.

The eyes were protected by an integrated, tinted, shatter and scratch-proof wrap-around lens. A removable, carbon-fibre composite armour and composite-synthetic material shield, clipped onto the cheek guards and covered the nose, mouth and jaw. Once fully fitted, this mask covered all exposed skin. With the new mask, the complete combat suit covered every square inch of his body and looked even more menacing.

As Kick-Ass and Hit Girl cruised up South Western Avenue, they halted at a stop light. A Police SUV pulled up to the left of them, next to Kick-Ass. The window came down on the passenger side and an officer leaned out.

"Hey, Kick-Ass, Hit Girl! I've been wanting to talk to you two," The officer said, smiling and indicating that the two vigilantes should pull over.

..._...

Not wanting to cause any trouble, they both pulled over to the right side of the road, as requested.

"I wanted to thank you both for saving my life, back in January. Those ninjas threw a knife at me and I thought I was a gonna," The officer said: his name tag read 'Murphy'.

Hit Girl could remember that night; the fight with the six ninjas – her first six Katana prizes. She also remembered the wounded officer being dragged away by his colleagues.

"I'm very happy to see you up and about, Sergeant Murphy," Hit Girl growled back.

"I was there, too. Thanks, I might be dead if you hadn't acted," the other Officer, his name tag read 'Fellowes', said.

"Our pleasure," Hit Girl replied. "We're all on the same team!"

"You need anything . . . ever . . . you call us," Murphy said, handing Kick-Ass and Hit Girl a card each with two cell numbers written on it.

"No problem," Kick-Ass growled, pocketing his card. "Glad we could help."

"Love the wheels, Kick-Ass; really suits you," Fellowes called out as they pulled away.

..._...

"That was different!" Kick-Ass commented. "Thought we were gonna get a ticket."

"Or arrested," Hit Girl added.

They moved off and headed north, slowing down to check out alleyways and other areas where trouble might have been lurking. As they drove around, Hit Girl had the distinct impression that their reputation was spreading. Some young men who saw the two vigilantes tended to hide their faces or tried to look innocent. Some failed miserably and just ended up looking guiltier. They stopped to chat with a few groups of people and some were quite happy to point them towards trouble. The vigilante pair did manage to prevent two muggings and something else.

One, they stopped as they cruised past an alley. A brief glance had shown the mugging under way, so Hit Girl accelerated and headed to the opposite end of the alley which was on the other side of the block. The Ducati was very good for speed and Hit Girl made good use of it. Kick-Ass parked and dismounted, before blocking off his end of the alley.

"Kick-Ass, Hit-Girl. I've arrived," Hit Girl called as she parked up and dismounted at the opposite end of the alley.

"Let's move, Hit Girl," Kick-Ass replied.

They each advanced, from opposite ends of the alley. In the time it had taken for them to make their move, the mugging had moved on, and was about to become a rape. The male rapist had his pants around his knees and the woman was trying to scream through the man's hand.

"All right, you sick, twisted, fuck," Hit Girl growled, angrily.

The man flew backwards, as Kick-Ass grabbed him by the scruff of the neck. The man hit the far alley wall, a little too hard, knocking him senseless.

"You okay, ma'am," Hit Girl asked, reaching down to help the young lady stand up.

"Yes, you got here just in time. Thank you." the lady responded.

"Hit Girl. That's Kick-Ass," Hit Girl said.

"Here, ma'am," Kick-Ass said, handing the lady back her purse, before tying the man's hands and feet with plastic ties.

The cell rang.

It was an anonymous call.

"Murphy!" Murphy said, answering the call.

"Present for you . . . West 24th and South Stewart . . . gotta run!" the voice snarled, before the call disconnected.

The veteran police officer stared at the cell.

"Who was that?" Fellowes asked from the other seat.

"I think it was Kick-Ass," Murphy replied, a little unsure. "Something awaits us at West 24th and South Stewart."

"On it!" Fellowes said, switching on the lights and siren, before pulling a U-turn and heading north-east.

..._...

"Look here!" Fellowes exclaimed, eight minutes later as he pulled into the curb.

A young lady, looking a bit dishevelled, was being attended to by a paramedic. On the sidewalk beside her, was a man. The man had his pants around his knees. His hands and feet were secured with plastic ties and the man was unconscious.

"That bastard mugged me and then tried to rape me," the lady explained, as the Paramedic applied a sticking plaster to her face.

"Who?" Murphy asked.

"She said her name was Hit Girl. The other guy was called Kick-Ass. They saved my life," the lady explained further.

Fellowes got on the radio to call for a van to pick-up the pile of shit on the sidewalk.

Murphy had to smile, those two vigilantes definitely had class.

Kick-Ass and Hit Girl stayed nearby, until the paramedic arrived and then moved further away.

They saw Murphy and Fellowes get out of their car and look around. 'Job done,' they thought; they had some tame Cops. Once they were happy the situation was under control, they headed to find some food which they took to a park, for a few minutes rest. They had just finished chomping on the burgers, when we heard a scream.

Kick-Ass and Hit Girl spun around, and they saw a woman running across the park. The woman saw the lights of the two motorcycles and she turned to run in their direction.

"Help!" The woman screamed. "Help me!"

Three men burst out of some trees and they changed direction to pursue the woman. Kick-Ass moved forward, and the woman ran into him.

"You have nothing to fear!" he told the woman.

Kick-Ass' anger started to rise; the woman was heavily bruised on her face. Hit Girl saw the bruising, too. The men skidded to a halt a few yards away, unsure of what to do. Kick-Ass placed myself between the woman and the men. The men came closer and stopped, then one man stepped forwards.

"Give us the woman and nobody gets hurt," the man ordered.

"Go chomp on a dick, cunt!" Hit Girl growled, drawing a Katana.

"Ninja girl wants to play?" the man sneered.

"Oh, no! Ninja girl doesn't wanna play . . ." Hit Girl growled, launching herself forward.

The hilt of her Katana hit the man in the face, breaking his nose, then she spun around striking each of the other men in the face, one with the hilt of the Katana and the other with the hilt of the Tanto. Hit Girl turned around and crouched down beside the first man who was screaming through the blood of his broken nose.

"Shut up, cunt!" she snarled.

The man was suddenly quiet, shaking but quiet.

"Did you hurt that lady?" Hit Girl, growled.

The man nodded.

"Bad move! Oh, and by the way, my name is Hit Girl," Hit Girl growled, driving her fist into the man's face. "Fear the name!"

Hit Girl then attended to the woman, while Kick-Ass applied plastic ties to the three men: hands and feet.

The cell rang.

It was another anonymous call.

"Murphy!" Murphy said, answering the call.

"Taxi for three . . . West 43rd and South State . . . Gotta run!"

"You're enjoying yourself, aren't you?" Hit Girl asked Kick-Ass as he hung up the cell.

"And why not?" Kick-Ass replied, chuckling.

'That fucking motorcycle was going to his head,' Hit Girl thought.

"Let's go annoy some Cops," Kick-Ass suggested.

They waited until Murphy and Fellowes had turned up, before moving further away. They watched until Murphy and Fellowes got back into their car and drove off. It was late; after eleven thirty.

Hit Girl and Kick-Ass followed the two Sergeants until they parked up in a darkened area.

"Licence and registration!" The deep voice growled.

'What?' Murphy thought, turning to his partly open window.

"FUCKING HELL!" he yelled. "For fuck's sake, Kick-Ass; that fucking mask scared the shit outta me!" Murphy complained.

"That's the idea, Murphy," Kick-Ass growled.

Fellowes was smiling broadly, on the other side of the car.

"I thought Hit Girl was the fucking ninja," Murphy stated.

"She is," another voice growled, from beside Fellowes.

"FUCK!" Fellowes yelled, and he turned to his own partly open window.

"Hi!" Hit Girl growled, smirking.

"You trying to kill us or something?" Murphy asked.

"If we wanted to kill you. . ." Hit girl growled, letting it hang.

"Okay," Fellowes said with understanding.

"Thanks for your, err, donations; much appreciated," Murphy said, smiling.

"Thanks for helping us with them," Kick-Ass growled. "Now if you need us. . ."

"How do we get a hold of you?" Murphy asked.

"Oh shit; you had to ask," Kick-Ass muttered with his hand over his eyes.

"What?" Murphy asked, confused.

"You've been aching to use that fucking line, again," Kick-Ass chuckled, looking at Hit Girl.

"So!" Hit Girl replied with an evil smirk.

"Get it over and done with," Kick-Ass directed with some exasperation, turning away.

"You just contact the mayor's office. He has a special signal he shines in the sky; it's in the shape of a giant cock!" Hit Girl growled.

Murphy just looked at Fellowes, who looked back at Kick-Ass and he shrugged.

"Funny bitch!" Murphy chuckled.

"She is that," Kick-Ass growled, dryly. "Anyway, back to reality; Hit Girl give them the number."

"Asshole! Okay guys you dial: 555-1-FUSION. Got it?" Hit Girl growled.

"555-1-FUSION," Murphy read back.

"That number will accept voice and texts. Don't worry about tracing the number, it won't get you anywhere," Hit Girl, growled.

"Have a good night," Kick-Ass called.

They both vanished into the night, like they never were.

Updated: January 2018

Chapter 32*: Tested

The next day

Tuesday, April 22nd, 2014

Chicago Police Headquarters

It was late afternoon.

"Hey, Jimmy! Trace this number for me: 5-5-5-1-3-8-7-4-6-6," Sergeant Murphy ordered.

A few minutes later, the officer looked up at Murphy with a confused expression.

"You two having a joke?" the officer asked, sounding annoyed.

"Why?" Murphy asked.

"I've traced the number; here's the damn address!" The officer grouched, turning his monitor, so Murphy could read the address.

Murphy laughed.

"The number traces back to that address?" Murphy asked, incredulously. "You kidding me?"

"You got it," the officer replied, smiling.

"So?" Fellowes asked, a little confused.

"The fucking number traces back to Chicago Police Headquarters!" Murphy exclaimed. "Right fucking here! The clever bastards. They're good, I'll give 'em that."

Murphy's cell beeped a minute later; it was a text message. Murphy checked the cell and he chuckled before showing the screen to Fellowes.

The message read: NICE TRY! KA.

Same time

West Ridge

"I told you they'd try," Mindy said rather smugly.

"I know. How the hell did Marty manage to setup and cover the number?" Dave asked.

"God knows!" Mindy replied. "Must be a geek thing."

"Don't forget Kyle and Chloe will be here in thirty minutes," Dave reminded Mindy.

"Oh, yeah! I almost forgot; Kyle's training," Mindy said. "Thanks."

Dave quickly put away the Toughbook, as it was Fusion equipment and not to be seen by Kyle. Marty had given us the Toughbook to connect to the computer system at the Safehouse. We could monitor the GPS, listen to the radios, and check the CCTV at the Safehouse, all from home, or anywhere else for that matter. Just that morning, they were able to be notified when somebody traced that particular phone number.

Kyle and Chloe right arrived on time and Mindy took Kyle down to the lower floor. Chloe stayed with Dave, to allow Kyle to get some good one on one time with Mindy.

..._...

Dave spent the next hour chatting with Chloe.

She wanted to see some proper action; like Dave and Mindy had had with the ninjas. Dave explained to her that she needed way more training to allow for that. Plus, Dave remembered that Chloe had never killed, and he was not sure that she would be able to cope with killing, not for the moment at least. Dave decided that he would speak to Mindy about it and see how best to prepare Chloe for that more unfortunate side of being a vigilante. It would happen at some stage and Chloe needed to be prepared.

The first time Dave had killed, it was with a fucking Gatling gun, which was amazing, but not quite the same as staring directly into somebody's eyes as you killed them. That night still haunted Dave. He and Mindy both had nightmares about their activities. Mindy did not like to talk about her nightmares, but Dave knew that she had them and he knew that she knew that he got them, too.

Chloe was such a nice girl, he did not want her to go through horrors like that.

That night Dave mentioned his worries about Chloe to Mindy.

"I was expecting that. Chloe wants more; she wants a challenge. However, she isn't ready. Killing a person, well it may destroy her," Mindy said, then she paused before continuing. "Look at me; I'm damaged goods."

"What the fuck do you mean by that?"

"Come on, Dave! You've seen me; I am not normal, not by any stretch of the imagination!"

"Okay, you're right there," Dave conceded. "But I still love you for who you are."

Mindy laughed. "I know that, dumbass!"

"Chloe is very much like you, in many ways. But I don't want her to turn into you. Now, I don't mean that in a bad way, but you've been through a lot of shit," Dave commented.

"I know, and you were there for a lot of it. You also helped me get through a lot of my shit. You said wonderful things to me, that night, in your bedroom, just when I needed you the most. Without you, I could never have an even remotely normal life." Mindy said, cuddling into her partner and turning for a kiss. "With you, I can still be Hit Girl, but you keep me controlled."

Dave could not resist Mindy, he just thought that she was wonderful, despite her abnormalities. But, at least the abnormalities were on the inside; the outside was perfect.

Dave let his hands wander over the perfect skin and Mindy screamed in delight.

Four days later
Saturday, April 26th

Finally, it was the weekend.

School had really wound Chloe up that week. There were a group of girls who just – well they thought that they were goddamn perfect – but Chloe thought that they were perfect little bitches. Anyway, she would not let them ruin her weekend.

It was time for Shadow to get out there.

..._...

After chatting with Dave on Tuesday and Thursday while Kyle was training with Mindy, Chloe thought that she had understood why Dave and Mindy were only taking her out on easy nights. Dave had tried to explain how she might feel if she killed a person. He was not all that good at explaining it, nevertheless, he had got the message across. Chloe did not really think that anybody knew how they would react to killing somebody, until it actually happened. She knew that she would only be killing in the self-defence of herself or of an innocent.

Dave had explained that Mindy had a special place in her heart for rapists and those who hurt women and children – basically those who preyed on the weak, those who could not fight back. They fought back for them. Mindy believed that those people should die, and she would kill them, without a second's hesitation. Dave had also mentioned that Mindy took great pride in providing more violent deaths for those people.

Chloe still wanted to become as accomplished as Hit Girl.

That was her dream.

..._...

Chloe turned up at the Safehouse, just after seven that evening.

She walked up to the side door and punched in the code, the door buzzed and clicked open. The girl entered the Safehouse, closing the door behind her and she noticed that all the lights were off. That was strange; Dave and Mindy should have been there, before her. She flicked the light switches, nothing happened.

'Okay, what now?' she thought.

In the limited light that was filtering through the windows from nearby street lights, she could see enough to head towards the briefing room. She made it about halfway across the mat, before she got the feeling that somebody was behind her. Chloe froze, and she felt instant fear growing inside her.

'Pull yourself together, Chloe, you can handle this!'

She spun around, delivering a back kick which connected to something solid which in turn grunted with the impact. Chloe immediately followed up with a roundhouse kick, flooring the attacker. She sensed another attacker coming up behind her and she executed a reverse spinning hook kick which caught the approaching attacker in the side of the head. The attacker went down hard with barely a sound and did not get back up.

The other attacker grabbed her from behind, in a bear hug. The teenager braced herself, before sliding her legs apart, lowering myself and then thrusting her arms out, breaking the attacker's hold on her. Chloe then grabbed the attacker's arm, pulling them onto her back and throwing him over her shoulder. The attacker crashed to the mat, hard. Chloe then drove her fist into their stomach, before running towards the armoury. She stopped still, the moment that she heard the sound of a pistol being cocked and she froze, completely, as she felt the cold metal of a pistol, being pressed against her right temple.

"Okay, I give up!" Chloe stammered, and she felt herself shaking from head to toe; she had never been so scared.

Suddenly, the Safehouse lights clicked on and she had to shut her eyes to protect them from the glare.

She felt the pistol being removed from her temple and she heard the weapon being de-cocked. Chloe opened her eyes slowly and as they became adjusted to the light, she saw a smiling Dave walking towards her, clapping. She looked to her right and saw a smirking Marty, holding a pistol. 'Didn't know he was back in town,' she thought to herself as she looked over onto the mat and she saw Mindy struggling to her feet, holding her head.

"Oh fuck! You fucking bastards!" Chloe yelled, relief obvious in her voice, as she then started to cry.

"Sorry Chloe, but we needed to see how you'd react to an unexpected attack. You kept saying you were ready for more," Dave explained, coming up and guiding the girl to a couch in the briefing room.

Chloe could not stop crying.

"I'm sorry Dave, I was just so scared; I didn't know what to do," she explained.

"You did just fine, kid," Mindy moaned, grimacing in pain.

"I'm so sorry, Mindy," Chloe tried, appalled.

"My fault! I should have dodged," Mindy replied, smiling, sitting down beside me and giving her friend a hug. "You actually did very well, considering."

"I thought I was dead when Marty put that gun to my head," Chloe replied. "When did he get here, anyway?"

"Last minute thing," Marty explained. "I have a place to check out on Monday."

"Okay, I'm not ready for anything big," Chloe admitted. "Thanks for pointing that out."

"Don't worry, Chloe. You'll be ready before you know it," Mindy said, smiling kindly.

Updated: January 2018

Chapter 33*: Vendetta

One week later
Saturday, May 3rd, 2014

The Safehouse

Mindy was standing behind Marty.

In front of him was an enormous, wall-mounted, fifty-inch flat screen, showing a map of Chicago and two red dots, which were pulsing near to the I-55 and north of Archer Heights. Kick-Ass was out on patrol with Shadow, and they had both had a fun evening, to that point.

But that was all about to change.

..._...

The radio speaker jumped to life.

"Battle . . . Battle Guy, this . . . this is Shadow. Kick-Ass is gone. Kick-Ass is in trouble."

Mindy immediately grabbed a spare headset.

"Shadow, Hit Girl. What's happening?" she said, calmly; although she did not feel calm, at all.

"He's gone; I'm so scared," Shadow whimpered.

"Where has he gone?" Mindy asked.

"I . . . I . . . I . . . he was taken . . . I'm alone," Shadow was starting to panic.

"Marty, I'm gonna go get ready," Mindy said, running to the armoury.

"Shadow?" Battle Guy called.

There was no response.

"Shadow . . . Shadow!"

Marty brought up a new console window, over on his smaller computer screen. He selected Shadow's radio and remotely enabled the VOX feature. He would then be able to hear Shadow, without her having to press the PTT (push-to-talk) button. Almost immediately, Shadow could be heard over the speaker; she was sobbing. There were also disjointed words coming over the speaker.

"Shadow! Pull yourself together; Kick-Ass needs you!" Battle Guy ordered.

Sometimes, you just had to be cruel to be kind, he thought. Within a minute, Shadow had sorted herself out enough to reply.

"Sorry, Battle Guy. Kick-Ass was herded into a warehouse; he was fighting eight to ten men. Sorry. That's all I have," Shadow answered.

"Are you safe, Shadow?" Battle Guy asked, with some concern.

"Yes, Kick-Ass hid me. Before he moved down the alley and was ambushed," Shadow replied slowly.

"Stay hidden, stay out of sight. Let us know of anything you see, okay?" Battle Guy directed.

"Will do," Shadow replied.

"Well done, Marty," Mindy said. "Hit Girl is ready to go!"

"Good luck; I'll guide you," Battle Guy replied, pressing buttons and a third pulsing red dot, appeared on the map.

..._...

Hit Girl accelerated out of the Safehouse compound and turned left, before turning immediately right, and right again onto South Western Avenue, heading north. Traffic was light, so she made reasonable time. Five minutes and one and a half miles later, she made another left turn.

She was following Battle Guy's directions, as he followed her via the GPS in her radio.

A warehouse

Kick-Ass was surrounded by several men.

There was very little light, so he could not see much detail. After they had herded him into the warehouse, they had stopped fighting and spread out, covering the exit. A tall, grumpy bastard, stepped out of the shadows.

"It's time to look at your face," Grumpy Bastard sneered. "Take off your mask."

That was the point where Hit Girl usually came up with one of her witty lines, planned well in advance, for every eventuality. Kick-Ass, well, he was not so good at witty retorts.

"No," he snarled. Straight and to the point, he thought.

He could hear Battle Guy talking to Shadow, in his ear, but he could not reach his PTT to communicate with Battle Guy or Shadow. Shadow sounded like she was panicking, which was not good. Grumpy Bastard waved two of his men towards Kick-Ass. He braced up and as he sensed the men get close, he reached out with his fists, cracking each man in the face with his armoured gauntlets. Then, he reached behind his back for his Ko-Wakizashi blades, drew them and he severed the men's carotid arteries. Blood spread, quickly, around the two fallen bodies. All the men raised their pistols into a ready position, all aimed at Kick-Ass. Grumpy Bastard stood with four men, on either side of him.

"Defiant to the end, huh?" Grumpy Bastard asked.

Something twigged in Kick-Ass' mind. The idiot had given him an idea; he was using lines from a movie, not an especially good movie, but a cool movie nonetheless. Only, Kick-Ass had seen the movie, too.

"You are about to die, asshole!" Kick-Ass snarled.

"How do you imagine that's gonna happen?" Grumpy Bastard asked, waving his arms to either side, indicating his eight men.

"With my hands around your neck!" Kick-Ass snarled back.

Grumpy Bastard looked a little unnerved; he'd obviously worked out that I knew the movie, too.

"Bullshit!" Grumpy Bastard said, snapping his fingers and eight more men appeared.

The men spread themselves out evenly behind the existing eight men just as Kick-Ass' earpiece crackled into life again. He had heard Battle Guy calming Shadow down.

"Kick-Ass, Battle Guy, you are on VOX. Hit Girl is forty seconds out," Battle Guy reported.

"What ya gonna do, huh? You're on your own. Nothing but you, and your fucking batons and blades," Grumpy Bastard sneered. "We have guns."

Kick-Ass just had to keep the charade going, a minute longer.

..._...

"Kick-Ass, Hit Girl! Ready to move on your mark," Kick-Ass heard Hit Girl call over the comms.

Now, for the endgame, he thought.

"No, what you have are bullets and the hope that when your guns are empty, I'm no longer standing. Because if I am; you'll all be dead before you've reloaded!" Kick-Ass snarled.

"That's impossible! This isn't some fucking movie!" Grumpy Bastard shouted back. "Kill him!"

Grumpy Bastard brought up a pistol, then he and his men opened fire. Kick-Ass turned his back, dipped his head, and braced his legs. Seconds later, there was silence.

"Ready, gorgeous?" Kick-Ass hissed, over the comms as the last brass dropped to the concrete floor of the warehouse.

"Always!" he heard in reply.

Kick-Ass stood up straight and he turned towards the astonished Grumpy Bastard, feeling a lot of bruises. The pain was intense, but he was otherwise uninjured. He saw a movement behind the furthest eight men and he recognised the purple flashes on the combat suit. Kick-Ass smirked behind his mask.

"Our turn," He snarled, launching himself forward as ejected magazines started to hit the floor.

Three of the men on the rear most rank fell to Hit Girl's throwing knives. They were quickly followed by a pair of heads that rolled forward, severed by a single Katana blade. The remaining three men twisted around in panic and desperately tried to reload their pistols; two fell instantly, with Katana blades protruding from their backs. The third fell from a Tanto blade in the chest.

Hit Girl retrieved her blades, wiped them clean, and raced toward the next rank.

..._...

Kick-Ass had reached the group of men over to the left of Grumpy Bastard and sliced open the stomachs of two men, before driving my armoured elbow into the face of a third man. The fourth man turned to run, directly onto Hit Girl's extended Katana.

"You do love your entrances, Hit Girl."

The remaining four men, and Grumpy Bastard, turned towards us both. Two men had reloaded their pistols and raised them towards Hit Girl. Four shots rang out and the men dropped, their heads exploding. Kick-Ass turned to see Shadow, holding her pistol in the classic Weaver stance, two handed in front of her. He nodded his thanks at Shadow, before he and Hit Girl killed one man each with their blades. Then Kick-Ass turned back towards Grumpy Bastard, who had retreated further into the warehouse.

"Die! Die! Why won't you die!?" Grumpy Bastard shouted, firing his pistol at Kick-Ass, who shrugged off each and every round as he continued his advance.

"Why won't you die?" Grumpy Bastard whimpered, staring at the slide of his pistol, locked back on an empty magazine.

Kick-Ass caught up with Grumpy Bastard and pinned him to the wall.

"Beneath this mask, there is more than flesh. Beneath this mask there is an idea and ideas are bullet proof," he snarled, before coldly snapping the man's neck.

He turned back to Hit Girl and he felt little to no emotion; that would come later, he knew. They both stowed their blades and he smiled, but I knew Hit Girl could not see the smile.

"Kick-Ass is clear!"

"Hit Girl is clear!"

"Sha . . . Shadow is clear!"

"Battle Guy copies, Fusion is clear!"

..._...

"Why won't you just fucking die, you selfish fucking asshole!" A voice shouted, from the gantry above us. "You too, you fucking purple whore!"

The voice was very familiar. Hit Girl looked directly at Kick-Ass, raging anger in her eyes.

"Well, if it isn't our old pal . . . Chris D'Amico!" Kick-Ass bellowed.

Hit Girl had both of her pistols out and raised, towards the voice. Kick-Ass could see that she was seething with anger.

Shadow also had her pistol raised and aimed in the same direction.

"You gonna come down and see us?" Kick-Ass requested, angrily.

"I would, but some greasy little fucker dropped me into a fucking shark tank! The fucking shark bit my fucking dick off! I have artificial fucking arms and legs, but they don't do working dicks!" Chris ranted. "I fucking owe you Kick-Ass!"

Hit Girl actually started to chuckle, then she laughed, loudly. Kick-Ass had to admit, it sounded very funny and he started laughing too. Shadow joined in the laughter, although Kick-Ass was not sure she knew what she was laughing at as they had never told her about Chris D'Amico, Red Mist, or the Mother Fucker. Maybe they should, he mused.

"Stop fucking laughing at me, you fucking wankers!" Chris yelled.

Hit Girl stopped laughing and she emptied both of her pistols in the general direction of Chris's voice; Kick-Ass did the same with his Glock and Shadow followed suit. Once silence returned, they each reloaded their pistols. The sound of a helicopter's engines and blades, could be readily heard above them.

Chris was gone.

"You guys okay?" Battle Guy asked over the comms. "I heard that fucking creepy bastard."

"We're fine Battle Guy; Fusion is coming home!" Hit Girl replied.

Author's Note: Okay, many will recognise the scene played out in this chapter and chunks of the dialogue. I think many will also identify the movie in question. Hit Girl has plenty of 'how the hell did she get out of that one, so damn easily' type scenes, such as the hallway shoot-out at the end of the first Kick-Ass movie. Now, I wanted Kick-Ass to have one of these scenes. It is time for him to show that he is a bad-ass and no longer that wimpy green asshole cringing in Rasul's apartment. It also shows that Kick-Ass does not always need Hit Girl to bail him out. Yes, Hit Girl helped in this chapter, but I hope I showed that Kick-Ass could have escaped alone, without help.

Updated: January 2018

Chapter 34*: McKinley Park

Later that night
Saturday, May 3rd, 2014

West Ridge

Okay, there was a problem.

They knew that it would happen eventually.

Chloe did not react well to killing two men. The knowledge that she had just killed two men, never actually registered in her mind till well after the event, which was actually fairly normal. They had all gone back to the Safehouse to change, before heading back home. That had also reminded them all that Speedy was far too small. 'Note to self,' Mindy thought. 'First thing, Monday, find an SUV.' Anyway, Marty went straight to bed, Sophia who had actually slept all evening, went back to sleep, and the rest of us went for showers.

Dave went to check on Chloe, when he and Mindy had both showered.

"Err, Mindy," Dave commented, coming back into the bedroom. "Chloe's still in the shower."

Dave and Mindy had spent forty minutes 'showering', so something was wrong with Chloe and it was then that it hit Mindy – Chloe had just killed, for the first time. She knocked on the bathroom door, but she didn't get an answer. Mindy waited a full minute before she knocked again. Nothing. She could hear the shower running, but nothing else, so she pushed open the door and found Chloe huddled in the bath, sobbing. Mindy turned off the shower and wrapped a towel around the thirteen-year-old, before helping her out of the bath and through to her bedroom. Chloe just kept staring into nothing and sobbing.

Mindy tried to get a response out of Chloe, but she got nothing.

..._...

Forty minutes later, Chloe seemed to come back to life.

"I shot those two men . . . I killed those two men . . . those two men are dead," Chloe said, quietly.

"Yes. You shot those two men. You shot them, to stop them shooting Dave and me," Mindy replied.

"I know. But, I just cannot shake the fact that I took two lives, tonight," Chloe responded.

"It won't be easy Chloe, but Dave and I will be with you, always. You need us to talk, we're there," Mindy promised.

"I'm going to have nightmares, aren't I?" Chloe asked, looking scared.

"Most probably," Mindy responded truthfully, feeling very sad. "Dave and I have them regularly; I won't lie to you about that."

"I want to be alone now," Chloe said suddenly.

"No problem. You know where we are, if you need us," I said, leaving the room.

..._...

"Well?" Dave asked as Mindy climbed into bed.

"She will have a bad night," she foretold with all honesty.

At least she had Dave to cuddle into, to help ease her own nightmares.

The following morning
Sunday, May 4th

Mindy awoke to find herself almost falling out of bed.

She turned over and found not Dave, but Chloe! Chloe had wormed herself in between her and Dave. She must have had a nightmare the previous night and she had not wanted to be alone; Mindy nudged Dave awake.

"What?" Dave moaned, tiredly, before noticing Chloe. "Whoa!"

"Must have been a nightmare," Mindy said, grimacing. "Told you she'd have a bad night!"

"Yeah, poor girl," Dave replied with a worried expression on his face.

They both got up and dressed, before Mindy poked Chloe awake.

..._...

"Okay," Chloe said, looking around. "Wrong bed!"

"I assume you had a nightmare, last night," Mindy commented.

"Yeah, sorry," Chloe said, looking a bit embarrassed.

"Don't be sorry, Chloe. We both know what you're going through; we've both been there," Mindy replied, darkly.

"Thanks, both of you," Chloe said, sliding off the bed, still looking a bit embarrassed. "Now I'm gonna go and get dressed."

"She's a strong girl; hopefully she'll cope," Dave said.

Two days later
Tuesday, May 6th

Everything was now very different.

Something that Mindy never thought would ever happen, now had. On Sunday, Marcus had called to tell us that since Gigante's death, a lot of investigations had occurred, in New York. Those investigations had included tracking down a dozen dirty cops and clearing some who were wrongly marked as dirty. That had included one Damon Macready. The Captain had publicly announced his innocence and the reinstatement of pension, back pay, and a large wad of compensation. That had naturally passed to Mindy, so the girl was now a very rich, young sixteen-year-old, according to Marcus. He also strongly suggested that she should invest the windfall in something useful that may also produce additional, legal, income for her and Dave.

By 'something useful', he specifically told Mindy not to go out and buy a purple battle-tank or armoured personnel carrier. Mindy was a little disgruntled by the mere suggestion: as if she would; nice idea, but not very subtle. Okay, she was still going out looking for an SUV with Dave, but they had had a chat that morning about investment opportunities and Dave had suggested buying an apartment block. That way, they would then have some income and they could probably use an apartment as another Safehouse. Mindy was actually rather surprised and impressed with Dave's quite logical idea, so it looked like Mindy Macready was going into property.

You had to admit, they would be the best protected apartment blocks in the city.

Some hours later

It had been a very busy day and they had just spent an awful lot of money.

First off, they had spent $62,000 on an SUV. A very nice one, if Mindy did say so herself. It was a Land Rover LR4, in Scotia Blue. It had seven seats and only fifteen hundred miles on it. The important thing was that it was spacious. Mindy would pick it up on Friday afternoon.

Secondly, they had found three possible apartment blocks, in and around Chicago. One was just a mile away from the current Safehouse, with ten units. Cheap and anonymous. Another was further east, in south Chicago, with twenty-five units which were currently empty, and it would allow them to acquire a couple of units for their own use. The final one was just to the west of the centre of Chicago and could be useful merely by its location. The area sucked a bit, but it would be very anonymous. Interestingly, Marty said he liked that one, as it was well located for the University. Anyway, they needed to put a lot of thought into what they were doing. If they bought an apartment block, or maybe two, they would need to find an agent to manage them.

That was going to be a lot of fun, Mindy thought.

The following evening
Wednesday, May 7th

The Safehouse

Dave and Mindy had elected to take the evening off from patrol.

Therefore, they headed down to the Safehouse and spent the evening servicing their weapons and their combat suits. Dave's combat suit had taken a lot of abuse at the weekend, from close range weapons' fire. Combined with the fact that Dave had broadened out a bit, the abuse warranted a replacement combat suit sometime in the near future. Dave had some personal suggestions for the new combat suit and, not surprisingly, so did Mindy. Marty was busy researching the history and locations for the apartment blocks which they were interested in. Marty would, of course, get a free apartment.

Mindy's cell started ringing, so she checked the display; it was a diverted call, from the number they had given to the two Sergeants.

"Speak!" she growled.

"Hit Girl! Got business for you: South Damen and West 38th, McKinley Park. Your friends are back," Murphy explained briefly. "Bring swords!"

"Twenty minutes," Mindy growled in reply, checking the clock. It was just after eight.

"We have ninjas at McKinley Park!" Mindy yelled, pulling off her clothes.

Marty started setting up his equipment for monitoring and Dave started pulling his clothes off, too. Eight minutes later, they were on their motorcycles and racing up South Western Avenue. Minutes later they turned right, onto West Pershing Road before pulling over and parking up before the South Damen Avenue junction. They could see lots of flashing blue lights across the park while between the two vigilantes and the lights, they could see. . .

Ninjas!

Over a dozen, plus watchdogs to keep the Police away. Seconds after Hit Girl and Kick-Ass had absorbed the view, the Police started engaging the watchdogs. They both ran towards the ninjas who were facing the Police. Surprise would be on their side, but only for a few seconds.

"Fusion is engaging!" Hit Girl called out over the comms.

"Battle Guy copies Fusion engaging. Luck guys, stay safe."

..._...

The two vigilantes advanced, drawing their blades. Hit Girl was able to kill two ninjas, before anybody even knew that she was even there. They both, quite literally, lost their heads in all the excitement. Another ninja fell, to Kick-Ass and his Ko-Wakizashi blades. The rest of the ninjas turned as one, to meet the new threat . . . Fusion!

The ninjas flew at their new attackers; at least four of the ninjas were wielding two blades. Hit Girl was instantly surrounded, and she was forced to fight several ninjas simultaneously. She felt impacts on her armour, but she was drawing blood. An arm fell to the grass, still holding a Katana, followed by the arm's previous owner, who was screaming. Hit Girl drove a blade into the stomach of a ninja while fending off the thrust from another ninja, with her other Katana. Then, as she spun around to fend off another attack, something impacted the back of her head and she felt weird . . . she started to sway.

Then everything went black.

Kick-Ass

After Kick-Ass had killed the first ninja, he got separated from Hit Girl.

Kick-Ass threw his weight against a ninja, who was wielding two Katana blades. Admittedly, his own blades were several inches shorter, but size was not everything, he thought – just look at Mindy. His extra bulk helped to even things out as he pushed back, absorbing numerous impacts to his armour. The ninja was almost eight inches shorter than Kick-Ass, but he was still able to hit the armour-clad vigilante with the hilt of his blade, across Kick-Ass' mouth.

The new face mask easily deflected the blow and allowed him to keep pushing forwards with no loss in momentum. He managed to grasp one of the blades and yank it out of the ninja's hand while holding both of his own Ko-Wakizashi with his other hand. The ninja was shocked enough to take a few steps back, giving Kick-Ass the space which he needed to grasp the Katana by the hilt and sever the man's neck in one sweep. Kick-Ass could make out Hit-Girl, about twelve feet away; she was fighting two ninjas at the same time. He saw another ninja come up behind her and strike her across the back of the head with the hilt of his Katana. Hit Girl staggered and then fell.

"No!" Kick-Ass yelled. "Hit Girl is down!"

The comms were open, so he knew that Battle Guy could hear him. So far, there were still almost a dozen ninjas remaining. He stowed one Ko-Wakizashi and drew the Glock - no more Mister Nice Guy! Kick-Ass started shooting into the ninjas; advancing on where he had last seen Hit Girl.

Murphy and Fellowes

There were still about a dozen gunmen firing, from behind the trees and SUVs.

Murphy was firing from cover, behind his car. His partner, Fellowes, was beside him. Soon after the shooting started, the ninjas had turned away and started fighting someone else.

"That must be Kick-Ass and Hit Girl – crazy idiots!" Murphy had exclaimed.

There was nothing they could do to help, thanks to the armed men who kept them pinned down. There were at least four Police Officers down, all wounded, but Murphy could see at least six of the gunmen on the ground, and none of them were moving.

One of the defending gunmen moved out of cover, so the officer aimed, and he fired, catching the gunman in the chest.

Hit Girl

Hit Girl regained consciousness.

She was lying on the ground and getting trodden on and kicked as the fight continued above and around her. She could see two black feet either side of her, then the top half of a ninja torso fell down beside her; the dead eyes still staring and that really woke her up. The feet belonged to Kick-Ass and he was guarding Hit Girl while she was unconscious.

"Let me up, cunt!" she growled over the comms.

"Enjoyed your little nap?" Kick-Ass responded.

"Not the best time for a nap, Hit Girl," Battle Guy pointed out.

"Hey, I was tired!" Hit Girl replied, getting up and retrieving her Katana swords.

She was now back-to-back with Kick-Ass. There were five ninjas remaining. Then three, then one, and the last ninja finally fell to Kick-Ass.

They charged towards the gunmen, only about nine of whom were remaining.

Murphy

He saw the last ninja fall.

Then two gunmen fell to their knees, one with a blade emerging from his chest, another when his head exploded from a gunshot, before Kick-Ass kicked the body down. The remaining gunmen stopped firing and they quickly put their hands up. They were obviously more scared of Kick-Ass and Hit Girl, than they were of the Chicago Police Department. As the CPD sorted out the surrendering gunmen, Murphy looked around for the two vigilantes. He could not see them anywhere, but in the distance the police officer could make out the engine sounds of two motorcycles as they accelerated away.

He smiled.

Thanks Fusion.

The Safehouse

Dave was worried about Mindy.

She did not seem herself, but at least she was on her feet.

They had made it back to the Safehouse and parked the motorcycles. Dave stowed both of their helmets in the locker and he followed her to the briefing room.

"Hi, Marty," Mindy said, pulling off her mask and comms.

"You okay, Mindy?" Marty asked.

"Yeah, just a sore head," Mindy replied.

"I'm not surprised," Dave said, dumping his mask and comms, before giving Mindy a hug.

Mindy started swaying, so Dave guided her onto the couch.

"You sure that you're okay?" Dave asked, concerned.

"Yeah, yeah," Mindy replied, waving him off.

Dave was not fooled for a second; something was wrong.

"Marty, help me get Mindy upstairs," he ordered

..._...

By the time we had managed to get Mindy to the bedroom, she was uncoordinated and couldn't stand.

We laid her on the bed and I got her out of the combat suit. Mindy was unresponsive and was slurring her words. I checked her head, there was a large bump to one side. That must have been where she was struck by the ninja. It was a concussion.

After removing my combat suit, I placed Mindy into Speedy and drove home, with Marty.

West Ridge

I got Mindy into bed and decided to call a doctor.

Chloe had left me with a card, for a doctor that she recommended. I placed the call and sat with Mindy, waiting.

..._...

About forty minutes later, there was a knock on the door and I went downstairs to open it, telling Sophia to be quiet.

Now, I got a surprise!

"Hi, I'm Doctor Cathy Bennett, you must be Dave," the lady said, walking through the door.

"How do you know my name?" I asked, confused.

Just as I was closing the front door, it was shoved open.

"Hi, Dave!" Chloe said cheerfully, closing the door behind her.

It clicked!

"Dr Bennett! You must be the mother of this delightful young lady," I said, glaring at Chloe.

"Lady? I wouldn't go that far!" Dr Bennett responded. "She's also rarely delightful!"

"Gee, thanks Mom!" Chloe responded, sarcastically, pretending to look hurt.

"Mindy's in the bedroom," I said, showing Dr Bennett the stairs.

..._...

Ten minutes later, Dr Bennett had finished examining Mindy.

"Just a minor concussion. Keep an eye on her. Keep her drinking. Bring her to see me on Friday, at ten in the morning," Dr Bennett said, before turning to Chloe. "Now, I need to get Little Miss Trouble home, to bed!"

"Thanks Doctor!" I said, shaking her hand. "We'll see you Friday; bye Chloe."

"Bye Dave!" Chloe said, waving.

Updated: May 2015.

Chapter 35*: Take a Break

*The following morning
Thursday, May 8th, 2014*

West Ridge

Mindy was very confused.

Dave had tried to explain why she was in bed, but not being able to remember how she had actually gotten there was worrying to the young woman. It kind of reminded her of that morning, when she had collapsed on the Safehouse roof, all those years ago and then woken up not being able to remember anything. Yet again, though, it was the same guy who had helped her.

Mindy was reading a paper that described the 'Ninja Attack at McKinley Park'. Apparently, the Chicago PD had had full control of the situation and had put down the minor public disruption within a very short time. There was no mention of Kick-Ass nor of Hit Girl. Nothing new there; the Police would rather take credit, than encourage or condone vigilante behaviour. Mindy could recall everything up to the start of the fight with the ninjas. After that, it was all a little spotty, but she could remember Kick-Ass standing guard over her as she lay on the ground.

Another surprise, was the Doctor who had come to see her the previous night. Mindy honestly did not remember the visit, but Dave had informed her that it had been Chloe's mother, of all people. That had been very unexpected; we had not even known that Chloe's mother she was a doctor; Chloe had kept that important fact very quiet and I understood that Chloe had been with her mother, too. Marty had said hello, earlier, as he was very worried about Mindy, but she had assured him that she was fine! Dave then insisted that Mindy should stay in bed for the day. She did not complain, although she wanted to, but her head hurt, and she could not walk straight when she went to use the bathroom.

However, Mindy had Sophia to keep her company and the canine was on the bed beside her.

..._...

Dave intended to have a word with Chloe about her mother's job

It would have been very useful to have known about it, rather than to have been surprised. He secretly thought that Chloe had enjoyed it. At least she seemed happier, after what had occurred at the weekend. Mindy had, rather surprisingly, been doing what she was told, and the girl had stayed in bed. Dave had taken her breakfast earlier and she had been able to keep that down, which was a good start. Dave was a little annoyed that they were not mentioned in the paper, but he knew that they had made a strong contribution. The two of them had received a text from Murphy and Fellowes; the message said thanks for Fusion's help and that without them, there would have been more Police and possibly civilian casualties. Well, Dave thought, at least somebody was grateful for their presence.

One thing that Dave had not told Mindy about yet, was the visit to the hospital on Friday morning, because he knew that she would refuse to go. He was still working out how to persuade her without too much shouting and screaming on her part. Marty had borrowed Speedy that morning, to go out and check on the two apartment blocks which were on their short list. Mindy was quite excited about 'going into property'. She was very pleased that Damon had finally been cleared of any criminal activity – well at least the activities that had got him sent to prison in the first place. Since leaving prison he had broken one or two laws, including starting to train a five-year-old Mindy as a vigilante.

Dave had actually started to think about what his life might have been like if Damon had never been framed and Mindy had never become Hit Girl and had therefore grown up to be a normal little girl. Would he have ever gone out as Kick-Ass? Would somebody else have rescued him that night, at Rasul's apartment? Would he have still met Mindy? Without the bitterness, he thought that Damon would have been a great father and Mindy would have turned out to be a wonderful young lady. Ultimately, he owed his life to Frank D'Amico. A nasty thought there; if Frank D'Amico had not framed Damon, there would have been no Hit Girl and therefore nobody to rescue the fledgling Kick-Ass at Rasul's apartment which equalled a very dead Kick-Ass. No matter how much he wished that Mindy could have grown up normally; it would have meant his death.

Mind you, at that point, he would die for Mindy if it meant she could live.

..._...

"Hi Dave, you look pensive," Mindy commented.

"I've been thinking . . . about your . . . about Damon," Dave replied.

"Oh, I see," Mindy said, not meeting Dave's eyes.

"I ended up thinking about . . ."

". . . What might have happened, if my Daddy was never framed?" Mindy interrupted.

"Yes," Dave replied.

"I suppose you came to the same decision, I did," Mindy said. "I lead a normal life, Kick-Ass dies."

"Yeah, crap, huh!"

"What happened, happened. I spent so long, when I was younger, thinking about 'what ifs'. It drove me around the bend. You can't play the 'what if' game, Dave; it will destroy you," Mindy said, sagely.

"I know, but . . ."

"No buts, Dave. I would never trade my life, never. If I did, I would never have met the one person, I needed, the one person I love, more than anybody else," Mindy said, tears in her eyes.

Dave sat down beside Mindy and he hugged her tightly.

"I love you so much, Mindy," Dave whispered.

The next day
Friday, May 9th

"Okay Mindy, we're going for a little ride," Dave said, pulling her up off the bed.

Mindy gave her partner a long look and then a scowl.

"You think I'm a little girl who can be fooled?" Mindy growled. "You're setting me up for something."

"Doctor Bennett wants to see you at ten, this morning," Dave explained.

"I don't need to go see a Doctor!" Mindy exclaimed.

"Okay Hit Pansy," Dave challenged. "Give me your best shot."

Dave stepped back, as Mindy lost her balance and fell into his arms.

"Hi, gorgeous," Dave said, giving her a kiss.

The glare he received was not exactly friendly, but he ignored it as he carried the swearing Mindy downstairs.

"Mindy, you cannot use that kind of language at the hospital," Dave cautioned with a laugh.

"Okay, you've made your fucking point," Mindy grouched. "I'll behave!"

Northwestern Memorial Hospital

"Hi, Mindy, how are you feeling?" Dr Bennett asked.

"Perfect," Mindy lied.

Dave coughed, and he nudged Mindy, hard.

"Headache, dizziness, and a bit of nausea," Mindy confessed.

"Chloe tells me that you're tough and you don't like showing weakness. There's a time and a place for that, but not here and not right now, young lady," Dr Bennett lectured.

"Lady?" Dave laughed. "I wouldn't go that far."

"I see," Dr Bennett said, with a chuckle. "Mindy is a bit like Chloe."

Twenty minutes later they returned to the car. Mindy had been ordered to take things gently for at least a week; orders which were not received very well. In the car, on the way back home, Dave came to a decision.

"How about a holiday, just the three of us?" Dave suggested.

"Three?" Mindy queried, a little confused.

"Just you, me, and Hit Girl!" Dave replied, smirking.

"I'm sure Hit Girl and I would very much enjoy a holiday. Is Kick-Ass coming? I find Dave a bit boring sometimes," Mindy teased.

The following day
Saturday, May 10th

Dave had picked up the SUV, just the previous day.

It was adorable and very comfortable. Marty would look after Sophia while they were gone, and Dave had called Chloe, to tell her that they were going away for a few days. Chloe had told Kyle that Mindy was busy, so he wouldn't get a lesson that week.

..._...

We had one question left: where were we going to go?

Mindy suggested that they just wing it. So, they packed a couple of bags and headed south into Indiana, towards Lafayette. The next four hours were spent driving to Indianapolis and then they found a room for three nights, in the JW Marriott. They ended up with a corner room, on quite a high floor, so the view was amazing!

Together, they had dinner in the room, that first night, so that Mindy could rest.

The next morning
Sunday, May 11th

Indiana

Mindy woke up greatly refreshed and she found that her head was no longer sore.

She knew that she was not quite healed, but it was a start. Dave ordered an enormous breakfast, again in the room. After breakfast and a relaxing shower, they both went for a walk around Indianapolis and ended up at the White River State Park, which was very refreshing, and they spent a great few hours together. They went to the zoo, where Dave started comparing Mindy to a fucking meerkat. Mindy knew that Dave said she was cute, but a meerkat was going way too far in her opinion. Typically, though, Dave compared himself to the African Lion.

"In your fucking dreams!" Mindy retorted.

"And why not?" Dave asked, innocently.

Then Dave started reeling off lion facts. The lion was intimidating, like Kick-Ass and, in the pride, the female lions were the primary hunters, like Hit Girl. Mindy had to admit that she could not argue with his logic and being compared to a lioness was a lot better than a fucking meerkat. By the time the two of them returned to the hotel, they were both very tired, but they had a shower and went to eat at the High Velocity Bar, in the hotel. The good food woke them up, considerably.

After stuffing themselves with three courses, including a warm cookie sundae which was to die for, they retired to their room.

..._...

They were no longer tired and within half an hour, they were both naked in bed and Mindy was having the time of her life.

Dave's touch sent impossible feelings through her and she just melted when he kissed her. Gazing into his eyes, she got lost in their allure and the love pouring from them. Mindy had been warned by Dr Bennett not to do anything energetic; damn! Well, Mindy thought, she would die happy with Dave inside her. No, she promised to behave, so she would behave. Instead, she resorted to less stressful behaviour and she sank down Dave's body, deciding that she was still hungry.

"Oh my God!" Dave exclaimed through clenched teeth.

He was starting to thrash, but she kept going and Dave kept thrashing. Then . . .

Wham!

Mindy felt an intensely warm, almost hot feeling as liquid hit the back of her throat. She kept her mouth wrapped around Dave, so she did not get it everywhere. Mindy was getting used to the taste and she kinda liked it. Was that weird? She had absolutely no fucking idea; but she loved it and Dave kept producing more which was even better. After a short rest, while they both allowed their bodies to recover, Dave started to explore again.

The barely receded electric shocks, started up again and when Dave touched anything tender, Mindy yelped. Dave kept targeting Mindy's breasts, which caused the most beautiful sensations to course through me, the catch being that the sensations were almost too much to endure. He would also target somewhere else, which would have Mindy thrashing about on the bed, barely able to breathe and he had to keep reminding her: 'don't forget to breathe'.

Updated: January 2018

Chapter 36*: Dreams

Two days later
Tuesday, May 13th, 2014

Indiana

"Happy Birthday, partner!"

Dave opened his eyes, slowly and he grabbed the completely naked Mindy, around the waist and he pulled her down to him.

"Thank you, gorgeous!"

Dave kissed her deeply and she responded in kind. The next hour was sheer bliss.

..._...

After that, somewhat energetic morning, they had to checkout and drive back to Chicago.

Dave thought that Mindy was fully recovered, at least from the concussion, but maybe not from their other activities. He was definitely seeing more Hit Girl in their love making. The short holiday had been exactly what they had both needed; it had allowed them both to relax and to be themselves. Dave commented that they should get away more often and Mindy agreed. The four-hour drive home was not too bad, although the I-65 was not exactly the most exciting drive. By the time they reached the I-94, Mindy was getting excited; excited to be back home.

They did stop a few times, extending the trip back, but it was worth it, and they enjoyed a lovely lunch outside, enjoying nature together.

..._...

By the time they got home, it was around six in the evening and they parked the SUV in the garage; it was a tight fit beside Speedy.

They headed into the house and Mindy was knocked down by a very happy and very over excited Sophia.

"Get off me . . . mutt . . . yuck!" Mindy exclaimed, in between licks.

"She missed you," Marty explained, laughing.

It took Mindy several minutes to push the large dog out of the way, so she could get back to her feet.

"Look, Sophia, enough of the kisses; I'm not that kinda girl," Mindy exclaimed, giggling.

"If you say so," Marty smirked. "Looked good from here, though."

Mindy scowled at Marty.

"Sorry, I enjoy a bit of girl on girl action," Marty explained, before heading off upstairs, rather quickly.

West Ridge

Later, that evening, they settled down on the couch together and Mindy gave Dave his present.

"I needed Marcus' help to get this," Mindy said, sheepishly.

Dave unwrapped the present and opened the box inside.

"Wow!" he exclaimed.

"I remembered the 'gay-looking' one that you used to fancy, dude," Mindy teased.

Dave pulled out a custom, black and green, Taser X26P. With it was another holster for his combat suit, additional cartridges, and three batteries.

"Cool! Thanks, Mindy!"

He gave her a big hug and a kiss that kept on going and going.

The next day
Wednesday, May 14th

West Ridge

Dave awoke early for once.

It was about eight. Mindy was still asleep as he could feel her beside him. He decided it was time for a bit of fun! Dave reached over, and he ran his hands across her stomach and under her top . . . What the fuck! Those were not Mindy's boobs, or if they were, they had fucking shrunk.

"What the fuck!" said a voice, from the other side of the bed.

That was not Mindy's voice . . . or was it? Dave sat up and he turned to look at Mindy, just as a fist connected with his jaw.

"For fuck's sake!" Dave shouted in pain.

"Dave?"

"Yeah," Dave replied, looking down at the bed, beside him.

..._...

It wasn't Mindy, looking back at him, well, not the Mindy whom he had last seen a few hours previously. It was a completely different Mindy, it was not even 'date ditch, Mindy'. No, the Mindy before Dave was a much younger, eleven-year-old Mindy.

"Where the fuck did you come from?" Dave demanded, blinking his eyes.

"I could ask you the same thing, asshole!" 'Mindy' replied.

"You were a bit older and a tiny bit taller, when I last saw you a few hours ago," Dave commented.

"You are not making any fucking sense," 'Mindy' said. "I went to bed last night, in my room at Marcus' house."

"So, you think you're still in New York?" Dave asked. "Try Chicago, short-ass."

"Who the fuck, are you calling, 'short-ass'?" a livid 'Mindy' asked.

"Well, you are kinda short," Dave admitted with a laugh.

However, that just appeared to infuriate 'Mindy' further.

..._...

Okay, it seemed completely impossible.

He went to sleep with a sixteen-year-old Mindy lying beside him, but then he woke up with an eleven-year-old Mindy beside him. He really had been watching too much Sci-Fi. The current Mindy appeared to be from soon after they had killed Frank D'Amico. She was very much like the younger Mindy that would terrorise him, with just a single glance. Now, though, he was no longer scared of her, of course.

"Are you trying to tell me that I've travelled through time?" Mindy asked, incredulously and a little sceptically.

"Well, the last time I saw you looking like that, it was 2009 and now it is 2014," Dave responded. "My Mindy is sixteen."

"Sixteen!? I let you share a bed with me, at sixteen!?" Mindy ranted, then she started to look worried.

"Please, tell me we haven't . . ." Mindy said, looking horrified.

"Sorry," Dave replied, smirking.

Mindy looked positively horror struck.

"You and I have . . . well, you know," Mindy said, blushing furiously.

"I know you have a small birth mark, between . . ." Dave started.

"Okay, that's quite far enough, thanks," Mindy said, holding a hand up, but then her expression changed. "This is bullshit!"

"Come on then, come see my Mindy's pride and joy," Dave suggested.

Mindy climbed out of the bed and Dave tried not to laugh.

"You have Bratz pyjamas," he said, still trying not to laugh.

"Dammit!" Mindy grimaced. "Marcus thought it was a good idea."

..._...

I headed down to the basement and showed Mindy the armoury.

She was initially speechless. She took her time examining the weapons arrayed around the walls.

"What's with all the Katana swords?" Mindy asked.

"You noticed. Mindy earned them, each and every one and you'll be pleased to hear that each ninja suffered greatly," Dave said, proudly.

"Good, at least I'm not slacking!" Mindy exclaimed. "Why are you now in Chicago, instead of New York?"

"Long story, but basically, my Mindy had to kill, to save me, as herself. She was forced to leave New York," Dave explained meekly.

"Why did you need saving, cunt?" Mindy asked, unhappily.

"An 'old pal' surfaced and killed my Dad, before coming after me," Dave went on, darkly.

"Who?" Mindy asked, curiously.

"Brace yourself! You knew him as . . ." Dave hesitated. ". . . Red Mist."

Mindy turned purple, before exploding.

"Red Mist – that bastard shot me three times, three fucking times!" Mindy exclaimed. "That fucking bastard got the drop on me – nobody gets the drop on Hit Girl, nobody!"

"Calm down, Mindy! I know you aren't a big fan of that asshole. But you'll be pleased to know that he's been cut down to size. I dropped him into a shark tank," Dave said, putting his arm around her.

It occurred to him that he would never have dared to put his arm around Mindy, back then. Why? Because she'd have ripped his fucking arm off.

"You aren't scared of me anymore, are you?" Mindy asked, annoyed.

"No, Mindy! You're still a fucking handful; a grenade with a very loose pin, but your threats of bodily mutilation have no effect on me now," Dave said laughing.

They left the armoury and headed back upstairs.

As they crossed the mat, Mindy tried to grab me, but I caught her movement. I dodged and seized her by the upper arm and threw her over onto her back.

"Fuck Kick-Ass! You've been workin' out," Mindy said, approvingly, from the mat.

"I try," Dave replied, before Mindy swept his feet out from under him.

Dave went down and he must have caught his head, because he blacked out.

West Ridge

"Dave! Dave!" Chloe's voice.

"Can you hear me, Dave; please!" Mindy's voice. The real Mindy.

Dave opened his eyes. Pain shot through his head and side. Standing above him were Chloe and Mindy, both girls had tears running down their cheeks. He was flat on my back, on the mat, at the house. He looked around, no mini-Mindy.

"What the fuck happened?" Dave growled.

"Sorry, I kicked you, a tiny bit too hard. I'm really sorry, Dave," Mindy said, giving him a kiss. "You've been out for almost forty minutes."

"Wow! I had the weirdest fucking dream," Dave said, sitting up for a moment before a thought came back to me. "Mindy, did you wear Bratz pyjamas a few years ago?"

Mindy's eyes almost bugged out, she blushed, and started to look a bit embarrassed. Chloe laughed.

"You had Bratz pyjamas!?" Chloe exclaimed, laughing. "Hit Girl had Bratz pyjamas!"

"No . . . I didn't . . . How did you?" Mindy stammered. "Dammit! Okay, yes, Marcus thought it was a good idea."

Updated: January 2018

Chapter 37*: The Week of Hell - Day 1

*Four days later
Saturday, May 17th, 2014*

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

Channel Runne Park

Everything started normally, just like any other weekend.

They got up.

They had breakfast.

Dave headed off to work for a few hours in the gun shop and Mindy took Sophia out for a walk.

All perfectly normal, normal for two secret vigilantes at least

Sophia and Mindy were walking through Channel Runne Park. The weather was good, but cool. Sophia loved being outside and she always enjoyed her walks. All was peaceful, that was until a man a few feet behind Mindy, made a strange noise before collapsing onto the grass. Mindy spun around, instantly on guard, and Sophia started to growl.

You did not need a medical degree to see that the man was dead; what looked very much like the bolt from a crossbow was embedded in the man's skull. Mindy looked around quickly and she pulled Sophia behind a tree. She started to hear screams, and then she called 9-1-1 and reported the dead man. It occurred to her to take some photos with her cell, before leaving the area, very fast.

That event had honestly scared the fucking shit out of Mindy; that could have been her, for fuck's sake, she thought.

Okay, calm down and start thinking.

Was this a contract killing? Was this just a random murder? Was this the start of something bigger?

She put a lot of thought into these questions, on the walk back home.

..._...

As soon as she was home, she started up the Toughbook and sent a text message to Murphy. They had an unwritten agreement to exchange intelligence. He would keep Fusion informed of drug dealing activity, for example, and they would pass on anything that was gathered while out and about. For the moment, Mindy advised Murphy of what had just happened in the park.

Ten minutes later, she received a response.

*Morning HG!
How the hell, did you know so fast?
I will pass on what I can. M*

Dave had taken Speedy, so Mindy jumped into the SUV with Sophia, and she drove to the Safehouse. They, meaning Marty, had setup a special, untraceable, and secure email address for Murphy to use.

In that way, they could send pictures and other information that could not be passed by text or voice.

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

An email appeared in the inbox, while Mindy was servicing her weapons.

It was from Murphy, and provided in depth details of the attack that morning. Apparently, two other people had been shot with crossbow bolts, within the same hour. The man that I had seen, he had been the second to be shot. So far, the three dead people had absolutely nothing in common.

Okay, that reduced the options from three, down to two. Was this just a random murder? Was this the start of something bigger? Unfortunately, she had a nasty feeling it was a part of the latter. Next question: would their armour deflect the bolt from a crossbow? Her combat suit and Chloe's combat suit? Probably not. Dave's combat suit? Possibly – he had heavier armour. Mindy sent a secure email to The Armourer, requesting details for a shield or similar that could deflect a crossbow bolt.

Mindy was familiar with crossbows and had a couple in the armoury; although she had not used them in years. She inspected the bolts; they were about nine inches long and very lethal. The tips varied, depending on how lethal you wanted the bolt to be. Mindy's were barbed, which meant you could not just pull them out, you had either to push them all the way through or dig them out.

Neither being a very nice option.

[Archer Kill Count: 3]

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

Mindy received a call from Dave, asking where she was.

She explained about what had happened in the park. Dave then ranted on about her not telling him about it earlier and she had to apologise, to get him to calm down; at least he cared. Mindy headed back home with Sophia and joined Dave for lunch. They discussed what had happened and she showed Dave the photos which she had taken at the park. She also explained about what Murphy had sent over via email. They both agreed to talk to Chloe and Marty, so that they would both know about the attacks. For the moment, they decided to call the perpetrator, 'The Archer'. It was the best that they could come up with, at least for the moment.

Dave and Mindy had not actually seen Chloe, since they had come back from their brief holiday. She appeared to be avoiding them, which was probably because of the run in with Chris, two weeks previously. Kyle had come over on the Thursday evening for his training and he was coming along very well. With a few more months of training, the kid would be quite skilled. Dave and Mindy discussed how they might defeat an attacker, such as The Archer. The Archer could strike anywhere, without warning, as he had already demonstrated only a few hours previously. Already, the city was starting to get concerned about the new problem.

Dave also brought up another point: Could The Archer be part of another mad plan, from Chris D'Amico?

The idiot must have worked out, by now, that his ninja plan was not quite going according to plan.

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

West Ridge

After lunch, they started training.

Mindy was still worried, but she decided to focus on the here and now. Dave did not seem too put out by the change of events, but Mindy could tell that he was concerned.

Marty came back from looking at apartment blocks and they updated him on what was going on. Understandably, Marty was not very happy, not at all. He suggested barricading themselves into the Safehouse, at least until The Archer was caught.

It was an interesting idea, though very sensible, but not overly practical.

3:15 P.M.

They received another text from Murphy.

Two more people were dead with crossbow bolt wounds! This time it was in Edgebrook Woods, which were a few miles away from the morning's attack. I sent a text back to Murphy, telling him that Fusion were on it!

Marty headed off to the Safehouse, saying he wanted to check on security! Now with The Archer around, Marcus' quip about buying an armoured personnel carrier, may not have been so far-fetched; at least a crossbow bolt wouldn't pierce that!

[Archer Kill Count: 5]

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

The two of them had had an early dinner and then headed down to the Safehouse while Sophia stayed at home.

One of the good things about the Safehouse was that they could drive straight inside and park. Marty and Chloe were already there. Marty was in the briefing room and Chloe was coming down the stairs from the bedroom, she had her combat suit on, except for the mask and comms. Something about her expression did not seem right, but I put it to one side for the moment. Mindy and Dave got changed into their combat suits, but left off their masks and comms. Mindy went off to get her weapons and Dave went into the briefing room, where he found Chloe sitting on the couch, staring at the floor. I went over and sat down on the couch next to her.

"What's up Shadow?" Dave asked.

"I'm not sure I want to go out tonight," Chloe admitted, not looking at Dave.

"I see. Get your mask on!" he ordered, getting up.

"Why?" Chloe asked, confused.

"Mask . . . now!" Dave ordered again, and he walked out of the briefing room.

Marty was giving his friend a strange look, but that was normal for Marty.

4:50 P.M.

Dave pulled on his mask and comms while Chloe was doing the same.

Mindy and Marty were over by the armoury and looking a little confused. Dave went over, and he whispered into Mindy's ear, telling her what Chloe had said and Mindy nodded, looking a little unhappy.

..._...

Shadow and Kick-Ass squared off against each other.

"I don't wanna do this," Shadow said, turning away and walking towards Mindy.

"Shadow, face me!" Kick-Ass snarled.

Shadow stopped, but she did not turn.

"Are you scared, little girl?" Kick-Ass snarled. "Are you scared?"

Kick-Ass watched as Shadow braced up and he saw her hands flex within her gauntlets. Mindy threw Shadow's Jō onto the mat at her feet. Kick-Ass smiled; Mindy had the right idea.

"Answer me, Shadow!" Kick-Ass ordered. "You lost your touch? Maybe Curtis could replace you."

Kick-Ass almost missed Shadow's legs bracing up and her ankles flexing, she was about to act.

Good.

Kick-Ass drew his batons.

5:02 P.M.

Suddenly, Shadow dived forward, seized her Jō and spun around, driving the Jō hard towards Kick-Ass' head.

Kick-Ass had made her mad. He smiled, blocked the Jō easily, and forced it down. He could see the usual fire, burning in Shadow's eyes. That fire, was what was missing earlier, when he had first seen her that evening. Shadow kept pushing forward, hard. She was really mad. It kind of reminded Kick-Ass of Mindy, when she was trying to make a point; like the previous year, when he had first asked to be trained. They fought off each attack, but Shadow was learning each time and adjusting her attacks accordingly, each time Kick-Ass fought her off. Good girl! Kick-Ass eventually managed to catch her with a baton, behind her left thigh, then he flipped her backwards, onto her back.

"You fucking green asshole!" Shadow bellowed, immediately jumping back to her feet.

Kick-Ass could not help smiling. He looked over towards Mindy and she was grinning, too. Shadow dived forward; her Jō was blurring in the air as she drove her attacks forward. Kick-Ass lost one baton and he was forced to deflect blows with his other baton and his armoured gauntlet. He decided that it was time for Shadow to come down to earth, with a bump. He fought off her next attack, jumping up, as she swung her Jō horizontally to try and trip him up. Kick-Ass drove forward, and he caught the Jō, ripping it from her grip and he threw it towards Mindy, who caught it. Shadow was not to be stopped, she swept up Kick-Ass' dropped baton and attacked again, before I stepped toward her and grabbed her arms, pinning them to her sides. Kick-Ass flipped her over and onto the mat face down, holding her right arm vertically, behind her.

Shadow screamed in pain and Kick-Ass immediately let her go, before he stepped back.

5:15 P.M.

Shadow stood up and she removed her scarf and mask.

She was grinning enormously, and that fire was still in her eyes.

"Shadow has her fire back," Dave commented as he removed his mask.

"You okay, Chloe?" Mindy asked, sounding a little concerned.

"If that fucking green asshole wants to put me down, he's gonna have to fight first," Chloe exclaimed.

"Good on you, Shadow!" Marty said, laughing.

Chloe came up to Dave and she actually gave him a hug.

"Thanks, Dave; I needed that. Killing those two men had me thinking; I was starting to judge and second guess myself," Chloe explained.

5:55 P.M.

"Dave, you got a minute?" Chloe asked, looking a little nervous.

"What is it?" he asked. "You look nervous."

"I am. A couple of weeks ago, in the warehouse . . . that man we shot at . . . Chris . . . I noticed Mindy's reaction to him and yours," Chloe said, before trailing off.

"Come on!" Dave ordered, taking Chloe over to a far corner of the mat and sitting down.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

"Chris. . . Where do I start?"

Dave hesitated.

"Chris D'Amico exists, as he is today, because of me. I became Kick-Ass and met Hit Girl, who was waging a war of vengeance, against Chris's Dad, Frank D'Amico. Chris became Red Mist and he tricked his way into my trust. Thanks to me, Mindy was shot three times and blasted out of a window, before dropping over a dozen feet. Mindy's Dad, Big Daddy and I, were seized. Search YouTube and you'll find the video of D'Amico's men torturing Big Daddy and Kick-Ass. Mindy came and rescued us, but not before my mistake had caused the death of Mindy's Dad," he explained.

"What the fuck have I told you, cunt?" Mindy growled, coming over and sitting down. "It was not, I repeat, not your fault, Ass-Kick! Dave was taken in by Red Mist and Dave was very mild mannered, back then; an easy target. I almost blew Dave away, too, later that same night. But I stopped, letting go of the trigger just before it broke. Best decision of my life."

"I thought that the psycho bitch was gonna kill me, too. She was mad, in more ways than one. She asked, in her own way of course, for help. For some reason, I decided to help and I'm glad that I did. Mindy assaulted the D'Amico penthouse, fucked it all up and she had to be rescued by yours truly," Dave said, smirking at Mindy.

"Fucker! It all went really well; four dead in the lobby, fifteen in the penthouse and then I ran out of weapons and ammunition. What a fucking stupid bitch. I was stuck cowering in the fucking kitchen. Killed a guy with a couple of kitchen knives, then I hid in a kitchen cupboard. Then this big bastard brought in a fucking bazooka, just as Kick-Ass made his entrance and what a fucking entrance. I'd given him my Daddy's jet pack which had a pair of Gatling guns installed," Mindy explained.

"Gatling guns; that must have been cool!" Chloe exclaimed.

"It was," Dave confirmed.

"Kick-Ass killed the three men, who had the bazooka, and he gave me the opportunity to fight Frank D'Amico, while Kick-Ass fought Chris D'Amico. Unfortunately, I was a little bit exhausted by then and the fight did not go well. Frank D'Amico managed to throw me down onto his desk, nearly paralyzing me. I couldn't move, then Frank D'Amico started punching me, in the face, and I kept losing consciousness. Then my knight in a green wetsuit, arrived with a fucking bazooka under his arm. He blew Frank D'Amico out the fucking window; I was so fucking relieved," Mindy explained, giving Dave a hug and a kiss.

"I had to literally scoop Hit Girl off of the desk and we made our escape, in the jet pack. I just wish that I had killed Chris back then, but if I had delayed, then Mindy would be dead. Crap choices we have to make in life," I said, feeling sad.

"Anyway, Chris resurfaced just last year, as The Motherfucker and after he killed my Dad and Mindy was forced to save my life, as Mindy Macready, killing several men, in public, we had a huge fight in his lair. I dropped him into a big tank that had a shark in it. It ate Chris, or so we thought. Mindy then left New York," Dave continued.

"We found out that Chris D'Amico was still alive, a few months back. Two weeks ago, was the first time we've spoken to him, since the fight last year. He hates Dave's guts, as Dave killed his father. But Frank D'Amico killed my Daddy and Chris D'Amico killed Dave's Dad. There are just two D'Amicos left, Chris and his Uncle Ralph. They must both die and fucking soon," Mindy said, vehemently.

Nobody said anything for a few minutes.

"Thank you, both of you, for letting me know about him. I know how much it must have hurt, dredging up all that shit," Chloe said.

"You needed to know Chloe. I'm glad we could tell you, finally; better late than never," Mindy replied.

"Okay. Now that's over, whose bike are you riding tonight?" Dave asked, wanting to change the subject.

"I'm riding 'KICK'," Chloe replied, instantly.

That proclamation generated a nasty glare from Mindy.

"Traitorous bitch," Mindy said, pulling on her mask and comms.

Chloe just returned a smug look, at Mindy's back.

Marty laughed, returning to the briefing room.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

Hit Girl climbed onto the Ducati, feeling a little annoyed with Shadow.

It had not exactly been a big surprise that the youngster had wanted to ride with Kick-Ass – but Hit Girl felt annoyed nonetheless. Kick-Ass had given Chloe specific instructions for getting on the Fat Boy, as doing it wrong could overbalance the motorcycle and that beast was heavy. Hit Girl watched as Shadow placed her left boot, on the left foot peg and swung her long right leg over the motorcycle and wrapped her arms around Kick-Ass. Kick-Ass had braced the motorcycle, using his feet, with the brakes on, while Shadow had climbed on behind him. Hit Girl started up her bike and reversed out of the parking bay. Kick-Ass did the same.

"Battle Guy, Fusion is rolling!" Kick-Ass reported over the comms and Battle Guy pressed the button to activate the exit sequence.

The lights went out and the door opened, followed by the compound gate. They both accelerated away heading west, up West 79th Street.

8:12 P.M.

Their first stop was checking up on their tame Police, neither of whom had met Shadow.

Battle Guy kept a GPS fix on Murphy's and Fellowes' cells, at all times. Currently, the two Sergeants were stopped, near a cross-section: South Pulaski Road and West 71st Street.

8:35 P.M.

As the three vigilantes approached the cross-section, they saw a Ford Explorer Police Interceptor '8760', parked off to the west of the cross-section, on an empty car park. They pulled up on either side, Kick-Ass to the left, and they pounded, gently, on the windows.

"Evening, officers," Kick-Ass snarled, good-naturedly.

"Hey, Fusion! Not seen you in a while. Who's this?" Murphy asked looking back, towards Shadow.

"This, is Shadow," Shadow growled in reply.

"Hello, Shadow. I'm Murphy and that's Fellowes," Murphy said, indicating his partner.

"Hello," Shadow growled.

"Shadow doesn't come out much," Kick-Ass stated, simply.

"We just thought we'd check and see how you two were doing," Hit Girl growled, from the other side of the car.

"Thanks, Hit Girl," Fellowes replied, dubiously. "It's good to be loved."

"Well, we won't keep you two from your doughnuts," Kick-Ass stated, as he started the Fat Boy and Hit Girl started her Ducati.

9:02 P.M.

Shadow was enjoying herself that night.

She knew she had had a rocky start earlier and that she had needed Kick-Ass to explain that to her and kick her ass. She was feeling scared, in case she had to kill again. But, if she wanted to be like Hit Girl, she was going to have to put up with the bad shit, to get the good shit; the good shit being saving innocent lives. She was also enjoying riding with Kick-Ass. Hit Girl would kill her for saying it, but the Fat Boy was way cooler than the Panigale.

..._...

Suddenly, Kick-Ass slammed on the brakes, with Hit Girl stopping just ahead. He turned to look down an alley, across the street. Shadow followed his gaze and she saw five men surrounding a woman. Kick-Ass kicked down the Fat Boy's stand and she climbed off onto the sidewalk, followed by Kick-Ass.

"Hit Girl, look after the motorcycles," Kick-Ass ordered.

"What?" Hit Girl replied, sounding annoyed. "I'm not the fucking valet!"

"Please?" Kick-Ass asked.

"Okay, asshole!"

"Shadow, they're all yours," Kick-Ass proclaimed.

"What?" Shadow said, turning to look up at Kick-Ass in surprise.

"For fucks sake," Kick-Ass snarled, impatiently. "Go! I'll be there if you fuck up."

Shadow had a feeling that he was trying to make another point. She could handle it, she thought, as an idea jumped into her mind. She advanced across the street and entered the alley.

9:08 P.M.

"Welcome to hell!" Shadow growled.

All five men turned to face the voice. None of them looked particularly put out by Shadow's presence.

"Need our help, little girl?" one man asked.

"This is your last chance to walk away," Shadow growled, trying not to sound nervous.

The men looked around, at each other, laughing. One man stepped forward.

"Are you kidding? It's five against one," The leader said, smirking.

"It's three against one," Shadow replied, correcting him.

"How do ya figure that, bitch?" The leader sneered, looking around at his pals.

"Once I take out the leader; which is you, I'll have to contend with one or two enthusiastic wing men," she growled back. "Last two guys always run,"

"You err, done this before, kid?" the leader asked, a little concern in his tone.

Shadow nodded, and the leader moved forwards.

"Remember . . . you wanted this," she growled.

The leader ran forward, drawing a large knife, which Shadow easily battered away with her Jō and followed through with a fist to his jaw. The man staggered back before coming at Shadow again, only Shadow caught him in the groin with the end of the Jō. The man sagged to the ground before she felled him with a crack to the head. Shadow looked around at the other men . . . two moved slowly away.

"Okay, now we know who's who," she growled confidently. "Let's get this done."

Shadow flew forward and brought the Jō down, smashing the lower arm of the next man, before ramming her armoured elbow into his face before she followed up with a back kick to the stomach. Another man landed a punch in her side, but she was able to catch him with a boot to the side of his knee which caused the man to scream, before a fist to the jaw dropped him. Shadow started towards the last two men, who hesitated, before they turned and ran. They ran directly towards Kick-Ass, who felled each of them with a fist to the jaw.

The woman they were hassling had gone, so Shadow re-joined Kick-Ass.

9:12 P.M.

"'Jack Reacher', really?" Kick-Ass asked, dubiously.

"First thing that came into my head," Shadow offered, weakly.

"Okay, let's get back before the valet starts getting too ratty," Kick-Ass laughed.

They returned to the Fat Boy and found a slightly ratty Hit Girl.

"Enjoyed yourselves? 'Jack Reacher', I ask you!" Hit Girl complained.

"Let's go Shadow," Kick-Ass said, mounting and starting the Fat Boy.

Shadow slung her Jō and climbed on behind Kick-Ass. They roared away, leaving a disgruntled Hit Girl to follow in their wake.

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and Midnight

The next hour or so of the patrol was uneventful, until they received another text from Murphy.

Two more were dead. Worse, though, one was a kid. Seven kills, all on his first day; The Archer was trying to make a point. That could not be allowed to continue. They were all a bit subdued and they were not chatting or winding each other up as they usually did. Battle Guy had received more emails from Murphy which included details about all seven murders.

Apparently, the guy was working to the sniper's creed: 'one shot, one kill'.

10:55 P.M.

They decided to call it a night and headed back to the Safehouse. The Archer was playing on their minds and they were not concentrating on the patrol.

The thought that a crossbow bolt could fly out of the darkness, at any time was, quite frankly, frightening.

[Archer Kill Count: 7]

Updated: January 2018

Chapter 38*: The Week of Hell - Day 2

The next day
Sunday, May 18th, 2014

[Archer Kill Count: 7]

The following takes place between Midnight and 2:00 A.M.

The Safehouse

They were all feeling very tired, once they had returned to the Safehouse, but none of them felt like sleeping.

Dave, Chloe, and Mindy, all got out of their combat suits, before getting a shower. Marty sorted out a late dinner for them all and they sat and talked at the kitchen table, while eating dinner. Marty had gone through all the information which Murphy had sent over to them. There appeared to be no pattern to the killings; they appeared completely random. Murphy had also informed them that the police, to that point, had accomplished nothing in their investigation. They finished their food and went to bed.

None of them felt like driving back home that night.

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

The Safehouse

That time Murphy called us.

Dave was awoken from a deep sleep. The cell on the table beside his bed was ringing and ringing. He answered it and put the device to his ear.

"Go!"

"The shit has really hit the fan this time, Kick-Ass," Murphy said with preamble.

"The Archer?" Dave assumed.

"No. No more killings, not up until now. The Commander of twenty-first district, he has three kids and two of them are missing. There was a home invasion around six this morning. Their mother is in ICU, their father was at the station. The third kid, well he was staying with a friend. Fuck, Kick-Ass, the two kids are only eight and nine. A boy and a girl. So far, we have no idea why they were targeted. I'll send you everything we have, when I can get it," Murphy explained. "Chicago needs your help."

"We're on it, Murphy. God, I'm sorry." Dave replied, cutting the connection.

Dave just sat there, feeling numb for almost twenty minutes. What the fuck was happening in the City? Chris D'Amico, ninjas, an archer, now the kids of a senior Police Officer.

8:30 A.M.

Dave poked Mindy hard, on her left boob.

"Ouch!" Mindy complained, rubbing her boob. "You fucking cunt!"

Dave shut her up before she could build up steam, by giving her a deep, deep kiss, which made her eyes bug out.

"Okay," Dave said. "That's the nice stuff out of the way!"

"Oh, no. Not more deaths," Mindy said, grimacing.

"Murphy called. Commander 21st District, two of his kids; they were pulled from their beds this morning. Their mother is in ICU," Dave explained.

Mindy was silent for several minutes.

"It has to be that fucking Chris D'Amico," Mindy finally said, angrily.

"I have to agree," Dave replied, reluctantly.

9:10 A.M.

After a shower, they awoke Marty and Chloe, letting them know the news.

"I'll start searching through the intel, from Murphy," Marty said immediately.

"Marty, get breakfast first; you'll work better on a full stomach," Dave suggested, then had a thought. "Could you do with a hand?"

"Wouldn't hurt; know any geeks?" Marty asked, dubiously.

Dave looked at Chloe.

"What do you think?"

"I'll call her," Chloe said, smiling. "She'll love it!"

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

The SUV stopped, and the main door closed behind it.

Abby was very wide eyed when she saw the Safehouse and especially the two motorcycles. Dave took her through to the briefing room, where her eyes stuck out about two feet. Any more surprises and her eyes would pop out and be hanging from her face.

"Hi, Chloe," Abby said. "Hi, Mindy."

"Marty, meet Abby," Dave said. "Abby, this is our uber geek, Marty."

"Gee, thanks, Dave," Marty said, pointing to another computer. "Hi, Abby, we have work to do."

They left the two talking, while the operators busied themselves with their own preparations.

Dave gassed up both motorcycles, ready for use that evening

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

Marty had found some information in one of the reports sent over by Murphy.

It was circumstantial, but it seemed to hint towards a location to the west of Chicago, near South Archer Avenue and South Central Avenue. It looked to be a large warehouse, of a similar type to that used by Chris, two weeks previously. Dave went out, in Speedy to undertake a reconnaissance.

The rest of Fusion checked their gear and looked at forming a plan for that night and it was time for lunch.

1:40 P.M.

Dave returned with photos and information on what he had found.

The warehouse was guarded, by large watchdogs, similar to those which they had fought at the warehouse, two weeks earlier. The warehouse could be difficult to storm, but not impossible. The Archer had also killed again.

That time, only one person had died, but that was still one person too many.

[Archer Kill Count: 8]

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

With lots of activity expected for that evening, the operators: Dave, Chloe and Mindy, managed a couple of hours sleep; Dave had a feeling that we would need it. Marty and Abby were still hard at work doing research and going through the information that kept coming from Murphy.

There was also another phone call.

3:50 P.M.

"Go!" said Marty.

"Who is this?" Murphy asked, confused.

"Kick-Ass and Hit Girl are busy . . . and so am I. What do want, Murphy?" Marty said, trying to sound annoyed.

"Sorry. Some urgent information for you. There seems to be another Hero in town," Murphy explained.

"Another Hero?" Marty queried.

"Yeah. The Hero was seen by a pair of officers, late last night. Masked and carrying a spear like weapon. It was dark, so we have no further details. Apparently, the Hero just nodded to the officers, before vanishing. If it had been The Archer, I'm sure he would have shot the officers," Murphy explained.

"I agree. I'll get the information to the team. Thanks Murphy," Marty replied, dropping the call.

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

"We have a new piece on the board, Abby," Marty said, explaining further.

"That might complicate things. It means the guys can't just shoot at anybody wearing a mask," Abby pointed out.

"I've just had a thought; you need a name. I'm Battle Guy, so you will need a name, too. We never use our real names when in costume, or over the comms. Think of something and let me know," Marty suggested.

"Cool!" Abby replied excitedly. "I'll think about it."

5:10 P.M.

Mindy came down to the briefing room, after a shower, to find Marty and Abby working hard.

Dave was up and in the shower while Chloe was slowly waking up.

"Hi, guys, any news?" she asked, hesitantly.

"Oh yeah," Marty replied, and he explained about Murphy's call.

"Well, that puts a new spin on things," Mindy responded.

That revelation would complicate their possible actions.

"Oh, Abby now has an alias," Marty said, smirking.

"Battle Guy wouldn't let me use my first few choices, but eventually I settled on: 'Hal'," Abby said, sounding really proud of herself.

"Hal?" Mindy asked, confused.

"Well, she originally wanted either 'Zero Cool' or 'Acid Burn', but I nixed both of those ideas, as she is not that cool," Marty explained.

"So, she went for a mad, super computer," Dave said, entering the briefing room with Chloe.

"Could be worse," Marty muttered.

Marty explained to Dave, what Murphy had said earlier.

"That's all we need; another Hero getting in the way," Dave commented.

"Anyway, dinner is almost done," Marty advised.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

They had a good meal, and got themselves caught up on what Marty and Abby had been getting up to while they had been asleep.

Dave had to admit that Abby appeared to be as much of a geek as Marty and she could be quite funny, in her own geeky way. At least it meant that Marty had help, although Abby would be getting a cab home, in a few minutes. She intended to help Marty, remotely, from home. The plan was to leave at just before eight that night and head up towards the warehouse.

They could then make a quick reconnaissance, before moving in.

7:50 P.M.

They mounted up and headed out; and as before, Shadow was with Kick-Ass.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

The warehouse

They parked up about a quarter mile from the warehouse.

The approach was slow, and they kept to the shadows, watching out for anything strange.

They also kept a good look out for The Archer and the other Hero.

9:05 P.M.

The warehouse appeared empty; there was no sign of any activity, anywhere.

They headed towards a fire escape and then up towards a door near the top of the warehouse. The door opened easily, and they headed in slowly. The inside was dimly lit. Nobody was visible. With Hit Girl leading, they headed down towards the main floor. Her cell chirped in her headset and she picked up the call.

"Go!" she growled quietly.

"It's Murphy. Something's happening; I don't know what, but stay away from the area between I-55 and Midway International Airport," Murphy said.

"Too late!" Hit Girl growled, dropping the call. "Fusion, we've fucked up!"

"What?" Kick-Ass responded.

"Murphy called. Told us to avoid this area; he doesn't know why," she replied. "I think this is a fucking trap."

She could hear activity and she could see Police Officers with rifles appearing.

"Battle Guy, Fusion is busted. The Police are here!"

"DO NOT RESIST!" She ordered. "We do not hurt uniforms."

9:25 P.M.

Surprise, surprise, Chris had set them up again.

At least nobody got fucking shot, Hit Girl reasoned. However, they did get arrested. They were each stripped of all their weapons and their hands were zip-tied, behind their backs. Hit Girl glared at anybody that looked at her. She could tell that Shadow was very frightened, but doing her best not to show it. Interestingly, the Police treated them all with respect and some of the officers actually apologised for what was happening. They were all placed, together, in the back of a Police SUV, before being driven away. At that point things got strange; Hit Girl had expected to be driven east, towards the police headquarters, but no, they seemed to be driving in large circles and they actually passed the warehouse where we had been arrested, twice!

"You lost?" she asked, facetiously.

"Just taking the scenic route," one of the officers replied, politely.

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and Midnight

Several miles west of the warehouse

About forty minutes later, they pulled into a badly lit industrial district.

The two officers climbed out and opened the rear doors.

"Out!" both officers directed.

It was strange behaviour and a bit sinister. They all climbed out, which was not easy with your hands secured behind your back.

"Up against the car, hands toward us!" one officer ordered.

They did as we were told.

The next thing Hit Girl felt, was the zip-tie being cut off her wrists; She heard the same happen to Kick-Ass and Shadow.

"Good luck, guys!" the officers said as they climbed back into their SUV and drove off with a wave.

10:34 P.M.

"Okay, what the fuck just happened?" Shadow asked.

"I have no fucking idea!" Hit Girl replied, looking at Kick-Ass, who just shrugged his shoulders.

"Battle Guy, where the hell are we?" Kick-Ass asked.

"You guys okay?" Battle Guy asked, with a lot of concern in his voice.

"The police just let us go," Hit Girl replied, incredulously.

"Cool!" Battle Guy replied.

"You better come and get us," Hit Girl suggested.

"Ten minutes," Battle Guy replied.

It was bad, very bad. Chris had tried to get them arrested and put in jail. They must have had some followers in the Chicago PD or they would have been unmasked, and behind bars, at that very moment. Hit Girl was still contemplating things, when Battle Guy pulled up in the SUV. As he was with them and they were in costume, he was wearing his Battle Guy mask.

Nobody had not seen that in a while.

10:46 P.M.

"Marty, drop us both off, at the bikes and then head home. Chloe can get changed and then you can get Chloe to Abby's. When you're done, get back to our house and arm yourself," Hit Girl said. "If we go down, I want it to be only us two and not you guys."

Marty and Chloe started to argue, but she cut them off.

"Just do as I say, please! Chloe, strip off that combat suit right now, so you aren't caught in it. Get normal clothes when Marty takes you back to our house. Marty lock the combat suit in the armoury. We'll call you, okay," Hit Girl directed, giving Chloe a hug; she could see tears in her eyes.

Battle Guy dropped Hit Girl and Kick-Ass off, close to where they had left the two motorcycles and then reluctantly drove off with Chloe.

Hit Girl and Kick-Ass mounted up and headed back to the Safehouse, taking a longer route than normal, to check for any tails.

11:16 P.M.

They were almost back to the Safehouse, when a shape shot across the road.

It was a masked Hero.

"You see that?" Kick-Ass asked.

"Damn straight!" Hit Girl replied, accelerating. "I'll take the far end of the alley!"

"No problem!" Kick-Ass replied.

Hit Girl rocketed around the first corner and headed up to the next corner. She was at the opposite end of the alley within a minute; she parked the Ducati and peered down the alley. She could not make out very much, so she grabbed her NVGs.

11:19 P.M.

Things were suddenly much clearer.

Hit Girl could make out a shape, picking its way through the alley, making a lot of effort to keep silent and keeping the shadows. Most importantly though, the person was not carrying a crossbow.

"Kick-Ass. The person does not have a crossbow. They are taking their time and heading towards me. I think it is a woman. Hold on. She's stopped to rest," Hit Girl called to Kick-Ass, over the comms. "Remember, we're not armed."

"Err. Hit Girl. Why would I need a weapon, when I have you? I'm catching up now. Twenty feet. Ten feet. I'm ready to pounce," Kick-Ass reported, cheerfully.

Hit Girl moved to block the exit from the alley. The woman saw the shadow, just as Hit Girl had intended. She turned and as expected she ran away from Hit Girl, straight into Kick-Ass.

She collided quite hard and fell back to the floor of the alley.

11:28 P.M.

Before the woman could get up, Hit Girl placed her boot on her throat.

"Don't move!" she growled as Kick-Ass glared down at the Hero.

It was indeed a woman. She was clad very simply, in an all-in-one overall, plus a simple, bandanna style mask, similar to the type Battle Guy wore. Beside her, there was a short-shafted spear. Hit Girl recognised the type, but she could not remember the name. The woman moved her hand towards the spear, before Kick-Ass placed his boot down onto her wrist, pinning it. He then bent down and seized the spear. The woman looked pissed, but strangely she did not appear scared.

"Chill. We're on the same team," the woman said. "Can I get up now? I won't run, I promise."

Hit Girl looked up at Kick-Ass, who nodded, and she removed her boot. The woman got up slowly and she looked up at Kick-Ass, then at Hit Girl.

"Hi, Hit Girl, Kick-Ass; I'm Hawk," The woman said, holding out her hand.

Neither Hit Girl nor Kick-Ass took it and neither of them said a word. Hawk was about two inches taller than Hit Girl was and obviously older; she had a much bigger chest than she had for starters. Was she jealous? Oh, for fuck's sake!

"Hi, Hawk," Hit Girl growled.

"Hi," Kick-Ass added, handing back the spear.

"Thanks," Hawk said, sounding a little surprised.

"Hit Girl, back to headquarters!" Kick-Ass growled.

"Keep safe," Hit Girl said to Hawk.

They both headed back to their motorcycles, leaving Hawk in the alley.

Updated: January 2018

Chapter 39*: The Week of Hell - Day 3

The next day
Monday, May 19th, 2014

[Archer Kill Count: 8]

The following takes place between Midnight and 2:00 A.M.

The Safehouse

Once they returned to the Safehouse, they sat down to go through what had just happened.

"Are we still going to be able to operate? Tonight, was very close. I don't care about me and I know you feel the same about yourself getting caught, but Chloe and Marty, no," Mindy said. "We made the decision to be vigilantes; they don't deserve to be banged up for life."

"At least we've met the mysterious new Hero: Hawk," Dave said.

"What do you think about her?" Mindy asked, innocently.

"Nice curves," Dave replied.

"Do you still want to have your dick in the morning?" Mindy growled, dangerously.

"I think I'm safe," Dave replied, grinning nastily. "You'd never give that up."

"Dammit! Okay, she has nice curves, and bigger boobs," Mindy admitted.

"Never noticed the boobs," Dave replied, innocently.

"Bullshit!"

"Okay, let's see what the morning brings. It can't be any worse, can it?" Dave replied, as they climbed into bed.

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

The Safehouse

Mindy woke up, showered, and she got dressed.

She was feeling down. The previous night had been crap, to say the least. She could not believe that they had allowed themselves to be conned by that complete fucking asshole, again! Marty had come by in the SUV and picked them both up. Mindy explained about them meeting the new Hero; Hawk. Marty was pleased that we had, at least, found out about that little issue.

Dave and Marty dropped Mindy off at home and went out with Marty, to get some shopping, so it was just Mindy in the house, along with Sophia.

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

West Ridge

There was a knock on the door.

After the previous night, Mindy was feeling a little apprehensive about visitors, so she looked through the spy hole first. It was an older, greying man. She opened the door, slightly.

"Yes," Mindy asked.

"I'm looking for Mindy," the man said, smiling.

"Who are you?" Mindy asked, starting to feel a little worried.

"Jack Bay," the man replied.

"You have some ID?" Mindy persisted.

The man held out an official ID, showing that he was a Chicago Police Officer. A very senior Chicago Police Officer; he was a Commander. That could not be good, Mindy thought as she stepped back, letting the man in. She had no choice, she could not fight, not right there on the porch. The man was carrying a very long and obviously heavy, blue holdall. Mindy shut the door and she turned to face the man.

"Why are you here?" she demanded.

The man just looked down at her and he smiled.

"Damn! You have a lot of Damon in you," the man said, simply.

10:06 A.M.

Mindy was speechless.

The man had just mentioned her Daddy.

"What the fuck is going on?" she growled.

"Easy, Hit Girl! Let's go sit down, shall we?" The man suggested, guiding the stunned Mindy into the living room and onto a couch.

He had called her, Hit Girl. Mindy's brain had just crashed; she could not think. The man sat down across from Mindy, placing the holdall on the floor. Sophia came over and she sat on the couch with Mindy; that was good as Mindy could hide her trembling hands in the dogs' fur.

"I've shocked you a bit, haven't I?" the man said, still smiling. "Yes, I know that you are Mindy Macready. I also know that you are Hit Girl, and I know what happened to your father; how he sought revenge on Frank D'Amico. Your father was a good friend and I never believed he was a dirty cop. Marcus came by a few weeks ago, and he let me know that you were here, in Chicago. You seem to have made your mark, along with your good friend, Kick-Ass."

Mindy was still speechless, a state which she was not used to being in, so she let the man continue; she was having difficulty taking it all in.

"I came by to return your weapons," Jack said, nudging the holdall. "Thought you might be needing 'em."

"You had us released, last night?" Mindy asked.

"Not just me. Plenty of officers were annoyed at you three being arrested. Some of the officers owe you their lives, not just Sergeants Murphy and Fellowes. Yes, I know about those two. It looks like Chicago needs Fusion, right now, and I believe in what you do. I know you do it for good, not for personal gain. That, is why you got a free pass last night. You are Damon's daughter, so I know he will have passed onto you the same honour, and integrity as he had," Jack finished.

"I don't know what to say, Commander," Mindy replied in all honesty.

"Call me Jack. Here's my number if you need me," Jack said, handing over a card. "I control the 12th District, so if you need my help in 12th District, you call me. You need help in other Districts, you also call me, as I may be able to help or at least talk to somebody who can. Now, about last night; that was set up by some dirty cops, and I hate being used by criminals. You know who was behind it, don't you?"

"Chris D'Amico, the son of Frank D'Amico. He's determined to kill us both, but mainly Kick-Ass, as he killed Frank D'Amico and made Chris lose his arms and legs. We both owe Chris, as he caused the deaths of both of our fathers," I explained.

"I'm sorry. I wish things could have been different for you," Jack said, standing. "Anyway, I'd better be on my way."

"Thanks . . . Jack," Mindy said.

"I have your number and I will call you," Jack said, as he left.

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

West Ridge

Mindy was sitting on the couch with Sophia, when Dave arrived back with Marty.

"What is it?" he asked, sensing something was wrong.

Mindy simply handed him a card, without looking up.

"He came to visit me earlier. He knew my Daddy, and he brought back our weapons," Mindy said, pointing at the holdall.

Marty seemed to sense the tense atmosphere.

"I'll get this lot down to the armoury," he said, picking up the holdall.

Dave sat down next to Mindy, once Marty had gone downstairs. She fell into him and she started sobbing, Sophia jumped off the couch and Dave hugged Mindy tightly.

12:28 P.M.

They received another call from Murphy.

Three people were down; two separate killings.

The fucking Archer again.

12:43 P.M.

Mindy had made a decision.

They needed to act, and they needed to act straight away.

They would go out at night, as apparently The Archer seemed to do most of his work during the day. They would patrol in the SUV and wear their combat suits under loose clothing. They would add their masks, comms, and weapons when needed and out of public view. Marty and Mindy agreed, so they all drove down to the Safehouse, but in two cars.

Marty drove Speedy.

[Archer Kill Count: 11]

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

As planned, they changed into their combat suits, but left off weapons, masks and comms.

Those extra items were stowed, out of sight, in the SUV. Marty had configured the cell phones to work with the Bluetooth system in the SUV, so that they could communicate while we were out.

Marty had also rigged up a radio in the SUV, so that he would be able to track the SUV's location.

2:20 P.M.

The SUV

They headed out and started a box search of the streets, spreading out from the Safehouse.

It was a lot easier during daylight; they could see an awful lot more. They stopped for a late take-away lunch at a small fast food place and they ate, sitting in the SUV.

"Hey, it's Kim!" Dave said to Mindy, waving Kim over.

"Hi, Dave! Getting a quick bite?" Kim asked.

"Yeah! Kim, this is Mindy. Mindy, this is Kim," Dave said. "She works at the gun store, started a couple weeks ago."

"Hi Kim," Mindy said, looking a little annoyed, but smiling sweetly.

Dave got the distinct impression that Mindy did not want to sit and chat with Kim, so he said that they needed to move on and said goodbye to Kim.

3:10 P.M.

"I take it, you don't approve of Kim," Dave asked, carefully.

Mindy hesitated before answering.

"I'm not jealous, if that's what you mean," Mindy replied, trying to sound uninterested.

"Mindy, you are the only woman for me. Nothing can beat fucking Hit Girl," I said and Mindy blushed.

"Okay, Ass-Kick!" Mindy replied, laughing.

3:50 P.M.

"What the fuck is that?" Mindy asked.

Dave was watching the road, so Mindy was the eyes for them both; the roads were a lot busier during the day.

"What?"

"I just saw a man pulling two young kids out of a car. They were both kicking, and the man had his hands over their mouths!" Mindy said, thinking hard.

Dave slammed on the brakes and he pulled over. Mindy pointed to the other side of the road, about sixty yards back.

"Just up that alley, beside that red brick building," Mindy explained.

Dave got out and he walked casually back down the street, before stopping to cross the street opposite the alley. There was a rusty white van parked in the alley, but the car Mindy had seen, was gone. The building appeared derelict, however there was evidence of activity near a broken door, to the far end of the building.

He headed back to the SUV.

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

The SUV

Dave explained what he had seen, to Mindy.

"I think we should investigate," He said.

"I suggest we let Murphy know," Mindy countered.

"Okay," Dave agreed.

While Dave updated Marty, Mindy called Murphy.

It turned out that Chris was up to no good, elsewhere in the City, which was taking up most of Chicago's available police resources, including SWAT. As it was only a hunch, Murphy couldn't push too hard, but he said that he would see what he could do.

4:35 P.M.

They moved the SUV to a point behind the target block.

There, they were then able to grab their equipment and move closer, to a place where they could gear up completely.

"There won't be enough space for a Katana in there. You might be okay with your Ko-Wakizashi and I can use my Tanto, but I think suppressed pistols would be best," Hit Girl suggested.

Kick-Ass pulled out his Glock 17 and he attached the suppressor. Hit Girl did the same with each of her SIG Sauer pistols.

"Ready," Kick-Ass asked.

"You actually have to ask?" Hit Girl replied, with a smirk.

"Let's go, partner," Kick-Ass snarled.

4:48 P.M.

They advanced towards the rear door and Hit Girl stood ready, while Kick-Ass opened the door, slowly.

There was nobody there. Just inside the door was a large empty room and a staircase. They could hear movement up the stairs. Kick-Ass signalled for Hit Girl to go first. He kept an eye on the door while Hit Girl climbed the stairs. Once Hit Girl was near to the top, Kick-Ass started up after her, covering their backs. He saw Hit Girl brace up.

"Contact!" Kick-Ass heard in his earpiece.

Hit Girl fired two suppressed shots and Kick-Ass heard something drop to the floor. He continued up the stairs; there was a dead man on the bare wood floor, two holes in his head and a large pistol on the floor, beside him.

"One down," Hit Girl said over the comms.

The second floor had a short corridor, with four doors off it; two to the left, one to the right, with another in front.

"Billy, what was that noise?" a voice said from the first room on the left.

The door opened, and a head appeared – Hit Girl double tapped the head. Kick-Ass burst into the room and a large man came at him with a baseball bat. He easily deflected the bat and planted his fist into the man's face, followed by a backwards kick, which sent him into the corner unconscious. Kick-Ass heard more voices, from the room to the right and they were angry male voices. He also heard a scream; a little kid's scream. He shot forward, out of the room as Hit Girl kicked down the last door on the left and he went through the door to the right, hard. There was a man directly behind the door, who was shoved back against the far wall by Kick-Ass' momentum. The man pointed his gun and fired at Kick-Ass, who simply shrugged off the impact and advanced. Another round hit him, then another, before he clubbed the man down with a baton. There was another man there, but he was unarmed. Kick-Ass punched him in the face, putting him down.

Behind the door was a chair and tied to the chair was a small boy of about eight-years-old. He was blindfolded and gagged.

4:56 P.M.

"You're safe now, Ryan," Kick-Ass said, cutting the ties securing the boy's hands and legs.

He then gently eased off the gag and blindfold.

"Stay here and stay down."

The boy looked scared, mostly at the sight of Kick-Ass.

"You're safe kid. Now, I need to go help Hit Girl save your sister," he said.

The boy nodded and crouched down in the corner.

"What's happening, Hit Girl?" Kick-Ass called, over the comms.

"I'm in the end room," Hit Girl reported. "A large man has the girl!"

"How far from the back wall?" Kick-Ass asked as he sized up the dry wall.

"Five feet. Why? You're not gonna . . ."

"Too late! One distraction coming up," Kick-Ass said, holstering his pistol and stowing the baton.

He then turned to the boy.

"Watch this!"

Kick-Ass ran at the wall, turning at the last minute and taking the impact on the heavier armour of his right shoulder blade. The drywall flew apart and Kick-Ass burst through, emerging just behind the thug and catching him with an armoured fist as the momentum carried him past. Hit Girl grabbed the girl and shot the man twice in the head. Kick-Ass heard Hit Girl over the comms.

"You're okay Megan, you're safe."

Hit Girl removed the girl's gag and blindfold.

"Hit Girl?"

"Yes, I'm Hit Girl."

"I'm Kick-Ass."

They went back through to the other room and Kick-Ass scooped up Ryan, carrying him on his left arm. Hit girl picked up Megan and they all headed back downstairs.

"Battle Guy, Fusion is clear," Kick-Ass called. "Two rescued."

"Battle Guy copies two rescued. Well done guys!"

5:14 P.M.

They exited the building via the front door.

Outside, Kick-Ass saw several people, who had gathered, attracted by the unsuppressed gunshots. A Ford Explorer Police Interceptor was heading down the street, blue lights flashing. Kick-Ass noticed the number: '8760'; it was Murphy and Fellowes. They stopped at the curb and jumped out.

"Damn!" Fellowes said, impressed. "You did it."

"Look out!" Hit Girl yelled, and Kick-Ass turned to see a blue car heading towards them, down the street.

There was a man hanging out of the right-rear window, with a small machine-pistol in his hands. Kick-Ass grabbed Megan from Hit Girl and he covered both kids with his armour. He felt the rounds as they pounded his back; both kids were screaming.

"You're both perfectly safe," Kick-Ass said as soothingly as he could.

Seconds later, the impacts ceased, and Kick-Ass heard a car crashing, further down the road. He stood up and looked around. Hit Girl, Murphy, and Fellowes were each pointing a pistol towards the crashed vehicle. All three pistols had the slides locked back on empty magazines. Then all three rapidly replaced their empty magazine with a full one. Murphy got on his radio, calling in the events. The crowd had dispersed when the shooting had begun and miraculously, nobody was hurt. But the crowd slowly reappeared and some started applauding.

"You two okay?" Kick-Ass asked the kids.

"Yeah," Ryan replied. "That was awesome!"

"Definitely," Megan agreed.

Both kids were actually smiling.

5:39 P.M.

Other Police vehicles started to appear.

"We need to get outta here," Hit Girl suggested.

"Get the kids to Murphy," Kick-Ass said, pulling out his cell. "I'll get us outta here."

5:47 P.M.

A cab pulled up.

"Cab for Kick-Ass!"

They dived in and the cab took off.

Kick-Ass called Battle Guy and asked him to go get the SUV.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

Several blocks east

They had the cab drop them off several blocks to the east.

"That was the guy you used, to follow Shadow and I that night," Hit Girl said as the cab drove off.

"Yes, it was."

They waited in an alley, until Marty appeared in the SUV, then they dived into the back and pulled off their masks and comms. They stowed their weapons and pulled on loose clothes over their combat suits.

"That was cool. Thanks, Marty," Mindy said, before giving Dave a hug and a kiss.

"Hey! No sex in the SUV!" Marty warned, as he drove back to the Safehouse.

6:48 P.M.

The Safehouse

They were safely back at the Safehouse when Murphy called.

"Wow! Commander of 21st is over the fucking moon. His kids think you guys are the best. Now, catch The Archer and the Mayor will probably give you the key to the whole damn city," Murphy said, laughing.

"Gee, thanks, Murph!" Mindy growled, uncomfortably.

"Enjoy!" Murphy said.

They sat down to dinner, feeling a little happier than they had the previous night.

They were also very tired, so they decided to head home and get some sleep, straight after dinner.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

West Ridge

Dave awoke just before ten, to find a text from Murphy.

The Archer had just killed two more people. That time though, they were both police officers on patrol. That fucking sucked.

He went back to bed, feeling just as bad, as the other night.

[Archer Kill Count: 13]

Updated: January 2018

Chapter 40*: The Week of Hell - Day 4

*The following day
Tuesday, May 20th, 2014*

[Archer Kill Count: 13]

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

West Ridge

Mindy felt like shit, when she heard about the two police officers. Marty did, too.

But it wasn't completely unexpected.

However, breakfast was a bit subdued that morning, nonetheless.

9:24 A.M.

It arrived.

Eisenhower's body armour.

It was a custom-made combat vest, based on the Special Forces Aerial Insertion Vest. The vest provided Threat Level IIIA ballistics protection, as well as protection against single and double-edged blades. It was dark blue in colour and protected Eisenhower's chest, sides and back. There was also a mask which protected her face, and head. The combat vest had a GPS tracker, so we could keep an eye on where Eisenhower went, if she was off pursuing somebody.

Mindy was excited and so was Eisenhower, once her armour was on. She instantly recognised that she was now her alter ego. Her behaviour was subtly different; she appeared more dangerous. Eisenhower was not the soft, loving Sophia.

Eisenhower was a completely different animal.

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

West Ridge

They spent the morning training with Eisenhower and letting her get used to her new combat vest.

She looked really cool with the mask in place. One slight catch was that Eisenhower did not want the mask and vest removed. It took both Dave and Mindy to remove the vest and mask, then Sophia went off to sulk on the couch.

Chloe called, during a break at school, and said that she wanted to congratulate the team on the previous night. She was really impressed and said that the team's actions were all over the newspapers. Apparently, Chloe's Mom thought that the team were really cool; especially Kick-Ass. Chloe thought that was very funny.

"Come on, let's head down to the Safehouse," Dave suggested. "We can grab lunch on the way."

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

They grabbed food from McDonald's on the way to the Safehouse.

At the Safehouse, Dave and Mindy sat down in the kitchen and they ate their burgers while discussing the activities for that evening. The intention was to head to Marquette Park and patrol that area. It was large and there was plenty of cover, plus there was the possibility that The Archer may turn up. So far, all of the deaths had occurred in or around a park. So far, Marquette Park had not been targeted.

They needed to draw the guy out and stop him, soon.

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

Dave returned from a trip to pick up a package.

It was from The Armourer and was quite large and very heavy. Inside, Dave and Mindy found several large plates, with attachments for hand grips and straps. They were ballistic plates, contained within a composite material, similar to our combat suits. There were two shields per set. Each shield was the same size, approximately ten by twelve inches in size, with bevelled upper corners, but the Type IV shield weighed in at three and a half kilos, while the Type III shield only weighed just over one and a half kilos. We had four of each shield.

The Armourer assured us that the Type III shield would stop a crossbow bolt, easily. He had included the heavier shields, just in case. Anyway, the shields would come in handy when fighting gunmen as it was a lot easier and cheaper to replace the shields than to repair the combat suits. They spent some time practising carrying the shields, to see how they would work in combat. The Type IV was too heavy for Mindy to carry, but Dave managed fine.

The only catch was knowing where and when to use the shields.

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

Dave and Mindy continued training all afternoon.

Until, however, they were interrupted by a call from Marcus. He had heard about the rescue of the two kids. He was extremely impressed by our actions and he made Mindy blush furiously, when he told her that he had never been so proud of anybody than he was of her, right at that moment. When Mindy was finally able to talk again, she told Marcus about the visit from the Commander of 12th District. Marcus explained about Jack knowing Mindy's father and that Jack had worked out who Hit Girl was, on his own.

Jack had come straight out with it, asked Marcus and Marcus' expression had answered Jack's question.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

The time for training was over.

After a meal, they started gearing up. Sophia got very excited when we brought out her combat vest and mask, but she calmed down once the vest was fitted, along with the mask. Mindy called Murphy and advised him that they would be patrolling Marquette Park.

Murphy said that he would listen out for anything happening there and let us know as soon as he could.

6:41 P.M.

Chloe arrived.

"What are you doing here?" Mindy demanded, angrily.

"I'm coming to help," Chloe replied.

"No, you are not," Mindy replied, strongly.

"I am a member of Fusion and you need my help," Chloe replied indignantly.

"You are a thirteen-year-old girl. You are too young to be out there, at least this week," Mindy replied, knowing the response that she would receive.

"You hypocritical little bitch! How dare you say I'm too young! You've been doing this since you were five for God's sake!" Chloe yelled back.

"That has fuck all to do with this," Mindy retorted.

"Hey!" Dave bellowed, causing both Chloe and Mindy to turn and face him.

"Cut it the fuck out, both of you. Chloe is a member of Fusion, simple as that and she knows the risks, almost as well as we do. We go out as a team," Dave lectured. "You okay with that Mindy?"

"Okay, Chloe, I'm sorry!" Mindy said, smiling.

"Thanks," Chloe replied, and she looked at Eisenhower. "That armour looks cool."

"It does, doesn't it?" Mindy replied, and she started explaining to Chloe the specifications of the armour.

7:21 P.M.

"Guys, got a minute?" Chloe asked.

"Always," Mindy replied.

They sat down with Chloe in the briefing room.

"Go on," Mindy prompted.

"I watched that video, online, last night. I'm really sorry about your Dad, Mindy. That really was a shit way for him to die," Chloe said.

"Tell me about it; I watched the video live," Marty said. "Back then I didn't know about Dave being Kick-Ass and thankfully, I had never met Mindy or Hit Girl."

"You took a hell of a beating, Dave," Chloe said.

"I did, but at least twenty percent of the pain didn't register as I have a few fucked up nerve endings," Dave said, grimacing.

"I have to admit, Hit Girl was seriously scary back then, but she looked really cool at the end of the video," Marty commented.

"That was kinda the plan; I had a bad-ass reputation to uphold," Mindy said, smiling at Chloe. "Those D'Amico thugs; that is why Dave and I do this, people like that don't deserve to live. Anyway, cunt, am I not 'seriously scary' now?"

"To be honest, not so much. I now see you as soft and cuddly Mindy, not the vicious blood-thirsty assassin, Hit Girl," Marty explained.

"Thanks for letting me know more about you guys, it means a lot, knowing that you trust me. It also helps me understand what we do," Chloe said.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

Hit Girl attached a slip leash, opened the back of the SUV, and Eisenhower jumped straight in, no hesitation.

Kick-Ass was driving, and Shadow was in the back. Hit Girl climbed in and they headed out towards Marquette Park where they parked up nearby and walked into the park and started a patrol, parallel to Redfield Drive which circled the park.

The complete circle was two and a half miles.

9:20 P.M.

Marquette Park

They had been patrolling for about an hour.

They were also getting a very positive reaction, and many were impressed with Eisenhower. However, the peaceful night was soon ripped apart by a gunshot, followed by a scream. Hit Girl spun around, looking in the direction of the sound, but she could see nothing, so she grabbed her NVGs and scanned again.

"I see four men, running this way. One has a gun," Hit Girl advised the team. "Come on!"

Hit Girl ran in the direction of the men, with Eisenhower beside her. Shadow and Kick-Ass were right behind.

Kick-Ass was calling in the attack to Battle Guy, as they ran.

9:24 P.M.

The four men were in a loose group, the man at the front of the group had the gun and Hit Girl assumed he was the leader.

Fusion closed on the men, who were heading towards the main road, surrounding the park. They intercepted the men just as they rounded a corner and as the first man approached Hit Girl, she stepped out with Eisenhower. The men all skidded to a halt on the wet grass. Eisenhower barked once and the man in front, raised his pistol.

"Move, bitch!" the man ordered.

Hit Girl slipped the leash.

"Schwanz!" she growled.

Eisenhower shot forward and buried her snout into the man's groin.

"Fuck!" The man yelled, dropping the gun and falling to the ground backwards.

"Fuck me!" Shadow exclaimed. "That was fucking cool!"

"Thank you for that observation, Shadow," Kick-Ass said dryly, over the comms.

"Who's next?" Hit Girl asked, ignoring Shadow and Kick-Ass.

The other three men hesitated, before turning and trying to run. But not fast enough, as Kick-Ass and Shadow moved to block their escape.

"Please stay," Hit Girl snarled.

The men froze.

"Eisenhower, drop," Hit Girl ordered, and Eisenhower whined, but she let go of her mouthful, licking her lips in eager anticipation.

"Time for a walk, guys," Kick-Ass snarled.

Hit Girl called in the result to Battle Guy as they walked the men back towards where the attack had begun. The leader was having difficulty walking; shame. They could see the lights of an ambulance flashing a few hundred yards away, so they headed in that direction.

9:38 P.M.

Once they reached the scene of the attack, they found a woman being tended to by paramedics. The woman had been shot in the left shoulder. Two police officers came forward as we approached.

"Evening officers. Four for your care, plus this was their gun," Kick-Ass advised, handing over the pistol.

"Thanks, Kick-Ass," one officer replied, cuffing the first man, while his partner grabbed the next.

A police van appeared quickly to take away all four men and within a few minutes, had driven off again.

"Thanks, Fusion," the first officer, his name tag read 'Hill', said as the ambulance drove off.

"We were glad to be able to. . ."

Hit Girl was cut off in mid-sentence as Hill fell to the ground.

[Archer Kill Count: 14]

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and Midnight

Marquette Park

Hit Girl looked down at the officer.

He was dead, with a crossbow bolt embedded in his head. Hit Girl grabbed her NVGs and looked around. The Archer could not have been very far away, and they could tell from which direction the bolt had come.

"There!" Hit Girl yelled, and she pointed to the east.

The Archer had made a mistake; the water would block his escape and force him to turn north or south.

"Battle Guy! We have The Archer in sight," Hit Girl called. "He just killed a Police Officer."

We all pulled shields off our backs. Shadow and Hit Girl carried the lighter Type III shields, while Kick-Ass had the Type IV shield. Kick-Ass and Shadow also put on their NVGs, to allow better vision.

"I have him!" Kick-Ass called.

"Me too!" Shadow added.

The Archer looked to be wearing woodland camouflage gear, making him difficult to see in the dark without NVGs. They could each make out his crossbow and he was feverishly trying to reload. He had not expected to be targeted so easily and so quickly. They ran hard in his direction, closing the gap considerably. Hit Girl skidded to a halt and she snapped off three rounds, causing The Archer to dive to the ground.

Then he came up on one knee and he aimed his crossbow.

10:16 P.M.

The bolt impacted Hit Girl's shield with considerable force, but did not penetrate.

One shot one kill? Not anymore.

Kick-Ass snapped off six rapid shots and they all heard a yell of pain from The Archer, before he ran. Kick-Ass must have hit him in the left arm, as the man made no effort to try and reload the crossbow which he cradled in his right arm. He was running to the north, towards the road. Hit Girl slipped Eisenhower's leash.

"Schwanz!" Hit Girl growled, and Eisenhower shot off into the darkness.

"Battle Guy! Track Eisenhower, she's chasing The Archer," Hit Girl advised.

10:21 P.M.

The chase was uneven.

Eisenhower closed on The Archer, who turned his head as he heard the snarling dog approach. The Archer wore a balaclava over his head, hiding his features, so no one had any idea if he was scared, or not. The dog closed and dived as the man turned around, brandishing a knife in his right hand, having slung his crossbow over his back. Eisenhower buried her snout into The Archer's groin, causing a loud scream of pain to be emitted. The Archer stabbed downwards with the knife, but the knife failed to penetrate the combat vest, however, it did cause Eisenhower pain. Despite the pain, Eisenhower never released her hold on the man's 'items'. Fusion caught up and Hit Girl placed the point of a Katana to The Archer's throat.

"Go ahead, make my day," she snarled.

The Archer stopped trying to stab Eisenhower and he dropped the knife.

"Oh, dear. Hit Girl's gone all Dirty Harry," Kick-Ass warned, over the comms.

"So, what; I like Dirty Harry films," Hit Girl growled in response. "Started watching them when I was eight."

"Figures," both Kick-Ass and Shadow said together.

"Battle Guy. The Archer has been taken," Hit Girl called, ignoring Kick-Ass and Shadow.

10:48 P.M.

The Archer was currently being seen to by a reluctant Paramedic and he was surrounded by a dozen, very angry, Police Officers.

The balaclava had been removed and underneath was a very nasty looking individual. He glared at his captors, viciously. They just glared back! None of the police officers challenged us. Many smiled and said thanks, for capturing The Archer.

Things were otherwise sombre, as the body of Officer Hill was being removed from the scene.

11:38 P.M.

The Safehouse

Fusion finally left the scene and they drove back to the Safehouse.

Their feelings were very mixed. The Archer was caught, but another police officer had died. Mindy was putting her weapons away, in the armoury, when she noticed Marty was looking very pensive. He was looking at the Glock 17 pistol that he had pulled out of the belt holster that he now wore every time he was in the Safehouse.

"What's up, Marty?" Mindy asked, once Dave and Chloe had gone upstairs.

"I know I told you that I never wanted to go out again, as a Hero, after the warehouse fight last year, but . . . I know I contribute with intel and comms, but I feel like I need to do more," Marty explained. "I sit safely, while you guys risk your lives each night."

"What you do is crucial to our activities, Marty, and I know you have courage, plenty of it. You want to be trained, fine, but don't rush into it, Marty," Hit Girl advised. "Believe me, you'll know when you're ready."

Updated: January 2018

Chapter 41*: The Week of Hell - Day 5

Wednesday

The following takes place between Midnight and 2:00 A.M.

The Safehouse

"Marty can you get Little Miss Shadow back to Abby's?" Mindy asked.

"Sure! You ready, Little Miss Shadow?" Marty asked Chloe and received a nasty scowl in return along with a nod.

"Thanks Chloe! See you on Saturday. If we need you, we'll call," Mindy said, with extra emphasis on the last two words.

"Okay!" Chloe said, getting into Speedy with Marty.

00:53 A.M.

West Ridge

As soon as we arrived home, we waited a few minutes for Marty to get back and then all three of us went to bed.

Sophia, especially was very tired and curled up on the couch in our bedroom and went straight to sleep. She had some slight bruising from the knife impacts, but nothing life threatening and she seemed to have enjoyed the evening's activities!

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

West Ridge

We all slept in, thanks to the very late return, earlier that morning.

11:28 A.M.

I woke up and jumped straight into the shower and was joined after a few minutes, by Mindy.

I had a few bruises, from the other day and Mindy helped to soothe them. We were getting quite exhausted from the continued activity over the past few days and that was taking a physical toll on our bodies.

The shit had to end soon!

11:55 A.M.

Once we were dressed, we headed downstairs and started 'brunch'.

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

West Ridge

Marty appeared and sat down with us to eat.

We would need to take Sophia out for a walk, once we had eaten. The fresh air should also do us some good.

1:10 P.M.

The three of us (yes, Marty was persuaded to come, too) and Sophia, were walking through Channel Runne Park. It was a pleasant day and Sophia was really enjoying the freedom. Dave had brought a Frisbee and we had Sophia chasing after it.

We talked about what to do next. Chris was still out there causing trouble. If seizing the Police Commander's kids and

The Archer were part of Chris's plans, then he would be majorly pissed by now.

We were the proverbial fly in Chris's ointment!

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

We decided on another daytime patrol.

As before, we changed into our combat suits, but left off our weapons, masks and comms. These extra items were stowed, out of sight, in the SUV. We executed our usual box search around the Safehouse, but didn't see much.

Ultimately we ended up south of Chicago, near I-90 and East 79th Street.

3:35 P.M.

"Stop!" I yelled.

Mindy was driving and slammed on the brakes, pulling over to the side of the road.

"Backup, slowly!" I said.

Mindy slowly reversed the SUV, back down the street.

"Stop! Look who we have!"

Looking down a narrow alley between two properties, I saw a familiar Hero and she was fighting two men.

"Go!" Mindy ordered.

I climbed into the back of the SUV and quickly put on my mask and comms, before grabbing my batons, Glock and Taser. The building directly beside us was abandoned and the front yard was overgrown, so I dived out of the SUV and behind a bush. I moved to the alley and peered down it. The two men were between me and Hawk. Behind the Hero, I could see two more men, coming down the alley.

"Hit Girl, get around the back! Two more heading down," I called over the comms.

"Moving out!"

I heard the SUV accelerate away, then I climbed over the security gate, landing behind the two thugs.

"Howdy cunts!" I snarled.

The two thugs spun around and I could see a relieved grin on Hawk's face.

Neither thug was armed with a gun, but they wielded knives. I waded in and smashed the head of one thug, against the wall of the building, on the right. He dropped hard. The next thug tried to fight, but the alley was tight and I slammed an armoured elbow into the thugs face, putting him down. Hawk was fighting the newer pair of thugs and I could tell that she was getting tired.

"My turn!" Hit Girl growled, appearing at the far end of the alley.

One thug spun around and ran at Hit Girl, who effortlessly put the thug down, before literally walking over him, towards the remaining thug. Before Hit Girl could reach him, Hawk put the last thug down, with the shaft of her short spear, to the side of his head.

3:46 P.M.

"You okay, Hawk?" I asked.

"Thank you, Kick-Ass!" Hawk replied, sounding out of breath. "And thank you, Hit Girl!"

"No problem!" Hit Girl replied, smirking.

"I didn't know you guys came out much, during the day!" Hawk said.

"It's rare, but we do like to keep an eye on what's going on!" I responded. "Hit Girl, back to headquarters!"

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

"Well done with the plates. Smearing them with mud was a good idea!" I said, as we drove away from the area.

"Thanks! What's with the 'Hit Girl, back to headquarters', thing?" Mindy asked. "You've used it a few times now."

"Your Dad used it, the first night we met," I admitted. "It sounded kinda cool!"

"Yeah... Well, sometimes, what Daddy thought was cool, sorta wasn't!" Mindy admitted, grimacing. "A lot of the things he said, didn't always make sense. Like 'Ass-Kick!'"

"But I thought you liked 'Ass-Kick!'" I replied, grinning at Mindy.

"You are such a dork!" Mindy replied, shaking her head and laughing.

4:45 P.M.

"So what do you think of Hawk's fighting skills?" I asked.

"They suck, big time! She has some basic skills, but they seem to be more of a defensive measure, than offensive. She's definitely no threat to us, but I intend to keep my distance from her," Mindy replied. "At least for now."

The rest of the patrol was uneventful, so we decided that it was time to head back to the Safehouse.

When we got back, Marty was busy getting himself setup for the evening's activities. The Archer was gone, but we still had Chris and his crackpot henchmen to contend with. Mindy went off to train for the evening, while I headed upstairs for a shower.

5:12 P.M.

When I got back downstairs, Mindy was back-flipping across the mat. Now that girl was really flexible!

"You showering before dinner? Cause I think you're gonna need it!" I needed.

"Cunt!" Mindy yelled back, before cart wheeling toward me. "Okay, I'll go shower!"

It was at times like that, that I knew I was the happiest man on the planet, with the hottest girl, and that girl was Hit Girl!

I went upstairs, with Marty, to get dinner ready.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

Dinner was good and Mindy always looked hottest with her hair up!

We cleared up and headed downstairs to gear up. I couldn't resist giving Mindy a big kiss, as she passed me and she giggled. She might be hot, but she could also be a little strange!

I checked out the two motorcycles, to make ensure that they were both gassed up and ready. As I entered the armoury, I saw Mindy polishing her twin Katana swords and the Tanto.

"You think we're gonna need them, this evening?" I queried.

"You never know, that bastard is totally unpredictable!" Mindy replied, angrily.

I knew Mindy was referring to Chris and she was right! I pulled out my Ko-Wakizashi blades and set to polishing them, before checking my Glock and ensuring that my Taser was charged.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

The safe house

Time to depart!

"Fusion is heading out!" I called to Marty, as we started the Fat Boy and the Panigale.

"Battle Guy copies Fusion is heading out!"

8:35 P.M.

We were cruising near to the east of I-90, when we got a call from Marty.

"Murphy called; there's trouble at East 31st Street and South Martin Luther King Drive. He didn't go into detail, but I think the ninjas are back!" Battle Guy reported.

"We're on it!" Hit Girl responded, accelerating.

We were heading east on East 31st street. As we approached the junction advised by Marty, we turned left and then all hell broke loose.

South Martin Luther King Drive was an eight-lane strip, with a grass median, that had trees along it. Ahead of us were ninjas, well over a dozen of them, plus beyond them were watchdogs, their sole purpose to guard them.

As we headed up the street, side by side, a shape ran into the road and went down on one knee. It looked like The Archer; he had a crossbow! Were there two of the bastards?

He aimed at Hit Girl and fired...

8:43 P.M.

I watched as Hit Girl swerved to avoid the bolt, but she was hit and came off the back of the Panigale.

"Hit Girl is down, another archer!"

Luckily we weren't going that fast, but still the Ducati skidded across the road and flipped over once, before impacting the median. Hit Girl rolled across the road, before coming to rest beside a parked car. As soon as I saw Hit Girl come off the Ducati, I skidded to a halt, veering towards her, as she rolled across the road. I jumped off the Fat Boy, laying it down on its side.

I pulled out my Glock and sent several rounds down the drive, towards this other archer. I heard a yell and saw the archer go down. The ninjas turned and headed in our direction.

Then, I turned my attention to Hit Girl.

She was on her side, not moving, but the combat suit seemed intact and seemed to have protected her, but her helmet was badly gouged and scratched to hell. I opened her visor and was relieved to see Hit Girl grinning up at me, but she was in obvious pain.

I looked down her body and found where the bolt had hit her. It had impacted her lower arm just below the elbow. The bolt had pierced the composite material of the suit and passed clean through! I quickly ripped open a vial of anti-septic and poured it into the wound, causing Hit Girl to scream out, I then wrapped a field dressing around the wound.

"Can you fight?" I asked, looking up at the advancing ninjas. "Cause you're gonna need to in about forty seconds!"

"I'll manage!" Hit Girl said, getting up slowly, before pulling off her damaged helmet and throwing it off to one side.

"Battle Guy, Hit Girl is wounded, but okay!" I called. "Fusion is engaging the ninjas!"

8:56 P.M.

We engaged the ninjas.

Hit Girl could only use one Katana, but seemed to be managing okay. I was slashing my way through the ninjas with both of my Ko-Wakizashi. Blood was flowing and Hit Girl seemed to be in her element! The adrenalin would help her.

As before, the watchdogs were defending the ninjas from the Police. I could hear lots of gunfire, but this time I could hear heavier gunfire, from rifles. The ninjas were falling, before us, but not as fast as I would have liked.

I came face to face with one ninja, bent on revenge for his colleagues and he pushed hard, repeatedly hitting my armour, before I was able to fight off his attack and drive a blade into his stomach and then letting him sink to the blood spattered roadway. I saw Hit Girl receive a hit to her wounded left arm, causing her to yell out and she was pushed down. I surged forward in anger and severed the head of that ninja, sending it flying.

Suddenly another ninja stopped in mid-attack, he had a spear tip jutting through his chest, which was swiftly pulled back out. As the ninja dropped, he revealed a grinning Hawk who span around and hauled Hit Girl back to her feet.

"Just wanted to return the favour!" Hawk shouted.

"Please, join us!" I snarled back with a nod.

"You okay, Hit Girl!" I called over the comms.

"Yeah... I'm fine..." Hit Girl replied, but she didn't sound okay and she was starting to look pale.

9:12 P.M.

There were about eight ninjas left, but I saw quite a few watchdogs running towards us to help the ninjas! As the watchdogs got close, they started to shoot at us, but then the watchdogs started to fall and I saw Police Officers, some in riot and SWAT gear attacking the watchdogs with AR-15 rifles and pistols. I turned my attention back to the ninjas, slaughtering them with renewed energy.

This had to end soon, as I could see Hit Girl was struggling; she must be losing blood from the wound. Hawk was actually doing pretty well, considering! There was more to Hawk than you would think. I slashed the stomach of another ninja, before fending off a blow from a Katana with my gauntlet and driving a blade into the chest of that ninja.

But as the last ninjas fell, so did Hit Girl!

9:24 P.M.

I ran over to the fallen Hit Girl, stowing my blades.

I think she must have fainted, as a minute or two later, her eyes opened and she smiled. I made a decision.

"We need a Paramedic!" I shouted to a Police Officer.

"Yes, sir!" The Officer replied instantly, grabbing his radio.

A worried looking Hawk knelt down beside Hit Girl as a Paramedic appeared and started removing the field dressing, before examining the wound.

"It's a through and through, I'll suture the wounds closed. Keep them clean and they'll heal completely," the Paramedic said.

I removed Hit Girl's left gauntlet and pushed up the arm of her suit, to allow better access for the Paramedic. While the Paramedic went to work, I got up to check on what was happening around us. There were a lot of bodies scattered down the roadway. Police and Paramedics were everywhere and I could see some dead Police Officers, too. Damn! Murphy appeared and I explained what had happened. He said he would arrange for Hit Girl's wrecked Ducati to be taken away.

When I returned to Hit Girl, the Paramedic was applying a bandage to the wound.

"Thanks!" I said.

"No problem, Kick-Ass!" The Paramedic said, packing up his equipment. "It's an honour!"

I helped Hit Girl back to her feet.

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and Midnight

"Hawk, can you help me get Hit Girl onto my motorcycle?" I growled.

"Of course!" Hawk replied, with concern in her voice.

I helped Hit Girl over to the Fat Boy and while Hawk supported the weakened Hit Girl, I picked the motorcycle up, before mounting and bracing the beast. Hawk helped Hit Girl onto the seat behind me, before retrieving Hit Girl's helmet and helping her to put it on.

"Hold tight, Hit Girl!" Hawk said, in a concerned voice.

"Thanks, Hawk!" I growled.

10:24 P.M.

The Safehouse

I drove back to the Safehouse slowly, ensuring that Hit Girl kept a tight hold on me.

Once I'd parked and the Safehouse doors were closed, Marty came running towards us and caught Hit Girl, as she fell backwards. I climbed off the Fat Boy and helped Marty remove her helmet, before we carried Mindy upstairs.

Marty went back downstairs, while I stripped the combat suit off of Mindy. I got her into bed and left her to rest. I went back downstairs and explained to Marty exactly what had happened, including our meeting up with Hawk again. I could see that Marty had something on this mind, but didn't want to get into it, tonight.

Updated: June 2015

Chapter 42*: The Week of Hell - Day 6

Thursday

The following takes place between Midnight and 2:00 A.M.

West Ridge

I didn't get to bed until well after midnight.

Mindy was asleep. I had checked the bandage and it seemed okay; no blood was leaking out at least, but she did still look very pale.

I felt shattered, so crawled in beside Mindy and fell asleep.

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

West Ridge

I awoke soon after eight and sat up, in bed.

My left arm was throbbing, painfully. I felt the bandage, but couldn't remember getting hurt. But it still fucking hurt! I felt an arm wrap itself around my waist and Dave started nuzzling my neck. That incredible feeling, it helped to distract me from the pain in my arm. I started to giggle, as Dave's lips were tickling me!

"You okay, gorgeous? I was a bit worried about you last night, you fainted once we got back here," Dave asked.

"I think so. I'm starting to remember the events of last night," I said. I remembered getting hurt and crashing my Ducati – that thought hurt more than my arm!

"We owe Hawk, too. She came to help fight the ninjas and she helped me with you, when you collapsed," Dave said.

"I'll remember to thank her," I replied. "I need a shower!"

"Yes you do!" Dave confirmed, smirking.

8:44 A.M.

The shower made a big difference; I felt human again.

I examined my combat suit and the damage. I would need to order a replacement top and I needed to do it that morning. I got dressed and headed downstairs, as I was feeling very hungry.

"Hi Mindy!" Marty said.

"Morning!" I said, in reply, sitting down at the kitchen counter.

Dave dumped a plate, piled high with bacon and eggs, in front of me.

"Thanks Dave!"

09:48 P.M.

"You think you can still fight?" I asked Mindy.

"We don't have a choice; I must fight," Mindy replied.

"Well, get some rest and let your body recover. I mean it!" I lectured.

"I really love you, Dave!" Mindy said, hugging and kissing me.

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

I spent an hour and a half walking Sophia, which did us both good!

The previous night had really worried me; I had almost lost Mindy. Thank God she wasn't hurt badly. I knew we took these risks every time that we went out, but I could not lose Mindy, not again.

At least running around with Sophia helped to distract me from the shitty week.

It really was turning out to be the week of hell!

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

West Ridge

When I got back home, Sophia went off to get a drink and doze on the couch.

Marty had already left in Speedy; he said he had some things to do and then he would meet us at the Safehouse, later that afternoon.

I headed upstairs to check on Mindy. She was still sleeping. I loved watching Mindy sleep, she looked so cute and no, watching Mindy sleep was not creepy!

13:02 P.M.

I woke Mindy.

She responded by pulling me into a kiss!

"You must have slept well; your hormones are definitely well rested!" I responded.

"You got a problem with that, Ass-Kick?" Mindy asked, seductively.

"Right now? Not really!" I said, letting Mindy continue with her feelings.

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

West Ridge

We sat down for lunch.

We were both in need of sustenance, after the morning's exertions!

Once we had eaten, we headed down to the Safehouse, in the SUV.

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

I received a surprise call. It was on the Fusion number.

"Go!" I growled.

"You can drop the 'growl', young lady!" A voice said and I recognised Jack Bay.

"Okay," I replied, dropping the 'growl'. "What do you want?"

"We think we have pinpointed Chris's headquarters. We intend to assault it, tonight. Considering what we have been facing over the past week, some have requested your team be present. SWAT, specifically, want your input," Jack explained.

"We can do that," I replied, a little surprised.

"If they only knew how young you really were! They know you're young, but not how young. If they knew, Kick-Ass would be fighting them off you!" Jack laughed.

"Where and when?" I asked, ignoring the last comment.

"I'll text you, in the next half hour," Jack replied. "Thanks."

4:22 P.M.

"Dave, Marty! We have a tasking!" I called.

"What?" Both asked, as I sat down in the briefing room.

I outlined what Jack had said.

"Let's get geared up!" Dave said.

4:41 P.M.

As promised, a text arrived, with a time and a place.

"Marty, email coming through showing Chris's HQ and our meeting up point. We meet up at 19:45," I said.

Within a few seconds an email arrived, with the exact location of Chris's HQ: It was off South Princeton Avenue and backing onto I-94 and I-90, in south Chicago. We would meet the Police, a little over half a mile away at a warehouse, so we could all meet without tipping off Chris. Very few knew about our involvement to prevent leaks.

"Okay, the building has three stories and has the Green Line running directly behind it. You'll need to leave here by 19:30," Marty said.

The rest of the afternoon was spent training and getting our gear together.

This was going to be a major operation, so I decided on some heavier fire power. We would have our usual equipment, but this time I opted for the H&K G36C assault rifle. It was light and packed a good punch. I had shown the weapon to Dave some time previously, so I gave him a quick refresher.

I took eight thirty-round magazines, while Dave carried twelve.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

I had to admit, I was feeling nervous.

Teaming up with the Police – now that was something new!

We ate a good meal and finished getting ourselves geared up. We each had a bandoleer, loaded with magazines, which was quite heavy. We would have to travel on the Fat Boy, as my Ducati was wrecked.

7:28 P.M.

We were ready to leave.

We had checked, double-checked and triple-checked, everything. Marty performed a security sweep, with the cameras and then Kick-Ass accelerated out of the Safehouse, heading north.

7:43 P.M.

We approached the warehouse meeting place.

The roller shutter went up, when we were twenty yards away and we drove straight in. In front of us were a pair of SWAT vehicles and several men in body armour; they waved us over. Kick-Ass parked the Fat Boy and we dismounted before heading over.

"Welcome! I'm Matthews, Team Leader," One SWAT Officer said, holding out his hand.

"Hi guys!" We both said and shook hands with all of the SWAT Officers.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

CPD Warehouse

We spent the next thirty minutes, or so, going over the assault plan.

We chatted through the plan, making a few changes. It was interesting that the experienced SWAT team were actually listening to a sixteen-year-old girl! But I supposed that my actions and previous accomplishments spoke for themselves!

An assault plan was agreed on.

A four-man SWAT team would gain entry, via the main door on the first floor, while Fusion would assault from the side entrance. cursory surveys had shown that the first floor was used only for storage. Chris was believed to use the second floor and there were two staircases. One from the front and one from the side. The third floor was also believed to be storage and would be assaulted via a fire escape, by the second four-man SWAT team, who would then gain entry to the second floor, by the staircase.

Battle Guy would act as the communications go-between and would be able to talk to both Fusion and SWAT.

8:15 P.M.

Chris's HQ

We assaulted the building, simultaneously.

It was dark and between Fusion and SWAT, we took out the four patrolling watchdogs, silently.

With a resounding crash, all three entry points were blasted open and we moved in. We gunned down any opposition, as we entered and went up the stairs. As expected resistance was strong. All three teams met up on the second floor, having waded through several watchdogs, per team.

We found ourselves pinned down in a large open area, when many more watchdogs appeared from another part of the building and cut off all access to the stairs off the second floor.

8:27 P.M.

Chris's HQ

It looks like we might have fallen into another one of Chris's traps.

The watchdogs were well armed and seemed to have plenty of ammunition, which we did not!

"Battle Guy! We're pinned down by Chris's watchdogs! Fusion and SWAT are pinned down, we're gonna need help and more ammo!" I called.

"Battle Guy copies!"

What a fucking predicament!

Kick-Ass and I were caught on the second floor, with the eight SWAT Police Officers and surrounded by Chris's men!

The bastard must be loving this, if he was watching.

8:51 P.M.

Chris's HQ

The fight was not going well.

We were pinned down and running low on ammunition. The SWAT Officers nearby seemed to be in the same predicament and were doing their best to conserve ammunition. The escape route behind was blocked by about a dozen watchdogs with automatic weapons. The way forward had over two dozen watch dogs, again armed with automatic weapons.

I was firing single shots with my H&K G36C assault rifle. I was down to three, thirty-round magazines and Kick-Ass was down to four, thirty-round magazines. The SWAT Officers were using AR-15 rifles and were down to their last magazines, too.

Time to call in.

"Battle Guy! Things are not getting any better! We need backup and ammo!" I called over the comms.

"We're working on it!" Battle Guy responded, sounding out of breath.

"We?" I called back.

"Never mind!" Battle Guy responded.

9:01 P.M.

The Safehouse

"That the last?" I asked, feeling exhausted.

"Oh yes!" Marty said, breathing heavily.

"You look good, Marty!" I said, checking out Marty's, 'Battle Guy' costume.

"First time I've worn this in quite a few months! I never intended to wear it again, but needs must!" Battle Guy responded.

"Let's roll, Battle Guy!" I said, climbing into the SUV.

9:17 P.M.

Chris's HQ Second Floor

"Hit Girl, this is Battle Guy! You'll have backup in ten minutes, can you hold?"

"Do we have a choice?" I replied, grimacing.

"If anybody can, Hit Girl can!" Battle Guy replied.

I slithered over to the nearest SWAT Officer.

"Ten minutes! We must hold!" I shouted and the SWAT Officer acknowledged, passing on the message.

The SWAT Officers were down to their very last magazine each and I was in the same position. Kick-Ass was just inserting his last magazine too. I looked up; I could now hear shooting, from the floor above us.

9:28 P.M.

Chris's HQ Third Floor

Bullets were flying everywhere.

As we headed up to the third floor, via the fire escape, we could hear the shooting on the second floor. We continued past, up to the third floor and as we entered the floor, we came under fire. Marty pulled his Glock 17 and shot the first two watchdogs before Murphy and Fellowes were able to provide covering fire, with their AR-15 rifles. Marty and I shot the remaining watchdogs on the third floor. We gathered together the loads that we had lugged up the fire escape then Marty pulled out the industrial disc cutter from its bag and started it up, before digging into the floor.

9:33 P.M.

Chris's HQ
Second Floor

"What the fuck!" I shouted, hearing the screeching coming from over our heads. The SWAT Officers were also looking upwards curiously.

Suddenly, the ceiling gave way, almost directly over my head! I looked up and saw a ragged two-foot by two-foot square.

"Hi!" Shadow yelled, happily, through the hole. "Catch!"

Where the fuck had that little bitch come from?

Shadow and somebody else started dropping down equipment. First came three heavy packs, followed by two tins of 5.56-millimetre ammunition, each holding one thousand rounds, plus two more ammunition tins. While I was guiding the equipment down, Chris's watchdogs started to target me. Shadow hung down from the hole and started firing her pistol into the watchdogs.

I opened the first two packs and found ready loaded magazines for our G36C rifles, as well as some grenades. I dragged two tins of ammo over to the SWAT team.

"Hey! Can you make use of these?" I asked, smirking.

The Officer's eyes bulged open at the sight of two thousand rounds of life-saving ammunition.

"Fucking hell, Hit Girl!" The Officer yelled, pulling the lid of one tin open and throwing the boxed rounds out to his team, who started loading magazines, as quickly as was humanly possible.

Kick-Ass loaded a fresh magazine and opened fire, on full automatic, keeping the heads of the watchdogs down, while the SWAT guys reloaded.

9:38 P.M.

Chris's HQ
Second Floor

"Fire in the hole!" I yelled and threw a pair of hand grenades, towards the larger group of watchdogs, in front of us and ducking down quickly.

There was a pair of deafening explosions and some of the watchdogs were no longer shooting, but there were still quite a few left! I looked up at the hole, above me and grinned at not just Shadow, but Battle Guy, in his full costume and a grinning Murphy, holding an AR-15 across his chest. Damn! This was the first time that we were all in combat together, fighting side by side with the Chicago PD!

Two of the SWAT team looked up in surprise at the explosions and their expressions quickly changed to approval, before they went back to their frenzied magazine loading. The SWAT Officers started to fire again, so I opened the third, longer pack, pulling out one of my latest acquisitions and passed it to Kick-Ass. Kick-Ass put down his G36C and picked up the much bigger weapon, before pulling open another ammunition tin. This time the ammunition wasn't boxed, it was in two hundred-round belts. Kick-Ass loaded the first belt and stood up, opening fire on the watchdogs in front, with the H&K 121 machine gun at his shoulder. The first belt was gone in about forty seconds, with Kick-Ass sticking to short bursts, to prevent the barrel overheating.

The SWAT guys were very impressed by our display of fire power! The watchdogs, however, were not, as Kick-Ass was pretty accurate and anyway, the 7.62-millimetre rounds cut through any protection the watchdogs were using!

9:51 P.M.

Chris's HQ
Second Floor

When only four of the watchdogs in front of us remained, Kick-Ass turned his attention to the other watchdogs, who were blocking the stairs to our rear. Several fell under the onslaught from the machine gun. The machine gun fire finally ceased, as we had used up the four available belts of ammunition. We had agreed a course of action with the SWAT. At an agreed signal we would attack the remaining watchdogs and put an end to this.

"Hey, Kick-Ass!" Shadow called down. "Catch me!"

"What?" Kick-Ass asked, looking up.

"Catch me!" Shadow called again.

Kick-Ass put the H&K 121 down and held his arms out. Shadow dropped down from the floor above and was caught by Kick-Ass.

"Thanks Kick-Ass!" Shadow said, with a chuckle, as Kick-Ass dropped her to the floor.

9:55 P.M.

Chris's HQ
Second Floor

"Are we ready?" Kick-Ass bellowed.

We got a thumbs up from SWAT.

"Go!" Kick-Ass bellowed.

At the agreed signal, Fusion and SWAT, stood up and advanced on the two groups of watchdogs, pouring bullets into the enemy.

9:59 P.M.

Chris's HQ
Second Floor

The last watchdog finally fell and silence descended on the building.

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and Midnight

Chris's HQ

Everybody literally sagged, once the firing had stopped.

Everybody was exhausted; Kick-Ass, Hit Girl and SWAT! We had seized Chris's HQ, but as usual the fucking bastard had escaped! The SWAT leader came over and shook hands with Kick-Ass, before giving me a kiss! I was shocked, but a little pleased and felt myself blushing.

"Thanks Hit Girl; you saved our lives! Without that ammo, we were fucking history!" The SWAT Team Leader said, smiling. "Sorry Kick-Ass! You can kick my ass, all you want, but it was worth it to kiss Hit Girl!"

"No sweat!" Kick-Ass said, graciously, then more seriously. "Just don't get in the habit of it!"

The SWAT Team Leader laughed, before he shook hands with Shadow and then Battle Guy, who had come downstairs accompanied by Murphy and Fellowes. Battle Guy actually looked good in his costume. Kick-Ass and I hadn't seen him in it since the warehouse fight, the previous summer. He was wearing a pistol belt and holster, with his Glock 17 pistol.

"You look pretty cool, Battle Guy!" I said, approvingly.

"It's a one off, Hit Girl! But I'm glad I could help." Battle Guy replied, smiling. "It felt good, though, I got to kill several of the bastards!"

10:32 P.M.

We packed up our gear and loaded to the SUV.

I was impressed! The SUV had had its plates swapped and they now read 'FUSION'! I had been a bit concerned when I first saw the SUV, as somebody might try to trace the plates. Marty had also covered up the visible VIN numbers. We really needed to get a proper SUV for Fusion operations.

We actually received a hell of a send-off by the Police Officers and SWAT. Marty dropped Kick-Ass and me off, to pick up the Fat Boy, before heading back to the Safehouse with Shadow.

11:25 P.M.

The Safehouse

Once back at the Safehouse, I turned to Shadow.

"What the hell, were you doing there, young lady?" I asked, pulling off my mask and comms.

"Marty called me. He said that he needed help and that you and Dave were in trouble!" Chloe explained, pulling off her mask and comms, before clearing her pistol and stowing the weapon in the armoury.

I followed her, watching as she handled the weapon both safely and correctly. I was impressed; Chloe never made a mistake with firearms. I really couldn't be mad with her; her help had been much appreciated!

"Thanks, Chloe!" I said, pulling her into a hug and getting a hug in return.

"Yeah, thanks, Chloe. You did really well and I enjoyed you dropping in!" Dave said, grinning.

"We'll drop you off on our way home," I said, looking at Dave, who nodded.

11:45 P.M.

We were all back in our normal clothes and the SUV had the correct plates.

"Marty! I'm going to get you some proper SWAT gear to wear, plus a proper mask," I said. "No argument!"

"Okay!" Marty allowed. "Just for emergencies though."

Marty drove Speedy and took Chloe home, while Dave and I took the SUV.

Updated: June 2015

Chapter 43*: The Week of Hell - Day 7

Friday

The following takes place between Midnight and 2:00 A.M.

West Ridge

It was good to be home.

We were all fucking knackered, but we were also glad to be alive. Once we were in bed, Dave and I started to chat about the night's events.

"We owe Marty and Chloe!" I said.

"Damn straight! But what can we do to thank them? Chloe has proved that she can more than take care of herself and that she can be very useful, as a full member of Fusion and an equal partner," Mindy said. "I'll have to think of something for them both."

"We might be dead right now, without them!" I admitted.

"Anyhow, you looked fucking cool with that machine gun; you really fucking kicked ass!" Mindy said, giggling.

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

West Ridge

Yet again, we were so tired, we slept in.

Over breakfast, we discussed the previous night's actions. It was a great experience, fighting side-by-side with SWAT and it was the first major gun battle that I'd fought. The Gatling guns didn't count! We also discussed what we expected to be facing next. Chris was losing his hold on Chicago, or at least we hoped so!

Marcus had been on the phone again, wanting to know what was happening, as apparently it had got out that Hit Girl had been injured! Mindy assured him that she was fine, but apparently Marcus didn't believe her, so Mindy threw the phone at me in disgust.

"You speak to the stubborn old git!"

"Hi Marcus! Little Miss Adorable is in good health. She has a small hole in her lower left arm, but nothing serious and she was checked out by a Paramedic at the scene. It was another archer, he fired a bolt at Hit Girl, but only hit her in the arm. Unfortunately she came off her bike and the Ducati was wrecked. She fought well, though; you know how stubborn she can be! She wouldn't let a simple wound get in her way!" I explained, ending with a laugh. Marcus had to agree with that! At least I was able to put his mind at rest about Mindy. Once Marcus was gone, I updated Mindy on the call.

"Marcus says you are a stubborn little bitch, who needs her ass kicked and if you don't behave he'll come and kick it, himself!" I said.

"I'd like to see him try!" Mindy exclaimed, without thinking.

"You'd actually hurt Marcus, to stop him kicking your ass?" I queried.

"Dammit! Of course not!" Mindy grumbled, blushing slightly.

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

West Ridge

"Well somebody needed to kick your ass!" I laughed, looking down at Mindy, who was looking very annoyed with herself, as she sat on the mat.

"Thankfully, not very many people can," Mindy grouched. "That hurt, cunt!"

"You heal quickly, stop complaining and you're still gorgeous, whether or not your butt is bruised!" I laughed.

"You know what infuriates me about you the most? That I can't stay infuriated with you!" Mindy said, laughing, too.

1:04 P.M.

I sat down and prepared a secure email to that horrible man, The Armourer.

He might make my skin crawl, but he had always supplied the best equipment, which so far, had kept us all alive. I had ordered a new combat suit top for myself, as well as a surprise for Chloe and something else for Marty. I have also taken the opportunity to order a new upper, outer-suit for Dave, as his current armour has taken a lot of abuse and while it does not show any evidence of damage, it would only be able to take so much, before it failed. I would not let that happen, Dave was far too precious to me.

I would rather be penniless, than without Dave!

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

We didn't know it, but the rest of the day would be a roller-coaster ride, with one hell of an ending!

2:34 P.M.

We were at the Safehouse, with Sophia. Marty was downtown somewhere, in Speedy.

The weapons from last night required cleaning; two H&K G36C assault rifles and an H&K 121 machine gun. We also had lots of empty magazines to refill! Just as we were finishing the two G36C rifles an alarm went off in the briefing room.

"What the fuck is that?" I asked, jumping up.

As we entered the briefing room, we could see that the large screen, with the map of Chicago had zoomed in to an area of the City, the area was towards the south of Chicago and south of I-94. There was a pulsing red circle, labelled 'Speedy'; somebody had hit the panic button on the radio in Speedy!

Dave tried to call Marty on his cell. There was no response.

We tried the radio, but again, there was no response. The position was rather strange, it was a Chicago City Auto Pound!

I rang Murphy.

2:58 P.M.

"Murphy! We have a problem. We think one of our team may be in distress, at the Auto Pound near I-94. Could you check and see if anything's happening, down there?" I asked.

"No problem, Hit Girl. Give me five minutes," Murphy replied, then dropped the call.

3:06 P.M.

"Go!"

"It's Murphy. Nobody can get any response from the Auto Pound and strangely we have no units anywhere near it!" Murphy said. "Something stinks!"

"We're gonna head down. Should take us thirty minutes," I said.

"Fellows and I are leaving now. It'll take us about the same. We'll meet you at East 103rd Street and East 106th Street," Murphy said, before dropping the call.

We rapidly suited up and jumped into the SUV, remembering to take the fake plates to swap later on. We left our masks and comms off, as usual and covered up our combat suits. Our weapons were hidden in the back, with Eisenhower.

3:13 P.M.

Dave was driving and he put his foot down. We headed south west and exited I-94 at the East 111th Street exit. We swapped the plates on the SUV and completed our suiting up. Then we headed north up I-94 and turned off at East 103rd Street. During the trip we tried to call Marty repeatedly, without any success; we were now very worried.

3:48 P.M.

Kick-Ass pulled the SUV over at East 106th Street.

About two minutes later, Murphy and Fellowes pulled up beside us, blue lights flashing. Murphy explained that all communications with the Auto Pound had ceased earlier that morning and that two delivery drivers had complained about being turned away, at the gate.

"We need to go in hard; our team member is in there somewhere!" I insisted.

"We have Eisenhower, to hopefully sniff him out," Kick-Ass said.

Murphy and Fellowes agreed; there wasn't time to get reinforcements there, although they had been requested. They both wore ballistic vests and had AR-15 rifles. They would go in first, as we needed them to smash through the gates of the Auto Pound.

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

Police Auto Pound

The Police SUV, blue lights flashing and siren sounding, smashed through the locked gates of the Auto Pound, before coming under fire from the watchdogs, manning the entrance.

We accelerated through the gates close behind and stopped the SUV behind some parked SUVs. We immediately jumped out and started shooting at the watchdogs. We had brought the G36C rifles with us, just in case.

4:09 P.M.

The last watchdog fell and I ran forward and checked on Murphy and Fellowes. Fellowes had a small wound to his left leg, but was otherwise okay. I pulled out my cell and pulled up the tracking application.

While Murphy and Fellowes guarded the entrance, Kick-Ass and I got back into the SUV and headed deeper into the Auto Pound, which was enormous.

4:12 P.M.

We followed the dot on the cell and skidded to a halt beside Speedy. I jumped out, only to find that Speedy was empty!

Strangely though, I noticed that the hidden compartment in the rear seat had been opened and that the pair of Glock 17 pistols, normally inside, were gone. I checked the immediate area and found both pistols, with their slides locked back on empty magazines, about fifty yards away behind an impounded Corvette that had several bullet holes in the side. There was evidence of a struggle and I found something else, I held it up for Kick-Ass to see.

"Recognise it?" I asked.

"That belongs to Hawk!" Kick-Ass replied, correctly identifying the short spear.

"It looks like Marty and Hawk had to fight," I said. "How the hell Hawk is involved, I have no idea!"

"Use Eisenhower!" Kick-Ass said.

"Eisenhower, find Marty!" I ordered and let her out of the SUV. Eisenhower ran off in an easterly direction.

"Let's go!" Kick-Ass yelled.

I followed Eisenhower's tracking signal on the cell.

4:16 P.M.

"Next left!" I called. "Third right!"

We caught up with Eisenhower. She had stopped beside a giant car crusher. Four watchdogs were there; we took cover and opened fire. There was a car in the crusher and I could see movement. I recognised the blue of Marty's mask.

"I think Battle Guy and Hawk are in the crusher!" I called to Kick-Ass.

We dropped two of the watchdogs, before one triggered the crusher. That watchdog received a knife to the throat! Kick-Ass dropped the final watchdog with a head shot. I ran forward and shut off the crusher.

"You know how to operate a car crusher?" Kick-Ass asked, a little surprised.

"Long story, but yeah, I've done it before, kind of!" I replied, remembering a yellow Range Rover.

We went over to the car in the crusher and pulled open the door.

4:21 P.M.

"Knew you'd find us!" Battle Guy said, cheerfully.

Beside him Hawk smiled at us.

"I assume the story behind all this will be good!" I said, glaring at Battle Guy.

Both Battle Guy and Hawk looked a little sheepish!

"I saw Hawk being seized by those watchdogs and tried to intervene, without much success. I eventually got her away, but then we were cornered. We managed to wound a couple of them, before we ran out of ammo!" Battle Guy explained, rather weakly.

"Sorry, it was my fault! I should have had my back to the wall; then they couldn't have come up behind me!" Hawk admitted.

Kick-Ass smirked at me and I grimaced back, knowing exactly what he was thinking!

"Now Hit-Girl, we always keep our backs where?" Kick-Ass growled, laughing.

"Funny cunt!" I growled back.

4:38 P.M.

We pulled up beside Murphy and Fellowes.

The two Police Officers were being checked over by Paramedics and we saw that two other Police vehicles had arrived.

"Thanks guys!" Kick-Ass said to Murphy. "Sorry about the mess!"

"Glad we could help. You got your man?" Murphy asked.

"We did, thanks!" I replied.

5:01 P.M.

We pulled over at a quiet point off East 115th Street. Marty was behind us, in Speedy.

"You're safe Hawk. The Police will never know you were there," I said. "If you need us call: 555-1-FUSION."

"Thanks, Hit Girl, Kick-Ass. It looks like I owe you twice, now," Hawk said, smiling.

"You helped us, the other day. We're on the same team, remember," Kick-Ass said.

Once Hawk was gone, we headed back to the Safehouse.

5:45 P.M.

The Safehouse

"Well you had a fun afternoon, Marty!" I said, as we got out of our combat suits, back at the Safehouse.

"Sorry, guys," Marty said. "I should have called you first!"

"Well, you were helping a fellow Hero! No harm done, just more of Chris's watchdogs have now been put down," Dave responded, cheerfully.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

We sat down to dinner and chatted about the afternoon.

Marty was still feeling a bit embarrassed by the whole episode, but we reminded him that without his equipment, we would never have been able to find him. Marty also thanked Sophia, for her help.

"Maybe we should put a GPS tracker on Marty," I suggested.

"Funny, Hit Girl!" Marty said, smirking.

"I thought you said that last night was a one off, Marty, you starting to enjoy the action?" I asked.

"No! Just wrong place, wrong time!" Marty said, grimacing.

"I know how you feel!" Dave replied. "Story of my life!"

7:02 P.M.

Dave and I went back to our weapons cleaning, unfortunately we had had to start again!

It took a while, but we finally had some clean weapons and reloaded magazines. We also cleaned the two Glock pistols, reloaded them and stowed them back into the hidden compartment in Speedy.

7:58 P.M.

We got a call.

This time from our new friend.

"Help me!" Hawk said. "I'm in shit again!"

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

The Safehouse

"What have you done?" I asked, glaring at Marty.

"I got a line on that Chris D'Amico! I followed him and now I'm stuck! He doesn't know I'm here... Yet! I'm in a warehouse, near the terminal," Hawk explained.

"You are running out of favours, girl!" I cautioned.

"Thanks..." Hawk replied, before the call cut off.

"Marty can you get a fix on her phone?" I asked.

"Give me a few minutes and I'll let you know!"

"Dave, we need to head out," I growled. "That stupid, incompetent bitch is in trouble again!"

"Hawk?" Dave asked, smirking.

"Oh yeah!"

"That girl is trouble; kinda reminds me of you!" Dave said, laughing.

I just glared back.

"I have a position!" Marty called. "Not far from that fucking Auto Pound. End of South Stony Island Avenue."

8:12 P.M.

We headed out in the SUV with Eisenhower.

The trip was going to take about thirty-five minutes. We brought the H&K G36C assault rifles with us, plus as much ammo as we could handle.

8:45 P.M.

Chris's Warehouse

We pulled up without lights, using NVGs and parked behind a row of rail oil tankers.

"Battle Guy, Fusion is moving in," Kick-Ass reported.

"Battle Guy copies Fusion moving in!"

Kick-Ass and I got out, along with Eisenhower.

We readied our weapons and headed towards the warehouse, wearing NVGs. We approached the warehouse and I could see two watchdogs, who seemed to be walking the perimeter. They met up and then turned around, to go back around the building. Once they had separated enough, I moved in and slit one man's throat, while Kick-Ass went after the other guy, with Eisenhower.

Kick-Ass returned stowing his Ko-Wakizashi, with Eisenhower trotting along, happily, beside him.

"Any problems?" I asked.

"Always the tone of doubt!" Kick-Ass responded.

"I... Okay, let's just head in," I said, laughing at Kick-Ass.

"Battle Guy, two down, heading inside," Kick-Ass called in.

"Battle Guy copies two down and Fusion heading inside!"

We found a door and I stared at the card swipe.

"You might need this, Hit Girl!" Kick-Ass said, smirking and holding out a swipe card. "I got it off my guy!"

"A smart-ass Kick-Ass; that's all I fucking need!" I growled, swiping the card.

As soon as the door clicked, I pulled it open and went inside, followed by Kick-Ass and Eisenhower.

9:09 P.M.

The inside of the warehouse was mainly shadows.

There were piles of wooden crates, which blocked out a lot of the illumination from the lights above. The passageways, though, were brightly lit.

"Let's even the odds!" I growled, heading over to an electrical panel and pulling the main breaker.

The building was instantly plunged into darkness and we heard several shouts of annoyance. Our NVGs allowed us to see very well, however.

"Remember, Hawk is here somewhere!" I warned.

"God knows where, though!" Kick-Ass replied.

We headed further into the warehouse, our assault rifles up and ready.

9:16 P.M.

Two watchdogs were coming in our direction, we took one each, two shots to the head.

We started to hear loud shouts, in response to our shooting. We moved forward dropping another watchdog, before Eisenhower started whining and sniffing the air.

"Eisenhower is onto something!" Kick-Ass said, over the comms.

"Follow her," I said.

"Eisenhower, go!" Kick-Ass said.

Eisenhower moved off, slowly sniffing the air and moving in between the crates. She took us deeper into the warehouse, before stopping outside the door of an office. Eisenhower then whined and looked up at me.

9:24 P.M.

Kick-Ass put a boot into the door, sending it smashing into the wall.

I covered the doorway, while Kick-Ass went in and looked around.

"Found it!" Kick-Ass called.

"I am not an 'it'!" I heard Hawk say, indignantly.

"You're a pain in the butt!" Kick-Ass replied.

Kick-Ass appeared with Hawk.

"Can you shoot?" I asked.

"Yeah, of course," Hawk replied.

I passed Hawk one of my pistols and a spare magazine.

"I want that pistol back!" I growled.

We moved back towards the door, that we had come in by. Three more watchdogs fell, two to me and one to Hawk! We made it to the door and were back outside.

"Battle Guy, we've got Hawk!" Kick-Ass reported. "We are outside the building!"

"Battle Guy copies you have Hawk and are outside the building!"

9:42 P.M.

"You have transport?" I asked Hawk.

"Yeah, thanks again, guys!" Hawk replied.

"Just don't make a habit of this!" I replied, accepting back my pistol and spare magazine.

9:55 P.M.

Once Hawk had vanished into the darkness, I turned to Kick-Ass.

"Shall we tidy up?" I asked.

"Why the hell not!" Kick-Ass replied.

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and Midnight

We went back into the warehouse and worked our way down the building.

We caught and killed, four watchdogs. I received several shots to my armour, which I shrugged off. We saw two more watchdogs run off, towards another door and we followed. The last two watchdogs ran east, towards another warehouse. We were able to track them using the NVGs, before Hit Girl went down on one knee, aimed and shot both watchdogs.

"I'm curious about where they are heading; they made a point of going in this direction," I queried.

"I'm game, you never know what we might find," Hit Girl replied.

We walked towards the other warehouse and started walking the perimeter. As we approached the first corner, we heard some people coming our way. Suddenly Eisenhower started behaving strangely, she strained on her leash and started growling viciously! Three men came around the corner, a few yards ahead of us.

..._...

Six gunshots rang out and two bodies dropped to the alley floor. Hit Girl did not holster her two pistols, but kept them aimed at the one man, left standing. I was struggling to hold Eisenhower back.

"Oh this is perfect! Are you really that stupid? There's two of us and just one of you! Do you really have a hard-on to die?" Hit Girl growled. "Oh, I forgot, you can't get a hard-on!"

10:34 P.M.

"Chris D'Amico!" I snarled.

"Fuck!" Chris said, assessing his new situation.

"Sorry Eisenhower, he has nothing left for you to chomp on!" I snarled, vindictively.

"You fucking bastards!" Chris yelled.

"I've been waiting so fucking long for this!" Hit Girl growled, savagely, but with an enormous grin on her face. "Three rounds, remember, Red Mist!"

Hit Girl squeezed the trigger, three times.

"Shows over, Motherfucker!"

Chris crashed backwards, onto the ground.

I walked forward, Chris was still conscious and looking directly up at me. I aimed the Glock, at the point between his eyes. I felt zero emotion.

"God, I'm glad I don't have a son like you! Time for a family reunion!" I snarled, pulling the trigger once.

Hit Girl sagged and started to cry, before she fell against me.

"You okay?" I asked, sensing her relief.

"Yeah!" Hit Girl replied.

"Time to go home!" I said, smiling down at her.

"Thanks, Kick-Ass!" Hit Girl replied. "My Daddy... He would have been proud of both of us!"

"You know we have a long walk ahead of us!" I said. "Damn, that jet pack would have come in handy, right now!"

10:42 P.M.

"Hold on!" Hit Girl said suddenly. "Just want to make sure!"

"What?" I asked, as Hit Girl turned around and walked the dozen or so yards back to the body of Chris D'Amico. Both Eisenhower and I stared curiously after her.

Hit Girl drew a Katana and brought the blade down swiftly, severing Chris' head. Hit Girl then calmly cleaned off the Katana and stowed it. She stood staring at the severed head, for a second or two.

"I'm so fucking glad you're dead, cunt!" Hit Girl said happily, before sending the head flying across the ground, with one swift kick.

Blood flew into the air and across the ground.

Hit Girl laughed.

Updated: June 2015

Chapter 44*: Recovery

Saturday

The Week of Hell was finally over!

A lot of bad things had happened and a lot of good people had died.

But a lot of bad people died, too and that had included one who had very much deserved to die, so much, much more, than the rest!

Finally, Chris D'Amico was no more!

Even better, both Dave and I had put him out of his misery. I got revenge for his shooting me three times, in the chest and Dave had implemented the coup de grâce, with a brilliant choice of words. Shame Chris was not fully aware of the true significance, of those words.

On top of that Chris had left us a small gift!

It seemed that Chris and his watchdogs had just left their vehicle and Dave had found the keys when he had searched the pocket of one of the watchdogs. We had continued around the warehouse and found a parked SUV. So we had seized it as loot; well Chris wasn't gonna need it anymore, as he had kinda lost his head!

The SUV was a beauty; it was another Land Rover product, a brand-new Range Rover, in black. Even better it was armoured. Thank you Chris D'Amico!

It was now time to recover and move on.

The Safehouse

I awoke to a knocking on the door of our bedroom.

"Mindy, Dave!"

It was Chloe!

I looked at the clock. It was half past seven, in the fucking morning!

"Shadow, do you really want to die!" I yelled.

"Never gonna happen!" Chloe said, grinning at me from the open door. "I just thought I should knock in case you two were 'busy'!"

"'Busy'? You mean Dave might be fucking me?" I asked, with an evil smirk.

Chloe blushed.

"Sorry, Chloe! Couldn't resist fuckin' with ya!" I said, laughing.

"You really are an evil bitch, Mindy!" Dave said, from beside me.

"So, what happened? It's all over the news; Chris D'Amico is dead! Apparently they found the body early this morning..." Chloe explained, then stared directly at me. "They then found the head a little while later!"

I felt my face warming up.

"So!" I said, quietly. "I got carried away!"

"She severed his head 'just to be sure' and then kicked it, like a fucking soccer ball!" Dave elaborated.

"So cool! How do you feel now that Chris, is no more?" Chloe asked, looking at us both.

"Pretty damn good!" Dave replied.

"Almost as good as the first time I had sex with Dave!" I mused, without thinking.

Both Chloe and I blushed that time.

"That good was it!" Chloe asked, facetiously.

"Oh yeah!" I replied, giggling and burying my face into Dave's chest, as my face started to burn!

"What is the fucking racket?" Marty demanded, coming into the room. "Oh, hi Chloe!"

"Morning Marty!"

We all got up and showered, before getting breakfast.

Dave cooked a massive meal and then we sat down and went through the previous day's activities, explaining everything to Chloe. She was quite shocked about Marty almost getting killed, along with Hawk! But Chloe did point out, that without Hawk, we might never have been in a position to kill Chris!

I had to agree with her logic. We owed Hawk and more than a little. But we still had our reservations about her, as she seemed very good at getting herself into shit!

Anyway, we decided that we needed a rest; time to recover, as our bodies were exhausted after seven straight days of activity. Not to mention that I have a hole in my left arm and I was involved in a motorcycle crash! That was the most depressing bit about the entire episode, my Ducati was wrecked!

"Oh, I almost forgot to ask! Why the fuck is there a big black, rather cool looking, SUV parked downstairs?" Chloe exclaimed.

"You saw that did you?" Dave replied, smirking.

"I'm not fucking blind!" Chloe responded.

"Wow, young Chloe has developed a really foul mouth!" I commented.

"Little rich coming from you!" Marty responded, delicately.

I scowled at Marty, then smiled.

"Okay, I'm not the best person to complain about profanity! I said, smirking at Chloe.

"The SUV was a gift... From Chris D'Amico," Dave explained. "Well he didn't exactly need it anymore!"

"I hope it's not gonna have another lame name, like 'Speedy'!" Chloe groaned.

"Yes, that name was lame," Dave said. "I actually thought of calling it 'The Beast'!"

"Why not just 'Beast'?" Chloe suggested.

We all agreed on 'Beast'. Marty would transfer the 'FUSION' plates to the new vehicle and fit the relevant communications equipment.

Abby turned up later that morning, and after going loopy over Beast and hearing about the past events, she got to work with Marty, checking out the new SUV.

They were both very impressed, from the geek point of view. The armour was to Level IV and should stop 7.62-millimetre rounds. There were also a good set of run-flat tyres and Chris had thoughtfully left a small armoury in the trunk!

Chloe went out to see Kyle, while Dave and I went out to get some fresh air, without having to worry about being attacked by an Archer!

Dave suggested going via his work, so we drove over to Plainfield.

..._...

"Hi Dave," Roger said.

"Hi Roger! This is my partner Mindy. Mindy, this is Roger, my boss!" Dave said.

"Hi Roger," I said, with a smile.

"Wow!" Roger commented. "You never told me how hot Mindy was!"

I felt myself blushing!

"Ignore him, Mindy, he'll chase anything with tits!" Dave said, laughing.

"I know; Mindy's off limits!" Roger said, dejectedly, wandering off.

"I'll be back in a minute... Go drool over some guns!" Dave teased.

I glared at him, but I had to admit, though, that there was a damned nice selection there and I did kinda enjoy checking guns out! I was checking out a good selection of Smith & Wesson pistols, when I heard my name.

..._...

"Mindy, how are ya? I thought I saw Dave."

I turned around to find Kim.

"Hi, Kim, I'm doing fine, you?" I replied.

"A bit shattered, been a hard week!" Kim said.

"Tell me about it!" I commented. "It's been 'The Week of Hell!'"

"Want a coffee, I'm just about due for a break?" Kim asked.

"Why not?" I replied. I couldn't think of a good excuse to decline and I could do with a drink.

..._...

We sat and chatted for about half an hour, before Dave reappeared.

"You two seem to be enjoying yourselves!" Dave said. "Should I be worried?"

"Maybe!" I replied, grinning.

"Okay," Dave said, slowly.

"We should have Kim over for a meal," I suggested.

"Don't see why not!" Dave replied.

"How about Monday evening?" I suggested.

"Don't see a problem with that," Kim replied.

"We'll see you then and I'll text you the address," Dave said.

The following morning
Sunday

West Ridge

I woke up late, to find that Mindy had got up already.

I showered and dressed, before heading downstairs, but as I got to the bottom of the stairs, I heard giggling, a lot of giggling! I looked into the living room and saw Chloe and Mindy rolling around the couch, very nearly pissing themselves with laughter!

"What are you two watching?" I inquired.

It was a minute before Chloe could talk.

"Family Guy; they're showing it all day!" Chloe managed, before disintegrating into laughter.

"Fuck this!" I said.

I enjoyed Family Guy, just as much as the next guy, but I could not listen to those two giggling all day! I headed out to the garage; I'd get breakfast out – the fucking laughter was getting louder!

"Can I join you?" Marty asked desperately, appearing in the garage.

"Please do!" I replied.

..._...

After breakfast, Marty and I went out to have a look at the apartment blocks that Mindy was interested in buying. The two apartment blocks were very different.

The first apartment block was just under five miles east of the centre of Chicago. It had seventeen units that were a mixture of one, two and three bedroom units. It was also close to the Pink Line. The area was not the best, but it was relatively safe and of course we could make it safer!

Marty was interested in having an apartment there, due to its proximity to the University.

The second apartment block was about nine miles south of the centre of Chicago and about four miles to the east of the Safehouse. It was a lot larger than the first apartment block, with twenty-five units, which were a mix of one and two bed units. Currently the entire block was empty, but we expected that to change, easily enough. This block was on a nice leafy, tree lined street, in a nicer part of Chicago and near to the Red Line. We intended to convert one or two of the units into a second and maybe a third Safehouse.

Mindy had made offers and we were awaiting a response, which may take another few weeks. Marty had found a reputable agent, who could handle the apartments and tenants for us. Marty had thoroughly checked out the properties, to make sure that there would be no surprises!

..._...

By the time we got back home, it was almost four in the afternoon.

We parked in the garage and went into the house. Not surprisingly, the two girls were still giggling and laughing away, in the living room! I noticed that Sophia was asleep on the couch on the lower floor; she must have had enough of all the giggling. Marty went up to his room and I joined Sophia to train.

I had been training for about twenty minutes when Marty appeared and asked to join in. That was a bit of a surprise, but Mindy had hinted the other day about Marty wanting to join in more with Fusion, when we were out and about. It had occurred to me that we did have Abby, to provide technical support, which would free up Marty to come out with us. Admittedly both Abby and Marty would need training to bring them up to scratch.

Marty, was training Abby in everything she would need to know about the technical side of Fusion. Marty would need a lot of training, before he could go out as a vigilante. Yes, he had been out before, but nothing major, and the warehouse the previous year, well that had just been a total free for all! Marty had managed very well the other day, when he had come out to help us at Chris' headquarters. He had managed to kill some watchdogs that day, too and he had seemed to enjoy it.

I had to admit, though, that I had spent almost my entire life with Marty and he had always been a little overweight. I could not quite imagine him being fit enough to fight the way Mindy and I did. However, Mindy turned me around and that had been no small task! I also could not quite imagine Marty using Taekwondo, either. Maybe he would be a weapons guy, more than a Martial Arts guy.

I suggested a few warm up movements for Marty to start with, then went back to my training. Forty minutes later Marty was dripping sweat and looked completely exhausted. I smiled, Marty was really putting a lot into this.

He was obviously serious!

The next day
Monday

West Ridge

We made preparations for dinner that evening.

Dave had acquired a large ham and I was going to cook it, with Dave's help. Marty was going to be out with some new friends of his, so it would just be the three of us. Preparing the food was a bit of a nightmare, but we got it done and of course, I was very good with knives!

Kim was expected to arrive about six that evening.

Once the food was safely cooking, I went to get changed, while Dave got things ready in the dining room.

..._...

Kim arrived on time, at six.

We invited her in and sat down in the living room, while we waited for the food to finish cooking. Strangely, Sophia seemed to be okay with Kim. Usually, Sophia was a little wary of strangers. It was as if Sophia already knew Kim, which was impossible. We chatted for about twenty minutes before the food was ready.

Dave served the food and we sat at the table in the dining room and started eating.

"Kim, tell us about yourself. What did you do before you started at the gun store?" I asked.

"Well, I originally spent time as a flight attendant, with Delta and got to see the world; well bits of it anyway!" Kim replied.

"Anywhere nice?" Dave asked.

"London was good and I enjoyed the longer trips to Tokyo, but they were very tiring. The best was probably to Australia; I liked Melbourne," Kim replied.

"What did you do after that?" I asked.

"I joined the Chicago PD," Kim replied.

Dave and I exchanged a glance at that!

"I spent some time at District twenty-one, after the academy. I enjoyed pounding the streets, had a few close calls, then I finally got injured a few months ago and decided it was time to leave and move on," Kim replied.

"How were you injured?" Dave asked.

"I got shot in the leg; it took a while to heal, but I decided enough was enough. Now though, I miss the excitement of chasing bad guys and feeling good when I put somebody away, or help somebody out," Kim explained.

"Must be nice," I commented, trying to keep a straight face.

"What is it you do, Mindy?" Kim asked.

"I spend my time providing training for people in Taekwondo, Aikido and also general fitness," I replied.

"That would explain why you and Dave look so trim," Kim commented, eyeing up Dave.

I saw Dave smirk at me... Ass!

The rest of the evening went well and we all enjoyed the meal.

Afterwards we had coffee in the living room and I am sure Kim was trying to come onto Dave!

Mindy and I decided we wanted to have a Fusion celebration.

We intended to have a night out; just the four of us. Mindy called Chloe and advised her that we would pick her up at seven in the evening, on Friday, and she should dress smartly. Mindy said she would have a surprise for me and wouldn't tell me what she would be wearing, but insisted that both Marty and I wore a suit!

I had told Mindy about Marty training on Sunday and she had told me about what Marty had said the previous week. We talked about him joining 'the operators' – the fighting side of Fusion. I believed that he could be an asset, but only once he was physically fit of course. Marty joined us daily, when we trained and Mindy had set out a training schedule for him, to gradually increase his fitness and we said that we would allow him a few weeks, before we took him out jogging. He also joined us each day when we walked Sophia.

Mindy's wound was healing nicely, but she still needed a lot more time before it healed completely. I also know that it was hurting Mindy a lot more than she would admit, but that was just typical Mindy! Mindy had become more determined to improve her blade skills and spent many hours with either a Katana or her Tanto. I had also noticed a change in her, since I had killed Chris; she seemed happier, a lot happier. Chris D'Amico as Red Mist was a stain on Hit Girl; a failure for Hit Girl. Now I had helped remove that stain and erase that failure. I also felt that we were now closer, much closer than ever before.

The one thing that concerned Mindy the most, though, over and above the injury, was the loss of her pride and joy, the purple Ducati Panigale. I knew that she missed that machine, more than anything else; it has been a part of her.

Mindy had not spoken about the Ducati at all since the night it was wrecked, but I knew she missed it hugely.

Chapter 45*: Being Alive and Being Together

*That same week
Friday evening*

West Ridge

Mindy, refused to allow me in the bedroom while she was getting ready, so I had to use the spare room!

Marty and I, naturally, were ready fairly quickly. We both wore suits; mine was a dark blue and Marty's was more of a lighter blue and we both wore vivid ties, Marty's was a royal blue and mine was green.

We waited for almost thirty minutes before Mindy finally came downstairs.

"Oh for fuck's sake, you two!" I exclaimed. "It's only a dress, for God's sake!"

Both Dave and Marty were, apparently, speechless and Marty's eyes were bugging out and Dave seemed to be drooling!

"Fuck me!" Dave said.

"Not right now, Dave," I replied dryly and blushed!

"Wow! You look fucking awesome, Mindy!" Marty said, in apparent astonishment.

"Thank you Marty; always the gentleman!" I replied, giving him a kiss on the cheek.

I had to admit, I had knocked them both for six!

I was completely astounded.

Mindy was wearing an ankle length dress, with a single shoulder strap over her right shoulder and a slit up the left leg, almost to the top of her thigh. She also wore gloves that went over her elbows, thus covering the bandage on her left arm.

The dress was, of course, purple! Mindy's hair was tied up and she looked lovelier than I could ever remember.

"I'll take Dave's drooling as a sign he approves, too!" Mindy said, somewhat sarcastically.

I grabbed my cell and took a few pictures, to remind me of the night. Plus, I thought Marcus would be very impressed! I did notice though that Mindy was not wearing high heels, as I knew that she hated the things. The shoes she wore were simple, but still very nice looking shoes.

Right now, every part of me yearned for Mindy!

..._...

We pulled up outside Chloe's house and I went to knock on the door.

It was opened by Dr Bennett.

"Hi Dave. Wow, very smart!" Dr Bennett said. "Chloe is almost ready."

I waited a couple of minutes, before a very smart young girl came down the stairs looking a little shy. I had to admit that I had never seen Chloe wearing even a skirt before. She always wore trousers or shorts. This time though, she was wearing a very nice blue dress that came down to just below her knees.

"Very nice, Chloe," I commented approvingly.

"Thank you, Dave," Chloe replied, blushing deeply.

"It's very good to see Chloe in a dress, for a change!" Dr Bennett said, smiling. "Have a good evening!"

I drove south, into Chicago and pulled up outside the restaurant, where a valet parked the SUV.

Chloe was very impressed by Mindy's dress and Mindy approved of Chloe's choice, too. Considering both girls hated wearing dresses, they both turned out looking perfect and Mindy was attracting quite a lot of attention from other diners, mainly of the male variety.

We sat and ate a full three course meal. It was really good to finally be able to relax and enjoy each other's company and have fun! Chloe really enjoyed herself and got a couple of approving looks from other younger diners, which made her blush. Marty kept telling jokes, which caused us all to laugh and he often timed the punchlines for when we had our mouths full, or were taking a drink!

At one stage the Maitre'd inquired as to what we were celebrating.

"Being alive and being together!" I replied, simply and that was what we all raised our glasses to. We had all risked death and been shot at, not to mention that Mindy had been injured.

Mindy, Marty and I, all had good reasons to be happy, as Chris D'Amico was dead and gone. Chloe understood our happiness and so she was able to join in to.

"Dave, when you put him down, you said those words, the exact same as that last time. That meant a lot to me and ever since that day, so long ago, I have always known that you care about me, deeply. I thought that those words, said by his father, would be the last words that I ever heard. You repeating those words closed off that whole affair and I can now forget about it!" Mindy said, emotion flooding across her face. "Although I'll never forget the sight of you with a damn bazooka!"

We all laughed. We could; a whole sordid chapter of our short lives was closed!

"I meant every word, Mindy. I enjoyed saying them again," I admitted.

"If you hadn't been so caring and the only link to my purple side that I had left at that time, I probably would not have revealed my true identity to you," Mindy said, wiping away her tears.

"I'm forever grateful that you did, Mindy!" I said, leaning over to give her a kiss.

We left the restaurant before ten and took Chloe home, before we all headed home ourselves.

We would see Chloe and Abby, the following morning.

The following morning Saturday

West Ridge

"What is that cool music?" Mindy asked curiously, coming into the living room.

"This? You don't know?" Dave asked, incredulously. "It's a classic!"

"You've never watched 'Battle of the Planets'?" Marty demanded, just as incredulously.

"No, never," I responded.

I had to admit the intro theme was very cool.

*Battle of the Planets! G-Force!
Five incredible young people with super powers!
And watching over them from Centre Neptune, 7-Zark-7!
Watching, warning against surprise attack by alien galaxies from beyond space!
G-Force! Fearless young orphans, protecting Earth's entire galaxy!
Always five, acting as one! Dedicated, inseparable, invincible!*

"Sounds a bit like Fusion... 'Always five, acting as one! Dedicated, inseparable, invincible!'" I admitted. "I suppose I am a 'fearless young orphan!'"

"You'd make a good 'Princess' and I'd be 'Mark',' Dave said, laughing.

"Don't even think of calling me '7-Zark-7', asshole!" Marty growled.

"I have to admit; I did consider 'G-Force' before I thought of 'Fusion!'" Dave admitted.

"You're a complete dork!" Marty said, laughing.

"Coming from you, that's a compliment!" Dave laughed.

"You two watching these cartoons, all day!" I asked.

"Yeah! 80's Cartoon Marathon! 'Battle of the Planets', 'Terrahawks', 'ThunderCats', 'M.A.S.K.' and more!" Dave replied.

"You are a real pair of geeks!" I groaned.

"And you aren't? I've seen you glued to Star Trek Voyager and don't try to deny it! We had to put up with you and Chloe quoting Family Guy all week! I have had enough of hearing that the 'Bird is the Word' or anything about the 'Freaking FCC!'" Dave retorted.

"Okay! I'll join you!" I said, sitting down and cuddling into Dave.

..._...

"Hey, cool! Battle of the Planets, I love it," Chloe said, sitting down beside Mindy.

"Can I join in?" Abby asked.

"Yeah, sit down," I said.

The next afternoon Sunday

West Ridge

We all enjoyed a peaceful weekend, with no Fusion activities.

Now that Chris D'Amico had met his demise, the city of Chicago was going back to normal. Kyle was over for his training, which he had missed out on, over the past few weeks, with only a little training.

"Okay, Kyle!" I said. "Hit me!"

"You're a thirteen-year-old girl!" Kyle complained, receiving a slap across the face.

"What the..." Kyle started, before receiving another slap.

"Act like a bitch, get slapped like a bitch!" I said, with a giggle.

"Hey, that's my line! Did Dave tell you about that?" Mindy asked.

"Yeah!" I replied.

"That hurt, Chloe!" Kyle moaned, rubbing his cheeks.

"Well, man up then will you, just take a minute and dig deep for a bigger set of balls, 'cause you're gonna need 'em before we're through!" I said and saw Mindy roll her eyes in exasperation.

"My balls are fine, thanks!" Kyle replied indignantly. "You wanna check?"

Mindy burst out laughing and I felt my face burning. I span around and kicked Kyle to the floor.

"Thanks, Chloe!" Kyle said, standing up and rubbing his chest.

"No problem!" I said, throwing an evil smirk at Kyle, before the fucker kicked my legs out from under me and I crashed to the mat, letting out a surprised scream.

The bitch just laughed even harder!

I had to admit Kyle impressed me there, but all's fair in love and war! I sprang up and tried to kick Kyle's legs out from under him, but he dodged and span me around and back onto the mat, this time face down. The fucker was getting good!

I thought Mindy might piss herself, if she did not fucking stop laughing.

I walked over to Mindy.

"You think this is funny, bitch?" I asked, seething with rage.

Mindy looked up at me, she was very red in the face and looked to be in pain!

"I'm sorry!" Mindy giggled. "Kyle's line was just brilliant!"

"It was, wasn't it," Kyle said, laughing.

"Okay, enough is enough! Do I need to break both of you, to get respect?"

Both of the fuckers just burst out laughing and ignored me completely!

Chapter 46*: The Bo-staff and The Balisong

The following week
Tuesday, West Ridge

Chloe did not turn up this evening.

It was just Kyle.

Apparently, Chloe was grounded for the next twenty years!

Kyle explained that Chloe had gotten into a fight at school, which had put another girl and two boys down hard. The girl had a concussion and of the two boys, one had a broken arm and the other had two broken ribs.

I inquired about Chloe.

Chloe had a black eye, bruised jaw and bruising to her chest and stomach.

I asked who had started the fight.

It was the other girl. It was something to with the fact that Chloe was more interested in athletic activities, rather than fitting in socially. The girl smacked Chloe across the face, but Chloe didn't react. So the two boys joined in, one of whom gave Chloe the bruised jaw when he slapped her, very hard.

Chloe then fought back.

I was worried and tried to call Chloe, but her cell was turned off. I decided I would visit Chloe at home later, when I was finished with Kyle.

Morton Grove

I pulled up outside Chloe's home, got out and went up to the door.

I knocked and Dr Bennett answered the door.

"Mindy!" Dr Bennett said, waving me in and closing the door. "I wondered if you might appear."

"I heard about Chloe and was worried!" I said.

"Thank you for your concern, Mindy," Dr Bennett said. "She's upstairs, second door on the right."

I went upstairs and knocked on the the relevant door.

"What!" Chloe called, angrily.

..._...

I pushed open the door and went in.

"You don't sound very happy!" I said, smirking.

"Mindy!" Chloe yelled excitedly, getting up off her bed and giving me a hug.

"Careful," I said, seeing Chloe grimace, as she hugged me.

"I keep forgetting about the bruises," Chloe complained. "I can't even wear a bra, for God's sake!"

"Bet Kyle'll enjoy that!" I teased.

"That is not funny, Mindy!" Chloe said, glaring, but blushing anyway.

"Sorry, couldn't resist!" I apologised. "How are you feeling?"

"Very sore and very annoyed for letting my guard down and getting into that fight," Chloe explained. "I'm grounded till I'm twenty-one, too!"

"What did the school say?" I asked.

"They said that although I had acted in self defence, I used 'excessive force!'" Chloe said, with an exasperated tone. "I'm also suspended! For three days!"

"It could be worse!" I said. "You don't look too bad."

"The bruised jaw makes it sore to eat, but my chest makes it sore to breathe!" Chloe explained and showed me her bruised chest and stomach. The whole of her front, from just below the neck, down to just above her waist, was bruised.

"No broken ribs?" I asked.

"None, thankfully!" Chloe said.

"Will your Mom let you come over on Saturday?" I asked.

"I hope so, you can ask. Slight problem from Sunday. The little cunt is back for eight weeks; most of Summer Break! With these bruises I can't kick the shit outta him!" Chloe said.

"It looks like the bruises will heal, soon." I said. "I'll talk with your Mom and hopefully see you on Saturday. Just you, not Kyle, okay?"

"Okay?" Chloe asked, looking confused.

"See ya!" I said and headed back downstairs.

I managed to persuade Dr Bennett to let Chloe come over on Saturday and to let her stay the night.

Four days later
Saturday
The safehouse

I had received all the new equipment that I had ordered and was sorting it out, down at the safehouse.

I'd driven down in Speedy and Dave would follow with Marty and Chloe, once Chloe arrived at West Ridge.

Dave had his new armour which, according to The Armourer, was tougher and should absorb more of the shock, causing less bruising. My new combat suit top was a good fit and had a little more give around my chest, which seemed to have expanded! Dave had noticed that I had bought new bras and said that he thought things were slightly bigger! I actually felt quite pleased, as I always felt a little self-conscious around women with larger breasts. The items I had ordered for Chloe and Marty were also here. Chloe would be the first to receive her new gifts. I was secretly looking forward to handing these over, as it would allow me to reconnect with my past. I hadn't told Dave about the gifts for Chloe and Marty, so that they would be a surprise and I knew Dave would have a bit of fun at my expense, too!

I heard the garage door go up and the SUV pull in and park.

"Hi, Chloe! How you feeling?" I asked.

"Not so sore," Chloe replied.

"Able to wear a bra now?" I asked, with an evil grin.

"Yes... I'm wearing a bra!" Chloe replied sharply, blushing slightly.

"Sorry, couldn't resist!" I said. "Chloe go sit over on the mat, I'll be over in a minute."

Chloe looked a little confused, but went over and sat down in our 'chatting corner'.

I took Dave to one side and explained that I had presents for Chloe. Dave nodded and we both went over to sit down with Chloe, who looked a little apprehensive. Marty headed into the briefing room and his computers.

"Don't worry Chloe!" I said, sitting down. "You've coped with worse!"

Chloe grinned, still looking apprehensive.

"Okay... You've proved that you are a capable member of the team. You've proved that you can be trusted. You've proved that you can follow orders, at least, most of the time! But we've all lapsed there, at some stage or another!" I said.

"Some more than others!" Dave said, looking directly at me.

"Funny, Ass-Kick!" I growled.

"We've decided, that you have now earned yourself a permanent position, on the team. You are now the the third most senior 'operator' in Fusion. By 'operator' we mean those who go out and fight. Marty and Abby are not operators, they are our technical support," I said.

Chloe looked a little stunned.

"Thanks, Mindy," Chloe said slowly.

I got up and went into the briefing room, where I picked up Chloe's presents and returned to the mat.

"I have some presents for you; look at them as are your graduation presents, " I said, before looking at Dave. "And no smart-ass, wise cracks, from you!"

I passed the first present over to Chloe.

"Wow!" Chloe said, sounding a little overwhelmed.

"That is a bō-staff. I used to use one, before I got my Katana blades," I explained and saw Dave wincing.

I had bought a custom made bō-staff, very similar to mine. It was made from a reinforced composite material, which would resist a strike from a Katana. The twin blades, at each end of the bō-staff, were made from a reinforced steel, similar to a Katana blade and were a foot long, with extremely sharp, pointed, blades. The entire bō-staff was almost five feet in length and the main section was a dark blue. I showed Chloe how the bō-staff separated in the middle and became two swords.

Chloe was speechless, but looked very excited! Dave just looked a little worried.

"What do you think?" I asked.

"It's cool, I'll need a lot of practice to learn how to use it, without cutting myself in half!" Chloe replied.

"Now, you won't be able to use it properly until those bruises are healed on your stomach," I said. "But until that happens, you can learn to use these."

I passed over a small wooden box, which Chloe opened, slowly.

"Wow!"

"Those are a pair of custom Butterfly Knives or Balisongs, to use the proper name," I said and Dave groaned.

"I am starting to get some very nasty flashbacks!" Dave complained.

I ignored him!

The knives were very similar to my own that I had received for my eleventh birthday, all those years ago. The overall length of the weapon was 9.4-inches, with a 4.2-inch blade. The handle was made from titanium, with the blade being made from strengthened steel. The two knives were identical in every way.

"So that you can train without losing most of your fingers, you can use a training balisong," I said, passing over a training balisong.

"I really don't know what to say, Mindy! I'm overwhelmed," Chloe stammered.

"Dave and I... We just want you to feel part of the team and we want to thank you for all your help," I explained. "Including what you did at Chris's headquarters."

"I agree!" Dave acknowledged.

I then showed Chloe the basic movements to use when flipping the balisong. I flipped both blades, very fast, one in each hand. Chloe looked mesmerised, but Dave looked pained!

"Problem Dave?" I asked, smirking, as I knew what the problem was.

"You know full well what the problem is!" Dave said, smirking.

"Am I allowed to know this big problem?" Chloe asked, curiously.

I looked at Dave, but he waved me on.

"Okay... Dave first met me when I was eleven and I was a bit of a show-off. I saw what I did as a kind of 'game'. Dave, or rather a very inexperienced Kick-Ass, got himself into a bit of a situation and was about to be killed, so I stepped in to help him. For some reason, I thought he had potential and I kinda had a minor crush on him, although it was almost a year later before I actually realised it was a crush. When I was eleven, I didn't understand those feelings, but I still wanted to get to know him," I explained.

"Anyway... I was shitting myself and then suddenly Rasul, the owner of the apartment stopped advancing on me; he had a blade sticking out of his chest! The blade was removed, Rasul fell and I saw Hit Girl for the very first time - a very short Hit Girl! You wanna say it?" I asked.

"Why not... I stared down at Kick-Ass and the people in the apartment, before saying: 'Okay you cunts... Let's see what you can do now'," I growled, trying to sound younger.

"Creepy!" Dave admitted. "Then, Little Miss Assassin proceeded to slaughter everybody there, about six or seven people, using her bō-staff and a balisong: 'Hey, I got one of those!'"

I laughed at Dave's impression of me.

"Yeah... The little bitch smiled her way through the entire slaughter. She was like a damn Angry Bird, bouncing around the apartment, killing everything in sight and all the time showing off to me! Then her perfect plan went wrong and she almost got killed, while commenting on my choice of taser, except Big Daddy used his sniper rifle to kill the last man and then she got a mini lecture from Daddy!" Dave said, smirking at me. "'Now Hit Girl, we always keep our backs where?'"

"'To the wall Daddy, I know. Um, it... it won't happen again. Nice shot, by the way'," I said slowly, thinking back.

"Sorry, if I brought back old memories," Dave said, quietly.

"Not to worry, they were parts of my life, when Daddy was still alive and I like remembering them. In this case they were also the time that I first met the man I love," I replied. "Sorry, Chloe. I'm getting all soppy, not very Hit Girl!"

"You have nothing to apologise for, Mindy. It just feels good to know that you both trust me enough, to talk about such personal and private events, right in front of me!" Chloe said, biting her lower lip and looking uncomfortable.

"You are a part of our little family, our inner-circle, if you like. We trust you one hundred percent and I only trust three other people as much; Marcus, Dave and Marty. We five are the inner-circle. Nobody else knows this intimate information, about Hit Girl's life. To tell you the truth, even Marcus doesn't know everything, but that's only because he doesn't want to know!" I explained, smiling at Chloe. "Plus we know you won't tell anybody else."

"Thank you, both of you," Chloe said, bursting into tears. I got up and hugged her tightly.

Next I gave Dave his new armour, which he was really impressed with.

"You trying to keep me alive or something?" Dave asked, facetiously.

"Asshole!" I replied.

"Marty, I have some kit for you!" I said, ignoring Dave's hurt look.

"For me?" Marty asked.

"Yes, Marty," I replied. "You, I definitely do want to keep alive!"

I handed Marty a mask, similar to Dave's original mask, in that it covered the entire head except for around the mouth. It was black, but with a large blue strip running around at eye level. The eyes were covered in impact resistant lenses, that replicated Marty's eye requirements. This meant that he wouldn't require his glasses, when in costume. The mask even had Battle Guy's white, five pointed star in the centre above the eyes.

"Fucking wow!" Marty said.

"That is awesome!" Chloe exclaimed

I handed over the rest of Marty's kit. It was a complete SWAT outfit, except that the suit was made out of the same, composite material as the combat suits. I had also bought a slightly non-standard, set of body armour for Marty to wear over the suit.

"That should make you safer when you are out with us. Once you are trained, we can customise the suit further," I said.

"Thanks, Mindy. It is really cool!" Marty commented.

Two days later
Monday afternoon
West Ridge

Curtis came around.

"Hi Mindy! Hi Dave!" Curtis said, smiling.

"Hi Curtis!" Mindy and I, both said.

Chloe looked none to happy about Curtis being here, but apparently Chloe was supposed to be keeping an eye on him! Curtis was still not a big fan of Sophia, who kept following him around and staring at him!

"Remember Sophia, no eating Curtis!" Chloe said and laughing at Curtis' discomfort.

Chloe can be a nasty bitch when she wants to be! But, I suppose that makes two of them!

Chapter 47*: Shadow Revealed

Two days later
Wednesday
The safehouse

"Guys! We have a problem... A stalker... He has appeared each evening for the past two nights," Marty said. "Dead on eight-forty, each evening!"

"Well, we'll just have to set up a surprise for him, tonight!" I said.

That evening
The safehouse

We were all ready and in combat suits for eight that evening. Marty and Abby would stay in the briefing room and lock the armoured door.

Shadow and Hit Girl would be ready inside the side door, while Kick-Ass would step out and grab the stalker, the moment that he reappeared.

..._...

Dead on eight-forty, Marty called that the stalker was there, standing by the side door. I was already outside, hiding in the darkness.

"Go!" I snarled.

I moved forward and grabbed the stalker, with one hand across his mouth, before the side door clicked open and I dragged the stalker inside. The stalker seemed familiar, close up. I dragged him onto the mat and threw him down.

"Ouch!" Curtis yelled.

"Curtis, you little rat!" Shadow exclaimed.

"What ya gonna do, bitch!" Curtis retorted.

"Kick you so damn hard..." Shadow started, angrily.

"I know your shadow-y little secret!" Curtis interrupted, with a smug look on his face.

"And who are you going to tell!" I snarled, viciously. "Before I rip your tongue out!"

Curtis tried to back away, but Hit Girl suddenly appeared behind him. I think the combat suits scared him, as I was sure that he knew who we really were.

"I'm sorry Hit Girl, I won't tell. I promise," Curtis said quickly.

The boy was actually starting to cry.

I stood Curtis up, he was shaking and I looked at Chloe.

"Do I look like I care?"

"You can't hate him that much?"

"Can't !!"

"You're okay Curtis, don't worry!" Mindy said, pulling off her mask and smiling down at the boy, before glaring at Chloe.

"It's really dangerous out there at night, Curtis," I said. "Not very clever!"

"I got a cab. I wanted to see where the evil bitch was going, each night!" Curtis explained.

"Well, I know where the evil bitch is going with you!" Shadow said, advancing towards Curtis, who hid behind Mindy.

"Enough!" Mindy called out. "Leave him alone!"

"Okay!" Chloe said, reluctantly, pulling off her mask.

"You look really cool, you know!" Curtis said, smiling up at Chloe.

"Thanks, rat!" Chloe said, with a forced smile.

"Abby, Marty, you can come out now," I called.

"You tell anyone, you even dream or think about us, I will kill you!" Mindy said, seriously and Curtis looked like he was going to cry again.

"I would never do anything that would hurt my Chloe, never!" Curtis said, hugging Chloe, who seemed a bit lost for words.

"Can I, please, set Eisenhower on him, just once?" Chloe begged.

"No, evil bitch, you can't!" Mindy laughed.

I was really pissed off.

Curtis had no fucking right following me. Abby was bad enough, but that's two people I've led to Dave and Mindy! Only four days ago, Dave and Mindy said they trusted me and I do this to them! I was really feeling low, right now.

I was sitting in the Kitchen, while Dave and Mindy had a quiet chat with Curtis, in the briefing room. I felt sick, I really did, I wouldn't blame Dave or Mindy, if they kicked me out of Fusion!

I heard voices on the stairs and a smiling Curtis appeared, behind him was a smiling Dave.

"Chloe, Mindy wants ya!" Dave said, smiling.

I got up and headed downstairs, with my mask in my hand.

..._...

Mindy was in the briefing room and she turned as I came in. She had a big smile on her face, which vanished as soon as she saw me.

"Mat, move!" Mindy ordered.

I turned and walked over to the mat, Mindy followed.

"What's up with your face, Chloe?" Mindy asked.

"I just feel bad about Curtis following me; that's two people I've led to you now!" I said, weakly.

Mindy slapped me.

"What the fuck!" I exclaimed.

Mindy slapped me again, harder.

"Act like a bitch, get slapped like a bitch!" Mindy snarled. "Remember!"

Chloe looked horror struck.

"Get your fucking mask on, bitch!" I growled.

I ran over to the armoury and grabbed two training bō-staffs. When I returned Chloe had her mask on, but she still looked uncomfortable. I threw a staff at her, before pulling my own mask on.

I prodded her with the bō-staff.

"Fight me, Chloe, before I slap you stupid!" I growled.

"I let you down, Mindy," Chloe said.

"For fuck's sake, Shadow! If I winged like a bitch, every time I let Dave down..." I said in an exasperated tone.

"But..." Chloe started.

I had had enough! I moved forward and swung the bō-staff hard, at Shadow's head, but seconds before it hit, another bō-staff intercepted my bō-staff. This time Shadow's lip had curled. She pushed back on the bō-staff, hard and I let her push me back. Chloe was actually rather good with the bō-staff, which annoyed me a bit! Mind you, the bō-staff was very much like the Jō that she usually used. She will just need to learn how to use the blades... To kill.

We continued sparring for another few minutes. I had inserted a few flips, into my fight to avoid Shadow's bō-staff and noticed that Shadow had copied my movements, to avoid my bō-staff! She was getting too good, so I flipped Shadow onto her back, with my bō-staff. I noticed that we had attracted an appreciative audience, Dave, Marty, Abby and Curtis. Curtis was wide eyed and looked amazed. I pulled Shadow to her feet and she pulled off her mask. She had an enormous grin on her face.

"Thanks, Mindy!" Chloe said, as I pulled off my mask.

"That was totally wicked!" Curtis blurted out, causing Chloe to blush.

"You enjoyed that, did you?" I asked.

"Chloe is awesome! Not as good as you, but then nobody is!" Curtis said and this time I felt myself blushing!

"You're so sweet, Curtis!" I replied.

"Like fuck he is!" Chloe said, laughing and giving Curtis a hug, making him blush.

"Damn! You slap hard, Mindy!" Chloe said, rubbing her jaw.

"Don't I know it!" Dave quipped, getting a glare from me.

Two days later
Friday evening
The safehouse

We geared up, ready for a night of fun.

Abby and Marty, were in the briefing room, getting their kit ready. Dave, Chloe and I, were in the armoury putting on our combat suits. Eisenhower was dozing on the mat, beside Beast. Tonight I took along my bō-staff, as did Chloe. This was so that I could show her how to use the weapon, in combat. I retained my Tanto and one Katana. For transport, we covered the blades of both bō-staffs, to protect each other and the interior of Beast.

For tonight we were heading out to a part of Chicago that was well known for various illegal activities. We had only been out once, since the 'week of hell' and needed some good working up, on the job, so to speak. We had met up with Fellowes and Murphy; Fellowes had recovered from his leg wound and was fully fit again. We also learnt that The Archer had never made it into custody. He apparently vanished on the way back to the nearest District! This was no surprise to anyone, as he had killed thirteen people, including three Police Officers. It was nice to know that he was now dead! It was also useful to know that the Chicago PD, had it's own internal justice!

We drove out and headed towards the northern part of central Chicago. It was after ten o'clock and fully dark, when we parked Beast in a secluded alley. Shadow and I, removed the covers from our bō-staffs and we started our patrol. Kick-Ass, had Eisenhower on her leash.

Our first catch of the night, walked straight into us and made the mistake of attacking, with what looked like a large machete. I executed a perfect sideways stab, with my bō-staff, piercing the man through the chest. I pulled back the blade and let the man fall to the ground, dead.

"That was smooth!" Shadow commented.

Kick-Ass picked up the machete and examined it.

"Fresh blood; somebody just died!" He growled, angrily.

Eisenhower was sniffing in the direction that the man had come from. So we headed in that direction, following Eisenhower. After we had walked about two hundred yards, we found a body. It was a young woman and most of her clothes had been ripped off and there was blood everywhere from multiple wounds, which seemed to match the machete. I had no sympathy for the dead man, but I called Battle Guy and advised him of the situation, I suggested he make an anonymous call to the Police, with the location of both bodies.

We moved on.

..._...

About forty minutes later, we hit pay dirt!

There was a pair of alleyways that intersect, about halfway down. They cross perpendicular to each other and the crossing is the private refuge of a certain drug dealer. Everybody knows to keep away from these two alleys. The Police generally keep away, because it would be a kill zone. However I rarely turn down a challenge, although in hindsight, maybe I should have walked away!

We scouted out the cross-section. There were twelve men visible, of which two looked to be 'bosses', the rest were just hired help, although one or two may be runners. Naturally they all looked to be armed!

"Battle Guy, we have twelve targets, we are engaging!" I called.

"Battle Guy copies twelve targets and Fusion engaging!"

"Shadow, you stay with me!" I cautioned.

"What about me?" Kick-Ass asked.

"You're big enough to look after yourself!" I replied.

"Oh well, I suppose I get a bitch and so does Shadow!" Kick-Ass retorted, patting Eisenhower.

I heard a laugh from Shadow, but I had to smile as it broke the tension. Well done, Dave!

The plan was for Kick-Ass and Eisenhower to advance from the south, where there was only one watchdog. Shadow and myself would advance from the east. We hoped to remove the first three watchdogs, without alerting the other watchdogs. We all moved together. Shadow and I, advanced forward, our bō-staff blades ready to quickly and cleanly remove the two watchdogs. We both stabbed together, the blades severing the men's hearts in two, killing them. We removed our blades, letting the dead men sink to the floor of the darkened alley. It was just after midnight and now Saturday morning.

"Hit Girl and Shadow have two down!" I reported.

A second later.

"Kick-Ass has one down!"

It seemed that the watchdogs were guarding the northern and western alleys more, than the other two. We now had a direct line to the two 'bosses'. There were two SUVs in the alley and the 'bosses' were beside one, in the cross-section. The other SUV was parked in the northern alley. So far, nobody had noticed the deaths of three watchdogs.

"Kick-Ass, Hit Girl and Shadow are ready to move on the 'bosses'," I called.

"Go!" Kick-Ass ordered.

I moved forward and came up behind the first boss and pushed him against the wall, with a hand over his mouth and a blade of my bō-staff to his throat.

"Not a sound!" I growled. The man nodded.

I saw Kick-Ass place a Ko-Wakizashi to the throat of the other boss and heard his growl, "Not a sound!"

Shadow covered my back, while I watched both bosses. We pushed them down, behind the SUVs and bound their hands with plastic ties. Surprisingly nobody had noticed the 'bosses' vanishing from sight, yet! Eisenhower stood guard over both 'bosses', who seemed very afraid of the large dog, in battle armour.

Then all hell broke loose! Somebody must have spotted us, from vantage point. A voice suddenly shouted through the darkness.

"Get them, you idle bastards!"

The remaining six watchdogs all advanced on the SUV, that we were hiding behind. This was not good, I saw Kick-Ass pull out his Glock and I nodded, in response, slinging my bō-staff onto my back and drawing both of my pistols. Shadow did the same, slinging her bō-staff and she drew her pistol. I saw Shadow's eyes looking worried and smiled.

"Don't worry Shadow, all will be fine!"

The firing started.

I started firing at the watchdogs, none of which seemed to be wearing body armour.

This of course helped, as I watched the 9-millimetre bullets ripping onto my targets. I saw a runner being taken down, by a bullet from Shadow and I watched as all of the watchdogs collapsed, either dead or dying, onto the cold concrete of the alley floor. Silence descended on the alley and I could hear sirens in the distance. I reported in to Battle Guy, that the targets were down.

We searched the alley and SUVs, recovering a large amount of cash. We left any drugs that we had found. With a large holdall, full of cash, we headed back towards Beast. The two 'bosses' had received injuries, during the battle and died. None of their wounds had been inflicted by us, but all were from bullets fired by the watchdogs!

..._...

We were only a hundred yards from Beast, when we heard men approaching.

We were being chased!

We all started running, fast!

We got to Beast, I threw the hold-all full of cash into the back and Eisenhower jumped in beside it. Shadow climbed into the back seat and just as Hit Girl and I were climbing in, four men burst into our alley and started shooting. Hit Girl pulled her door shut, I started Beast, put it into gear and accelerated away. Several rounds impacted the rear door.

Chapter 48*: The Vigilante Doctor

Back at the safehouse
Saturday, 1:00 A.M.

Hit Girl had been shot, four times!

Twice in the right thigh and twice into her right side. Both bullets were still embedded in her thigh, but the other two had gone straight through. The shooter had been firing an H&K MP7 with rounds that were able to pierce Hit Girl's armour. We needed a doctor, but couldn't take Hit Girl to the hospital. Currently she was laid out on one of the couches, in the briefing room and she was in considerable pain.

"I'll call my Mom; it'd be safest!" Chloe suggested. "I'll get the little shit to tell her where to go!"

"You hope that keeping our masks on will help?" I asked, unconvinced.

"We can try. Abby and Marty can go upstairs and stay out of the way. Hopefully she won't recognise any of us!" Chloe said, hopefully.

"Hopefully!" I replied, not convinced at all.

Chloe called home.

It was late, well early, so I didn't know what Dr Bennett would say. I could hear Chloe on the phone.

"Look you little bastard, get my Mom here now or I'll break your scrawny little neck and you fucking know I can and will!"

"A little harsh, Shadow!" I commented, when she had hung up.

"The little fuck deserved it!"

About five minutes or so later, Chloe's cell buzzed with a text message.

"They are on their way," Chloe said, apprehensively.

"What the hell are you getting me into Curtis. I get mugged, I'll kill you!" I said to the boy, sitting beside me.

"They need your help. It's Kick-Ass and Hit Girl. Somebody's wounded, that's all I know," Curtis replied. "They know me, never mind how!"

The area was very dark and looked like the ideal place for a mugging or even a murder! I double checked that all the doors were locked! How the hell was Curtis involved, with those vigilantes? I have a bad feeling about this!

Curtis told me to stop beside a steel mesh gate.

He then sent a text and seconds later the gate opened, followed by the main garage door of the building, inside the compound. I drove into the darkened building and saw the mesh gate and garage door, closing behind me. This filled me with a sense of foreboding! I stopped my Jeep SUV beside two large SUVs, that I recognised as a Range Rover and an LR4.

As the garage door closed behind me, the lights came on inside the building and I saw two menacing looking people standing in front of me. The taller one, I thought must be Kick-Ass, but I wasn't too sure about the much shorter one, although I was starting to get an idea!

..._...

I turned off the ignition and got out, seeing Curtis climb out his side and walk over towards the shorter vigilante.

"You must be Kick-Ass! Where is the wounded person?" I asked, getting straight down to business. I was concerned, I didn't feel like my life was at risk, but I was cautious.

"This way, Doc!" Kick-Ass snarled.

Kick-Ass took me across a training mat, towards a large, two storey, brick structure and a door to the left hand side. Through the door I found a room, that looked like a combined command centre and briefing room. On the couch lay a young woman, in a black armoured suit, with purple flashes.

"You must be Hit Girl!" I said, kneeling down beside her.

I could see hastily applied field dressings, on her right thigh and right side.

"Curtis, get my case from the Jeep," I ordered, then looked up at Kick-Ass. "Tell me what happened!"

"She has two bullet's embedded in her thigh and two bullet wounds to her side," Kick-Ass said.

Curtis appeared lugging my medical case. I opened it and put on some gloves, before probing Hit Girl's wounds. She screamed at each touch.

"Calm down Hit Girl... Or should I say Mindy!" I said, feeling sure I was correct.

"What?" Kick-Ass and the short vigilante said, together.

"I am not that naive, Dave and I am also very sure that the short-ass ninja, over there, is my daughter!" I said, conversationally.

"Oh fuck!" Shadow said, not too quietly.

"I heard that, young lady!" I said, with a smirk, as my daughter appeared from under her mask.

"Hi Mom!" Chloe said, apprehensively, looking a little shy.

"We'll talk later, midget ninja!" I said, turning back to Mindy.

"Can you get the bullets out?" A now unmasked, Dave asked.

"I can. We need to get the suit off her. Can I use the table?" I asked, it looked sturdy enough to hold Mindy's weight.

"Yes. Chloe clear the table," Dave said, and started to pull off Mindy's combat suit, very carefully, starting with the mask.

Ten minutes later Mindy was lying on the table, which was covered with a white bed sheet.

She was in nothing but her underwear and Chloe was holding her hand, to reassure her, as Mindy kept passing out with the pain.

Dr Bennett cleaned the area around the wounds and injected some local aesthetic, around the thigh wounds. The upper wounds were okay for now, the important wounds were the thigh ones, with the embedded bullets.

..._...

Forty minutes later, Dr Bennett stood back from the table and pulled off her bloody gloves.

"All done! I've removed the two bullets, closed up the wounds and dressed them," Dr Bennett said. "I would recommend getting Mindy to bed."

"I'll get her upstairs right now," I said, picking Mindy up; she was currently passed out. "Come and help me Chloe."

I carried Mindy upstairs and Chloe helped me tuck her into bed.

..._...

I went back downstairs.

"Thank you Dr Bennett, for all your help," I said.

"No problem, I like to help. Any chance of a coffee?" Dr Bennett asked.

"Upstairs," I said, leading the way.

"You know Abby and this is Marty," I said, as we entered the kitchen, where Abby, Curtis and Marty were sitting at the table.

"Hello Abby, Marty," Dr Bennett said, holding out her hand, which Marty shook. "Nice little safehouse you have here!"

"Thanks," I said, smiling and poured a coffee for Dr Bennett.

"So," Dr Bennett said slowly, looking directly at Chloe, who visibly shrank into her chair. "My thirteen year-old, vigilante daughter, has been running around the streets, killing people!"

"I won't insult you, by denying it. But she only kills in self-defence or in the defence of others," I said quickly. "Chloe is a fully trusted member of our team. She has proved her worth and her courage, way beyond her years. Very few people know mine and Mindy's story, but Chloe is one of them, because we trust her and she is part of our inner-circle. Mindy and I trust her, with our lives."

"It's okay Dave. I've killed people in my life and sometimes it has to be done. I had a feeling that Chloe was up to something, once we moved to Chicago. The pretence of staying with Abby was a good try! When did she join you two?" Dr Bennett asked.

"Towards the end of January. We came across Chloe, when she helped us one evening," I replied. "She got herself shot!"

"I was wearing your old vest, so I was okay, but a little bruised and I was also knocked unconscious," Chloe said, shyly.

"At least you were thinking, when you went out! I assume you are all wearing proper body armour?" Dr Bennett asked, looking closely at Chloe's combat suit. "Type II?"

"Yes," I replied, a little surprised. "Type IIA. My combat suit is heavier, Type III."

"I have fifteen years of service in the Navy, as a Doctor, Dave. I went into hostile areas, several times and had numerous opportunities to rely on my body armour, giving me the chance to return the favour," Dr Bennett replied, darkly.

"How many..." Chloe started.

"I won't ask about your body count, if you don't ask about mine, young lady!" Dr Bennett said, meaningfully.

"Mindy has been doing this for over a decade and knows what she is about and how to keep the team as safe as possible," I said.

"That's obvious, I can see that. I know what you do is dangerous and injuries will happen and no, I won't stop you Chloe... Unless your school work starts to slip!" Dr Bennett said.

..._...

"I am a bit surprised to hear that, Dr Bennett," I said, honestly.

"There was a bit of trouble, when Chloe's father and I were young. We were both packed off to join the Navy, but we met up again at College; we were both sponsored by the Navy. That was when Ryan and I got together properly, he had this great Ford P.O.S. and the back seat was very useful!" Dr Bennett said, reminiscing, with a smile.

"Ugh! Yuck!" Both Chloe and Curtis exclaimed.

"Don't complain Chloe; you were conceived on the back seat of a US Navy sedan!" Dr Bennett said, with an evil smirk.

"Mom! Gross!" Chloe exclaimed and Curtis sniggered, which earned him a hard punch to the arm. "I don't want to hear about you and Dad... Ugh!"

"I thought you always wanted a little brother?" Dr Bennett teased.

"I've seen Curtis, no thanks!" Chloe replied, grimacing.

"Hey!" Curtis exclaimed, indignantly.

"The next problem will be explaining this to your father, Chloe!" Dr Bennett said.

"You can't!" Chloe exclaimed.

"I can't hide this from your father... Besides things slip when we're in the sack together!" Dr Bennett said laughing and Chloe went bright red.

"He'll ground me till I'm ninety-five!" Chloe groaned.

"We'll see, dear. When did the little guy get involved?" Dr Bennett asked, looking at Curtis.

"Less of the little!" Curtis grouched.

"The little fuc... The annoying rat followed me here!" Chloe explained. "Abby tracked me a while ago, too. She never goes out, but helps Marty with the technical and comms side."

"You are very high-tech here; I'm genuinely impressed!" Dr Bennett said. "So, I suppose I am now the official medical support for Fusion!"

"Only if you want to be. We can't force you," I said, hopefully.

"Considering that my only daughter is running around Chicago, shooting people with an FN Five-seveN, I will need to provide what assistance I can!" Dr Bennett proclaimed, with a smile.

Dr Bennett left, with Curtis, to head home.

The Doctor recommended that we keep Mindy resting, for at least a week, to allow the wounds to begin healing. Dr Bennett had also commented on the healing wound, on Mindy's left arm. I said it was from a crossbow bolt three weeks ago and that a paramedic had fixed the wound up, at the time.

Chloe was allowed to stay, to help with Mindy. I left things till after six in the morning, before I carefully placed Mindy, into the back of the SUV, with Chloe. Marty would take Abby home and see us later at the house. I drove home slowly, so I didn't hurt Mindy, who was still out, thanks to the drugs that Dr Bennett had given her to help her sleep and to deaden the pain.

I was really worried about Mindy. Her young body had taken a lot of punishment over the past few weeks and I was very worried that her body may not be able to take much more stress, at least for now. Mindy would also be pissed, as she had been wearing the new top for her combat suit! I suppose the large amount of cash that we seized tonight, would pay for a new suit, easily!

Once we were home, I carried Mindy upstairs and Chloe helped me get her into bed. We then both went to get showers and go to bed ourselves, as we were both very tired. Before she went for her shower, Chloe gave me a hug and told me that Mindy would be okay. Chloe was a very caring and perceptive young lady.

Chapter 49*: Purple Power

The following week
Friday night
Police Warehouse

Murphy had called, passing on a message and inviting Fusion to a meeting.

Apparently nothing was wrong, but SWAT wanted to say thank you, for the events that occurred the other month.

We arrived in Beast. The meeting was in the same warehouse, as last time. Just as before, the shutter opened, as we approached and closed behind us. The warehouse was empty except for a single SWAT truck and a Police SUV. In front of the vehicles were the eight man SWAT team, as well as Murphy and Fellowes. They all had big grins, on their faces.

Once we had parked and got out, we approached the group.

"Fusion, we owe you our lives, all of us. Plus many other Police Officers and members of the public," Matthews began.

"Firstly, we owe you these," Matthews said and indicated two, one thousand round, tins of 5.56-millimetre ammunition.

I had to smile.

"Thanks guys!" I said.

"No problem, Hit Girl!" Matthews said and slapped the side of the SWAT truck. "We have a surprise for you!"

The SWAT truck started up and pulled forward about a dozen feet.

As it moved, something was revealed that had been hidden behind it.

My mouth dropped open, I was speechless!

It was purple and had the initials 'HG' on either side, above the front wheel. The rear plate read 'HIT N RUN'.

I finished my slow walk, around the brand new Ducati 1199 Panigale R and I turned to the Police Officers.

"I don't know what to say!"

"Yours did get wrecked, while coming to help us!" Murphy said. "Plus there was a reward for getting rid of Chris D'Amico! We thought you'd prefer the reward in the form of a new motorcycle!"

"Here, Hit Girl!" Kick-Ass called, holding out a brand new, purple, helmet.

"You knew!" I responded.

"Of course!" Kick-Ass said, smirking.

"It looks damn cool!" Shadow said.

"Damn straight!" Agreed Battle Guy.

I was so excited.

I had my Ducati and it was purple!

I was still sore, from the bullet wounds, but I was not going to let that take away my excitement! I followed Beast back to the safehouse, trying not to go fast, or do anything stupid... But I just had to find out, to remind myself of the awesome power that was between my legs! I accelerated hard and heard the engine and exhaust noise increase and felt the huge acceleration threatening to rip me off the seat. My God, that adrenalin rush was awesome! There is only one thing I enjoy more, between my legs...

We made it back to the safehouse without any mishaps. I pulled up beside the Fat Boy and turned off the engine. I could feel my legs shaking, as I jumped off and pulled off my helmet. I looked over towards Beast and saw Kick-Ass, Battle Guy and Shadow appear, all removing their masks and all three were grinning. I pulled off my mask, too.

"You look a little excited!" Dave said, sarcastically and laughed.

"Okay, I had a little fun! It's not that often I get something so powerful, between my legs!" I said, then instantly regretted it and felt my face warming up. "Other than Dave!" I said, quickly and felt my face get even hotter.

"Really!" Marty and Chloe said together and looked at Dave.

"I think Little Miss Giddy, needs to calm down!" Dave said, keeping his composure a lot better than I was!

The safehouse

An hour later, I had calmed down enough to get back to Fusion activities!

Abby had stayed back, at the safehouse and monitored our trip, to see the Police. She was amazed at the Ducati, as we all were, except for Dave, who seemed to know all about it. Dave is very good at keeping secrets!

I called Abby out of the briefing room and took her into the armoury.

"Abby, as you know, we had that issue last week with Curtis. Now if that had been somebody else that had wanted to do us harm, then we may have had a fight on our hands. Everybody here is trained on at least one weapon, except for you. Marty has his Glock and now you need a pistol, in case of any problems, okay?" I explained.

"I think so!" Abby said, apprehensively.

"Chloe says, that you have never used a pistol before, right?" I asked.

"Yes," Abby responded.

I scanned the armoury and selected a Glock 26 Gen4 from the wall. This was a sub-compact 9-millimetre 10-round pistol. I showed Abby how to clear it and check that the weapon was safe. In this instance, the pistol was not loaded. The pistol fitted Abby's hands very well. I also selected an Aurora mini-suppressor and a combined laser/illuminator for the pistol. I told Abby to practice with the pistol and once I knew that she was safe, I would allow her to start some target practice.

"This will be your own personal weapon. You must look after it, keep it clean and in functional order. You never know when you might need it and you don't want it to jam on you, in the middle of a fire-fight!" I cautioned.

I had got Marty to install a pair of small gun safes into the briefing room, so if they were surprised one evening, they could defend themselves. Marty kept his Glock in one safe and Abby would use the other safe, for her Glock. Marty had fitted a large gun safe, on the upper floor, in which several weapons were stored, for an emergency.

I was taking no chances, in case we were invaded and I saw it as money well spent!

The next morning

Saturday

Morton Grove

Dr Bennett had requested that Dave and I drive up, to collect Chloe today, as she had some items to give us.

Very cryptic, but we drove up anyway, pulling up outside Chloe's house. Before we could knock, the door flew open and Chloe pulled us both in and into the Kitchen.

"Hi, you two!" Dr Bennett said, smiling. "I have some things for you."

"Okay," Mindy said.

Dr Bennett pointed to several items on the kitchen counter.

"These two black cases first. Leave one case at the safehouse and the other at your house. With either case I can perform minor surgery. I'll be able to cut, glue, stitch, splint and patch most injuries, with those two cases. It is, basically, very similar to what a combat medic might carry. That green bag contains blood expanders; I hope we won't ever need those. The red bag should be placed into Beast, as your mobile kit. Again I can perform minor surgery, or talk you through more limited first aid. The remaining six, smaller, packs are Personal Trauma Kits, you will each carry one; it may save a life, yours or somebody else!" Dr Bennett lectured.

"Thank you, Doc!" I said, appreciatively.

"Why?" Mindy asked, curiously.

"If you and my daughter, are going to gallivant around Chicago, getting into dangerous situations, then I need to do what I can to keep you all alive! I know injuries will happen, as we have seen," Dr Bennett explained, looking at Mindy, who blushed.

"I remember when Chloe first killed, about seven weeks ago, beginning of May..." Dr Bennett said, before being cut off by Chloe.

"How could you know that?"

"I'm your mother! You had nightmares for a week and at least three of the nights, you slept in my bed! I assume they were bad guys, who deserved to die?"

"Two men about to shoot Mindy. Chloe double tapped each man, in the head, from a good distance!" I said. "She has very good shooting skills."

"I'll match my rounds against her's, any day!" Dr Bennett challenged. "I will also expect you all to have a full medical check up, which I will administer, each month. That way we can ensure that you are all healthy and prevent any major problems escalating."

"Any of you push yourselves regularly till you drop and go over and beyond?" Dr Bennett asked.

"Hey! What are you two looking at me for?" Mindy demanded, indignantly.

"Well, you can be as stubborn as a mule and push yourself till you drop!" I said.

"Well the physical will be important then; especially for you two girls, as I assume you two will want kids, eventually?" Dr Bennett asked.

Mindy and Chloe both blushed, bright red!

"I assume that you're sexually active, Mindy?" Dr Bennett continued.

Mindy couldn't blush any more, so she just stayed silent, looking mortified.

"Mom, they make almost as much noise as you and Dad do!" Chloe said, laughing, causing Mindy and I to grimace.

"Well, at least I know you aren't active yet!" Dr Bennett said, looking at Chloe, who just stood there with her mouth hanging open, completely mortified.

It was several minutes, before Mindy and Chloe regained their composure, enough to talk.

"Mom, you are so embarrassing!" Chloe exclaimed, angrily.

"Oh, I haven't even started yet!" Dr Bennett said, laughing. "Just thought I would have a bit of fun!"

We did as we were told and distributed the medical supplies, where we were instructed.

I was very impressed with what Dr Bennett had done for us and I hoped we would never need to use her offerings. However past results have shown me getting wounded, regularly!

Oh and Dave thinks he's really fucking funny. Apparently he found an interesting device, in a little shop, the other day and thought I would like it!

"Go on Mindy, turn it on!" Chloe said, smirking.

"Yeah, go on Hit Girl!" Dave said.

I had a bad feeling about this! I flipped the switch and...

"Oh, you funny bastard!" I laughed.

Chloe hooted with laughter and Dave tried not to laugh, but gave up.

The device Dave had bought, projected an image onto the ceiling and in this case, Dave had swapped what ever the image should have been, for a giant cock!

Dave and Chloe got a hold of themselves, just long enough to finish things off.

"How do I get a hold of you?" Dave asked, innocently.

"You just contact the mayor's office. He has a special signal he shines in the sky; it's in the shape of a giant cock!" Chloe replied, struggling to keep a straight face.

Both of them then melted into hysterical laughter!

"You two cunts, think you're so fucking funny!" I growled, but couldn't resist laughing, it was funny!

Chapter 50*: Wrong Place, Wrong Time

Three days later
Tuesday

Today was strange, very strange.

Chloe and I were held hostage, with interesting results. Results, that I have to thank Marty for!

We were out in Chicago and we intended to go shopping. Due to recent security concerns, I had insisted that all Fusion members should always carry some form of basic comms with them, either a cell or a radio. Now, carrying our normal tactical radios as a civilian, would attract attention, as it was not easy to conceal and were not technically available to civilians! Marty, though, had found a compromise where as long as we were within a couple of miles of a main radio, i.e. Speedy, Beast, the SUV or a safehouse, we could carry a much smaller radio and use concealed communications headsets. This we were doing today, to test the system.

We had parked the SUV in the centre of the City and we were walking about a half-mile away. Marty and Abby were at the safehouse and monitoring the test. Dave was at home, with Sophia, Curtis and Kyle.

The first stop was to be the bank, so we could get some cash. I generally hated using cards, as they tended to leave an electronic trail. I also wanted to treat Chloe to a girls day out. We were chatting happily, as we entered the bank, so I didn't notice anything wrong. We queued up as usual and had been there for only about eight minutes. Marty was telling us jokes over the comms and we had to try and ignore him, so we didn't give the game away. We each had a small transceiver, which was hidden under our clothes, never mind where! In our left ear we each had a small ear bud, which contained a built-in microphone and a very thin wire, that ran down, under our clothes, to the transceiver. Our hair, especially mine, covered the ear bud and wire. I suggested to Chloe that she let her hair grow a little.

Suddenly I heard a commotion behind me and span around to see three security guards being clubbed to the ground by masked men. They were using what looked like leather billy clubs, or saps. Then AR-15 rifles appeared, in the hands of three of the men. Another two men were busy, securing the security guards' hands.

"Don't move! Don't fuckin' move! Put your hands in the air! Put your hands in the air! Put 'em up!" One man, with a gravely voice yelled.

"Get on your knees! Get on your knees!" Another man, with a British accent, shouted.

"We want to hurt no one! We're here for the bank's money, not your money. Your money is insured by the federal government, you're not gonna lose a dime! Think of your families, don't risk your life. Don't try and be a hero!" Gravely Voice said, loudly.

"Get down and stay down! Hey, you, get over here and get down!" British Accent yelled, at several bank workers.

I grimaced. They were idiots, not just for quoting from 'Heat', but following the whole fucking script!

..._...

"Battle Guy, the bank has just been seized!" I whispered, dejectedly.

"Copy that, Hit Girl!" Battle Guy replied.

"Five men, AR-15s. They think they're following the fucking script of 'Heat!'" I whispered, as I got down onto the floor, facing Chloe.

"Cool! Copy five, plus AR-15s and they like movies!" Battle Guy replied, with a snigger.

"Funny cunt!"

I heard one of the men speaking on a cell. He was reading out his demands to the cops, I caught the second demand and actually laughed.

"Like that's gonna happen!" I said, quietly, looking at Chloe, who had heard the same thing and looked at me, with a smirk.

"Repeat that, Hit Girl!" Battle Guy called.

"The idiots have just announced their demands. Demand number two: They want Hit Girl down here!" I said.

"You what? Now that is funny!" Battle Guy said and I could hear laughter from Hal, in the background.

"Better call Jack Bay. He knows who I am, he can cover," I said to Battle Guy.

"Doing it now!" Battle Guy replied.

Oh this was fucking brilliant! Here I am, a hostage and one of the hostage takers' demands is me! Dave is gonna fucking love this and milk it for all it's fucking worth!

"Does Kick-Ass know?" I asked, tentatively.

"He's inbound to suit up, right now!" Battle Guy replied.

Oh fuck!

Okay, think! These guys are complete idiots!

"Battle Guy, Shadow and I are gonna wind these fuckers up!" I said, coming to a decision.

"Copy that!"

..._...

"Hey! Asshole, how long are we gonna be lying here?" I said, sitting up.

"Get down, bitch!" Gravely Voice said, aiming his AR-15 at me. I didn't flinch.

"Big gun, huh! Compensating are we?" I responded and tried to ignore Marty and Abby laughing, in my ear.

"What?" Gravely Voice shouted.

"That big?" I said, holding my thumb and forefinger, about three inches apart and looking at Chloe, who giggled and held up her own thumb and forefinger, about an inch apart.

This seemed to annoy Gravely Voice!

"You fucking bitch..." Gravely Voice started, before British Accent told him to 'shut the fuck up'!

I could hear some sniggering, from other hostages and at least one hostage taker!

Gravely Voice and British Accent were arguing, but they had left me sitting up, so I could now look around. There were approximately sixteen bank customers and about twelve bank workers, lying on the floor. That included me and Chloe.

I had started to lose track of time, when I heard another voice in my ear bud, the one I had been dreading!

"Howdy, gorgeous!" Dave said. "Hit Girl rescued you yet?"

I whispered something vile and obscene.

"You foul mouthed, little bitch!" Dave retorted, laughing.

"Hiya, shadow!" Curtis said, in the most annoying way possible.

"Talk about little dicks!" Chloe muttered and I laughed.

"Be nice! Does Hit Girl know about your 'My Little Pony' panties?" Curtis responded.

"Fucking little... I'm gonna cut his fucking balls off, when I get outta here!" Chloe seethed, going bright red.

I hate to say it, but I laughed and the look I got from Chloe, was anything but friendly! The laughter from the safehouse did not help!

..._...

"Fuck this!" Chloe said, jumping up and turning to British Accent.

"Hey, wanker! I need a piss and right the fuck now!" Chloe said, without fear or shame! I had to admit that it didn't even sound like Chloe or Shadow! By the chatter over the comms, even Curtis sounded shocked.

Chloe was wearing shorts, which showed off her long legs and she was flaunting these and Gravely Voice was looking! Chloe did in fact look older, than thirteen and she actually could easily pass for a fifteen year-old, which really fucking sucked! At thirteen, I looked thirteen! I checked Chloe up and down; I knew that she was carrying a weapon somewhere, but couldn't for the life of me see where!

"Well, I'm waiting limp dick!" Chloe said, angrily.

"Take the slut, to the fucking bathroom!" British Accent said, to one of the other men.

"Go suck a cock!" Chloe retorted, as she was led to the bathroom.

I was trying my best to keep a straight face, but failing and I could hear hysterical laughter at the safehouse.

"Hey, gorgeous! I'm on my way and Curtis is speechless and has gone very red!" Dave called and I heard Beast starting up. "I have your combat suit, with me!"

"Hey, boss! Bay has been on the phone and he's heading onsite, to co-ordinate. He knows you and Chloe are in there and unmasked!" Battle Guy reported.

Chloe came back from the bathroom, a few minutes later, smirking. She came over and sat beside me.

"The bathroom has a window, not big enough to get out of, but big enough to get a combat suit in!" Chloe muttered, having heard the conversation with Dave.

"Nice idea! I'm ten minutes out; Murphy is providing escort!" Kick-Ass said and I could hear a siren in the background.

..._...

"You carrying?" I whispered.

"Stupid fucking question!" Chloe snapped back. I don't think she's forgiven me for laughing at her underwear!

Chloe stood up again.

"Now what, slut?" British Accent asked and got a vicious glare in return.

"Let's just pretend, for a moment that I'm Hit Girl..." Chloe started.

"In your fucking dreams!" I muttered.

Chloe must have heard me, as she hesitated, but otherwise ignored me.

"... Why would you want her?" Chloe continued.

"That bitch killed my brother and I'm gonna kill her!" Gravely Voice said.

"You... You are gonna kill, the most vindictive, the most sadistic and most violent, assassin out there? In your fucking dreams!" Chloe retorted and several murmurs of agreement, were heard from the hostages.

She's trying to apologise, for getting angry with me! She's killing time and distracting the idiots, too! This girl can really think on her fucking feet!

After what felt like only a few minutes, I heard my saviour's voice!

..._...

"Time to use the bathroom, Hit Girl!" Kick-Ass called.

I took a deep breath and stood up.

British Accent came over, looking pissed.

"What the fuck now?" British Accent yelled. "This is turning into a fucking nightmare!"

"I need to use the bathroom," I said.

"No!"

"I'm on my period!" I said, staring directly at him and he seemed to wilt.

"Do you have no fucking shame?" Kick-Ass asked, laughing.

"Look, I'm not fucking bleeding all over the damn floor, cunt!" I continued.

"No!"

"Come on! All I need to do is stick a fucking Tampon in, for fuck's sake!" I said, grimacing and it didn't help that I could hear Dave, Abby and Marty laughing.

"Need a hand, love?" British Accent asked, smirking.

"Need help getting it up, or does your pal, there, help you?" I retorted.

"Go... Jesus Christ! Go hold up a fucking bank, he said, it'll be easy..." British Accent shouted and continued ranting.

..._...

I went into the bathroom and locked the door behind me.

I went over to the window and found Kick-Ass standing outside and below the window, behind him was a cop; it was Fellowes. Kick-Ass passed in my complete combat suit, plus my pistols and my bō-staff, which was a tight fit and had to come in, in it's two sections. I kicked off my clothes and pulled on the combat suit, shoving my clothes out of the window, to Kick-Ass, who passed them to Fellowes. I checked that my pistols were loaded and that the bō-staff was ready, before unlocking the door and stepping out.

"Shadow, Hit Girl is about to attack! Stand to!" I called. It felt strange not to be wearing the throat mike when in the combat suit, but that wasn't really a problem.

I slipped through the open door, into the main area of the bank.

..._...

"Okay you cunts!" I growled, attracting everybody's attention. "Let's see what you can do now!"

I swung my two swords in menacing circles, before nodding at Chloe and throwing myself towards the hostage takers. Before they had had a chance to even raise their weapons, I had stabbed the first two men, through the chest and was moving onto the next pair, flipping onto and over a desk and landing behind the two men, then ramming my swords home, into their backs. The last man fell, as Chloe rammed her balisong into his stomach and almost lifted the much larger man off his feet!

"I am not a fucking slut, bastard!" Chloe snarled, as the man died.

I admit Chloe's behaviour today, was rather surprising.

I reconnected my swords and slung the assembled bō-staff, over my back.

"Kick-Ass, get us outta here!" I growled.

The main door of the bank burst open and Police Officers threw blankets over all of the hostages and took them outside, including Chloe, who was grabbed by Murphy. When I got outside the bank, I found that the hostages were being shepherded to one side and into Police vans, so hopefully nobody would notice that Chloe and I weren't there. I noticed Murphy slamming the back of Beast shut, before wandering away, smiling. I saw Jack Bay and nodded in his direction; receiving a nod and a smile in return. I pulled off the bō-staff, placed it on the back seat and then climbed into Beast, to find Kick-Ass staring at me.

"Back to headquarters, Kick-Ass!" I growled and couldn't resist grinning till it hurt. Kick-Ass accelerated away.

"Welcome back, Hit Girl and Shadow!" Abby called.

"Thanks, Hal!" I replied.

"Yeah, thanks, Hal!" Chloe said, popping her head up from behind the rear seats.

We decided to retrieve the SUV later, but for now we just wanted to get back to the safehouse.

The safehouse

When we pulled into the safehouse, everybody was there!

They all started applauding, as we got out of Beast.

"That had to be the most entertaining morning that I have had in a long time!" Marty exclaimed, with his huge, dorky grin.

"Glad we could be so entertaining!" I said, dryly, pulling off my mask.

"Honestly that was way cool! Marty almost died!" Abby said, giving Chloe a hug.

"You really have a foul mouth, Chloe!" Curtis commented. "And I'm sorry about the panties! You really were cool and scary today, but I did find you a bit embarrassing!"

Curtis ran over and gave Chloe a big hug. Chloe was a bit confused.

"I'm glad you're safe!" Curtis said.

"Okay, I won't cut your balls off!" Chloe replied, looking a bit uncomfortable.

"My Little Pony?" I asked.

"I'll say nothing, about your pyjamas, if you say nothing about my panties!" Chloe growled, with an embarrassed grin.

"Deal!" I replied, feeling my face warming up and Dave was laughing.

After we had returned our comms to Marty and I had dropped off my weapons, in the armoury, I went upstairs with Chloe, so we could both get changed.

Chloe had blood on her from 'British Accent', at the bank and she was shaking a bit.

"You okay?" I asked, as Chloe paused, outside her room.

"Not really!" Chloe replied, looking pale.

"Come on, into our room," I said, pulling Chloe into the bedroom, before closing and locking the door.

Chloe broke down onto the bed and started sobbing. I left her there, while I dragged off my combat suit. I knew what this was about. Chloe had killed before, several times, in fact. But always at a distance, or in the dark. This was the first time that Chloe had killed, so intimately, while staring into her mark's eyes. It was also the first time, that she had got blood on her hands, literally. I knew the reaction, I had been there, years ago, but at half her age.

Chloe looked up from the bed.

"I was scared today, but being scared gave me the courage to stand up to those men. But that asshole who called me a slut... That hurt and I felt that I had to do something about it... But..." Chloe ran out of steam.

"I know, but you weren't expecting that rage to build up and allow you to ram that balisong into that bastard and almost lift him off the ground! You weren't expecting to see, what you saw in his eyes, as he died! I've been there, I know exactly what was going through your mind and it is entirely normal. Killing from a distance is very different, to killing face-to-face. You can see a lot of things go through somebody's emotions, as they die and you remember them all. You just learn to push those feelings and memories down deep and bury them. It's not easy and it takes time to learn how to do it properly, but I'll help you get through this, okay?"

"Thanks, Mindy! I'm glad I did it and he deserved it, but I still feel bad about it!" Chloe said.

"You will, but you will also learn to bury those feelings," I said and felt very sorry for Chloe. "You did very well today and I will admit you surprised me, with your actions, which were bang on!"

"Can I come back to your place?" Chloe asked. "I don't want to go home tonight... I... I might need to talk..."

Chloe sounded a bit insecure, but I said okay and I knew Dave would understand.

Chapter 51*: Positive Publicity

The following afternoon Wednesday

Mindy Macready, was now a Landlord!

I now owned two apartment blocks, within Chicago. There was also an agent, to manage the letting of the apartments.

The first apartment block, in Lawndale is the smallest and Marty wants to take an apartment in this block, as it will be closest for when he starts University. I have directed the agent to let a two bedroom unit to Marty, at a reduced rent. I have also provided cash for Marty to secure and equip his apartment, so he would be able to support Fusion from there, if required. Marty was expected to move in, sometime in late August.

The second apartment block, off South Cottage Grove, is a larger block and currently empty, but the agent is working on this. We have taken ownership of one, two bedroom unit on the fourth floor and one, one bedroom unit, on the first floor. Both are intended to become safehouses, in this case B and C, respectively. The current safehouse will become safehouse A. Building work will begin immediately to secure both apartments and equip them for Fusion. The fourth floor apartment has access to the roof, which is flat and it is possible to move across several of the adjacent buildings, over the flat roofs. This would allow covert access to and from, the safehouse.

..._...

On another positive note, we received a call from Jack Bay, concerning the bank yesterday.

It seemed that the only thing the idiots did almost right, was to try and disable the CCTV, but they managed to fuck that up, too! Mindy Macready on YouTube, would not be very useful! The views from the available CCTV cameras, proved to be interesting, when combined with our ball caps and sunglasses. The only people who got a close up look at us, are dead! Apparently, as is often the case, first hand eye witness statements seemed to disagree. Depending on who you asked, Chloe was anything from Chinese to Caribbean, with dark skin! The description for me, couldn't agree on the colour of my hair, either, plus most agreed that Chloe and I were definitely adults and probably 'hookers'! Wearing ball caps, might of helped, but maybe it's time to dye my hair again, I had let it go back to my natural colour, but maybe I could go red...

Anyway, there is an entertaining new YouTube video that had received a decent amount of hits: 'Hit Girl and Shadow, show their attitude!', plus a variant that focused on Shadow: 'Don't mess with Shadow!'. It definitely helped that we used fake voices, when we were winding up the cunts! The video showed everything that happened, from the start of the attempted heist, to the end; with Shadow stabbing 'British Accent'. I had to admit, it was very cool watching myself in action, flipping across the desk and taking down the four men. First time I had ever actually 'seen' myself in action. According to some of the comments, Shadow's stabbing was also very popular.

The favourite quotes, among others, seemed to be:

'Big gun, huh! Compensating are we?'

'Go suck a cock!'

'You are gonna kill, the most vindictive, the most sadistic and most violent, assassin out there? In your fucking dreams!'

'Okay you cunts! Let's see what you can do now!'

'I am not a fucking slut, bastard!'

The audio wasn't brilliant, but you could understand all that was being said.

I was actually very proud of Chloe, who was a little embarrassed and dreading going home! Dave thought it was really cool and yes, he had heard everything that went on, but he liked the video anyway! Apparently he enjoys seeing me flipping around the place!

That evening
Safehouse A

Chloe still seemed insecure, so Dave suggested that he take her out.

I agreed, as I still had wounds to heal and didn't want to over-stress them anymore than I already had! Just for once, I was going to be a good girl! Out of character? Yes, but the sensible thing to do!

At seven o'clock, I grabbed Chloe and took her upstairs to her bedroom.

"Get changed, you're going out with Kick-Ass and you leave in five minutes!" I said.

"Why? I'd rather stay with you," Chloe said.

"I want you to go out and have fun. Remember, Dave has been through everything that you have, admittedly, I was a bit more harsh with him than I was with you... Talk to him and listen to what he has to say," I said.

It was after ten and the evening was warm.

Kick-Ass and I headed towards the water, in Beast.

Kick-Ass parked up and ten minutes later, we were standing on the top of a twenty-seven storey building on the South Shore, looking across at the City of Chicago. It was actually a wonderful sight, all lit up.

Kick-Ass pulled off his mask and sat down cross-legged, with his back against the top of the lift shaft.

I pulled off my mask and sat down opposite him.

"You know, Dave, you look super gay sitting like that!"

"Funny you should say that... Years ago I spent three months pretending that I was gay! Speak to Marty, he enjoys telling that story!" Dave replied.

"I assume you aren't..."

"No, I am not gay, although some people thought I was after I was found stabbed and naked, following my first outing as Kick-Ass, which did not go according to plan!" Dave replied, looking rather embarrassed.

"When did you first see people die?" I asked, tentatively.

"The night I told you about, at Rasul's. When Little Miss Psycho, sliced and diced, showing off to me!" Dave replied. "That really shook me the fuck up! I was ready to quit, right there. I was in waaaaay over my head! Didn't help when I then got a visit, from two fucking nut cases!"

"When did you first kill?" I asked.

"The night when I rescued Hit Girl, with the Jet Pack and Gatling guns. I shot three guys, from a distance, but it scared the hell outta me! Then of course I blew Frank D'Amico out of the window, with a bazooka. There, I was closer and got to look into his eyes, as he saw his own demise. I felt no emotion, at that point, but later on, it hit me. Admittedly, killing with Gatling guns or a bazooka, is not very personal, but both times I did it to save somebody, somebody I owed. At that point, I felt one hundred percent responsible for Mindy's Dad's death, so I felt I had to act, to back her up and save her life... Twice!" Dave elaborated.

"It took me a while to start to come to terms, with what I had done. I never have got over it, really. I always hate having to kill, but in this line of work, it is necessary. Kill or be killed! Some choices suck, big time! Killing eats away at you, but I have Mindy to talk to and she knows what I am going through. I don't even want to think about how many people have died, at Hit Girl's hands and I have never asked, but I believe Mindy remembers every single person, that she has killed. But after ten years of killing, she is able to bury the emotions. She can be a real hard bitch, sometimes, but that is just her way of dealing with things."

"Now, this is between you and me, nobody else!" Dave cautioned. "What shocked me the most, about Hit Girl, when I first met her, was how cold she was, about what she did. Even when her Dad died, she never cried, or showed any emotion, except maybe anger and a desire to kill me! She channelled her anger into revenge and went after Frank D'Amico. She fucked up; she wasn't thinking correctly when she acted in the heat of the moment. If she had stopped, taken an hour to collect her thoughts, then maybe she might have been able to assault Frank D'Amico, without my help. Hindsight is a wonderful thing, but at the time, not very helpful!"

"Any of that make sense?" Dave asked, finally.

"Yeah, it does," I admitted and it did. The more I understand how Dave and Mindy operate and cope with what they do, the more I am able to reconcile myself, when I am forced to kill and take part in unspeakable acts. There are times that Mindy scares me, but I know that she would never hurt me, at least not intentionally!

Have I made the right choice, about being a vigilante? So far, I don't regret it, but the time may come, when I will regret my choices and actions. I have to admit that Mindy has a 'Jekyll and Hyde' personality. She can switch instantly, from being sweet and lovable, to being a vicious, blood-thirsty killer! I aspire to be like Hit Girl; but is that what I want to become? I understand that Damon, Mindy's Dad, was a little unhinged, to put it politely! Mindy only had her Dad, to keep her right, but I have Dave and Mindy and both are doing everything they can to help me. The partnership, we agreed on, months ago, was working. Every time I made a mistake, or I encountered a problem, one or other of them was there to help me. It helps a bit that my Mom knows about Shadow and what I do, but I can't talk to her about this, even though I know my Mom is hiding something from me; something about her past. Dave and Mindy are like a big brother and big sister to me and I feel like I can talk to them about anything.

After forty-five minutes on the rooftop, we headed down and back to Beast.

"Kick-Ass, Battle Guy! Er... Can you come back to the safehouse!"

"Problem?" I asked.

"Possibly!" Battle Guy replied, cryptically.

..._...

Forty minutes later we pulled into the safehouse.

When the lights came back up, I actually considered reversing back out. On the mat were four people. Mindy looked unhappy, Marty looked concerned, Curtis was smirking and Dr Bennett, wow, I felt scared! I pulled off my mask and looked down at Chloe, who pulled her mask off, very slowly. She looked scared, too.

Safehouse A

I think I was shaking; I knew why my Mom was here, I was dead.

My life was over, Mom will probably lock me in my room and wall up the door!

I got out of Beast and moved slowly towards my Mom.

My Mom met me half way, Curtis started to follow, but one look from my Mom and he retreated and hid behind Mindy.

"Where do we start?" Mom began. "Go suck a cock!" and 'I am not a fucking slut, bastard!'. Do any of these ring a bell?"

"You saw that, did you?" I said, smiling briefly.

"My daughter, the vigilante, was one thing! I know you have taken a life, more than one, in fact. But I never expected to actually see my daughter take a life, on the damn internet!"

I didn't dare say anything!

"I will admit, though, that you didn't have much of a choice. It wasn't your fault, the bank was seized and I did admire your bravery. I also admired the way you stood up to those bastards and considering my past experiences, I can't hold that against you. The bastard deserved what he got!" Mom finished.

"So, I might just live past tonight?" I asked, tentatively.

"If you keep your wits about you, like you did at the bank, then yes, you probably will! Even '...the most vindictive, the most sadistic and most violent, assassin out there...' says you were brilliant!" Mom replied, looking at Mindy, who blushed and Dave laughed.

I ran forward and gave my Mom a big hug. My Mom let something slip: 'considering my past experiences, I can't hold that against you', what did that mean?

"Isn't it past Curtis' bedtime?" I asked, smirking at Curtis, who glared back, quite effectively.

Chapter 52*: Thoughts Of What Could Have Been

The following week
Monday, Morton Grove

I woke up with very mixed feelings.

Today would have been his fourteenth birthday!

But he was dead! His death was the reason that I was now in Chicago.

I miss him so much, it hurts! Days, like this just suck. At least I have others to be with today and I know that I can talk to Mindy, later on.

I miss you, Josh!

West Ridge

When I got to Dave and Mindy's house, Dave was out, with Marty.

"Curtis, go amuse yourself with something sharp, I need to talk with Mindy," I said.

Curtis glared; the little shit has been learning how to glare properly, by watching me! He went through to the living room and started watching TV.

..._...

"You need to talk?" Mindy asked, sounding a little apprehensive.

"Yeah, privately!" I said, looking towards Curtis.

"Come upstairs," Mindy said.

We went upstairs to Dave and Mindy's bedroom and sat on the couch. Mindy closed the door, after Sophia had come in and curled up on the bed.

"What's the disaster?" Mindy asked.

"I need some advice, about guys," I asked, feeling a little embarrassed.

Oh fuck!

"I am not the best person, for that!" I replied, blushing.

"Why?"

"I only got interested in guys, properly, last year... And well, I've only been involved, with one guy..."

"So... Before you got interested in guys, you were interested in girls..." Chloe asked, smirking.

"Do you really want to die!" I growled, menacingly.

"Sorry, just askin'!" Chloe responded.

"Chloe, you are a friend and a partner, so I will let that implication slide! I am not, nor have I ever been, a fucking dyke!" I growled.

"Shame!" Chloe said, shamelessly, with a grin.

"What!" I exclaimed.

"Just fuckin' with ya!" Chloe assured me.

"Okay!" I said slowly, not entirely convinced. "Getting back on track..."

"Dave was your first?" Chloe asked.

This was getting a bit personal, but it was Chloe and I liked to act like a big sister for her, when needed.

"Yeah, Dave was my first kiss, last year. I kissed him, minutes before I left New York," I explained.

"I... It... Today, would have been Joshua's fourteenth birthday... I miss him," Chloe said.

Ah, finally, the reason behind this weird conversation.

"I honestly, have nothing to relate to, on that subject. I have only ever lost my Daddy, I never knew my Mother. I suppose I came close to believing that I had lost Dave, after I left New York; I kinda went a little bit nuts!" I explained, feeling slightly embarrassed.

This was different, I talked to Dave, but not about girly things. Somehow I felt comfortable, talking to Chloe and she seemed to feel comfortable talking to me. It kinda felt good inside. I am not a people person, I kill people, I don't bond with them! At least, that was the way it was, when I was with Daddy. He never allowed me to have friends and did not like the way that I talked about Kick-Ass! Now though, I have a friend, I have a partner: Dave. I also have Marty and Chloe, not to mention Sophia, Abby and I suppose, Curtis and Kyle! That is a significant increase, over a few years ago!

"By 'a little bit nuts', I assume you slaughtered people, violently!" Chloe stated, with a laugh.

"Actually, yes," I replied, feeling a bit embarrassed, with the admission. "I lost control of my emotions and let Hit Girl control me, which was not good for certain low life scum in Chicago!"

"And it took Dave, to bring you around," Chloe stated.

"It did, again!" I replied. "I owe Dave an awful lot!"

"I hope I find somebody as amazing!" Chloe said, blushing.

"You will. I did, although I did have to kick him into shape first!" I acknowledged.

We went back down to the living room and were very surprised by what we found.

Curtis was flipping Chloe's training balisong and was actually quite good with it!

"What the fuck, do you think you are doing with that?" Chloe exploded.

"What does it look like?" Curtis retorted. "You said: 'go amuse yourself with something sharp!'"

"He's actually rather good!" I commented.

"What!" Chloe said, angrily.

"He's been watching you and learning; bright kid!" I said, glaring at Chloe, who got the message.

"Okay! Just don't mess with the real ones! I don't want you mutilating yourself; only I'm allowed to do that!" Chloe growled. "Besides, you'll probably cut your own dick off!"

"She's right, Curtis! Touch a real Balisong and I'll cut your fucking hands off!" I said, seriously.

"When can I get a knife?" Curtis asked.

"Come back and ask me again, once you've started puberty!" I suggested.

There had been one other issue raised, since the attempted bank heist.

With the new YouTube video appearing, the old ones were dug out, too!

Everybody watched Kick-Ass, on his début outing, getting his ass kicked, but otherwise getting the job done! Plus that immortal quote: 'I'm Kick-Ass!', that brought him to the attention of the world... And me! That was the night that I first saw him and Daddy had coined the name 'Ass-Kick! I had to smile at that, it was a happy memory... 'That doesn't even make sense!'; I could remember myself saying that, to Daddy.

Unfortunately, with that video came the other one! The one that neither of us liked very much! I had to admit, I was appalled, when I watched it and saw how Kick-Ass was being beaten, but also how my Daddy was being beaten. I'd always avoided watching that video, but I felt I had to now. We watched it together, just the two of us. I felt Dave flinch, everytime Kick-Ass was hit. I flinched, everytime Daddy was hit. I vividly remembered the warehouse and the killing, my Daddy helping me, as he burnt. By the end of the video I was shaking and Dave was holding me tight. That night was not fun, all the nasty nightmares came back, for both of us!

Dr Bennett had, of course, seen these other two videos. She thought that the Kick-Ass début, was amusing! I had to laugh and Dave just scowled. Then Dr Bennett mentioned the other one! She was appalled, with what she had seen and said she was very sorry about my Daddy. Dr Bennett said that she understood, why we were pursuing the D'Amico family; they were pure evil.

What ever happened, I would never let anyone betray us again, there would not be another 'Red Mist' episode, ever!

Chapter 53: Parents and Guardians

Author's Note:

'West Ridge' refers to the home of Dave and Mindy, as that is the part of Chicago, where they live.
'Morton Grove' refers to Chloe's home, as that is the part of Chicago, where she lives.

Four days later
Friday morning
West Ridge

This day was going to be really crappy.

I couldn't believe it, I had fucked up, big time!

"You missing something?" Dave asked, coming in from the garage, lugging several large bags.

"Yeah..." I replied, slightly distracted.

"Might these help?" Dave asked, throwing a small packet at me and reading off of an identical packet. "The Perfect Tampon for: A teen looking for high performance protection to help keep her in the game!"

"Fucking asshole! But thanks, I forgot to get any!" I replied and felt myself blushing! Okay maybe the day wasn't going to be so bad!

"I really hope I didn't just hear Dave reading from the back of a tampon packet!" Chloe said, following Dave in from the garage.

"Hi Chloe! Unfortunately, you did!" I said, with a grimace.

"Ugh!"

"Well Little Miss Bleeds-a-lot, forgot to get any!" Dave said, happily. "I have the dates marked on my calendar, in scarlet!"

"You need any?" I asked Chloe, ignoring Dave.

"No thanks, I have plenty!" Chloe replied, blushing a little.

"Oh yes, I almost forgot, you two are in sync!" Dave said. "Bloody nightmare!"

"You wanna kill him?" I asked Chloe. "I really can't be bothered!"

"Nah! Today sucks enough!" Chloe replied.

The evil asshole just started laughing.

"You hungry, girl?" I asked.

"Definitely!"

I proceeded to cook some bacon and eggs for us all. Dave said I was actually getting quite good at it and the eggs were actually edible! Asshole! At least Dave knows not to antagonise me, when I am cooking with a knife close to hand!

I dumped a full plate in front of Chloe and another two plates, for me and Dave.

"Hey, asshole! Breakfast is ready!" I called.

..._...

Once breakfast was completed, we settled down for a peaceful morning, as Chloe and I both felt sore.

Dave, of course, had no sympathy for either of us, as usual!

There are times, that being a teenager and being a woman sucks, big time!

That same time
Morton Grove

"Hey, where's Chloe?" Commander Ryan Bennett asked his wife.

"With friends," Dr Cathy Bennett replied. "She took Curtis, reluctantly!"

"Oh, okay. I thought I might spend some time with her today," Ryan replied.

"You'll have plenty of time. Anyway, I need to talk to you about something, Ryan"

"Oh, am I going to like it?"

"Probably not, to be honest! You remember what happened to us, all those years ago?"

"I'm not likely to forget it, Cathy! Why?"

"You've seen that vigilante video, that's been going around, recently?" Cathy asked, delicately.

"Oh, the Chicago bank thing? Spread around the ship, like wild fire! Everybody loves those guys and seeing them in action, well..." Ryan said, excitedly.

"What did you think of them?" Cathy asked, innocently.

"The two young women were really good. That Shadow is something else, though, most of the crew think that she's really hot! And that Hit Girl, wow!" Ryan replied, enthusiastically.

"Shadow didn't seem... Just a little bit familiar?" Cathy prompted.

"Not really, why should... No... You have got to be fucking kidding me!" Ryan exclaimed, as comprehension dawned. "You telling me that Shadow is..."

"...our daughter; our thirteen year-old daughter!" Cathy confirmed. "Chloe is Shadow!"

"Fuck me!"

Cathy frowned at Ryan.

"I mean... I... Part of me says: 'Fuck!' and another part of me says: 'My daughter is being trained, by the best!', but I keep coming back to: 'Fuck!'. I am completely astounded!" Ryan admitted, finally.

"Tell me about it!" Cathy admitted.

"Screen grabs have been printed out, by the tens of dozens and are probably in every rack onboard! I don't even want to think about what those young kids are doing with that picture at night! Damn, I can't exactly order them taken down, can I? I can't exactly say that it's my daughter they're in love with, she'd be behind bars in seconds!"

"Talk about a problem child!" Cathy said.

"The young vigilante, that I have been cheering on and saw kill a man, was my own daughter!" Ryan muttered incredulously.

That same afternoon
West Ridge

Chloe and I were sparring.

We were being cheered on by Abby and Curtis. Marty was out and Dave was upstairs.

"You're getting slow, Mindy!" I goaded.

"In your fucking dreams, short-ass!"

"Come on down, guys," I heard Dave say and looked up.

"Hi, Commander, Dr Bennett," Mindy said, with a wave.

"Hello Mindy," Dr Bennett said.

"Hi, Mindy, kids," Commander Bennett said. "Just thought I'd pop over to see how my little girl was doing, er, with her Aikido."

"She's doing very well, Commander!" Mindy replied.

"Well, I thought I'd try her out!" Commander Bennett challenged.

"You can try, Commander!" I replied and Mindy left the mat and my Dad dropped his jacket and kicked off his training shoes.

"Give me your best shot, Chloe," Commander Bennett said.

A little over five minutes later, Commander Bennett was flat on his back, with Chloe's knee in his chest, pinning him down.

"You had enough, Daddy!" Chloe said, sarcastically.

Commander Bennett, nodded and Chloe let him stand up.

"Okay, let's see what you can do now...!" Commander Bennett said, with a smile. "...Shadow!"

"Okay... What...! What did you say?" Chloe blurted out, after a short hesitation, when the penny had dropped.

Oh! Dr Bennett has told the Commander... This should be good. I looked over at Dave, who just shrugged.

"I've seen you in action, Shadow... I will admit, you are very good..."

"You're not gonna let me go out again, are you?" Chloe, said angrily, glaring at her father, who didn't flinch.

"I know you think I'm too hard on you Chloe, but I just don't want you to make the same mistakes your Mom and I made," Commander Bennett replied.

"Yeah, yeah, I've heard it all before, Commander!" Chloe shot back, insolently, before turning away from her father.

"Chloe, look at me!" The Commander called.

Chloe turned on reflex and glared at her father.

"Chloe, when I heard about your, er, extra-curricular activities, I was a little shocked!"

"To put it mildly!" Dr Bennett said, receiving a glare from her husband.

"Looking again at the bank footage, I was proud of you, very proud!" Commander Bennett said, looking directly at Chloe.

Chloe just blinked, I don't think she'd ever heard something like that, from her father! Up till now, I'd had the distinct impression that they didn't quite get on, not like a father and daughter should.

"Thank you, Daddy!" Chloe said, happily, giving her father a big hug and I could see tears in her eyes.

"I love you, Chloe and I always am, very proud of you! You really have improved and I suppose I have you to thank for that... Hit Girl..."

I didn't miss a beat, I had expected that.

"You said you wanted Chloe to learn some new skills..."

"I did, didn't I and I suppose I can't complain; she is learning from the best!"

I actually felt myself blushing!

"Daddy, do you want to... Mindy can we?" Chloe asked, excitedly.

I smiled. "Commander, let's go for a drive!" I said.

Safehouse A

Forty minutes later, we pulled into Safehouse A.

"Commander, welcome to Safehouse A," I said, getting out of the SUV.

Chloe and her father, got out of the SUV and the Commander was looking around, wide eyed! He really liked the Fat Boy and the Ducati.

"I prefer the Fat Boy; sorry Mindy!" Chloe stated.

"Not a problem. I can go faster on my own!" I grinned.

"So this is where you train, properly?"

"Yes, Daddy. Come on..." Chloe replied, pulling her father towards the armoury.

..._...

"Oh wow!" Commander Bennett said, examining the weapons and blades.

"This is mine," Chloe said and dragged her father over to her combat suit.

"Wow, that is very neat, love the aikidogi and the hakama! Surprised it's not dumped on the floor, like normal!"

"Oh she used to, until I explained to her how much the damn thing cost!" I growled, making Chloe blush with embarrassment.

"That is my bō-staff and my Jō, plus my firearms," Chloe said proudly, showing her father the FN Five-SeveN and FN P90, to change the subject.

"You have a P90?"

"I have a P90!"

"She has a P90!" I confirmed. "Chloe is a crack shot with it, too!"

"You look after your team, Mindy!" The Commander acknowledged, as we headed upstairs.

..._...

"Each member of the team has weapons and equipment selected to suit their individual skills and capabilities. Dave has a Glock 17, as he has bulk and strength, he has also had cause to use the H&K 121 that you saw downstairs. Chloe has her FN Five-SeveN, as it is small enough for her hands and has a reduced recoil, that suits her arms and body. The P90 was selected for the same reason. Dave and I use the H&K G36C, when required," I explained, over a coffee. "Kick-Ass' combat suit has heavier armour than ours, mainly because Dave can handle the extra weight, but our combat suits must be flexible enough for Martial Arts, which limits the armour that we can carry. We also have shields that can stop a fifty-calibre round, if called upon."

"Chloe mentioned that you were partners, how does that work?"

"All of us in Fusion are partners; Dave, Marty, Chloe and myself, so far. We look after each other and Chloe has proved herself, on many an occasion. We all trust Chloe with our lives and have done so. Yes, Dave and I are the senior partners and I have been doing this for many years, since I was six. Chloe is also part of our 'inner-circle', of which there are only five people, so far. Chloe is now, the third most senior member of Fusion. Operators rank over the Technical Support guys, so to speak. Marty has been with us much longer than Chloe, but with her combat experience, Chloe ranks higher. She may be young, but she can think on her feet; as she proved at the bank! I'd complain about her language and complete lack of shame, but I'm not any better!" I explained, blushing a bit, at the end.

"I am genuinely in awe of your accomplishments here, Mindy! I suppose now might be the best time to tell Chloe that she is now the favourite pin-up girl, in every rack, onboard my destroyer!" Commander Bennett said, casually.

"What...! I suppose I should be flattered!" Chloe said, blushing.

"Look, Mindy. Tomorrow night, the whole team, come over for dinner, at our place!" The Commander offered.

I looked at Chloe, who nodded excitedly.

"Yeah, no problem... Oh, hang on, Marcus arrives tonight; he's my guardian," I said, adding. "He knows all about Fusion."

"Bring him along. We'll have something in common and it'll be nice to be able to discuss my vigilante daughter, with another parent, who has a vigilante daughter!" The Commander suggested, smiling.

Chloe and I looked at each other and we both cringed at the thought of Marcus and Commander Bennett, discussing us!

Chapter 54: The Calm Before The Storm

Author's Note: Please be warned, there is moderate smut in this chapter!

The following night
Saturday
Morton Grove

I was nervous, very nervous.

In fact, I don't think I had ever felt this nervous! Why should I feel nervous, this is stupid!

Dave, Marty, Marcus and myself had just arrived at Chloe's house.

Marcus arrived last night, from New York and when I had told him about the dinner, he was very keen to go! Now that worried me; for Marcus to be keen about anything that involves Hit Girl is, to say the very least, rare and possibly disturbing!

I was dressed in a short dress, that I had bought earlier today just for the occasion and it was, of course, purple! Dave and Marty refused to dress up and just wore smart pants and a shirt.

Commander Bennett answered the door.

"Wow, Mindy that is a very nice dress! It's a shame that I very rarely get to see Chloe in a dress! Come in, all of you!"

Abby was with Chloe and Curtis, in the living room, Dr Bennett was in the kitchen. Both Abby and Chloe jumped up, as we came in.

"Hi Mr Williams!" Chloe and Abby both said.

"Hi girls!" Marcus replied.

"Marcus, meet Commander Bennett," I said.

"Ryan," Commander Bennett said, introducing himself. "My wife, in the kitchen, is Cathy."

"Hi, it's good to finally meet another vigilante parent!" Marcus replied, shaking Commander Bennett's hand.

I looked at Chloe and grimaced.

..._...

About twenty minutes later, we were all sitting down at the table in the dining room and we had started eating.

I was still feeling nervous and apparently my nervousness was justified.

"So, Ryan, what was it like finding out that you had a vigilante, for a daughter?" Marcus asked, innocently, with a smirk in my direction.

Both Chloe and I shrank down in our chairs. Dave, Marty and Curtis all laughed. Assholes! Commander Bennett smirked at Chloe, before answering.

"Well, one minute I have a sweet, innocent, little girl and then the next minute, I have a vicious, evil, foul mouthed young vigilante!"

Chloe blushed and concentrated on her food. Curtis almost chocked on a potato, while laughing, too much! I just glared at Marcus, while giving Curtis a hard slap on the back.

"Well, I have some wonderful stories for you, Ryan. Most of which I think I'll tell you in private, otherwise I might be the next target of Hit Girl!" Marcus said. "On that subject, though, while it is nice to know that Mindy could kill me, any one of a hundred ways, I know that no matter how much I wind her up, she will never lay a finger on me!"

"Don't I know it!" I grimaced, stabbing my steak, viciously, causing some laughter.

"So, how did you get involved, with Mindy?" Commander Bennett asked Marty.

"Pure accident really. I've know Dave since kindergarten, almost. I'd seen the Kick-Ass' début video and thought it was way cool! But I would never have guessed that Dave was Kick-Ass, I mean who would?" Marty explained.

I laughed at that and Dave grimaced.

"A few years later I joined up with some other vigilantes, in New York and met Kick-Ass, for the first time. I then discovered that Kick-Ass was Dave! I was shocked, really shocked!" Marty elaborated.

"Yeah, right, 'Batman'!" Dave quipped, with a laugh and Marty scowled.

I laughed, too, as I had heard about Battle Guy's first 'back story'! Dave briefly elaborated about that story, while Marty squirmed! After which, Marty continued.

"Well, I joined Kick-Ass and Hit Girl in a monstrous fight, against Chris D'Amico and we won! I still didn't know that Mindy and Hit Girl, were the same person! I mean, who would? Mindy was this shy girl, who kept herself to herself, while Hit Girl, well..." Marty finished.

Now it was my turn to squirm!

"Marty, Mindy and I went to the same school and I helped her get over the death of her father. I was supposed to be looking after her at school, not that that was necessary, as she hospitalised two bullies, on her very first day!" Dave explained. "You don't try and extort lunch money out of Hit Girl, even if she is only eleven!"

Now I was blushing and concentrated extra hard on my steak. I could feel eyes on me from several directions and Marcus was smirking! I remembered that first day, at school, it was kinda fun!

"Well, Mindy vanished from New York, after the big fight and Marty worked out that Mindy and Hit Girl, were one and the same. During one of his visits to Chicago, Marty discovered that Mindy was in Chicago and I went out in search of her. The rest is, as they say, history," Dave finished, smirking at me.

"Did Mindy continue as a vigilante, then, after her father died?" Dr Bennett asked Marcus.

"Well, she stopped for a while, but then, when she was around fourteen or fifteen, she started avoiding school and planning Hit Girl's grand return!" Marcus replied, making me squirm again. "You know how these teenager's are! She almost managed to pull a 'Ferris Bueller' on me, but she slipped up and I banned her from ever being Hit Girl again!"

"Yeah, that was quite a roller-coaster ride!" Dave admitted. I glared at Dave, willing him not to mention the 'date ditch'.

"She did what she was told?" Commander Bennett asked, surprised.

"Reluctantly! Now I think back, I don't think I did the right thing, forcing her not to be Hit Girl and to be Mindy Macready. Well, she did her best, she really did, but Hit Girl is who she is, who she will always be. You can't just will somebody to be who they are not," Marcus replied. "It tore me apart watching her internal torment."

I had never heard Marcus say anything like that before, but it made me feel good inside.

"I have to admit, it sounds familiar: I regularly hear a certain expression, which I suppose could be paraphrased into 'Once a Hero, Always a Hero, there are no ex-Heroes'!" Commander Bennett said.

"Very true!" Marcus agreed.

"I agree, but with Marcus' attempt to humanise Hit Girl, I got to see a different side to Mindy. The softer, more caring side and well, I started to fall for her, in between getting the smelly stuff, literally kicked outta me! I was already her best friend, but Marcus was determined to stamp out Hit Girl and stop Mindy seeing me, thankfully he ultimately failed," Dave explained. "Mindy and Hit Girl are one and can never be separated, her training is so ingrained."

"Now, I don't know if Chloe will be the same or not and I know that she has lost somebody that she really cared about, which prompted her to become Shadow. We've been doing our best to educate her about Fusion and that we're not just about killing and maiming. We do, what we do, to help those, who can't help themselves. Yes, we have an underlying reason to be and that, is to eradicate the D'Amico family. That is the reason why Hit Girl was originally created and I helped her fulfil that initial reason for her existence. Since then Chris D'Amico and his alter egos appeared and he had to be stopped!" Dave elaborated.

Curtis and Abby were listening to every word. Curtis actually had a fork of food poised in front of his mouth, but was listening so intently that he had forgotten all about it! Chloe of course, had heard all of this before, as had Marty and Marcus. Commander Bennett and his wife, looked impressed by what they had heard.

"Thank you, Dave, Marty and Marcus. That was good to hear. How Chloe develops, is important to us, but we are happy that she is in the right hands and rather she be out with you, Mindy, than out there, on her own!" Dr Bennett said, smiling at me and causing me to blush.

..._...

After dinner, we sat down in the living room for coffee.

I had to admit that I didn't feel quite so nervous any more. I actually felt comfortable, around Commander and Dr Bennett. I saw that Marcus, seemed to approve of what I was doing and how I was preparing Chloe for what was ahead.

Dave and Chloe were chatting with Abby and Curtis. For now, I sat on my own, which gave me time to think.

Was I doing the right thing? There was no preventing Chloe from going out as Shadow; she would do that on her own if I refused to take her. The best I could do was teach her how to protect herself and how to survive. Just what my Daddy taught me...

Although, naturally, I'd try to do it in less of a serious manner. My Daddy also taught me that it was all a big game, but that illusion came crashing down that night I was shot and my Daddy died! Chloe will not see this as a game, I need to show her that this is serious and people die. I've almost died on at least four occasions and three of those occasions required Dave to rescue me! So far Chloe has not been injured, in any way, just bruised. Me? I've been shot five times, in almost as many weeks, the latest requiring a doctor, to stitch me up!

"You okay, Mindy?" Marcus asked, walking over.

"I think so, just thinking about things... I hope I can make the right decisions, concerning Chloe!" I replied.

"I think you've done fine, so far! I'm proud of what you've done with your life and I am sure Damon would be proud, too," Marcus responded, with a genuine smile.

Four days later
Wednesday
West Ridge

This was the first chance that I had had, to sit down with Chloe, since the dinner.

"How have you been, since last week's, revelations?" I asked.

"I've been good. I'm actually pleased it all came out," Chloe replied, looking directly at me and smiling. "I'm getting on with my Dad, a lot better now. I would have hated trying to hide Shadow from him."

"I'm pleased to hear that, I really am," I replied. "... This is really difficult for me to say, but... I don't want you to be me..."

"I don't understand. You don't want me to be Mindy, or you don't want me to be Hit Girl?" Chloe asked, looking genuinely confused.

"Both. Mindy and Hit Girl are the same person. Currently, Chloe Bennett and Shadow are two different people and that's the way it should stay," I explained.

"But, right now, you are Mindy, you are sweet and caring, not like Hit Girl," Chloe replied.

"Chloe, that is where you are wrong. I am Hit Girl, twenty-four-seven. Thanks to Dave's influence, what you see, as Mindy Macready, shows up. Mindy Macready, is just Hit Girl, but a Hit Girl that is under control. Without Dave, I wouldn't be able to control Hit Girl, I mentioned that before. You can turn Shadow, on and off, at will. I can't do that with Hit Girl, I really wish I could, but I can't," I explained. "I'm damaged and I don't want that to happen to you."

Chloe looked worried.

"I've noticed you copying what I do; now that's fine, but I don't want you taking it too far. Not least because Curtis is copying you! I don't want you to be damaged, like me. Your Dad was right, you were a sweet, innocent, young girl and you can stay that way. I'm not saying ditch Shadow, but don't let Shadow control you like I let Hit Girl control me! Please, learn by my mistakes, Chloe," I said.

"I will Mindy, don't worry. I'll always listen to what you and Dave say, always!" Chloe replied.

That night

"You still worried about Chloe?" I asked.

"Not for the moment; we'll see how things go," Mindy replied, smiling up at me.

Mindy was lying on the bed, wearing just a towel. I had just come out of the shower.

"We've had no action for over three weeks, excluding he bank, of course! This feels like the calm before the storm, I dunno, it just doesn't feel right!" Mindy grouched.

"I can help you feel better!" I said, dropping my towel and pulling Mindy's open; she didn't resist, but she did blush! I could see the scars, from her bullet wounds and the cross-bow bolt. Her perfect, soft skin, was permanently marred, but I didn't care. Battered or bruised, she was still the young woman, I loved! I ran my hands over her pert nipples.

"Does that feel right?" I asked, as Mindy screamed at the touch.

"You damn well know it does, asshole!"

I let my left hand drift down her body, feeling Mindy tense, as I passed her soft, but solid stomach. My right hand continued to massage her left nipple, causing her breath to hitch and for her to moan. Mindy's breathing stopped, as my hand entered her, soft, pubic hair and started exploring what lay beneath.

"Oh, God!" Mindy finally breathed.

"Don't forget to breathe!" I whispered into Mindy's ear and she moaned again. Her eyes were tight shut.

I gently pushed a finger in and Mindy braced up, before she let out a loud moan. Her eyes flew open and almost bugged out, but she smiled! I continued exploring, with both hands. Mindy started to buck and thrash, on the bed. I continued to fondle her nipple and that special place, down below and this caused Mindy to thrash even more, before...

I screamed!

I couldn't help it! All those pent up emotions, from the past few days, just exploded across me, damn, damn, I couldn't breathe. I remembered my lover's words: 'Don't forget to breathe'. Every muscle in my body had seized up, especially those in my legs and around my crotch! I pounded the bed, with my right fist, the other fist pounded on Dave's back, before opening and I dug my nails in deep, causing Dave to yell out in pain!

Then I went limp and let out a scream, before sucking in air, like I had never breathed before!

"You liked that?" Dave asked, with his dorky grin.

"God, yes! Wow! You're getting better!"

"You are orgasming harder!" Dave replied, laughing.

I lay there, for what felt like hours, getting my breath back. My chest was heaving and Dave was watching my breasts go up and down!

..._...

"Okay, cunt, my turn!" I growled, flipping Dave onto his back and kissing him deeply.

I felt his erect member, between my legs, begging for entry. Not yet!

I stared into his luscious, blue eyes and as usual, I could see his love and desire for me and I knew that would never change. I went back to kissing, I felt his tongue and it felt...

I decided to exercise my tongue, somewhere else. I slid down and perpendicular to his body, before grabbing him and taking him into my mouth. Dave drew a sharp intake of breath, before letting out a small moan, which steadily increased, as I ran my tongue around him.

Now, I thought, how far was I going to take this? I remembered what happened months ago, at the end of October, when I first took this all the way and then again in Indianapolis! Oh, what the fuck, I loved the taste and the feeling!

Minutes later and after a lot of moaning from Dave, he started to thrash around and suddenly, I felt that warm, almost hot, feeling, as that liquid hit the back of my throat. I tried to keep my mouth wrapped around Dave, so I didn't get it everywhere, but I failed. I swallowed what I could, but then I had to let Dave go and received a shot, directly into my face, that dribbled down to my mouth, I licked off what I could reach and giggled! I felt a little weird, but then maybe I am weird, I have absolutely no fucking idea!

"Happy?" Dave asked, looking down at me and laughing!

"Very!" I giggled, grabbing my towel and wiping my face off, before scrambling up Dave and giving him a long, deep kiss.

When I let go, Dave just lay there, panting, then he reached out, with his hands and started massaging my nipples.

"Oh, fuck!" I exclaimed, before collapsing onto the bed and Dave rolled on top of me.

Chapter 55*: Jail Break

The following day
Thursday
New York City

2:34 A.M.

The explosion ripped, violently, through the prison block.

Alarms sounded across the island, well before the dust had started to settle. Mixed in with the sounds of alarms and falling rubble, were the sounds of men screaming. Those that did not scream, were already dead.

The dead were scattered around, several of the bodies, badly mangled in the explosion, or by falling rubble. It was sheer devastation. Men stumbled about, mauled, some missing limbs.

One man and one man alone, was smiling.

His time had come.

One of the coldest, most evil and calculating men, that the United States of America, had known, was about to be free!

..._...

A group of men, clad in black combat uniforms, ran through the devastation, shooting anybody who stood in their way, prisoners and guards alike. No quarter was given, as the men knew full well that their Boss would show none to them, if they failed and he had a very long reach!

The attack was a total surprise, to all, except for Ralph D'Amico. The relevant authorities had been bribed, threatened, black-mailed or worse, whatever worked! Very little resistance was put up, within the prison. Within twenty minutes, Ralph D'Amico was flying away from Rikers Island and heading for freedom. This matched a sudden, and coincidental, breakdown of local radar cover, meaning that he was impossible to track. He was now free, to launch his attacks on the two Cities. He wanted both Cities, as both Chicago and New York had a certain reputation and if he ran both, then his position would be unassailable.

However he had a large fly in his ointment and that fly was called Fusion!

Later that morning
D'Amico Penthouse
New York City

Ralph D'Amico exited the elevator and walked towards his new home.

"Who do you work for?" D'Amico suddenly asked, of one of the men, lining his route.

"The D'Amico Family!" The man responded, proudly.

"Wrong answer!" D'Amico said dangerously and turned to the man following him. "Get rid of him!"

The man following behind, Rico, pulled a stiletto knife and stabbed the man in the stomach, allowing him to fall to the floor and bleed out.

"Who do you work for?" D'Amico asked, of the next man, lining his route.

"You, sir!" The man responded, carefully.

"Fast learners, aren't they?" D'Amico laughed, as Rico pushed open the double doors, into his office.

D'Amico looked around approvingly.

"You've done well, Rico!" D'Amico said. "Thank you."

"By your command," Rico replied, closing the doors behind his Boss.

"Get that sorry, sack of shit outta here and clean up that fucking mess he made!" Rico ordered and two men jumped immediately into action.

Rico walked off and took station, over by the tall, floor to ceiling, panoramic windows and helped himself to a coffee on the way. Rico was the right hand man for Ralph D'Amico and could be just as ruthless and evil. It was a requirement for the job, many had failed and been replaced. With Ralph D'Amico, 'failed and been replaced', meant death. D'Amico rarely got his hands dirty, but was not above some dirty work, when it appealed to him. Rico was there, when the nephew, Chris, had tried to muscle in, with his own brand of evil. Ralph D'Amico was scathing, when it came to his nephew, especially now that Chris was dead and had failed, so miserably.

However, Chris was still a D'Amico and therefore there was a debt to be cleared. Ralph D'Amico was 'old school', when it came to how he ran his business. He had lost a brother and a nephew. Although he detested the nephew, he would still seek revenge for both dead relatives.

The targets had been identified, only this time, there would be no more stupid, ill thought-out plans.

That same evening
D'Amico Penthouse
New York City

The man was dragged through, from the elevator and into the room on the left.

He found himself being dumped, unceremoniously, into a chair. Two guards remained, on either side of him. D'Amico walked over, from the bar that was to the left of the large picture window.

"You must be Bartolemeo," D'Amico said, conversationally. "From Chicago."

The man was nudged sharply, by Rico.

"Yes!" Bartolemeo said, insolently.

"You worked for that cretin of a nephew of mine," D'Amico continued.

"Yeah!"

"Now you work for me, or you don't work!" D'Amico explained. "Or breathe, at all!"

"Sounds fair!" Bartolemeo admitted, reluctantly and knowing that he had no choice.

"Now, you will return to Chicago and get your cretins together and then I will send you instructions. You will follow those instructions, without a single deviation. Do I make myself clear?" D'Amico instructed.

"By your command," Bartolemeo acknowledged, he was learning.

Later that night
D'Amico Warehouse
New York City

The warehouse was enormous and very new.

The man was secured to a chair, he looked petrified. Rico stood in front of him and to the man's right. Directly in front of the man was the cause of his fear.

"Now, Sergeant, tell me, how did you survive the purge, after Gigante?" D'Amico said, calmly. "You turned, didn't you?"

"No, I... I didn't... I..."

The man screamed, as the machete, severed the fingers of his right hand. The man with the machete, stood back and looked towards Rico, who raised a hand.

D'Amico stared down at the man, with no emotion.

"Now, let's hear what you have to say."

"Fuck you, D'Amico scum!" The man yelled, through the agony.

D'Amico shook his head sadly, nodded to Rico and walked away from the scene, closing his mind to the screams, as the machete dug deep, again and again and again; then the screaming stopped.

Chapter 56*: Red Mist - Take Two

The following day
Friday
Chicago

With that major problem, yesterday morning, I decided we might need some extra support.

Only one other person was available and she was borderline useless, but we had no choice! I'd give her a short trial and if necessary kick her into touch. Dave wasn't so sure, but he agreed.

Let's see what Hawk could do!

That evening

I was out with Hit Girl and we were keeping an eye on some drug dealers, when my cell buzzed with a text.

'Sorry. Busy tonight. Will call tomorrow. Mindy.'

I decided to call Mindy, as nothing else was happening right now and Hit Girl herself was off checking on something.

The phone rang and then was answered.

"Hello?"

"Hi Mindy, it's Kim," I said.

"Oh, hello Kim!" Mindy replied. "Now isn't the best time, I'm kinda in the middle of something,"

"Never mind, so am I..." I stopped talking, as Hit Girl approached.

"Good, I'll see ya..." Hit Girl said, before she stopped talking and looked at me strangely.

"Bye!" We both said together and I heard it in stereo.

"What the fuck!" We both said, again in stereo.

I hung up the cell.

"Mindy?"

"Kim?"

"I'd never have guessed!" Hit Girl/Mindy growled.

"Neither would I!" Hawk/Kim replied.

So Kim is Hawk; I really would never have guessed, but it does explain why Sophia took to her so quickly! Dave will fucking love this! The only people Kim hasn't met, so far, are Marty and Chloe. Hawk has met Battle Guy and Shadow, but not Marty and Chloe. I don't like this, at all. I'm getting a bad feeling about this. I've had this feeling before, but when? Suddenly I remembered and felt rage boiling inside of me!

"Battle Guy, we're coming back in and I want Kick-Ass and Battle Guy there, too!" I said over the comms, before turning to Hawk.

"I think we need to talk, girl!" I said.

Safehouse A

"Dave, Hit Girl called and she's coming back in; she sounds pissed. She's bringing Hawk, too and she asked for 'Kick-

Ass' and 'Battle Guy' to be here," Marty said.

"Mindy's bringing Hawk to the safehouse? Something bad has happened, I can feel it and if she wants 'Kick-Ass' and 'Battle Guy' to be here, that means we need to get changed, Battle Guy!" I replied grimly.

..._...

About fifteen minutes later, I had changed into my combat suit and Marty was in his Battle Guy gear. A few minutes later, the lights went out in the safehouse and the main door slide open, allowing Beast to pull in.

I noticed that Hawk had a blindfold on and that Hit Girl did not look happy. Once Hit Girl climbed out, she went around the other side of Beast and hauled Hawk out, throwing her onto the mat, violently.

"What the fuck?" Hawk yelled, as she fell, before Hit Girl threw her onto her back and knelt down, holding her Tanto to Hawk's throat.

"Er, Hit Girl... What's happening?" I asked, feeling very confused.

"Kick-Ass, meet Kim Burgess!" Hit Girl said, pulling off Hawk's mask and blindfold, she blinked in the bright light.

"Kim?" I exclaimed, seeing her, by now very frightened, face. "Kim is Hawk?"

"Yup!" Hit Girl replied.

"I would never have guessed, but it does answer a few questions," I acknowledged.

"Yes, it does!" Battle Guy responded.

"What are you doing?" Kim asked, almost sobbing.

..._...

"You are a fucking cop and you were sent to infiltrate us, am I right?" Hit Girl snarled, viciously.

"No Mindy... No... I left Chicago PD, I promise!" Kim begged.

"I don't fucking believe you, bitch!" Hit Girl snarled, pushing the blade further and causing a little blood to run down the highly polished blade.

Kim screamed.

"Scream all you like, nobody will hear you. I am sure you know of my reputation, bitch!" Hit Girl growled, pulling her Tanto away and kicking Kim, across the mat.

Kim lay on the mat, sobbing and curling up in pain.

Hit Girl came over to me and Battle Guy.

"Pure accident, really! We both found out who each other was together! She's a cop and I need to be sure that she isn't a fucking plant. This may get messy, if either one of you want to leave, then please do so," Hit Girl said, conversationally.

"I'll stay to make sure you don't go too far, purple menace!" I said, feeling very concerned.

I hadn't seen Mindy like this in a while, she was cold and calculating. I had to remain to keep Hit Girl in check.

"I'll stay, too. Call me, if you need me," Battle Guy said, heading off to the briefing room.

Hit Girl proceeded to work Kim over, throwing and kicking her around the mat, ignoring the screams of pain.

Finally Kim couldn't move and she was in a lot of pain, not to mention the blood. Hit Girl dragged her over to a steel support and sat Kim against it, none too gently.

"You ready to talk, bitch?" Hit Girl growled, ominously.

"I am not a spy... I am not even a cop any more... Please believe me... You are my friends... I would never hurt either of you... I owe you both my life!" Kim begged, between sobs of pain and fear.

"You know what I can do to you, if I find out that you are lying to me, don't you?" Hit Girl growled, menacingly.

"Yes..." Kim screamed, staring up at Hit Girl and then looking over at me. There was genuine fear in her eyes and no hint of deception.

"Hit Girl, a minute..." I said, heading over to the briefing room.

"Don't fucking move, bitch!" Hit Girl snarled, before following me.

..._...

"She's telling the truth," I said. "Don't you think you've gone a bit far?"

"No!" Hit Girl replied, with a smile.

"She's innocent, Mindy and I trust her," I insisted.

"Okay, we'll dump her and forget we ever knew her!" Hit Girl responded, smirking.

"I know you don't mean that," I said, pulling off my mask.

"Okay, maybe I went a bit far, but I had to be sure. She could have been another 'Red Mist!' You remember how that went, don't you..." Mindy retorted, pulling off her mask and comms. Her face showed absolutely no emotion.

"You know how I feel about that night, Mindy! Don't fucking joke about it, you evil bitch!" I replied and started to feel anger, towards Mindy.

"Who said I was joking!" Mindy replied coldly, heading upstairs.

Oh, this is just fucking great!

..._...

I went back out to Kim and helped her up, she was still sobbing.

"I'm sorry Kim, Mindy went too far! But... She had her reasons, we've been betrayed before and Mindy's Dad was murdered the last time," I said, helping her into the briefing room and onto the couch.

"Hi Kim, I'm Marty," Battle Guy said, pulling off his mask.

"Hi Marty, I must look like shit," Kim said, trying to smile.

I let her get her breath back, for a few minutes.

"Okay Kim, let's get you cleaned up," I said. "Come on."

I took Kim upstairs to the kitchen.

"I assume you have clothes on, under your costume?" I asked.

"Yeah," Kim said, stripping out of her costume. She was wearing shorts and a t-shirt underneath.

"Fuck!" I exclaimed.

Kim had considerable bruising on her thighs, stomach and back, plus a split lip and bruised cheek.

"Go relax in a hot shower, then we'll get you home," I said. "I'll find some clothes for you to borrow."

Kim went into the bathroom and I went to find Mindy. I was feeling very angry, after seeing the injuries on Kim. Mindy went too fucking far!

..._...

I found Mindy in our bedroom, she was just getting dressed, after having taken a shower.

"You happy?" I asked, angrily.

"Dave, take your fucking tampon out, for fuck's sake!" Mindy growled.

"What!" I responded. "What the fuck is wrong with you, tonight?"

"I was trying to make sure nobody else got killed," Mindy threw back. "By a friend of yours!"

"Yes, Red Mist was my fault and yes Kim was a friend! There's nothing I can do about Red Mist, but you did not need to beat the crap out of her!" I yelled back.

"Well you fucked up once, you'll probably do it again! Last time I lost my Daddy, I'm not losing anything else I care about!" Mindy responded, darkly.

"Okay, what else might you lose that you fucking care about!" I shouted back.

"You, asshole!" Mindy said and tears started falling.

"That is no fucking reason to beat the shit out of somebody! You went too fucking far!" I retorted, angrily.

"I did it because I love you!" Mindy retorted, she was really mad.

"Bullshit, you did it because you could and you fucking enjoy it! Just fucking admit it!" I yelled back, getting angrier and I turned and went downstairs.

Marty appeared at the bottom of the stairs, looking very concerned.

"Keep out of this Marty, for your own sake. I can take her shit! Can you look after Kim? Make sure she gets some clothes and let her stay here tonight," I said.

"No problem Dave, I'll stay tonight and make sure she's safe. I'll go find the ice packs," Marty replied.

About five minutes later, Mindy came downstairs and she still looked mad.

"Well, bitch, you cooled down yet?" I asked, calmly.

"Oh yes, I'm cool, calm and collected, Dave! I'm surprised you're not upstairs fucking Hawk, she is a much better specimen than me, after all!" Mindy said, spitefully.

"Have you lost your fucking mind?" I spat, incredulously.

"Possibly! But that's me isn't it? I'm a heartless, psychotic bitch, remember!" Mindy screamed back.

What the fuck is going on? She's fucking lost it! I reached out a hand to touch Mindy, but she grabbed my arm and swung me around, before throwing me hard, onto the mat. She followed through and started attacking me, I felt her kicking and punching me as I lay on the mat.

I couldn't put up with this any more! I forced myself up, throwing her backwards and Mindy crashed onto the mat, she was beyond mad! She launched towards me, but I think her anger was clouding her judgement, as I was able to grab her and spin her around, before throwing her down hard, onto her back. The breath was knocked out of her lungs and she screamed in pain. I knelt across her legs, pinning them, before pinning her chest down, with my right fist.

"This fucking ends now!" I bellowed at her.

Mindy struggled, but I had her pinned down well.

"Get the fuck off of me, before I fucking kill you!" Mindy screamed.

"Not until you calm the fuck down!" I yelled back.

"I am going to fucking kill you, you worthless piece of shit!" Mindy spat.

I could see Marty standing by the stairs, with Kim. They were both shocked.

..._...

Suddenly, Mindy reached a hand behind her and a second later, I had a SIG Sauer P232 pistol, at my left temple. I froze, but I saw Marty dash into the armoury and reappear with my Taser.

"Now!" I yelled, pushing myself back and away from Mindy, as Marty brought the Taser up and fired it, from about 20 feet away. The barbs hit Mindy in the chest and she shook for about three seconds, before going still. Marty disconnected the wires from the Taser, rendering Mindy safe to touch. I checked Mindy's pulse, she was okay, but unconscious. I removed the barbs swiftly and Marty brought the first aid kit, so I could treat the small wounds.

Mindy started to come around, almost immediately. Marty inserted a fresh cartridge into the Taser and stood ready. I had already removed the magazine from the SIG and ejected the chambered round, throwing the empty pistol towards Marty, who pocketed it.

..._...

Mindy opened her eyes and looked directly up at me.

She seemed much calmer.

"What did I do?" She asked, simply.

"What do you remember?" I asked.

"I don't know... Why is my hand shaking? Ouch! Marty did you just fucking Taser me?" Mindy asked, looking around and seeing the discarded Taser cartridge and wires, plus Marty aiming the Taser.

"Sorry, Mindy, you were about to shoot Dave!" Marty said.

"Oh God... I remember now!" Mindy said, then she saw Kim. "Oh God, I'm so sorry Kim, I really am!"

Kim came over and helped Mindy up.

"Come on, you were having a flashback or something, I think. Marty explained about Chris D'Amico and Red Mist. I'm so sorry about your Dad. You thinking that I might be a plant must have set you off," Kim said. "I've seen it happen before, to cops."

Both girls headed upstairs, Kim helping Mindy, who was now crying.

I looked at Marty.

"Well I'm glad that's fucking over!" I said.

"Yeah! First time I've ever fired a Taser! It's pretty cool!" Marty said.

"At least it worked. The last time I fired a Taser, I didn't quite get the desired result!" I said, grimly.

I helped Marty tidy up and dispose of the deployed Taser wires, before stowing the Taser and Mindy's pistol.

I closed up the armoury and we both headed upstairs to bed. I headed into our bedroom and found Mindy lying on the bed, examining her Taser wounds.

"Now you know what it's like to have a Taser fired at you; Marty enjoyed the practice!" I said, smiling.

"Funny cunt! I suppose that's payback for me shooting you twice, without warning!" Mindy said, smiling back at me.

"Not even close! I love you Mindy and always will, no matter what you do to me!" I said, pulling her into a deep kiss and Mindy started crying, but she continued to kiss me.

"I love you Dave Lizewski!" Mindy said, cuddling in close. "And thank you!"

Chapter 57*: Emotion - Part I

The following week

Saturday

Safehouse A

"What is she doing?" Chloe asked, quietly.

"Packing!" I replied.

"What for? World War Three?"

"She is Hit Girl!"

"I know, but..."

"Look, if you two assholes are just gonna fucking annoy me, then you can fuck off!" Mindy interrupted, sounding rather annoyed.

..._...

It had been a difficult week.

Kim had been in a lot of pain, when she had woken up last Saturday morning and Mindy had felt really bad about what she had done and so did I! However Kim had accepted the reasons, for Mindy attacking her. Yes, Mindy went too far, but there were a few mitigating circumstances. Kim went home and is currently recovering from her injuries.

Mindy and I, though... Well the fight didn't help and although I didn't feel resentment towards Mindy, I was very concerned by her behaviour, no matter what triggered it and I felt that the fight had had an affect on our relationship. But I hoped that the love between us, would overcome this hurdle as it has many others.

Chloe was a bit shocked when she found out about what had happened and actually laughed when she heard that Marty had used the Taser on Mindy. Mindy was not amused and actually made Chloe blush with her profane retort!

Mindy was heading off to New York, for a few days, to see if she could track down Ralph D'Amico. She was taking Chloe, as backup. I would remain here in Chicago, in case anything blew up here and I had Marty and Sophia, as backup. If things blew up in New York, then I could head out to help. I was a bit concerned about us splitting up, but Mindy persuaded me that it would be a good idea, as we needed to investigate D'Amico in New York, but couldn't just leave Chicago undefended. I had insisted that she at least take Chloe with her. Dr Bennett had agreed to this, which was a bit of a surprise!

Talking of Marty.

Marty has made enormous progress, both with losing weight and getting fit. I won't say he is quite half the man he was, but not far off! It has been over two months, since he first started training with us and he is still serious about becoming an operator! Abby is also doing very well, too, as his potential replacement.

Later that afternoon

"Oh, I was wondering what you two were doing in the shower together!" I quipped.

Both girls glared at me and together they were kinda scary!

"Okay, it's not like I thought you two were... Getting up to anything... Er... Together!" I said, slowly, with a smile.

"You thought we were naked and might be fucking!" Mindy suggested, with a scowl.

"Possibly!" I replied, hopefully.

"Well we weren't naked!"

"So you were..."

"And we weren't fucking! How could you even...!"

"Okay! Like the new hair colour... Do the drapes match the carpet?" I asked facetiously. I think I was living dangerously, right now, but what the hell!

Chloe's mouth dropped open, in shock!

"No... And they ain't gonna, either! I can't believe you even asked that, Dave!" Mindy growled, blushing. "Get your damn mind out of the fucking gutter!"

"Sorry, couldn't resist fuckin' with ya!" I replied.

Chloe was blushing, too, but she still scowled at me!

Both girls had dyed their hair. Mindy was now a Soft Amber and Chloe was a Chestnut Brown.

My sordid imagination! Although watching two girls 'at it' was definitely a fantasy of mine, maybe when they're older...!

..._...

"You sure you have everything?" I asked, tentatively.

"Yeah, I think so," Mindy replied.

"The sink is still in the kitchen!" I teased.

I received a nasty glare in return! The glare quickly turned to sadness.

"I'm gonna miss you, Dave," Mindy said, quietly.

"I'll miss you, too, gorgeous," I replied, feeling sadness inside of me.

Sunday morning
New York City

We arrived in New York and Marcus was waiting for us.

He did not look pleased.

"Problem, Marcus?" I asked, with a worried feeling.

"I received a visitor three hours ago! Six in the damn morning!" Marcus replied, looking like he normally did, whenever strange things occurred in his life, especially things that involved Hit Girl!

"So it arrived then!" I responded, in a weak attempt at humour.

"Oh yes! One enormous wooden crate, delivered by a criminal, if ever I saw one!"

"Er, I assume the crate is safe?" I asked, tentatively.

"Yes, it is! You know what I think about you using my house as a 'base of operations!'" Marcus said, scowling.

"Well, I couldn't exactly have it delivered to the safehouse!" I retorted.

"Mindy... I... Sometimes, I really don't know what to do with you!" Marcus said, shaking his head.

"I know what you mean, Mr Williams!" Chloe laughed, from the back seat.

"Thanks, bitch!" I growled.

Four hours later
Marcus' House

"Time to go!" I said, inserting a magazine into a Glock 26, pistol and placing the pistol into a concealed holster, in the small of my back.

"I'm ready!" Chloe replied, doing the same, with her FN Five-seveN pistol.

"You girls, be careful!" Marcus warned, trying to keep the concern out of his voice, but failing. Marcus definitely seemed uncomfortable with two armed teenagers in the house, lucky for him he doesn't know what else I brought with me, or he might have a damn coronary!

"Hey, it's me!" I quipped.

"That's what I'm afraid of!" Marcus replied, sardonically.

We headed a few blocks north, before hailing a cab that would take us to a certain location, to the west.

..._...

"Stop here, please!" I called, to the driver.

I passed over the fare and a tip, before getting out with Chloe.

I felt strange inside; I had not been to this block for over three years.

"You okay, Mindy?" Chloe asked.

"Yeah, sorry. It just feels a bit strange being back here," I explained.

I walked down the block, and looked up at a particular building. Some of the units had broken windows and some were boarded up. The unit on the top floor seemed to have better quality windows, than the others. I smiled, it was home, sort of or at least it had been.

"Come on, I'm just being stupid!" I said, unlocking and pulling open the main door.

..._...

I stopped outside the apartment on the top floor and took a deep breath, before I inserted the key... Or tried to...

What the fuck? The key wouldn't go in properly...

My mind went into instant overdrive... The lock had been changed... Somebody was here... In my safehouse!

"Stand to!" I growled.

Chloe pulled out her pistol and chambered a round.

"The lock has been changed!" I said, pulling out my lock picks.

A minute later the lock turned.

I replaced my picks, pulled out my Glock and racked back the slide.

"Go!" Chloe said and I pushed open the door.

..._...

There was nobody, in the living room, but I did notice a complete absence of dust; there should have been a ton of it!

It felt strange, as I entered the apartment and my heart started to beat faster. All sorts of emotions flashed through me, along with the dreaded flashbacks. The flashbacks varied, between my Daddy, Dave and Marcus. The last flashbacks were the most disturbing, as they were after my Daddy had died. I saw myself starting to breakdown, when I saw the two cups of hot chocolate, with marshmallows, that I had made, then I saw myself start packing equipment into my pink suitcase. I saw myself almost shooting Dave, letting go of the trigger just before it broke. I saw myself looking at the jet-pack and that brought a smile to my face. The smile grew, as I remembered shoving the instructions at Dave. I remembered waking up with concussion, the following day and Dave helping me pack, to go with Marcus.

Get with it Mindy! I shook it off.

I signalled Chloe to keep an eye on the main door and the door to the gun room, on the left.

I first cleared the bedrooms and bathroom. Nothing, apart from the fact that almost everything was clean, at least in my old room and the bathroom. My bed no longer had pink bedclothes; the bedclothes were now blue!

I returned to the living room and stared at the closed door, the door to the gun room.

I listened at the door and could hear somebody moving around, in the kitchen.

This story continues in 'Feral, Chapter 9 - Emotion - Part II'...

Chapter 58*: Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 1

This chapter is in parallel with 'Feral, Chapter 10 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 1', which should be read first..

Author's Note: Please note that New York and Chicago are in different time zones. Therefore New York times are one hour ahead of Chicago. I have attempted to take these timings into account.

The next day
Monday

The following takes place between Midnight and 1:00 A.M.

West Ridge
Chicago

0:55 A.M.

Mindy called last night.

She told me all about this boy, called Joshua, who had been staying at Safehouse A, in New York. I understood that Mindy almost killed the boy! Not a surprise really; I would never invade a safehouse that belonged to Hit Girl, unless I was hoping to die! Apparently he was the boy that Chloe loved and was supposed to be dead! The kid had been in a coma and had only come around sometime in February. I rather thought that the story was a bit far fetched, but then a few years ago, I would never have believed the story about an eleven year-old assassin, called Hit Girl!

Mindy called again, about ten minutes ago, advising me that Marcus was going out of town for a few days. Mindy is intending to hunt down Ralph D'Amico, with Chloe's help and possibly this Joshua kid.

The following takes place between 4:00 A.M. and 5:00 A.M.

4:34 A.M.

The Fusion number rang.

It was Jack Bay and he had some very bad news.

Fusion was being hunted, by the Chicago PD.

Now he said that so far, he did not know who was calling the shots or who had initiated the investigation, but for now Fusion must go dark and not appear in public, day or night.

Jack would contact me, when he had further information.

I tried to get back to sleep, but couldn't, so I got up and started training.

The following takes place between 5:00 A.M. and 6:00 A.M.

5:54 A.M.

I was hungry and dripping with sweat, so I grabbed a hot shower and then went to find myself some breakfast.

The following takes place between 7:00 A.M. and 8:00 A.M.

7:15 A.M.

Marty appeared downstairs.

"How long have you been up?" Marty asked.

"Since half four! Jack Bay called..." I said and explained the call that I had received.

"That sucks!" Marty said and went off to get breakfast.

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 9:00 A.M.

Chicago Police Department
District 21
Chicago

8:22 A.M.

Sergeant Voight was not happy.

The task he had been given went against everything that he believed in!

"Right listen up!" He called, as he walked out of his office.

"Kick-Ass!" he said, putting up a, not so good photo, up on the board.

"Hit Girl!" Another, not so good photo went up.

"Shadow!" Another, this time much worse photo, went up.

"Now, I don't agree with this tasking and I sure you don't either!" he said to the three men and one woman, in front of him.

"You fucking kidding, me?" Olinsky asked. "Those guys are heroes!"

"Damn right!" agreed Lindsay.

"We have an expert on these guys; he's from the NYPD. He should be here any minute... Here we are!" Voight said, walking down the room, towards the stairs.

"Hey, appreciate you coming!" Voight said, holding out his hand. "Hank Voight!"

"Marcus Williams," Marcus said, introducing himself and shaking the outstretched hand.

"Antonio Dawson!"

"Erin Lindsay!"

"Adam Ruzek!"

"Alvin Olinsky!"

"Okay, you guys are nice! What's up with that battleaxe downstairs?" Marcus asked, with a smile.

"There isn't enough time in the day!" Olinsky offered, with a smile.

"I assume you are all up to speed as to why I am here," Marcus said, nodding at the photos and grimacing.

"I think it's horse shit!" Olinsky stated, causing Marcus to smile.

"So we are all agreed!" Marcus said, before continuing and walking up the room. "Ralph D'Amico, serial, evil bastard!" Marcus fished out a photo and stuck it to the board, on top of the existing three photos.

"Slippery bastard, blew his way out of Rikers a little over a week ago," Marcus explained, angrily.

"We heard about it!" Voight said, grimly.

The meeting was then interrupted.

"What the fuck is going on in this place?" Matthews asked, coming up the stairs. "I hear you're chasing Fusion!"

"Slow down, SWAT!" Voight said, heading Matthews off. "We are not investigating Fusion; we're after those that are!"

"Lieutenant Marcus Williams, NYPD, meet Sergeant Craig Matthews, CPD SWAT!" Voight said, introducing Matthews and Marcus.

"Hi Lieutenant!"

"Sergeant!"

"SWAT, are the biggest fans of Fusion out there! You need our support, we're there Voight!" Matthews said.

"Okay, get out there, find out who is driving this and get back to me!" Voight ordered his team, before heading back into his office, followed by Marcus, as the rest of the team headed downstairs.

The following takes place between 9:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

West Ridge
Chicago

9:28 A.M.

I received a call from Marcus, of all people and he was in Chicago!

He explained what was happening and that instead of tracking down Fusion, Voight and his team were now tracking down whoever set Fusion up! Marcus asked me to call Mindy, as he wanted to stay away from her, so that no connections might be made.

I had kicked Marty out of bed and let him know what was happening. He was shocked, but grabbed breakfast and was now on his computer, digging for information.

I dropped a text to Kim and advised her to stay off the streets, both as Kim and as Hawk.

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

West Ridge
Chicago

10:00 A.M.

I put my cell away, after calling Mindy.

It was really good to hear her voice again and to know that all was well. I did miss her, enormously. You never realise how much you'll miss someone, until they are gone! I rang Dr Bennett to let her know that I had heard from the girls. As expected, she really missed Chloe and worried all the time about her.

I took Sophia for a long walk, as there didn't seem much else to do right now and it would give me time to think. I left Marty digging through things and headed over to the park.

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 1:00 P.M.

West Ridge
Chicago

12:05 P.M.

The walk was invigorating and made me feel a lot more with it. I worried a lot about Mindy and also about Chloe. Chloe is like a little sister to me and I don't want anything to happen to her, but I also know that I can trust Chloe to have Mindy's back, when required. I also hope that Chloe will be level-headed when dealing with Mindy and her sometimes psychotic nature!

I miss Mindy enormously, we've only been a part just over a day, but I miss her. I also know subconsciously that she is over eight hundred miles away, just like before!

On entering the house, I found Marty chatting with Abby.

Abby was doing really well and passing all of Marty's geek tests! With Abby providing comms and technical support from the safehouse, Marty would be able to come out with us, as an operator. For now though, with Fusion technically grounded, we would stay away from the safehouse. This was okay as Marty could still access everything he needed to, from here.

It also gave me time, to train with Marty. Abby joined us when we trained, learning some basic defensive movements. Which I hoped that she would never need, but you never know!

The following takes place between 1:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

West Ridge
Chicago

1:23 P.M.

Dr Bennett came over for lunch, with Curtis.

Both were missing Chloe and were worried about what the two girls might be getting into. I was the same, so it seemed sensible to support each other. Curtis really did seem down and was really worried about Chloe, which was a bit of a surprise considering how badly Chloe usually treated the kid!

It seemed that Chloe was not all that good at calling her mother, in fact she had called only once, since they had got to New York! I promised Dr Bennett that I would let her know all was okay, whenever Mindy called.

I also updated Dr Bennett with the Fusion problem, so that she knew what was going on.

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 3:00 P.M.

West Ridge
Chicago

2:55 P.M.

Dr Bennett stayed with us for the afternoon, while Marty and I trained.

Abby and Curtis insisted on joining in! That little kid really does have a lot of energy and for that matter, so does Abby!

The following takes place between 3:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

3:15 P.M.

After a shower, I sat down to speak with Dr Bennett and we chatted about Fusion and other things. Dr Bennett reminded me that she was available at any time of the day, or night. I suggested that she take the name 'Medic' and she agreed, as it fitted what she did as a doctor. We then discussed a secure way of contacting her, without revealing her own identity and therefore Chloe's identity.

I asked about Curtis and what his parent's did.

Apparently, Curtis' parents were both lawyers and lived in Washington DC. They provided their services for quite high fees and were very successful.

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 5:00 P.M.

4:33 P.M.

Dr Bennett went home, taking Curtis with her.

I went up to our room and sat down with a book that I had been reading for a project that I was working on. I was hoping to be able to surprise Mindy with a new skill, but for now I was still learning and it may be some time before I am skilled enough to show it off. Only Marty knew what I was learning and it wasn't easy keeping it a secret from Mindy as she was always suspicious!

The following takes place between 5:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

5:55 P.M.

The rest of the day proved to be boring, to say the least.

I hoped Mindy was having more enjoyment than I was, at the moment.

Then I got a phone call. It was Jack Bay. He wanted to meet me and me alone, at his house in Vernon Hills. He gave me an address and suggested that I come as myself, for about eight, this evening.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 7:00 P.M.

Chicago Police Department
District 21
Chicago

6:30 P.M.

"So, what have you got," Voight asked his team.

"Not much, we know that somebody has put word out about Fusion. But that's it, we're leaning on everybody that we can!" Lindsay advised.

"Well, obviously you're not doing enough, I don't care how you do it, but I want something concrete!" Voight responded, obviously annoyed.

"It must be D'Amico; he has a nasty reputation and many people are too afraid to talk," Dawson said.

"Well, just make people more scared of us!" Voight suggested.

The following takes place between 7:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

Plaza Hotel
Chicago

7:22 P.M.

I had just finished a late dinner and was back in my room.

Voight had called and advised me of the lack of progress. I told him that I wasn't surprised. D'Amico had a long reach, a very long reach! He was scary when he was behind bars, but now...

My thoughts also drifted a few miles away to Dave and his team. Things could kick off in Chicago, any time! I also thought about Mindy and Chloe, hundreds of miles away, back in New York City. I hoped that Mindy wasn't going to do anything stupid. She can over react at times and go off and make stupid mistakes. Thankfully she has Chloe with her, which should help and at least provide some competent backup to Mindy.

That Ralph D'Amico is capable of anything! That man has no boundaries, at all! I just hope that Mindy leaves at least some of New York City still standing, by the time that she has finished with him! It worries me that she might go too far, to accomplish her mission, just like she did with Frank D'Amico, all those years ago.

Damn, I wish Damon was still here, at least Mindy would listen to him!

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 9:00 P.M.

The Farm
Vernon Hills
Chicago

8:02 P.M.

I turned left off of I-60, up the driveway to a large property set back from the road.

The drive had taken about forty minutes and just to be safe, I had Sophia with me. I pulled up outside the house and found Jack Bay waiting for me. We had met, just the once, after the Week of Hell.

"Hi Dave, you okay?" Jack asked, holding his hand out.

"Yes, thanks, hope you don't mind me bringing Sophia," I replied, shaking his hand.

"As long as she doesn't repeat anything we say!" Jack joked and lead me inside.

"You have a nice place here, Jack," I said.

"Thanks, we like it."

"Is that Mindy's mother?" I asked.

I had noticed a large photo, on the mantelpiece over the fire. The man was Damon, in NYPD uniform. The woman, had Mindy's eyes, her hair and her looks.

"That is Mindy's mother," Jack confirmed.

"Damn! If Mindy grows up to look like that, then I'll be a very lucky man!" I commented.

"She was lovely, a lot of people were very jealous of Damon!" Jack said.

At that moment a tall woman with brown hair, walked in.

"My wife, Natalie," Jack said, introducing the woman.

"Hello, Mrs Bay," I said.

"Natalie, this is Dave, Mindy's partner and Sophia."

"I'm really pleased to meet you Dave. Jack told me that Mindy was being looked after by a strapping lad," Mrs Bay said, with a smile.

"Thank you, you have a lovely place here, Mrs Bay," I replied, feeling a little embarrassed.

Mrs Bay vanished into another room, while Jack and I sat down to talk.

Jack explained about Voight's lack of progress, not his fault, but nobody was talking. That didn't surprise me, as D'Amico scared me, so I knew how others might feel! We discussed things for another hour; he was concerned about Mindy, in New York. I explained that she wasn't alone, but that she had another member of our team with her.

The following takes place between 9:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

The Farm
Vernon Hills
Chicago

9:15 P.M.

"Thanks Jack, I'll call you when I hear anything from Mindy," I said, shaking Jack's hand.

"I'll do the same, when I hear from Voight, or anybody else," Jack replied.

Sophia and I got back into the SUV and headed back home.

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and 11:00 P.M.

West Ridge
Chicago

10:02 P.M.

I arrived home and explained everything to Marty, who had been waiting for me to get back.

We then headed to bed, all the driving was a little exhausting.

You are advised to read 'Forsaken, Chapter 59 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 2' next...

Chapter 59*: Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 2

This chapter is in parallel with 'Feral, Chapter 11, Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 2', but you should read this chapter first...

The next day
Tuesday

The following takes place between Midnight and 1:00 A.M.

Southside Firehouse
Chicago

0:22 A.M.

The alarm had sounded and Truck 83 was leaving for an emergency.

Eighty yards down the street, a man watched as the Fire Truck pulled out, with lights flashing. He waited until the front wheels of the truck touched the road, before pressing the button on the device in his hand...

...Truck 83 came apart and half a dozen men died, instantly.

The night sky was lit up, for miles around. Flaming debris fell onto the Firehouse, setting it alight, just as other vehicles were pulling out of it. The Ambulance, directly behind Truck 83 exploded, as red hot metal and flames touched off the fuel.

The surviving Firefighters tried to fight the fire with what equipment was available, but they were fighting a losing battle.

Eighty yards away, a car pulled away smartly and headed north.

0:44 A.M.

The phone rang. I grabbed it.

"Voight!"

"Disaster, CFD has just been bombed!"

"Get my team in, right now!"

The following takes place between 1:00 A.M. and 2:00 A.M.

Plaza Hotel
Chicago

1:22 A.M.

I dragged myself out of a deep sleep.

The damn phone.

"Go!" I said, grumpily.

"It's Voight! D'Amico has escalated, a Firehouse just blew up!"

"I'm on my way!"

The following takes place between 2:00 A.M. and 3:00 A.M.

Chicago Police Department
District 21
Chicago

2:05 A.M.

Sergeant Voight was not happy.

The team were all at their desks, looking very concerned. Perched on the corner of one desk was Marcus.

"That bastard has escalated; this is now a war! Nobody fucks with my City! The gloves are off, you lot get out there and get me some intelligence, any way you can!" Voight said, loudly and angrily.

All, but Marcus and Voight, flew out of the building.

"Where do we start?" Marcus asked.

"Let's go get breakfast. We need to go see a colleague," Voight suggested.

The following takes place between 3:00 A.M. and 4:00 A.M.

West Columbia
Chicago

3:04 A.M.

The Fusion number rang.

What the fuck now; I need fucking sleep!

"Hi, Kick-Ass?" A voice, that I didn't recognise, asked.

"Who?" I snarled.

"You don't know me, but my name is Hank Voight. I got your number from Sam Fellowes; we really need your kind of help."

I knew who this guy was, well sort of, but I wasn't supposed to know; so do I trust him?

My personal cell chirped, with a text message, it was from Marcus.

'Trust Voight'

Straight and to the point. One question answered!

"Okay, Voight, speak!"

"I'm heading the team that's supposed to be investigating and targeting you. I don't agree with the investigation. A Firehouse has just been bombed; now, our New York liaison, suggests that this is the work of Ralph D'Amico, who escaped jail just over a week ago! I believe that your team are very familiar with the D'Amico family!"

"We are!" I replied, angrily.

"So far, we have my team, SWAT and our New York liaison, plus of course, Fellowes and Murphy," Voight said. "The word has gone out; we are not pursuing you guys, we are pursuing those who are after you guys. I assume they are the same as those who blew up the Firehouse and nobody fucks with my City and survives!"

The following takes place between 4:00 A.M. and 5:00 A.M.

West Columbia
Chicago

4:11 A.M.

I gave up trying to get back to sleep.

That call from Voight had disturbed me; D'Amico was going all out! I couldn't believe that he had targeted a Firehouse. What could they possibly do to him? D'Amico was flexing his muscles, letting everybody know, what he can do and will do, if people don't drop into line.

I called Mindy, to remind her to be careful.

If D'Amico was bombing things in Chicago, then he would probably start bombing things in New York, too. I wasn't completely surprised, therefore, to hear that there had been an explosion, in New York, last night! I told Mindy to be very careful and that I wanted her and Chloe back alive.

I went to wake Marty.

It was time to head down to Safehouse A and start work.

The following takes place between 5:00 A.M. and 6:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

5:15 A.M.

We grabbed breakfast, on the way and were now hard at work.

We were receiving regular emails, full of data, from Voight and Jack Bay.

All this Data needed to be sifted through and Marty was finding it hard going.

The following takes place between 6:00 A.M. and 7:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

6:37 A.M.

Three new faces appeared in the briefing room, just after six.

"Hi Dave, Marty! We heard the news and wanted to see what we could do to help," Dr Bennett said, pushing Curtis and Abby into the room.

Marty's eyes lit up.

"Hal!" Marty exclaimed. "Great to see you; major data dump, dig in!"

While Marty and Hal waded through the Police data, I got up and suggested that we take Sophia for a walk. Abby was a lot better than me, when it came to sifting data, it must be a super geek thing!

I am only a geek, not a super geek!

The following takes place between 7:00 A.M. and 8:00 A.M.

The Park
Chicago

7:31 A.M.

Sophia enjoyed the walk and she also enjoyed chasing Curtis, who was slowly warming to the large, ball chomping dog!

Dr Bennett was a bit subdued, more than normal and it was obvious why. I think she had come over to be near others and so that she might find out what was happening in New York.

It was good to be able to talk with somebody else, who had the same worries, too.

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 9:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

8:37 A.M.

Young Curtis was completely exhausted by the time we got back to the safehouse, so he lay down on the couch, after a large drink of water and fell asleep. Sophia joined him on the couch, after getting a big drink herself.

Marty and Abby had managed to sort through most of the emails and they were able to make some sort of sense of things. The explosion at the Firehouse had sent a ripple of fear throughout the City. There was genuine fear, among the Police and Fire services, as to who might be next.

I didn't want to contemplate the level of fear in the civilian communities.

The following takes place between 9:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

The rest of the morning was spent digging through intelligence.

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 11:00 A.M.

Chicago Police Department
District 21
Chicago

10:04 A.M.

"So we have nothing!" Voight exclaimed.

"Everybody is afraid; too afraid to talk!" Lindsay replied.

"He's good, is that fucking D'Amico. He has the place locked down tight. We must find his man, here in Chicago. If we can't get to them from the bottom up, we go top down!" Marcus offered.

"Good advice, people, let's move!" Voight ordered.

The following takes place between 11:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

11:55 A.M.

I put the cell down and explained the substance of the call to Dave.

"So, did she ask to speak to me, Marty?" Dave asked.

"No. She seemed too excited!" I replied, laughing.

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 1:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

12:35 A.M.

"I have something!" Abby called.

"What have you got!" Marty asked.

"I have a name: Arkady Orlov," Abby replied.

The following takes place between 1:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

Chicago Police Department
District 21
Chicago

1:04 P.M.

"We have a name! Fusion's intelligence guys are obviously better than mine! Get me everything about him, everything!" Voight said, sounding slightly happier.

1:25 P.M.

"Arkady Orlov, Russian immigrant. We have an address..." Lindsay said.

"Well let's go..." Voight said and vanishing down the stairs.

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 3:00 P.M.

South Carpenter and West 56th Street
Chicago

2:04 P.M.

The vehicles of Voight and his team skidded to a halt outside the house of Arkady Orlov. Everybody got out and advanced on the house. Olinsky and Ruzek went up to the front door, followed by Voight. Dawson and Lindsay headed around the back of the house.

Suddenly, two shotgun blasts rang out, blasting the front door from the inside.

Olinsky and Voight were to each side, but Ruzek caught part of the blast and fell back down the steps. Olinsky fired off a dozen rounds from his AR-15 and kicked down the remains of the front door. Simultaneously Dawson kicked in the back door. Lindsay went in with her pistol up and reported the kitchen as clear.

Olinsky found Arkady Orlov dead, in the hallway; he was riddled with AR-15 bullets. Voight was down with Ruzek, who was bruised but okay, thanks to his vest. Voight got up and went to see Orlov.

"Fuck! We needed him alive!" Voight yelled. "Tear this place apart, find me something!"

The following takes place between 3:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

Chicago Police Department
District 21
Chicago

3:58 P.M.

"Kick-Ass?" Voight asked.

"Yeah!"

"We struck out; Arkady Orlov wanted to go out in a blaze of fucking glory and we helped the bastard!" Voight explained.

"Those were probably his orders," Kick-Ass replied.

"I agree, D'Amico would issue orders like that!" Voight responded.

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 5:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

4:04 P.M.

"Did you find anything else of use?" I asked Voight.

"We found weapons and certain items related to bomb making. He was definitely involved in something, we just don't know what yet!" Voight replied.

"Well, one less, is still one less!"

"Oh and pass my thanks to your intelligence team; they are damn good!" Voight said, before ending the call.

4:15 P.M.

"Abby, Marty, congratulations! Your info was bang on and Voight sends his thanks. Keep up the good work Abby!" I said, causing Abby to blush.

The following takes place between 5:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

5:08 P.M.

We were all quite cheerful, as we sat down to dinner that evening.

Today started badly, but we have had a slight success!

I also understood that to receive a compliment from Voight, like that, is quite rare.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 7:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

6:18 P.M.

Abby went home, while Marty and I tidied things up.

We were just about to head home, too, when we got a call.

It was Voight.

"We've found a building; thought you guys might like to join in!" Voight said.

Voight gave us the address and said he would meet us at eight.

Marty and I got ourselves geared up

The following takes place between 7:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

Beast, driving through Chicago

7:08 P.M.

We were on the way to the meeting point in Beast.

7:47 P.M.

We arrived and met up with Voight.

The building was a commercial property, with an empty shop, on the first floor. Voight and his team were ready to assault the building and just waiting for us.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 9:00 P.M.

Suspected D'Amico Facility, Chicago

8:02 P.M.

We moved in.

Voight and his team would go in from the front, while Fusion would go in from the rear. I kicked in the rear door and went in, G36C at the ready, followed by Battle Guy who was similarly equipped. We could hear the noise of Voight and his team, doing the same thing. Curiously there was no shooting, nothing. This stank!

We met up with Voight's team and moved up to the second floor.

8:24 P.M.

We had a problem.

It was a trap!

Do you know why we knew it was a trap? It was the sign that said: 'THIS IS A TRAP!' We had all walked into a large room and the sign also told us that all the exits were booby trapped, both the windows and the doors.

This fucking sucked, and apparently, I was not the only person who thought this!

"Anybody got any ideas?" Voight asked.

"Let me check this out," Battle Guy said, putting down his weapon and checking out the booby traps.

The following takes place between 9:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

North Kilbourn Ave
Chicago

9:06 P.M.

I had just had dinner and was back in my room, on my laptop.

I really needed to get a new one, this one sucked, big time!

My bag started to beep, it was the Fusion radio. Marty insisted I carry one, just in case. It was set to beep, when a call was coming through and I would have to enable the call, with a decryption key. I grabbed the radio out of my bag and put on the headset, before punching in the decryption key. I then checked that my door, was closed and locked!

"This is Hal, go ahead!" I called.

"Hal, this is Battle Guy... Long story, but basically we're trapped in a building, booby trapped exits, hastily installed explosives and sensors, with a central detonator," Battle Guy explained.

"Tell me what you need; I'm online with the safehouse, now."

Confirmed D'Amico Facility

Chicago

9:27 P.M.

Battle Guy was talking complete gibberish to Hal!

I assumed that it meant something to those two; they were thick as thieves when it came to super geekiness! Marty had traced all the cables and wires that related to the booby traps. They seemed to be hastily installed, without much attempt at concealment. I assumed that they didn't expect to trap somebody good, inside!

Battle Guy had found the main control unit, which typically had a timer. We had till ten-forty-five, that evening. To top it off, Voight's radios were jammed; but not our comms!

North Kilbourn Ave Chicago

9:50 P.M.

"You still on that laptop, Abigail?"

"I'm working Mom!" I called. "Something important!"

"I need you to do something for me."

"Mom, I'm busy, give me a minute!" I called again. "Jeez!"

"Battle Guy, I'm sending you the specs now," I called, getting back to business.

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and 11:00 P.M.

Confirmed D'Amico Facility Chicago

10:10 P.M.

"What have you got, Battle Guy?" Voight asked.

"I have the specs for the central control unit. I just need time to deactivate it and get us out of here," Battle Guy said, calmly.

"Wake me when you're done," Voight said and closed his eyes, sat down and leant against a wall.

10:40 P.M.

"You almost there Battle Guy?" I asked.

"Couple more minutes!" Battle Guy replied, alternating between his phone, the radio and the control unit. He had been doing that for the last half-hour and kept requesting more information from Hal.

10:44 P.M.

"Well, we gonna go boom?" I asked, calmly, although I definitely did not feel calm!

Battle Guy finally looked up, with a smile. "Well, we should know in the next sixty seconds!"

10:46 P.M.

"We still alive?" Voight asked, opening his eyes.

"You sound unhappy about that!" Olinsky stated with a grin.

The following takes place between 11:00 P.M. and Midnight

Confirmed D'Amico Facility
Chicago

11:15 P.M.

Chicago PD bomb disposal arrived and cleaned up the explosives.

That whole evening sucked!

We headed back to the safehouse.

You are advised to read 'Feral, Chapter 11, Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 2' next...

Chapter 60*: Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 3

This chapter is in parallel with 'Feral, Chapter 12 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 3', but you should read this chapter first...

The next day

Wednesday

The following takes place between Midnight and 1:00 A.M.

Safehouse A

Chicago

We got to bed at around a quarter past midnight.

This was turning into another 'Week of Hell', but at least we actually got some sleep, last time!

12:32 A.M.

I finally managed to put the phone down, after talking with Mindy. The conversation kinda wandered and turned into phone sex, which apparently woke Chloe! Anyway it was really good to hear Mindy's voice and she had some, well, very dirty things to say!

The following takes place between 1:00 A.M. and 2:00 A.M.

Chicago Police Department

District 21

Chicago

1:30 A.M.

The timer ran down to zero and the bomb exploded.

The District 21 Headquarters bulged and then shattered, masonry exploded everywhere and the building collapsed in on itself.

It was total devastation.

Plaza Hotel

Chicago

1:47 A.M.

"Lieutenant Matthews!" I said groggily, into my cell.

"I think somebody found out that we weren't investigating Fusion!" Voight said.

"Come again!"

"District 21, just got bombed!" Voight said, angrily. "Fifteen minutes ago!"

I sat bolt upright in bed.

"Casualties?"

"A dozen so far. We're just lucky it was during the early shift. I think you're gonna need to head back to New York, while I find a new place to work out of," Voight advised.

"Thanks Hank. My condolences," I replied.

"Thanks and many thanks for your assistance, I'll keep you in the loop."

The following takes place between 2:00 A.M. and 3:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

2:09 A.M.

Voight had just called with extremely disturbing news.

The District 21 headquarters, had been destroyed by a bomb.

D'Amico was making his feelings felt and I felt sick to my stomach; this man needed to die, he was pure evil!

The following takes place between 7:00 A.M. and 8:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

7:31 A.M.

I woke up and found Marty in the kitchen.

I explained what had happened to District 21.

Marty was not happy; D'Amico was escalating and escalation was very bad, for everyone!

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 9:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

8:01 A.M.

The package had arrived!

I opened it, with Dave watching. Inside was a carefully wrapped smartphone, with the SIM and battery removed.

"Okay, give me an hour or so, one phone hack, coming up!" I said, flipping on the signal jammer.

The following takes place between 9:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

9:18 A.M.

I had the phone's contents downloaded, without a problem and I now knew the guy's full life story! I emailed everything to Mindy and sent her a text to tell her that it was on it's way. I would go through the information properly, myself, just in case anything was of use to us here, in Chicago.

9:58 A.M.

I suddenly had a thought.

That Joshua kid, in New York, had better have his wits about him, as according to my calendar today was the start of the two girl's monthlies! I had a nice chuckle at that, until...

My cell rang, it was the Fusion divert.

"Go!" I snarled.

It was Fellowes.

"Morning, Kick-Ass! We need you, right now; we're in shit, but then what's new! West Harrison and South Sacramento, bring guns!"

"Thirty minutes, guys!" I replied, dropping the call.

"Marty, gear up!" I yelled.

I also called Abby and asked her to get down to Safehouse A.

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 11:00 A.M.

Chicago

10:15 A.M.

We left the safehouse and headed north, towards Fellowes and Murphy.

10:44 A.M.

I stopped Beast, about sixty yards back from the junction. We had approached from the east; we could hear weapons fire and saw a Police SUV being blasted by men with automatic weapons.

I called Fellowes.

"Where are you guys?" Fellowes shouted, over the noise of weapons fire.

"About sixty yards east of you. We can see the men firing at you. Who are they?" I asked.

"Don't know. Whole damn City went to hell about an hour ago. Cops are being engaged, all over the fucking city!" Fellowes replied.

"Okay, we're engaging!" I said, hanging up the cell.

I explained what Fellowes had said, to Marty.

"We take those shooters down, now!"

10:52 A.M.

We moved down the sidewalk, using trees and cars for cover.

Frightened pedestrians and drivers had fled the scene. Abandoned cars in the street made good cover, as we got closer. Ever since the 'Week of Hell' we had been carrying four Heckler & Koch G36C assault rifles, as standard kit in Beast. Battle Guy, had recently learned how to use one, so this would be his first outing with the weapon.

We took up positions behind an abandoned vehicle, aimed our weapons and started firing into the men, who were facing away from us. Four men dropped immediately, followed by another two. The remaining man dived down and away, to the right. Battle Guy shot him, with the help of the laser sight, on his weapon.

The following takes place between 11:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

Chicago

11:02 A.M.

We came out from cover and advanced towards the dead men and the Police SUV. We checked over each of the dead men, to ensure that they were dead and none were going to popup behind us! I found Battle Guy's target and grinned, it was a single shot dead centre of the forehead. He must have been looking directly at Battle Guy, when he fired. I was impressed, with Battle Guy's marksmanship!

We headed over to the Police SUV.

"Anybody home!" I snarled.

"Funny bastard!" Murphy said, sticking his head up.

"Anybody important hurt?" Battle Guy asked.

"Just my pride and the SUV!" Fellowes replied. "This is not going to go down well!"

I cast an eye over the Police SUV, it had one or two holes, or maybe several dozen, actually!

"Bit of paint, bit of filler and it'll be good as new!" I quipped.

"Forgive me, if I don't laugh!" Murphy responded, with a grin.

"Who were those clowns?" Battle Guy asked.

"No idea! This is happening across the city, it's fucking ridiculous!" Murphy exclaimed.

"We need to go, we'll see where else we can help, good luck and keep us informed!" I growled, angrily.

11:12 A.M.

We climbed back into Beast, reloaded our weapons and headed west.

"Fusion, Hal. I'm ready to provide support. I am getting a ton of shit from Bay and I need time to process it all!"

"Good on you, girl!"

11:23 A.M.

"Well that didn't last long!" Battle Guy yelled, as we turned left onto South Independence Boulevard.

In front of us were two Police cruisers with four Police Officers crouched down behind and firing pistols towards a group of gun men, who were behind an SUV. We accelerated past the Police cruisers and placed Beast between the Police and the gun men, using Beast's armour for cover. The four Police Officers moved forward and joined us.

"Thanks, Fusion!" One Officer shouted, over the shooting.

"Glad to help," I responded, firing my G36C, at the gunmen.

South Independence Boulevard was six lanes wide, with a wide grass median and dotted with trees.

Battle Guy maintained short bursts with the Police Officers, keeping the gunmen occupied, while I moved forwards using the, not very large, trees for limited cover. I managed to drop two gunmen, before another two gunmen started running towards another SUV, across the median. I fired after them, but missed.

"Fuck!" I yelled, angrily.

We didn't have Eisenhower with us, unfortunately, so I ran back to Beast. The left hand side of Beast had a lot of damage from bullets, but none had passed through. I climbed in.

"Battle Guy, get in!" I called, starting the engine.

Once Battle Guy was in, I accelerated after the gunmen, leaving the four Police Officers shocked, but alive.

11:34 A.M.

I stopped.

Beast blocked the gunmen's SUV, causing the men to run further down the boulevard, towards an abandoned elevated rail track and using the large buttresses for cover. I was hit several times, by bullets, which did not deter my advance. I was running low on ammunition and was being careful with what I had left.

A Police cruiser skidded to a halt, beyond the elevated track and two Police Officers, with AR-15 rifles, started to attack the gunmen, who refused to surrender and were eventually cut down.

Once the gunfire had died down, one of the Police cruisers from earlier, came down to us and I pointed out the SUV for them to recover. The Officers gave their thanks, then Battle Guy and I, headed back to Beast.

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 1:00 P.M.

Chicago

12:07 P.M.

We reloaded our weapons and magazines.

I had to admit that Mindy had been very astute, when she had increased the ammunition load out for Beast. Between us, we had already consumed over a hundred rounds so far this morning.

We stopped for a bite to eat, before continuing our patrol

The following takes place between 1:00 P.M. and 2:00 P.M.

Chicago

By half past one, we were heading south.

1:38 P.M.

We got passed a call, via Hal, from Murphy.

Murphy reported an emergency, at the intersection of West Douglas Boulevard and South Sacramento Drive. There had been a bad traffic accident and the attending units were under fire and couldn't treat or rescue the injured.

"We're less than five minutes away!" I replied, putting my foot down.

As we approached the junction, we could see smoke from a fire and we could also hear gun shots.

The actual scene was chaos.

We pulled up beside a red and black fire truck, 'SQUAD 3'.

Several Firefighters were crouched behind the truck, sheltering from the bullets flying around. Beyond them we could see one Police cruiser, with a Police Officer shooting an AR-15 rifle. Another Police Officer was on the ground, obviously wounded, but still moving. In the middle of the junction were five vehicles, three of which were smashed up and I could see people still in the vehicles. Flames were coming from a small truck, causing the smoke. Another fire truck, 'ENGINE 51' and Ambulance '61' were off to the left; their crews were pinned down, too.

1:41 P.M.

We got out of Beast and headed over to 'SQUAD 3'.

We were met by a Lieutenant, with 'SQUAD 3' on his helmet and 'RESCUE SQUAD' on his right arm.

"Can you help? We must get to those people, before somebody dies!" The Lieutenant yelled, over the gunfire.

The gunmen were in amongst the trees and were not readily visible.

"We'll do what we can!" I yelled back.

"Battle Guy, let's get that Officer to safety!" I ordered.

I ran forward to the wounded Officer. He had been hit in the left arm, two shots. Battle Guy and I dragged him into the shelter of 'SQUAD 3' and left him with the Firefighters, who started on first aid.

Battle Guy and I grabbed a Type III shield each, from Beast and started approaching the crashed vehicles. From there, we could identify the closest gun men and started firing single, aimed shots hoping to dissuade them from their actions.

1:53 P.M.

We could have done with a sniper rifle, right now. Maybe I'll get Mindy to buy me one, but right now we needed to come up with a plan.

I ran back to the Lieutenant.

"Would it help for us to escort your guys over to the cars?" I shouted.

"The cars would shield us, while we check on the accident victims!" The Lieutenant replied, loudly.

I had a sudden thought.

"Could your hoses create a fog, to cover everybody?" I asked.

The Lieutenant didn't immediately respond, but started talking into his radio and within less than ten minutes, two streams of water fog were arcing across the street, causing a dense mist. All of the Firefighters and the Paramedics rushed forwards. One team of Firefighters started to extinguish the flames, while the Paramedics and members of 'SQUAD 3' started attending to the injured drivers.

The following takes place between 2:00 P.M. and 3:00 P.M.

Chicago

2:02 P.M.

Battle Guy and I, moved forward, shields up and we got very wet.

We advanced through the mist and as we became visible, started to receive impacts on our armour and shields. We went back to aimed shots, taking out two gunmen and advancing forward.

2:22 P.M.

There were still five gunmen left.

At least, while they were targeting Battle Guy and me, they weren't targeting the Firefighters and Paramedics. The gunmen started to move up and two fell to shots from Battle Guy, the remaining three gunmen started to run, but we cut them down with aimed shots. We then checked each gunman, to make sure they were dead, before we headed back towards Beast.

I spotted the Lieutenant and headed over to him.

"All clear, Lieutenant! You can cut the fog!" I called.

"Thanks!" The Lieutenant replied, before speaking into his radio and within a minute the water fog ceased.

2:56 P.M.

"You guys were great, thanks!" The Lieutenant exclaimed, once things were under control.

"Glad we could help!" I replied.

The following takes place between 3:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M.

Safehouse A

Chicago

3:40 P.M.

It felt great to back at the safehouse.

We could both get out of our combat suits and have a shower.

"That was a fun morning!" Abby said, once we settled down with a coffee, in the kitchen.

"Not funny, Abby!" Marty responded, with a grimace.

Once coffee was out of the way, Marty and I restocked Beast with ammunition and replaced the fired G36C assault rifles, with fresh ones. I sat down to clean both used assault rifles, while Marty examined the damage to Beast.

The following takes place between 4:00 P.M. and 5:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

4:50 P.M.

All the weapons were cleaned and Beast was reloaded.

The damage to Beast's bodywork was purely cosmetic. For now, Marty filled the bullet holes and removed any rough edges. They would require a proper repair job later. The damage to the glazing however was permanent. The two, main, side windows, would need to be replaced.

Mindy goes away for a few days and we trash Beast! But then again, it was designed for exactly that situation and performed perfectly.

The following takes place between 5:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

5:22 P.M.

The three of us sat down to dinner and I had to sit through Marty's jokes, with a few of Abby's thrown in.

I will admit that some of Marty's jokes tended to be a just little bit too disgusting, for a thirteen year-old girl! But Abby enjoyed them and reminded us that she was almost fourteen. This also reminded me to ask when Chloe's birthday was and Abby told us. Marty made a note, so that we wouldn't forget and miss it!

After dinner, I left Marty and Abby chatting about some computer related things, while I sat down with Sophia.

You might have thought it strange that I was sitting down and talking to a large dog, that liked nothing better than to rip a man's testicles off! You might be right, but talking to a dog is slightly less creepy, than talking to yourself. As a bonus the dog generally didn't argue with you! Besides I'm used to talking with a complete bitch, but as she is in New York... Sophia enjoys the interaction, I think...

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

6:43 P.M.

Sophia had had enough and wandered off downstairs to have a snooze.

I gave up trying to work out what that lunatic Ralph D'Amico would do next! I followed Sophia downstairs and took out my frustrations by training.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 9:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

8:13 P.M.

With my frustrations suitably eradicated, I went to see what Marty and Abby were up to.

They were wading through mounds of paper and checking things off a computer screen.

"You two enjoying yourselves?" I asked.

"I think so, most of this shit is encrypted. You bored Sophia out of her mind, yet?" Marty asked, with a chuckle.

"Ages ago; been training," I replied, with a scowl.

"Yeah, I can tell, Jeez!" Abby said. "You need a shower!"

"Okay hint taken!" I laughed.

I went to grab a shower.

8:38 P.M.

I thought that Abby was on to something, but I'm not sure what.

We had a ton of crap to sift through and a lot of it was encrypted, Abby had a brilliant analytical mind and was able to find patterns quite quickly. I enjoyed working with her and we made a good team, but I would admit that she got through that stuff quicker than I would, too.

Abby had found a document in the watchdog's email, from that phone that Chloe had seized. It referred to an event that was due to happen soon. So far we had no idea in what City or when this 'event' would take place. Whatever it was, it involved a lot of people, nearly two dozen.

I explained what we had found to Dave, who agreed that this might be important.

"Keep pursuing it, it's all we've got at the moment, guys and if it can help the girls, we need it. Well Done!" Dave said, smiling.

The following takes place between 9:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

9:29 P.M.

"Okay, I think it's an attack against the Police," Marty confirmed.

"CPD or NYPD?" I asked.

"No idea yet."

"Keep on it," Dave said.

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and 11:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

10:43 P.M.

"Anything else, guys?" I asked, looking into the briefing room.

Both Marty and Abby were shattered and looked it.

"Not yet, we've almost decrypted all the data; we'll know soon," Abby said, turning back to the computer screen.

The following takes place between 11:00 P.M. and Midnight

Safehouse A
Chicago

11:32 P.M.

"Got it! Marty am I reading this correctly?" Abby asked, tiredly.

"It looks like something's building in New York, near Central Park. That fucking bastard is flexing his muscles!" I said. "Call it in to the girls!"

I looked at Dave.

"The girls are in for a world of hurt, unless they can stop this," I said, sadly, looking at Dave's pained expression.

11:42 P.M.

I grabbed my cell and dialed Mindy.

"What?" The voice growled.

"Hey, growly girl!" I laughed.

"Oh, it's you Abby! What's up?" Mindy asked, sounding a bit tired.

"Something is brewing in Central Park. You girls wanna investigate? You might need your assault rifles!" I explained.

"How the hell, would you know what's happening in Central Park?" Mindy asked, incredulously.

"As my hero, Alec Hardison, says: 'Age of the geek, baby!'" I replied. Geeks rule!

"Funny! Send us what you have and I'll apply leverage to get grumpy out of bed!" Mindy responded and hung up the cell.

I assumed that 'grumpy' would be Chloe! Oh dear!

I rapidly sent everything I had to Mindy via email and then got ready to head home.

You are advised to read 'Feral, Chapter 12 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 3' next...

Chapter 61*: Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 4

This chapter is in parallel with 'Feral, Chapter 13 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 4', but you should read this chapter first...

The next day
Thursday

The following takes place between Midnight and 1:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

0:54 A.M.

The Fusion number rang.

Am I never gonna get a fucking night's sleep!

"Hi, Kick-Ass?" It was Fellowes and he sounded rattled.

"What's up?" I asked, guardedly.

"I think I'm in trouble... I'm being followed... I just left shift and I was heading home. I called my wife and there's a strange car, down the street! I need help Kick-Ass!"

"Head for Marquette Park and keep circling. I'll find you," I snarled, cutting the connection.

"Marty!" I bellowed, running downstairs, to the armoury.

The following takes place between 1:00 A.M. and 2:00 A.M.

Marquette Park
Chicago

1:18 A.M.

My cell rang.

"Stop the car!" Kick-Ass ordered.

I looked around and pulled over. The vehicle following me, was about forty yards back and it pulled over, but on the other side of the road. I watched, fear growing inside me. Then I saw more vehicle lights and a large motorcycle pulled up, beside the car that was tailing me.

1:20 A.M.

I rammed my fist through the glass and into the cunts face!

The second cunt, tried to grab for his gun, but the window on the other side shattered and a pistol was rammed into his face.

"Too, slow!" Battle Guy snarled.

"Let's go!" I ordered, accelerating towards Fellowes.

Battle Guy ran back and jumped into Beast.

I pulled up and Fellowes lowered his window.

"Lock-up and get into Beast!"

Fellowes did as he was told and got in beside Battle Guy, as soon as he pulled up.

The following takes place between 2:00 A.M. and 3:00 A.M.

The Home of Sam Fellowes
Chicago

2:08 A.M.

Sam Fellowes had a wife and a son, who was eleven.

We pulled up, without lights, a hundred yards short of his house. Fellowes had called his wife and she was ready to leave, having packed one bag, with just the essentials. I sized up the SUV that was parked about ten yards from the house. I could make out four large men, inside. Further up the street was another, identical, SUV that carried another four men.

Okay, eight men, two groups. Damn! Mindy was a lot better at this!

"Battle Guy, I'm gonna try the 'in your face' Hit Girl approach; I'm gonna grab a G36C and hose them both down. While they're distracted, get the wife and kid. Use Beast as protection," I ordered.

"Sounds like a plan!" Battle Guy agreed, although I don't think Fellowes was so sure.

I grabbed an assault rifle, loaded it and pulled back the cocking handle. I then walked down the sidewalk, leaving the Fat Boy parked behind somebody's SUV. I managed to get to within twenty yards, before I was spotted. The men were armed with UZI machine pistols and sprayed 9-millimetre rounds at me, which would not penetrate my armour. I fired back and emptied two magazines into the first SUV, which was not armoured; unlike Beast, which pulled forward and onto the sidewalk outside Fellowes house.

Fellowes ran inside, grabbed his wife and son, then returned to Beast, pushing them into the back seat. Battle Guy floored it and left the area, once Fellowes was in. As soon as he had gone, I emptied another magazine into the far SUV, before running back to the Fat Boy and accelerating after Beast.

The following takes place between 3:00 A.M. and 4:00 A.M.

South Cottage Grove
Chicago

3:18 A.M.

We pulled up a block away from the apartment block, with the safehouses.

Battle Guy remained in the SUV, as lookout and to keep an eye on the Fat Boy.

I showed Fellowes, his wife, Sharon and his son Cameron, up to an apartment on the third floor. It was newly completed and had two bedrooms. The apartment was part furnished, with a double bed in one bedroom and a single bed in the other. The living room had just a couch. The kitchen had a table with four chairs and there was an electric kettle, microwave and stove. There was also a basic selection of mugs, plates and bowls, including cutlery. Unfortunately there was no food!

"I'll drop back later, with some supplies. Stay here and don't contact anybody. Don't leave the apartment. Turn off your cells, remove the batteries. Here is a new phone. Our number is on it," I said. "I'll call you later. Now get some rest,"

"Thank you," Sam Fellowes said, giving his wife and son a hug.

3:50 A.M.

As I drove back towards Safehouse A, I had a disturbing thought.

"Battle Guy, call Murphy! If they got to Fellowes, then they might have got to him!" I called.

The following takes place between 4:00 A.M. and 5:00 A.M.

The Home of Paul Murphy
Chicago

4:24 A.M.

We pulled up twenty yards away from the home of Paul Murphy.

Everything seemed normal. No sign of SUVs and there was a car in the driveway.

False alarm... Almost!

There was a loud explosion and the front of Murphy's house, just bulged out, before flames roared up the structure.

Fuck!

I ran towards the house, with Battle Guy close behind. I could hear screams and one of the screams was a child. I ran harder.

Were these suits fireproof? I couldn't remember!

I smashed through the side door and into the property. Damn it was hot, my mask filtered out some of the smoke, but I still kept my head low, below the smoke.

"Anybody here?" I yelled.

"Here!" I heard Murphy's voice.

I headed towards the rear of the house and found Murphy on the floor, of what had once been a kitchen. He was bleeding and his wife was trying to staunch it. A young boy of ten or eleven, was sitting on the floor crying.

"Kick-Ass, meet Rachel and Brad," Murphy smiled, through the pain.

"Brad, come with me," I said, as I pulled out a field dressing and passed it to Rachel.

"Thanks," Rachel said, as she ripped open the dressing and wrapped it around the wound, tightly.

I took Brad outside and put him into Beast, then I went back for Murphy and his wife.

With the help of Battle Guy, I managed to get Murphy into Beast, with his wife and son.

The following takes place between 5:00 A.M. and 6:00 A.M.

South Cottage Grove
Chicago

5:12 A.M.

We pulled up a block away from the apartment block, with the safehouses, as before.

Battle Guy remained in the SUV, as before.

I called Fellowes down and he helped me carry Murphy up to the apartment, next door to the Fellowes family.

"That wound is bad," Fellowes said, looking at hit.

"I'll get a Doc," I said.

"I'll stay with Paul. Rachel, take Brad next door," Fellowes suggested.

I headed upstairs to Safehouse C, which was on the fourth floor. The apartment was also complete and had a reinforced door and walls.

I pulled out my cell and sent a text. My cell rang two minutes later.

"Hello?" I said.

"This is Medic!"

"Medic, this is Kick-Ass. We need you at South Cottage Grove, apartment 302. We have a cop in hiding and he's wounded bad," I advised.

"I'm on my way!" Medic responded.

I grabbed some coffee and long life milk, that we stored there and took them downstairs and gave them to Sharon Fellowes. I also handed one of the pre-packed medical cases to Fellowes, ready for the Doc's arrival.

I knew it would take almost fifty minutes for her to arrive, so I sent Battle Guy back to Safehouse A, while I waited here.

Battle Guy left after he had thrown a cover over the Fat Boy, for now.

The following takes place between 6:00 A.M. and 7:00 A.M.

South Cottage Grove
Chicago

6:00 A.M.

Dr Bennett arrived at apartment 302.

I remained with her, as a guard. She expertly cleaned up Murphy and dressed the wound, which had been caused by failing masonry. It seemed that there would be no permanent damage.

6:35 A.M.

Dr Bennett left, saying that she would return tomorrow morning, to check on the wound.

We both headed up to the safehouse, upstairs.

"Thanks Doc," I said, pulling off my mask.

"Not a problem. You heard from New York?" Dr Bennett asked.

"Not since last night. They were both fine then, just exhausted," I said.

"As are you, Dave. You like like hell!" Dr Bennett commented.

"Nothing I can do about that! Shit keeps happening first thing in the damn morning!" I grimaced.

"You are missing Mindy, too. I can tell. I miss Chloe and strangely, so does Curtis! Considering how badly Chloe treats that kid, it's a surprise he still loves and cares for her, like he does!"

"Yeah, Curtis does tend to get the raw deal!" I laughed. "And yes, I miss Mindy, enormously."

The following takes place between 7:00 A.M. and 8:00 A.M.

Safehouse C
Chicago

7:10 A.M.

Dr Bennett left, to go home and I took the opportunity to grab a shower and something to eat from the freezer.

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 9:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

8:13 A.M.

I was back at Safehouse A and Marty was asleep. Lucky for him!

I was unable to sleep, so I started to read through the hundreds of pages that Marty had printed out, concerning the cell phone that Mindy had sent over.

The following takes place between 9:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

9:37 A.M.

"Hey, Dave!"

I heard my name and dragged myself awake. I found myself on the couch, surrounded by paper. I must have fallen asleep!

"Hey, you okay?" Marty asked.

"I think so, yeah," I replied.

"I'm hungry, you want breakfast?" Marty asked.

"Definitely, I'm starving and I'm sure Sophia is too!" I replied, looking down at Sophia, who was fast asleep on the floor, I gave her a little nudge and she came awake, reluctantly.

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. and 11:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

10:42 A.M.

The breakfast woke me up, properly!

I really needed the energy and so did Marty. It really was strange seeing a 'thin' Marty, instead of the usual 'large' version! Marty had also changed his eating habits and was now eating healthier foods that fitted in with his new lifestyle.

Suddenly I bolted up straight. Damn! I'd forgotten all about Mindy and Chloe! They went out last night to Central Park, to fight. I couldn't believe that I had forgotten all about them; I must be more tired than I had thought!

I picked up my cell, to call Mindy, when it rang. It was Jack Bay.

He was checking in to see if I knew anything about Murphy and Fellowes, as they had both vanished with their families and there was obvious evidence of attacks on their homes! I advised him that we had placed them into safe accommodation, but we would be keeping the location secret, for now.

Jack agreed and said thanks.

The following takes place between 11:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

11:12 A.M.

I called Mindy and checked that she and Chloe were okay, before telling her about this morning's fun and games. Mindy was very worried about this escalation, directly against those that supported Fusion. She then explained about Central Park. D'Amico must be pissed about that!

However, I agreed about D'Amico possibly giving us all the run around.

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. and 1:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

Voight had provided is with Arkady Orlov's phone and computer, after they had been through them, of course.

Marty and Abby were busy going through them; it looked to be a race between our geeks and the CPD's geeks!

12:52 P.M.

I provided Marty and Abby with a constant stream of food and drink, to keep them going. Marty lived on coffee and Abby enjoyed energy drinks. I had to make myself useful somehow. Sophia made herself useful, by keeping Marty's bed warm.

That dog can be really lazy at times!

The following takes place between 1:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

Progress was slow, but at least progress was being made.

I was starting to get nervous about everything. We had to keep one step ahead of D'Amico, but so far we were just reacting to him. He had scored too many hits and killed too many people, but we had barely scratched his organisation. I felt like we were building up to something big, at least if we could just have a major success, to boost moral and start the ball rolling towards D'Amico's down fall.

We were all feeling the effects from lack of sleep and too much caffeine. But we had no choice and so far no major arguments had started. Marty's humour helped on that side. I felt like a spare part, at the moment; I could do nothing until Marty and Abby, or Voight, found something.

It was really frustrating! I tried not to think about the girls in New York, as that just depressed me!

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 7:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

6:52 P.M.

I had just got off the phone with Chloe.

I hoped Mindy was gonna behave and not do anything stupid. She was pushing herself, way too hard, but that's just the way she worked. Please be careful Mindy!

I looked down at Sophia; she was missing Mindy, too.

The following takes place between 7:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

7:12 P.M.

I decided to go out; I needed to think!

I started to gear up.

"Where do you think, you're going?" Marty asked.

"Out, I need time to think!"

"You can't go out alone! Not when things are like they are!" Marty said.

"I can handle myself!"

"Against twenty cunts?" Marty queried.

"Probably," I replied, rather weakly. Marty was right, I wasn't thinking. I'm starting to make mistakes, just like I warned Chloe about, with Mindy!

"Sorry Marty, I wasn't thinking!"

"You're exhausted, we all are; I'll come with you. Abby can monitor us," Marty said. "I could do with a change of scene!"

7:33 P.M.

"You still with us Hal?" I called.

"Oh yeah, Eisenhower and I have your backs!" Hal replied.

"Eisenhower?" I asked, looking at Battle Guy, who just shrugged.

"Say hello, Eisenhower!" Hal said.

Battle Guy and I both heard a bark, over the comms!

"Eisenhower has comms now?" Battle Guy asked.

"Oh yeah!" Hal replied, with a laugh.

"That girl is nuts!" I said to Battle Guy.

"We heard that!"

I had to laugh; Abby was a great addition to the team. I would need to speak to Mindy, about making her a full member of Fusion.

7:52 P.M.

"Hey! Over there!" I said, pointing across the street and making a U-turn, before roaring down an alley and slamming on the brakes.

In front of us were three men, holding two more men at gunpoint.

Battle Guy moved over to the driver's seat, while I jumped out. I wanted a fight.

"You fuckers are in the wrong fucking place!" I snarled.

"You don't run this town Kick-Ass; D'Amico runs this town, now," Dead man walking, number one said.

"That fucking runt!" I snarled. "Keep fucking dreaming, cunts!"

I drew both Ko-Wakizashi and moved forward. Three pistols were fired in my direction, I ignored the rounds and advanced, slashing at two wrists and severing two hands. The third man dropped with both Ko-Wakizashi blades in his chest. I was pissed.

"You two, speak now, or you're next! Do you work for D'Amico?"

"God no, I swear!" Both men said, honestly.

"Go!"

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 9:00 P.M.

8:02 P.M.

I turned and found my way barred by two more men.

"D'Amico?" I asked.

They both nodded and one raised a baseball bat, the other a large metal bar.

I stowed the swords and drew my batons. Back to basics!

Battle Guy left Beast and stood beside me, with a Type III shield on his left arm and a riot baton, in his right hand.

The cunts waded in first, Battle Guy and I beat off each attack and forced them back in to the street, where we started to attract a crowd.

I could hear people shouting and cheering.

'Go Kick-Ass!', 'Down with D'Amico!' and 'Fuck D'Amico!'.

This felt good, back to the old-school stuff, no firearms, just the old-fashioned Kick-Ass of old!

"They don't like you!" I snarled to the ape, I was fighting. "And neither do I!"

I was fighting the man, with the metal bar. Battle Guy had the other guy and was doing pretty well, too. Every time the man swung at Battle Guy, his bat was deflected by the shield, followed by a hit from the baton. I was enjoying the fight, with my batons, as I hadn't used them properly in quite a while.

8:12 P.M.

This fight should have been over minutes ago, but I was having too much fun and so was Battle Guy; for him this was good training. For me, this was looking back to the beginnings of Kick-Ass; no fancy firearms, just me and my batons.

"Okay, guys, workout over!" I called over comms.

"Copy that Kick-Ass," Battle Guy responded.

We then both brought our weapons down and put the two men out of their misery. There was cheering around us and two Police Officers came forward to arrest the two watchdogs, ignoring us both, apart from a brief smile and a nod. These two cunts would live; hopefully Voight could get something out of them.

8:44 P.M.

We enjoyed the mini patrol and stopped at a McDonald's for a burger, before heading back to the safehouse.

It had been one hell of a day, but at least we had finished off by putting some of D'Amico's guys out of action!

The following takes place between 9:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

9:55 P.M.

I got out of the shower and headed downstairs.

Abby had gone home and Marty was going through some last bits of paper work.

"I'm gonna go get some sleep, before any more shit kicks off!" I said.

"I'll be right behind you! Sophia's already asleep," Marty said, pointing at the couch.

You are advised to read 'Feral, Chapter 13 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 4' next...

Chapter 62*: Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 5

This chapter is in parallel with 'Feral, Chapter 14 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 5', which should be read first...

The next day

Friday

The following takes place between Midnight and 1:00 A.M.

I received a text from Mindy advising that Safehouse A in New York was gone!

I called her and got her to explain what the hell had happened.

To say that I was shocked, was an understatement! But I was glad that they are all okay, including the boy. I was actually looking forward to meeting this kid. He gets himself into almost as much shit as I do! Or should I say did?

The following takes place between 7:00 A.M. to 8:00 A.M.

Safehouse A

Chicago

7:40 A.M.

I woke up feeling really sore. I had got to that freaky stage where I couldn't sleep, I ended up pacing around the house and talking to Sophia, who seemed to enjoy following me around! What the hell I was talking to her about, I really didn't know and Sophia wouldn't tell me.

I had spent time thinking and had finally come to a decision. It was a decision that Mindy may not agree with, but it was important and we needed more support. I had no idea if she would respond positively to my request, or not. In fact I had not talked to her much, since Mindy had attacked her.

I woke Marty up and told him that I was heading back to the house, with Sophia, to meet somebody.

He said good luck and went back to sleep!

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. to 9:00 A.M.

West Ridge

Chicago

8:37 A.M.

I made the call and arranged for her to come to the house, at around ten that morning.

I grabbed a shower and had breakfast. Then I just sat about and working out what I was going to say to her.

Finally I gave up and took Sophia for a walk.

The following takes place between 9:00 A.M. and 10:00 A.M.

The Park

Chicago

9:37 A.M.

Dr Bennett called to say that she had visited Murphy and checked on his wounds. She had redressed them and he was healing fine. Both families were in good spirits and appeared to be coping well with their forced move.

West Ridge

Chicago

9:45 A.M.

We returned from the walk. It was a good distraction and Sophia enjoyed herself. This week she had spent too many hours cooped up in the safehouse.

I was nervous, I had no idea why.

Maybe because my partner tried to kill her! But that wasn't exactly true; my partner does not try to kill people, she just kills them, there is no try!

The following takes place between 10:00 A.M. to 11:00 A.M.

West Ridge
Chicago

10:12 A.M.

"Hi Kim, thanks for coming!" I said, carefully.

"I'm glad you let me come Dave," Kim replied, with a smile.

"I never expected to hear from you again, considering..." I let it hang.

"Dave, I don't hold it against Mindy. She apologised, so that's that, time to move on!" Kim said.

"Will you join us, we need more hands and guns; it may be dangerous and you may come up against people you know!" I said.

"I'd love to help. I need to avenge my ex-colleagues that died at District 21! I can handle myself," Kim replied.

"You know a guy called Voight?" I asked.

I saw Kim sit up and nod her head.

"Yes, I know Voight, why?"

"We're working with him and his team," I said.

"I can manage, but I might need some kit, my old stuff was really crap!" Kim said, grimly.

"You can borrow some of Mindy's combats and a vest. We can supply you with firearms. Use your existing mask and spear," I suggested.

"Thanks Dave," Kim replied, enthusiastically.

"It's only temporary; Hit Girl and Shadow would need to approve you properly," I explained.

"No problem, I won't let you down; not again!"

The following takes place between 11:00 A.M. to 12:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

I took Kim down to Safehouse A and got her kitted out.

I also took the time to check her out on the G36C and a Glock 17.

Marty was very pleased to see Kim and they spent quite a lot of time chatting. Kim seemed to like Marty's brand of humour.

Mind you, Marty did kinda save Kim's life during the week of hell!

The following takes place between 12:00 P.M. to 3:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

Kim stayed with us and insisted on learning the weapons perfectly.

I also started training her in some key defensive movements. Kim had been taught a lot of defensive moves in the Chicago PD, so she had a good basis to build on, plus she was very flexible. Marty had noticed and commented on that, not me!

Abby joined in, as she seemed serious about learning to defend herself. Plus it was kinda funny watching her do some of the moves! Abby was very proficient with her pistol, which was good to see.

The following takes place between 3:00 P.M. to 7:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

The rest of the afternoon was spent resting, as we were all knackered. Kim went home.

I had tried to call Mindy, but had got no response. I assumed that she was busy and hopefully not doing anything stupid!

The following takes place between 7:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

7:32 P.M.

Marty, Abby and I finished off our evening meal.

We all hoped to get some rest tonight. I was very impressed by Abby's stamina and told her so. Marty joked that it would come in handy, when she got 'involved' with a boy. Abby then threatened him with a virus in his comms kit and Marty backed down fast!

My cell rang and I hoped it was my Mindy, but no; it was Voight.

"I have a man that I am sure you'd like to meet!" Voight said. "I'll text you the address."

"You got it!" I snarled, hanging up.

"Back to business, guys!"

There was silence.

"Well, don't all get excited at once!" I laughed. "Marty we have an interrogation!"

Abby went through to prepare the comms, while I got changed. Then I had a thought.

"You coming Sophia?"

Two barks were my answer, followed by Sophia rocketing into the armoury.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 9:00 P.M.

Voight's Warehouse
Chicago

8:02 P.M.

We pulled up inside the warehouse and the roller shutter was brought down, behind us.

Battle Guy and I got out, then I let Eisenhower out.

In front of me was, I assumed, Voight, another man and Matthews.

"Kick-Ass, Battle Guy, this is Olinsky and Voight," Matthews said. "And this must be the intrepid Eisenhower!"

Eisenhower looked up at Matthews, then over to Voight and Olinsky, before she wagged her tail and barking twice.

"She won't eat any of you," I advised.

"Good to know!" Olinsky laughed.

"You have a client?" I asked, getting back to business.

8:24 P.M.

The man was strapped to a chair, which in turn was bolted to the floor.

"Time for some Q and A!" Olinsky said, cheerfully, ripping off the man's gag.

"Look I'd like to help you if I could, but I can't!" The man said.

"You see that!" Olinsky said, waving his fist in the man's face, before hitting him across the face with it.

"Fuck!" The man screamed.

"Smarts, doesn't it, getting slammed in the nose, fucks you all up. Get that pain shooting through your brain and your eyes fill up with water. It 'aint any kind of fun!" Olinsky said, conversationally, before looking over to me.

I walked over and the man tried to push back, away from me.

"Now!" I growled. "This can go easy, or it can go hard!"

"You have to arrest me, I have rights!" The man squealed.

"Sorry! We aren't the Police!" Matthews said, walking away and out of sight

"Neither are we!" Voight said, walking off with Olinsky and also vanishing out of sight.

I had to smile at them; they were like Marcus, plausible deniability!

8:30 P.M.

"Bartolemeo, I presume."

"I have no idea, what you are talking about. I want a lawyer!"

I pulled out my Glock and pressed the muzzle into the back of his hand. The man squirmed and tried to pull his hand away.

"You don't get it, do you? There is no lawyer! There is no Police! Just me!" I growled.

"Okay, I am Bartolemeo! Please..." Bartolemeo begged.

"Wimpy little bastard, aren't you?" Battle Guy commented.

"You've caused a lot of problems, men have died, good men!" I snarled, punching the man across the face, causing blood and a tooth to fly across the concrete floor. I was feeling no emotion, except hatred, towards this man. He worked for D'Amico, he deserved nothing!

"You are not from around here, are you?" I commented, reading a file that the Chicago PD had hastily assembled on Bartolemeo.

"I'm allowed to travel, it's a free fucking country!" Bartolemeo yelled, through his pain.

"Not for scum like you!" I replied.

"Now... Simple question... Who is pulling your strings?"

"As if I'm gonna answer that question! I tell you I'm dead!"

I already knew the answer, but someone once said: 'Don't ask a question, you don't know the answer to'.

I kicked the man in the kidney.

"You fucking bastard!" Bartolemeo yelled, once he was able.

"Eisenhower! Schwanz!" I called.

The man screamed, as his manhood was chomped on.

"Fair exchange... Your dick, for a little information!" I growled.

"Fucking ouch!" Olinsky laughed, reappearing. "Remind me never to piss you off, when that dog's around!"

I got approving grimaces from Matthews and Voight, who had also reappeared.

8:57 P.M.

He caved, much to Eisenhower's displeasure!

Olinsky and Voight made notes, plenty of notes.

The following takes place between 9:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

Suspected D'Amico Headquarters
Chicago

9:47 P.M.

We gathered near to the building.

Battle Guy and I were going in on the first floor, via the main entrance. A four-man SWAT team, was going onto the second floor, via a fire escape. The final four-man SWAT team, would enter via the rear, on the first floor.

Voight and his team would be ready to mop up.

Tonight, I was taking a page out of Hit Girl's assault guide and I was not going to be subtle. No sneaking in; I had brought a new toy. Everybody in the building had been identified as an armed watchdog, there would be no innocents in the way.

The building had a pair of plate glass doors, shame, they were gonna need some more glass.

9:58 P.M.

I fired two breaching rounds from the Remington Model 870 shotgun, which shattered the glass doors and I headed in, before all of the glass had hit the ground. Two men stood up from behind the reception desk, reaching for their pistols, seconds later both men fell back down again, with large wounds from my shotgun. Only the first two rounds, in the magazine had been breaching rounds!

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and 11:00 P.M.

Suspected D'Amico Headquarters
Chicago

We came around another corner and found three more watchdogs, Battle Guy dropped two with His G36C and I dropped the final one, with the shotgun. We met up with the first floor SWAT team, who had cleared the rest of the floor, successfully and without injury. We advanced towards the staircase and proceeded up, as we could hear gun fire above us.

At the top of the stairs we found the other SWAT team, engaging half a dozen watchdogs. I slung the shotgun and readied my G36C, Battle Guy already had his up and firing.

10:09 P.M.

Facing ten weapons, the watchdogs didn't stand a chance and were soon lying dead or dying.

None of the SWAT team were injured and neither were any of Fusion. Voight and his team moved in and started looking for intelligence.

Voight and I had a quiet chat, this had been far too easy. Not even a dozen watchdogs and not much intelligence either!

It didn't feel right, we both agreed on that.

You are advised to read 'Feral, Chapter 15 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 6' next...

Chapter 63*: Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 6

This chapter is in parallel with 'Feral, Chapter 15/16/17 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 6', which should be read first...

The next day
Saturday

The following takes place between Midnight and 1:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

0:30 A.M.

We finally arrived back at the safehouse.

Tonight had been, interesting!

There had been a result, but it seemed not to be the result we had been hoping for. Voight and I had both agreed that D'Amico was perfectly capable of conning us. D'Amico was a complex adversary, who was skilled at planning and scheming.

I would not put it past him to sacrifice watchdogs just to wear us down.

The following takes place between 5:00 A.M. and 6:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

5:35 A.M.

I woke up with a start.

I still felt like crap, my sleep deficit was not going away. All my muscles ached.

Sophia looked over at me and whined.

"Fancy a jog, girl!" I asked and got a muted 'woof', in answer, as Sophia got up and stretched.

The following takes place between 6:00 A.M. and 8:00 A.M.

The Park
Chicago

I finished my jog around the park, I was exhausted and so was Sophia.

However we were both happy, the jog felt good.

I collapsed onto a chair, in the kitchen, while Sophia went and wolfed down a gallon of water, from her bowl.

Marty passed me an energy drink and a coffee.

"You two looked to have enjoyed yourselves!" Marty commented.

"I needed to unwind and apparently so did Sophia. Being a dog and a doggie Super Hero, seems to be hard work!"

The following takes place between 8:00 A.M. and 9:00 A.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

8:05 P.M.

Marty and I finished breakfast and I grabbed a shower.

Abby arrived, along with Kim. They both started training on the mat, practising the moves that I had taught them both.

I took the opportunity to go shopping, as we were getting rather low on decent food. The safehouse had stocks of frozen and dried food, for emergencies, but we weren't there yet, so we needed some good, fresh food.

Dr Bennett had provided the necessary supplies for Murphy and Fellowes, to keep them going.

The following takes place between 9:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

The rest of the morning was spent weapons training.

I instructed Marty, Kim and Abby, on various weapons that Mindy had previously taught me how to use. We even managed some target practice! Abby was very keen to learn, even though she never expected to use any of the weapons.

The following takes place between 1:00 P.M. and 5:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

After lunch, we all sat down to go through the latest emails from Voight.

There was a lot of information and we hoped some of it might lead to more D'Amico facilities.

The following takes place between 5:00 P.M. and 6:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

5:05 P.M.

I was looking forward to a peaceful evening.

I was exhausted and so were Marty and Abby.

Kim was with us and the four of us sat down to enjoy an early evening meal and chat together, with Marty inserting jokes periodically.

The following takes place between 6:00 P.M. and 7:00 P.M.

Safehouse A
Chicago

6:18 P.M.

My cell rang; it was the Fusion divert.

"Go!" I snarled.

"It's Voight! As we thought, we've been fucking had! That bastard played us!" Voight growled, angrily.

"Explain!"

"Bartolemeo and the Chicago headquarters? Well that was all a fucking screen. Now, Bartolemeo must have slipped up, as he gave us information that led us to the real HQ. I also believe that Bartolemeo was in the dark about this, obviously D'Amico didn't trust the rat! We also dug through that stuff your partner obtained in New York. We've pinpointed the HQ, but it won't be easy to assault, plus I think they might be on to us; we're gonna have to move in soon! I'll send the address, get here as soon as you can," Voight explained.

"We'll be there as soon as we can!" I replied.

"Marty, Kim, gear up!" I yelled, running to the armoury.

"What's up?" Marty, Abby and Kim asked.

I explained Voight's call and Abby got her systems ready, while Marty, Kim and I geared up.

The following takes place between 7:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M.

7:43 P.M.

I slammed on the brakes and Beast skidded to a halt.

Gunfire was all around us. I could see SWAT and CPD, exchanging fire with watchdogs. I saw Voight behind a black SUV, reloading his pistol. Olinsky had an AR-15 and was taking aimed shots at the watchdogs defending the building.

Battle Guy, Hawk and I, got out and readied our weapons. We were all carrying the G36C. I had given Hawk a crash course, yesterday afternoon, in using the G36C. I went around to the back of Beast and pulled out my H&K 121 and loaded a two-hundred round belt and slung another belt in a pouch.

"Hal, Fusion is engaging!" I called.

"Hal copies, Fusion engaging!"

"Hal is much nicer to talk to than Battle Guy!" I commented.

"Thanks asshole!" Battle Guy replied, with a chuckle.

I ran over towards Voight, receiving a few impacts on my armour. I raised the 121 and let loose a short burst, the heavy rounds causing a lot of heads to turn, as they impacted on the building and sent watchdogs scurrying for cover. This gave the CPD and SWAT time to regroup.

"Welcome! You brought the heavy stuff, I see!" Voight commented.

"I do like to kick-ass"! I replied and Olinsky laughed.

7:51 P.M.

We opened fire again. The resistance here was definitely stiffer than last night's effort.

The following takes place between 8:00 P.M. and 9:00 P.M.

8:02 P.M.

We managed to force the watchdogs back and into the main building.

The main door was glass and had already been shattered. The watchdogs were taking cover inside and on either side of the door, including behind the reception desk.

"Any innocents in there?" I asked Voight.

"None!"

"Try one of these," I suggested, throwing him a hand grenade. "On one!"

"That's what I'm talking about!" Voight said, with a big grin.

"Three, two, one! Fire in the hole!" I called, pulling the pin and throwing the grenade, Voight did the same and we both ducked behind a wall.

A few seconds later there were two explosions, plus some screams.

Voight and I leapt up, pouring rounds into the building, followed by Olinsky, Hawk and Battle Guy.

8:22 P.M.

We were pinned down on the second floor, at the top of the stairs.

I had the H&K 121 on it's bi-pod and was sending short bursts towards a barricade, set up by the watchdogs. Thankfully these watchdogs, were not expecting this kind of heavy calibre round and quite a few dropped as bullets went straight through their defences. Voight was using my G36C and getting kills. He seemed to enjoy it, too! But I knew that he had lost colleagues over this past week and wanted blood.

SWAT were at another staircase and were forcing their way through and would come up behind these watchdogs and they knew it, backing down another corridor, deeper into the building. There was no escape, as the building was completely surrounded. Voight's team was around the perimeter, with many other very angry cops.

8:48 P.M.

We had kicked down the barricade and joined up with SWAT. Hawk and Battle Guy were behind me; both of them using me and my heavier armour as cover. I noticed that Hawk kept giving Voight quick looks and I knew why. Voight seemed to be ignoring her, completely. The watchdogs moved back, covering their retreat, but losing men all the same.

We were relentless in our pursuit.

The following takes place between 9:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

9:02 P.M.

We were moving through narrow corridors, from a junction.

SWAT had split off into two teams and gone left and right, we kept going straight ahead.

A dozen yards down the corridor, there was a group of watchdogs and they were barricaded behind a large photocopier, which was proving quite effective. I had used up all the ammunition for the H&K 121, so I left it in a doorway and sent Battle Guy back, for more ammo, while I started shooting with my G36C, as Voight was now using an AR-15 dropped by a watchdog and using salvaged magazines.

9:09 P.M.

Voight took a pair of rounds in his vest and was thrown backwards. Hawk was distracted by another watchdog, who suddenly appeared out of a doorway, to her left. I moved back towards Voight and I as I did so, I fell backwards over a dead body. The two watchdogs came out from behind their shelter and both advanced towards me, with their pistols up. I tried to bring the G36C to bear, but I wasn't going to be fast enough.

9:12 P.M.

Suddenly, I heard four rapid shots and both watchdogs fell, with two shots each, in the head.

A gloved hand reached down and pulled me up; I turned to face this new shooter and come face to face with Medic, she was wearing black combats, a combat vest and a black mask, similar to Battle Guy's old bandanna, plus a subdued Red Cross arm band on her upper left arm and lightweight black combat boots. On her back was a small black pack, which I presumed was laden with medical equipment. On her right hip was a holster for her Beretta M9A1 pistol. I could also see that she had a throat mike, for her comms.

"You okay, Kick-Ass!" Medic asked.

"Yeah, what are you doing here?" I asked.

"I heard what was happening and I'd already been piecing my kit together, just in case, ever since this week began!" Medic replied.

"What will your daughter say?"

"We'll cross that bridge, when we get there!"

"Is the little guy with Hal?" I asked, careful not to use real names.

"Yes," Medic confirmed.

"Hal, this is Kick-Ass; Medic is with us!" I called.

"Hal copies Medic onsite!"

9:15 P.M.

Hawk had taken care of her watchdog, allowing Medic to check on Voight. He was only bruised and slightly stunned. She helped him back down the corridor, where Lindsay helped Medic to get Voight downstairs. Olinsky came back from checking out some offices and the three of us: Olinsky, Hawk and I, headed down the corridor, past the bullet-riddled photocopier.

"Hope it isn't rented!" Olinsky quipped.

9:21 P.M.

Another group of Watchdogs appeared, just as Battle Guy returned with two more belts and my H&K 121. He had taken the time to load a belt and passed it over, I slung my G36C, taking the 121 and opened fire, cutting down eight watchdogs within a few seconds. They weren't so much cut down, as cut apart!

"Hamburger!" Olinsky joked, smiling broadly.

9:27 P.M.

We met up again with SWAT; they had two men down, due to injuries.

There was one more floor left and we approached the stairway, carefully.

SWAT went up first, with it's six remaining team members and immediately came under fire. One member was shot and fell back down the stairs. The wounded man was dragged away by Battle Guy. Medic reappeared and started treating the wounded man. That was one gutsy woman, Chloe should be really proud of her!

I headed up the stairs and brought my 121 to bear and opened fire. This allowed the, now smaller, SWAT team to advance on the last group of watchdogs, who were guarding something important; at least their determination made it seem important.

9:38 P.M.

We finally whittled down the watchdogs, they were tough.

Damn! I forgot how heavy this bastard gun is, or maybe I'm just shattered. Let's get this over with! I jumped up and received several bullets, to my chest armour. This was not a good idea, but what the hell. I charged the final watchdogs finishing off my last belt.

Silence descended on the building.

"Not clever dude!" Battle Guy commented.

"It worked, didn't it!" I replied.

"This time!" Battle Guy admitted, grudgingly.

9:43 P.M.

We moved past the dead watchdogs and reached a large steel door.

Battle Guy inspected it for booby traps, before hauling it open.

We all passed through the steel door, with weapons raised.

"Fuck!" Hawk said.

"Bloody Hell!" Olinsky commented.

Arrayed in front of us was what could only be called one thing...

A bomb factory!

Masses of explosives and the associated detonation equipment were in racks. It was a one stop shop for bomb makers! The SWAT guys were wide-eyed at what had been found. D'Amico could have destroyed the entire City of Chicago with what was here and still have enough to destroy most of Manhattan!

This had been a major victory!

This was D'Amico's main source of bombs!

The following takes place between 10:00 P.M. and 11:00 P.M.

10:01 P.M.

We spent quite a while checking the building for any more watchdogs, before handing the entire site over to the bomb disposal guys to clear. We were all happy. Nobody from SWAT or the Police, had been killed, but there were a lot of injuries.

10:34 P.M.

Battle Guy, Hawk and I finally clambered into Beast, after stowing our weapons in the back.

Then my cell rang.

It was Mindy.

"Mindy?" I asked, no response. "Mindy?"

"The bastard escaped!"

"I'm so sorry! Are you all okay?"

"I'm bruised and battered, but okay. Shadow has wounds, to her right shoulder, as well as a lot of cuts and bruises. But..." Mindy seemed to falter.

"What?" I asked, cautiously.

"Josh... He took four bullets, fired by that fucking asshole D'Amico... They were meant for Shadow, but..."

"Oh God, I'm so sorry, Mindy," I replied, feeling appalled at the news. "I assume Shadow is not taking this well!"

"How the fuck can someone cope, losing the same fucking person twice, for fuck's sake!" Mindy said, before the call was lost.

I told everyone what had happened, they were appalled too.

The following takes place between 11:00 P.M. and Midnight

Safehouse A
Chicago

11:14 P.M.

We were all completely exhausted, by the time, we got back to the safehouse.

Dr Bennett, stripped off her gear and changed, then she and Curtis went home. I understood that she had got changed at the safehouse, earlier this evening, surprising Abby! I let Dr Bennett know that the girl's were safe, but that Josh had been killed.

I suggested that Kim and Abby go straight to bed, while Marty and I secured everything and got out of our gear. God I'm glad it's all over! I grabbed a shower and just sat in bed for a while, with Sophia.

I then sent Mindy a text: 'ALL SAFE. JOB COMPLETE. CHICAGO SAFE.'

The reply came back: 'BASTARD ESCAPED. NY SAFE.'

11:54 P.M.

I received another text from Mindy: 'LOVE U. SLEEP TIGHT.'

I replied: 'LOVE U TOO. SLEEP TIGHT.'

You are advised to read 'Forsaken, Chapter 64 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 7' next..

Chapter 64*: Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 7

This chapter is in parallel with 'Feral, Chapter 18 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 7', but you should read this chapter first..

The next day
Sunday

The following takes place from Midnight

Safehouse A
Chicago

We Slept.

You are advised to read 'Feral, Chapter 18 - Sleep of The Vigilante - Day 7' next...

Chapter 65*: Healing

This chapter follows on from 'Forsaken, Chapter 64' and 'Feral, Chapter 18'...

The next morning

Monday

Marcus' House

New York City

5:22 A.M.

I looked in on the girls, before heading into work; there was a lot of clearing up to be done in the City!

First, I checked in on Chloe, but she wasn't in her bed.

Next, I went onto Mindy's room and found both girls fast asleep in Mindy's bed. Chloe must have come through during the day or night and crawled into bed with Mindy. They had both slept clean through yesterday; they really were knackered, plus the fact that both girls were wounded! Seeing them both lying there asleep, it was difficult to see them as anything other than two teenaged girls, but I knew better; these two were hardened vigilantes, who had won a great victory.

My first stop, on the way to work, was to visit the hospital. I wanted to check on the status of the boy; last I heard he was at death's door. As far as the two girls are concerned, he had died on the way to the hospital. However, I got a call, early yesterday morning to say that he was alive, but it would be touch and go. I didn't want to get the girl's hopes up, just in case and Chloe had already lost him twice, she couldn't survive going through it a third time!

I had left a note on the kitchen table, asking Mindy to call me, as soon as she woke up.

I haven't heard from Dave, so I can only assume that he was wiped out, too!

6:36 A.M.

Man, my head hurts!

"Ow, get that elbow out of my ribs, bitch!"

"Sorry, Mindy!"

"What's the fucking time?"

"Er... Just after half six, on Monday morning!" I replied. "I think we may have slept in... I've never missed an entire day before!"

"I have; you get used to it!" Mindy grouched. "Anyway, what the fuck are you doing in my bed?"

"Sorry, I had a nightmare... I think," I replied, a little unsure of myself.

"Okay, I'll let you off, but people might start to get ideas, if we keep sleeping together!"

"Funny! Damn, I need a shower and no offence, but so do you!" I said, wrinkling my nose.

"How about a bath! I am really sore and could do with the lovely hot water!"

"Sounds like a good idea. Who goes first?" I asked.

"Neither, it's big enough for both of us... But don't get any ideas... And don't tell Dave... Ever!" Mindy cautioned, then smirked. "And keep your hands to yourself!"

Damn, it felt so good, to sink into the bubbles and hot water!

My body was covered in bruises, not to mention my left side, where I had been kicked, which was now blue and purple. Now I like purple, but not on my skin! I admit though, that I am a lot better off than Chloe, this time around. I saw her bruises, as she got into the bath; she was fairly well covered too, not to mention that she had been shot, twice. They were both shallow wounds, thanks to Joshua absorbing most of the bullets' energy!

I couldn't think about Joshua right now and won't bring it up, as I knew that it would be too painful for Chloe.

"We are two bruised and battered bitches, aren't we?" Chloe commented.

"Tell me about it, but it's nothing I haven't had before!" I replied.

"Yeah, but you didn't get shot, this time!" Chloe groaned.

"One advantage we have, is that we are both young and our bodies will heal quickly," I replied, smirking. "How's the shoulder?"

"Hurts like hell, but I can live with it!"

..._...

We lay there, for what felt like hours.

It felt wonderful and whenever the water got cold, we let some out and more hot water in.

I jumped as my cell rang; I had brought it into the bathroom with us. It was Dave and we had been in the bath for about forty minutes, according to the clock.

"It's Dave, now don't make a sound!" I warned Chloe, who just grinned, mischievously.

I answered the call.

"Hi Dave!"

"Hi gorgeous! How are you both?"

"We're okay. We just woke up and I'm having a bath!" I replied, casually.

"Hi Dave! I'm having a bath, too!" Chloe called over.

Fucking bitch!

"Both of you, in the same bath?" Dave laughed. "I thought you said, you didn't go in for that kinda thing?"

"Mindy has such a lovely soft touch, Dave!" Chloe called, laughing. "She really knows where to put her fingers!"

"Shut up, bitch! Don't fucking encourage him!" I shouted, blushing madly, but laughing anyway.

I could hear Dave laughing hard, at the other end of the connection.

"You got anything useful to say, cunt, as I have a bitch to drown!" I growled.

"I just wanted to know that you were both okay," Dave replied, calming down.

"What about you guys?" I asked.

"We're all fine. No major injuries, just a lot of bruises, but you know how that goes! How are Chloe's wounds?"

"She's in pain, but okay, for now. Although, she's about to be in a load more fucking pain!" I replied, glaring at Chloe, who was now giggling uncontrollably.

"I'll call you later, don't get yourselves too excited, now!" Dave teased, dropping the call.

I glared at Chloe.

"You are one evil, little bitch! Dave will never let this lie, you know that, don't you?" I said, grinning, before splashing

Chloe and starting a water fight!

"I'm sorry, I just couldn't resist it!" Chloe replied, semi-apologising, but still laughing and splashing back.

Safehouse A
Chicago

I put my cell down and just stared at the floor.

I was glad that both girls, were safe and that they were obviously in high spirits!

I tried to get the image of two teenaged girls, naked in a bath together, out of my mind! I couldn't wait till Mindy was back here, with me, in Chicago. They really must have been exhausted to sleep so long! I had woken up yesterday evening after a good many hours of sleep and so had Marty, Kim and Abby. They had all done really well, especially Abby, who had been invaluable to our efforts.

I watched as the mesh gate slid open, letting in Dr Bennett's Jeep SUV, followed by the safehouse main door sliding open. By the time I had got up and walked out of the briefing room, Sophia was bounding down the stairs and Dr Bennett was getting out of the SUV, along with Curtis, who gave Sophia a big hug and got an enormous wet lick in return.

"I thought you guys might like some breakfast!" Dr Bennett said.

"Yeah, she cleaned out most of the McDonald's Drive-Thru!" Curtis added.

I opened the back door and found a pile of McDonald's bags. We carried them all upstairs to the kitchen and I kicked Marty, Kim and Abby, out of bed.

"Breakfast, come and get it!" I yelled.

..._...

"Heard anything?" Dr Bennett asked, looking worried.

"Yeah, I just called them. They woke up a little while ago and are now having a bath... Together!" I replied, with an evil grin.

"Yuck!" Curtis offered.

"They both okay?" Dr Bennett asked, ignoring Curtis.

"They are both okay, just hurting a little. They should be back home tomorrow," I replied.

"Thank God!" Dr Bennett replied, grabbing some food and a coffee.

The other three drifted in and also grabbed some food and a coffee, before digging in.

Nobody talked much, we all just ate, glad that we had survived!

..._...

About an hour later, my cell rang.

I answered and raised the cell to my ear and instantly regretted it!

"He's alive!" Mindy yelled, jubilantly.

"Joshua?" I asked, tentatively.

"Yes, Marcus just called. The boy's alive and he'll stay that way! He's lost a lot of blood, but he survived!" Mindy explained, happily.

"How's Chloe taking it?" I asked.

"I don't really know. She hasn't said a word, since I told her. She broke down almost immediately and started sobbing. I assume with relief!" Mindy replied.

"I'll pass it along. I suppose you're gonna go along to the hospital?"

"Yeah, once Chloe has recovered; as I'm not fucking carrying her!" Mindy replied.

New York City

We had been told that we could see Josh, later that morning.

Chloe had sorted herself out and apologised for going to pieces on me! I told her not to worry about it, not to mention the fact that it had made me feel slightly uncomfortable!

We headed out, on the BMW and met up with Marcus, at the hospital. He advised us that Josh was a mess and that we might be in for a shock.

..._...

Josh was in a private room and had what looked like dozens of wires vanishing under his bandages and bed clothes.

He was awake, but looked drowsy. He smiled when he saw the three of us. What skin we could see, was various shades of black, blue and purple. Chloe actually winced.

"I look that bad, do I?" Josh whispered.

"You've looked better!" I replied.

"So have you!" Josh whispered back and tried to laugh, but grimaced with the pain of trying.

"Sorry, Josh," I said, feeling very concerned.

"It only hurts when I laugh," Josh said, getting his voice back.

"Well don't laugh then, dickhead!" Chloe responded, tears running down her cheeks.

"What are you crying for?" Josh asked.

"I was so scared, that I had lost you again," Chloe admitted.

"I couldn't let him kill you," Josh replied, smiling.

"So, are you intact?" I asked.

"They removed one bullet, the other three went straight through me. Nothing major was hit, thankfully. But the wounds hurt like hell!" Josh replied.

I saw Chloe peek under the bed clothes and smile mischievously.

"What?" I asked.

"He's still got the most important bits!" Chloe replied, with a giggle.

"You had to check him out?" I asked, incredulously.

"Taking advantage of a wounded boy, Chloe?" Marcus asked, with a laugh.

Josh looked a little embarrassed.

"Well, you've seen me naked, does that mean I can see you naked?" Josh asked.

"No, it certainly does not!" Chloe replied, forcefully, but she still blushed.

"You liked what you saw?" I teased.

"I dunno, I've nothing to compare him with!" Chloe replied, shyly. "But, yeah."

"Great, thanks! Could we change the subject, please?" Josh asked, a little pink colour, rising in his cheeks.

..._...

We weren't allowed to stay long, so we headed to Safehouse C, to start packing our kit and taking it over to Marcus'.

The kit would be shipped back to Chicago, tonight. Marcus was not overly pleased about receiving another, dubious, late night visitor, but was pleased to have all the incriminating evidence removed from his house, as soon as possible!

Chloe and I were due to fly to Chicago, early tomorrow morning.

Suffice to say, that last night with Marcus was happy and enjoyable, thanks to Josh being alive, but subdued as I would be leaving Marcus again. But Marcus promised to come to Chicago for a few days, once he had cleared up the mess that he said I had left all over New York!

Chapter 66*: Home

Author's Note: For anyone of a sensitive disposition, there will be smut later on...

The following day

Tuesday

West Ridge

Chicago

The two girls, were flying in and would catch a cab back to the house.

They were due to arrive any minute.

I was nervous and so was everybody else. The house was busy; everybody was here: Marty, Sophia, Abby, Dr Bennett and Curtis. Kim had wanted to be here, but we agreed that might not be a good idea, at least not yet.

The cab finally pulled up and Curtis yelled out.

"They're here!"

..._...

Just as Mindy was about to open the door, I threw it open and Mindy dropped everything and jumped into my arms! Chloe ran to her Mom, for a hug. I was very surprised to find that Mindy was crying and gripping me very tightly. I could hear Chloe in tears, too. It was quite an emotional homecoming.

"Dave, I want you," Mindy said. "Right the fuck now!"

"What, right here on the couch...?" I replied.

"Why the hell not?"

"In front of everybody?"

Mindy pulled herself away from me and looked around sheepishly. I didn't think that she even noticed anybody else was here! Mindy blushed very red.

"Maybe not such a good idea!" She muttered.

"Thank God for that!" Dr Bennett said, sounding relieved.

"That could have been quite a show!" Marty said, looking unhappy.

"Eww! That's disgusting Marty!" Chloe said.

"What's everybody talking about?" Curtis asked, innocently.

"Ah, so innocent, yet so horrible!" Chloe laughed.

"You used to be innocent, once upon a time and not all that long ago either," Dr Bennett commented, to Chloe.

..._...

Mindy climbed down off of me and smiled.

"It's good to be back, among friends. I missed you all," Mindy said, shyly.

"I missed everyone, too; a week with Mindy, was a new experience!" Chloe said.

"Hey! You said that you enjoyed yourself!" Mindy retorted.

"It was better than a week with Curtis, but that's not really saying much!" Chloe responded, smiling at Curtis and getting a scowl in return.

"You do look like hell girl," Marty commented, looking at the visible bruises on Chloe's face.

"Well I was shot twice! The bruises are nothing."

"Chloe did well; I was very proud of her and impressed by both her bravery and her courage, not to mention her standing up to me, when things got a bit heavy!" I said and looked at Chloe, who blushed. "If it wasn't completely impossible, I'd say that she was getting nearly as good as I was, some years ago!"

"Well done, Chloe! It took me months with Hit Girl, to get even the smallest compliment!" I quipped.

"Well you did suck!" Mindy replied, making everyone laugh.

"You may be interested to know that the bravery runs in the family. Thanks to 'Medic', I am alive today. She took down two watchdogs, double-tapped each of them in the head!" I explained.

"Mom went into action?" Chloe was astonished.

"I'm not exactly over the hill, young lady!" Dr Bennett said, sounding offended. "I saw no reason why you kids should get all the fun!"

"I wouldn't exactly call it fun, Mom!" Chloe groaned.

"Thank you, Dr Bennett or rather... Medic!" Mindy smiled, causing Dr Bennett to blush.

Sophia pounced on Mindy and then Chloe, pushing them both to the ground and licking their faces. It took both of the girls to finally push Sophia away, so they could get up and I handed them a towel to clean their faces. Both girls had giggled their way through the licks!

Sophia had missed them both, greatly.

A couple of hours later, Chloe went home with Curtis and Dr Bennett.

Dr Bennett said that she would come by tomorrow, to check over Mindy's bruises.

Marty suddenly seemed to vanish, discretely, along with Abby.

We were finally alone.

"You still want me?" I teased.

Mindy didn't respond, but just dived on top of me, pushed me onto the couch and started kissing me, as if it were her last kiss on earth.

"Don't mind us, we'll just head down to the safehouse for a few hours!" Marty called, vanishing out the door, with Abby.

God she felt and tasted really good!

..._...

As soon as the front door clicked shut, Mindy went crazy and started pulling off her clothes and within a minute she was astride me completely naked.

I was shocked!

"What's wrong?" Mindy asked in confusion.

"Wow, there are a lot of bruises on that lovely body, of yours!" I replied, looking everywhere.

"Is that all you're worried about?" Mindy asked, relieved, pulling at my trousers.

Sophia appeared, looked at Mindy, woofed and closed her eyes, before heading downstairs in disgust!

I helped Mindy pull off my clothes and that first touch of her naked body against mine, felt like heaven.

"You've got a bruise or two, too!" Mindy commented, running her hands across my chest, while I did the same.

Mindy squealed, as my hands ran over her hardened nipples and she then made me gasp as her hands found me.

I sat up and Mindy crossed her legs behind me. I felt myself slip inside her, that lovely warm, soft feeling. I felt Mindy tense as I slid in and we started kissing and kissing, like never before. The time apart had been torture; now we could make up for it!

I grabbed Mindy and stood up, the kissing continued as I headed towards the stairs but we ended up against the wall and I continued to thrust inside her. Then the kissing ceased abruptly.

"God, I've missed you Dave, I really have!" Mindy breathed.

"You are so gorgeous," I responded, struggling to breathe.

I pulled out and carried Mindy upstairs, still kissing. We landed on our bed and started again, in earnest; I dived onto Mindy's right breast, causing her to scream, as I took the nipple into my mouth. She really did taste good! My left hand worked it's way south and caused another intake of breath, as I started gently teasing that most tender of spots. I was definitely getting the reaction I desired and Mindy was definitely enjoying herself, as she writhed on the bed, beneath me.

"Dave, get in me now!" Mindy growled, sounding very Hit Girl like!

"Yes, ma'am!" I replied and Mindy giggled.

I removed my hand and replaced it with something else and started thrusting hard and fast. Mindy started to moan and then screamed, closely followed by her finger nails digging into my skin. I could feel the blood running down my back, but damn, it felt good.

Suddenly, I reached my climax and literally exploded into Mindy, who screamed and lay back panting and trying to breathe. I collapsed on top of her and started kissing her, for all I was worth.

"I love you, girl, I really do!" I gasped, in between kisses.

"I love me too, but I love you so much more!" Mindy replied, with another giggle.

Ten minutes later, we were both relaxing in the tub, enjoying the soothing hot water.

Mindy couldn't keep her hands to herself!

"I hope you weren't like this, when you were sharing a bath with Chloe!" I said.

"I am not a fucking dyke; I have never felt up another female...!" Mindy stopped, as I started laughing and then she blushed.

"Got you going there!" I said, still laughing.

I stopped suddenly as Mindy grabbed me and started rubbing her hands up and down. I grabbed Mindy's breasts and massaged her nipples gently, causing her to moan and groan. Mindy started to thrash around and the water started to go everywhere. I gently played with her pubic hair and what was hidden beneath...

"Oh God, Dave, I want you..." Mindy stammered.

..._...

Minutes later, we were on the bathroom floor and Mindy's, beautiful green eyes bulged, every time that I thrust into her.

Damn, this was one hell of a homecoming!

Twice in one afternoon!

Damn!

Maybe we should spend time away from each other more often!

We were finally resting in bed, when my cell rang.

It was Marty.

"Is it safe to come home yet?" Marty asked and I could hear his grin from here!

"Yes, Marty, you're safe!" I replied, smirking at Dave.

"Shame!" Marty replied, as he hung up the call.

I giggled and rested my head on Dave's chest, as Dave ran his hands through my hair. It was so good to feel Dave's hands on me, after a whole week apart. I missed his soft touch, I missed his smell and being able to watch his, often geeky or dorky, expressions. I definitely missed him being inside me, that's for certain!

..._...

We finally got dressed and went downstairs, as we were very hungry.

Sophia was in the kitchen; she gave us a very disgusted look and covered her eyes with her paws!

It wasn't our fault that she wasn't getting any!

Marty had dropped Abby off at home and gone on to see a friend, whom he had brought back with him and he asked if we would we mind a visitor. Marty looked kind of shifty!

"I'd like you to meet my girlfriend..." Marty said, as he led us both into the living room.

"I think you know Kim!" Marty finished.

To say I was shocked, was a bit of an understatement!

Maybe I should have noticed something, but well, there were other things happening at the time. I looked at Mindy.

"Hello Kim," Mindy said, with some embarrassment. Well Mindy had tried to almost kill Kim!

"Hi Mindy, you look good, considering and I'm sorry about D'Amico," Kim replied.

"Thanks. Dave tells me you were a great help, last week," Mindy said.

"I wanted to help, Dave was a little short handed."

I watched Mindy fighting with her emotions.

"You need a hell of a lot of work and it will be hard work! But... if you want to help, then you can join us... But only in a probationary position. You will need to work to gain a full position," Mindy said, with an evil smile.

Marty was all smiles and so was Kim.

"You don't know what this means to me, Mindy, thanks!"

"Yeah, well, I have my softer moments!" Mindy growled, heading off into the kitchen.

"Welcome to Fusion, Hawk!" I said.

Dave had explained how Kim/Hawk had helped them and provided much needed support.

It's not that I didn't like the girl, she just... Well... Tends to fuck things up! But I did almost kill her, so I did owe her and Marty seems hot on her... Yuck!

Damn, I really am going soft!

Maybe Dave fucking me twice in one afternoon, has fucked my brains!

A thought suddenly occurred to me! Chloe hasn't met Kim yet; I will have to arrange something, later in the week.

..._...

Today was very tiring, for so many reasons and I was glad to be able to get to bed, again!

Dave immediately started putting his hands all over me and every time he touched a nipple an electric shock shot through me, damn, could I do all this again? My crotch was sore, to say the least, not to mention the fact that the rest of my body was covered in bruises!

I let Dave play with my breasts, as I didn't have the energy to fight him off; I just had to tolerate the shocking sensations!

Finally, I gave up and started investigating Dave's body; naturally there was only one item, that appealed to me!

Was it possible to wear that component out?

I hoped not!

Chapter 67*: Birthday Desires

The following day

Wednesday

West Ridge

Chicago

Dr Bennett had come over around lunchtime, as promised.

I was examined head to toe and pronounced 'relatively' healthy! Luckily, I was just bumps, bruises and a few contusions.

"How are Chloe's wounds?" I asked, delicately.

"I've seen worse, she was lucky. It could have been a lot worse if it wasn't for the armour that you got for her and that boy slowing down the bullets," Dr Bennett replied.

"I'm sorry I put your daughter into that position, Dr Bennett," I said.

Dr Bennett looked at me strangely.

"Mindy, I do not hold you responsible for my daughter's well being. Chloe has decided that she is old enough to make that decision herself. I expect you to guide her, but not to make decisions for her. Chloe is very strong willed, so I doubt she would listen to you anyway!" Dr Bennett replied.

"Tell me about it! Chloe read me the riot act last week and stood up to me, despite the fact that I had just hit her! Now, I am not proud of that and I still regret doing it. I can be impulsive at times and well, normally Dave is around to steer me, but Chloe took charge when she needed to. Chloe doing that stopped me from doing something stupid and getting myself killed," I said, felling a little ashamed.

"I didn't know. Chloe never said anything about it," Dr Bennett said, sounding a little surprised.

"We agreed to keep it a secret. I haven't even told Dave; he would go ballistic if he found out and so would Marcus. Chloe really is a wonderful girl and on that subject I need to get your permission about something," I replied. "I want to get her something big..."

That evening

Morton Grove

Chicago

Dave, Marty and I arrived at Chloe's place, that evening, for a meal.

"Happy Birthday, Chloe!" We said, as we went in.

Chloe looked a little embarrassed at all the attention!

"Thanks!" She said.

"Fourteen! Not a bad age for a vigilante!" Mindy said, with a smile.

While we were waiting for the meal to be ready, we all sat down in the living room and I passed Chloe her birthday present.

"It's only part of your present. The other part hasn't arrived yet!" I said.

The present was wrapped in black paper, with a blue ribbon.

I carefully pulled off the ribbon, the present was quite heavy. I gently removed the paper and revealed a black, plastic case. Next, I placed the case gently on the table and opened it. Inside was a pistol, it was an FN Five-seveN pistol, brand new. The pistol was black, with a blue inlay on the grip. The barrel was also threaded, to allow a suppressor to be attached. The suppressor was included along with two magazines and a cleaning kit. There was also a combination laser and light unit for mounting under the barrel.

I didn't know what to say, I just stared at Mindy.

"You lost your pistol, to that asshole! I already had this for you, so now you really do need it!" Mindy said, smiling.

I felt myself crying, how stupid!

I looked up at my Mom and she smiled back and nodded her approval.

"Not bad Chloe!" Abby said.

"Cool!" said Curtis.

Two days later
Friday
West Ridge
Chicago

I was starting to feel a lot more human!

The extra rest had done me good. I had been catching up on things and placing orders for equipment, to replace those items that had been consumed or lost, over the past week in both New York and Chicago. My Ducati was now back in Safehouse A and the weapons had all been cleaned, along with the combat suits.

Last night, Kick-Ass and Hit Girl had visited Murphy and Fellowes, which went down very well with the two young boys! Although, Cameron Fellowes said that he would have preferred to see Shadow, too!

I advised Sam Fellowes that he could go back home and that Murphy could stay until he had alternative accommodation. They were both very appreciative of Kick-Ass and Battle Guy's actions, in saving them and their families.

Today, I went to pick Chloe up, in the SUV.

I asked Chloe to come for a drive with me; she was a bit mystified, but came with me, anyway. I pulled up near a piece of waste ground and turned off the ignition, finally I turned to Chloe.

"This looks interesting," Chloe said. "Now I assume you're gonna kill me!"

"Very funny!" I replied, laughing.

"So, why all the cloak and dagger?"

"Just felt right, I suppose. I want to talk to you, about lover boy!" I said with a smirk.

"You want to talk about Joshua?"

"You haven't mentioned the boy once, since we got back to Chicago, but I know you miss him; I'm not that out of touch with growing up and relationships!" I replied.

"Oh," Chloe responded, biting her lower lip.

"Look, the boy should be able to travel by the end of next week. Do you want him in Chicago? Do you want to see him again? Do you want him in Fusion? I can help with all these questions, but I won't do anything without your say so. I think the kid has potential, admittedly I didn't like the British twat at first, but he learns fast and I don't mind having him around," I explained, with a smile.

Chloe looked a little surprised.

"Thanks Mindy. Yes, I do want to see him again, he saved my life, almost giving his. I would like him to be in Chicago, so I can see him and yes, if you think he can hack it, then having him in Fusion could be good," Chloe replied, blushing a little.

"Okay, I will set things in motion. I have been coordinating with the relevant people, both in New York and Chicago. I'll keep you informed. So far only myself and Dave know, nobody else," I said.

Chloe was a little stuck for words and sat there quietly for a few minutes.

"Mindy... I..." Chloe started to cry.

"Look Chloe, you helped me last week, I just wanted to return the favour, we're partners remember," I responded. "See why I came all the way out here?"

"Yeah!" Chloe replied. "You know, I feel strange around Josh. I have feelings that I have never felt with anybody else... Is that good?"

"I don't know. As I've mentioned before, I don't have much experience in that department! However, when I am with Dave, I feel like I can't be without him. When we are apart I yearn for him, constantly," I said.

"Sounds like the way I am with Josh," Chloe admitted, smiling shyly.

"What about Kyle?" I asked.

"We've been drifting apart, but we're still friends and I think he knows that my heart is elsewhere!" Chloe replied, smiling.

That evening
West Ridge
Chicago

"It all went well, with Chloe?" I asked.

"Yeah, she loves Josh!" Mindy replied.

"Not a surprise, considering what you told me!" I said. "You called Marcus?"

"Straight after I dropped off Chloe," Mindy replied.

New York City

"Hi, Josh! How are you feeling?" I asked.

Josh was sitting up in his hospital bed and looked cheerful.

"Hi, Lieutenant! I'm feeling a lot better, thanks," Josh replied.

"We need to talk about your future," I said. "You cannot go back to breaking into safehouses and living on your own; you are only fourteen. Now I have an offer to make to you; you don't have to accept, but I would seriously recommend considering it."

"I'm open to any suggestions!"

"It is time to stop trying to be a vigilante in New York, I believe you might have a new future in Chicago, where you can receive proper training and where, apparently, there is somebody who loves you."

Chapter 68*: Rapid Fire

The following day

Saturday

Safehouse A

I had arranged some fun for everybody.

We would all meet at Safehouse A, for ten in the morning.

By 'all', that included myself, Mindy, Marty, Kim, Chloe, Abby, Curtis, Dr Bennett and, of course, Sophia. Mindy and I, along with Marty, Sophia and Kim, had been there since nine, setting things up.

Sophia was asleep, as usual, on a couch in the briefing room. To one side of the mat, we had setup two tables and about twenty yards away, a wooden stand, backed with ballistic steel. It was what we used as a range to keep up our skills. We used suppressors, as the soundproofing wasn't good enough for fully automatic fire, or large bore weapons.

Arrayed on the table were a selection of weapons: two Glock 17 pistols, two Glock 26 pistols, an FN Five-seven pistol, a P90 PDW, a G36C assault rifle, two SIG Sauer P232 pistols and a Browning Hi-Power. All the weapons were fitted with suppressors and had several magazines available, all currently unloaded. Beside the weapons was a small pile of boxes, with the relevant ammunition and a bin for the used brass cases.

..._...

Curtis's eyes lit up when he saw all the weapons.

Up until now, Curtis had never been allowed to properly see our weapons and we had never allowed him in the armoury, for obvious reasons.

"Wow!" Curtis exclaimed. "Can I touch them?"

"You can fire them all, if you want," Mindy said, smiling.

"Cool!"

Everybody else was used to weapons of some sort, but this was to be some fun target shooting, so we were all looking forward to it, even Dr Bennett!

I also wanted to have a bit of fun of my own!

"Okay, let's have some fun first! Who wants to test a bullet proof vest?" I asked.

Nobody stepped forward.

"Who votes for Curtis?" I asked, laughing.

Every single hand went up, including Dr Bennett's. We even got a bark from Sophia.

"Hey! That's not fair; stop picking on the little kid!" Curtis exclaimed, indignantly.

We all laughed.

"Mindy, why don't you go first and show everybody how it's done!" I suggested, smirking.

Mindy reluctantly strapped on a vest and went and stood at the end of a mattress, set there for her to fall back on.

"Ready?" I called.

"Just get on with it, ass!" Mindy growled.

"Okay, lets start with the .38," I suggested, but did not pick up a SIG Sauer. Instead I reached under the table and grabbed another, slightly larger, pistol!

"I've been so looking forward to this, for over a whole damn year!" I said, smiling so hard it hurt!

I pulled back the cocking lever, brought the pistol up and aimed it.

"Dave, that is not a .38, that's a fucking..." Mindy said, her voice rising steadily in pitch, before being cut off.

..._...

Mindy's exclamation was cut off by the loud report of the .44 Magnum, then as the bullet impacted Mindy's vest dead centre, she was carried backwards onto the mattress.

"You fucking bastard!" Mindy yelled.

I just laughed!

"Okay, I suppose I deserved that!" Mindy grouched, getting back to her feet. "Fucking ouch!"

Everybody else started laughing and I explained about Mindy shooting me, in the back, with one of these damn cannons! Mindy walked back and took off the vest, rubbing her chest hard.

"That'll leave a mark!" Chloe grinned, trying not to laugh.

Mindy just scowled!

Next up was Curtis, who wanted to see what it was like. Chloe wanted to use the .44 Magnum on him, but I suggested the .38, as the .44 would probably break every bone in his body! Chloe reluctantly agreed, but she still got to shoot Curtis!

"My dream, ever since Curtis was born! I finally get to shoot him!" Chloe grinned, while receiving a vicious glare from Curtis, as he got back to his feet, rubbing his chest!

..._...

After everybody, including Dr Bennett, had been 'shot', we moved onto target practice.

First up was Mindy versus Dr Bennett.

They both selected Glock 17 pistols and each loaded five rounds into a magazine. They then inserted the magazines and together fired all five rounds. Once the weapons were cleared and safe, Chloe went to get the targets. Mindy scored forty-nine out of fifty, while Dr Bennett got a perfect fifty! Mindy was not happy, but she still shook hands with Dr Bennett, magnanimously.

Next up was Chloe versus Abby. They followed the same procedure and Chloe achieved a score of forty-six, while Abby got a score of thirty-two.

Marty managed a score of forty-five, while shooting against Kim, who got a score of forty-eight.

Last up was myself versus Curtis.

For this, Chloe helped Curtis. She crouched down behind him and held the P90, while she let him aim it, using the laser. Chloe loaded a magazine with five rounds, fitted it to the top of the P90 and then let Curtis pull the trigger, five times. Curtis' target was completely unmarked, while I scored a perfect fifty and again, this annoyed Mindy, no end!

Curtis was very unhappy about missing the target, so after checking with Mindy, Chloe loaded forty rounds into a magazine and helped Curtis to aim the weapon, before she selected full automatic fire and let Curtis pull the trigger, holding it down. The weapon was empty in a little over two seconds. Chloe cleared the P90 and set it down on the table.

Curtis looked up at Chloe with such an enormous smile, that Chloe looked a little confused. Curtis then hugged Chloe really tightly.

"Thanks Chloe. That was the most amazing thing I have ever, ever done in my life. You are totally awesome!" Curtis exclaimed, still hugging Chloe, who looked really uncomfortable! "I love you, Chloe."

"No problem Curtis, I love you too!" Chloe mumbled, feeling a little embarrassed. I remembered what Dr Bennett had said about how Curtis loved Chloe, despite the horrific way she treated him! Dr Bennett smiled at Chloe's discomfort and laughed. After that, Curtis never left Chloe's side, for the rest of the day!

Chloe actually went soft on Curtis and helped him fire all of the weapons and she even showed the kid around the armoury. He loved the Katana blades and the combat suits, but Curtis was a little disturbed, when he saw the damage to the shoulder of Chloe's combat suit. This seemed to have an affect on Chloe's attitude toward Curtis.

"Mindy, you got a moment?" Chloe called from the armoury.

I followed Mindy into the armoury, Chloe was there along with Curtis and they were standing in front of the original, Hit Girl and Kick-Ass, costumes that we kept there.

"Curtis wants to know why you don't wear the wig and cape any more and so do I?" Chloe asked.

Mindy looked at me and I just shrugged.

"I don't know really. I wanted to change the way I looked and we also needed some decent suits that could protect us, when we went up against armed cunts. I admit I do miss the cape and the wig, as Daddy designed them both for me," Mindy replied, smiling down at Curtis. "You think I should still wear the wig and cape, Curtis?"

"Yeah, you'd look really cool!" Curtis replied, happily.

"Maybe I will, then," Mindy replied.

..._...

At lunchtime Marty and Kim went out to get an enormous pile of pizzas.

When they both returned, we all enjoyed some good pizza, chatting about anything that came to mind. It was actually kinda cool, eight people and a dog, sitting on the mat in the safehouse eating pizza! Sophia enjoyed sharing Curtis' pizza, before returning to her snooze.

After lunch we settled down to some different training. Chloe partnered with Curtis and Abby, showing them some basic defensive movements. Mindy and I partnered with Dr Bennett, who wanted to refresh her skills from years before. Marty, naturally, partnered with Kim!

I had to admit Dr Bennett was very good and could move quite quickly. There was definitely a lot more to Dr Bennett than you would think! Surprisingly Chloe wasn't pounding on Curtis, as normal, but was actually teaching him moves, along with Abby. Curtis was a fast learner and seemed to be picking things up well. I understood that the kid would be ten, in a little over a week. He would be going home, too, at the end of next week as school would be starting soon, which Chloe wasn't looking forward to, very much.

I had a chat with Dr Bennett about Chloe, just to see how she had been settling back in, after New York.

"She's been good, surprisingly there doesn't seem to have been much in the way of nightmare's. Not sure if that is good or bad!" Dr Bennett said.

"You mean that Chloe is getting used to killing! I understand that Chloe undertook her first interrogation, while in New York and promptly threw up afterwards!" I commented.

"She is a very different girl, to that which left for New York. I seem to have my little girly girl back again! I can only assume that finding out that Joshua was alive, has given her a new reason to live. I liked the boy, only met him a couple of times; Chloe was too embarrassed to bring him around much!" Dr Bennett explained with a smile.

..._...

The day had been a great success.

It had allowed everyone to have a bit of fun, after the nasty week that we all endured and it also gave Mindy a chance to focus on anything other than Ralph D'Amico. Mindy was not happy that he had escaped, naturally. It wasn't her fault, he was just a very good planner, as we had all seen! Both cities were slowly getting back to normal. Nobody had any idea where, or when, Ralph D'Amico would appear again. But when he did and it was when, not if; we would be ready. We now had a good team building, we even had our own medical support! D'Amico had killed a lot of people and he would be back, that was certain.

For now we had to train and prepare. We had at least one new member to train up and that would take months. We had to repair and replace equipment, including Beast. Mindy was not happy to see the damage to Beast, but pleased that we were able to put the vehicle to good use. Marty was sourcing some replacement armoured glass, via one of Mindy's contacts.

West Ridge

Mindy and I were back home, with Sophia.

Marty was out with Kim! They seemed to be spending a lot of time together!

"Well done Dave, that was a brilliant day!" Mindy said, giving me an enormous kiss.

"You're not too pissed off about the .44 Magnum?" I asked, with an evil smirk.

"Not really. It's not like I didn't deserve it! But that was still fucking evil; you've been hanging out with me too long, I'm starting to rub off on you!" Mindy replied, kissing me deeper and for longer.

"I only get the best bits of you!" I said, kissing back.

Chapter 69*: Two Wheels Are Best

The following day

Sunday

Safehouse A

I had been shopping online; actually I had placed the order last week, while in New York, but with a slight amendment, when I had got back to Chicago.

Four large packing crates were delivered to Safehouse A, early this morning. Yeah, my courier delivers on a Sunday and at three in the morning!

I was with Dave, who I had forced out of bed, to come and help me.

I checked the crates and first of all and opened the one that was for me!

After a bit of unpacking, I finally had parked in front of me, a brand new motorcycle! The Alpine White, BMW R 1200 GS Adventure motorcycle looked cool. This was to be my own personal transport, for when I was Mindy Macready. The motorcycle was pre-fitted with a pair of aluminium panniers, an aluminium top box and a tank bag. I was really looking forward to taking this out, both on the road and off...

"If it isn't the blades, it's the damn motorcycles! You look like you're gonna have a damn orgasm, right there!" Dave commented, dryly.

I ignored him, I was far too excited.

I checked the next three crates and ignored the second one, leaving it for now and we pushed it to the back of the safehouse. Dave and I unpacked the other two crates, covering the contents with a pair of tarpaulins.

I drove the BMW back home, followed by Dave in the SUV.

There would be a lot more space in the garage at home, once Marty moved out and took Speedy.

Later that afternoon, Dave and I took Chloe down to safehouse A.

I thought that Chloe felt something was amiss.

"What's going on?" Chloe asked, cautiously, as soon as we got out of the SUV.

"Scared Shadow?" I teased.

"Hell no!" Chloe replied, confidently.

"Right, the other week you complained about riding on a bike with me," I growled.

"Do you really blame her?" Dave asked, grinning.

I ignored him.

"Well I thought it was time that you learnt to ride!" I said, pulling the tarpaulin off the first item.

It was a Honda CRF100F motorcycle, in red and white.

Chloe was speechless.

"Think you're up to it, Chloe?" I asked, smiling.

"I..." Chloe tried.

"Look if Kick-Ass can learn to ride, any asshole can!" I stated, ignoring the look of annoyed disbelief on Dave's face.

"I can do it!" Chloe finally said.

"You will learn on this little thing; it has no power and can't be used on the road, but it will be easier for you to learn on, especially when you come off and you will! Now, once you successfully learn to ride this thing, then I will move you on to the next step..." I said, pulling off the next cover.

"Fuck!" Chloe said.

It was a Honda CRF250L motorcycle in slate grey and navy blue. This motorcycle had a licence plate: SHADOW.

"This one is road-legal and more than twice as powerful. Keep up with this bike and then you can look at something sportier!" I said. "Late birthday present!"

Chloe said nothing, but then threw herself at me and hugged me so tightly I couldn't breath. I literally had to prise her off of me.

"Thanks Mindy, you really are wonderful!" Chloe said, smiling. "I can see why you love her Dave!"

I felt myself blushing badly!

That evening West Ridge

"That seemed to go down well!" I commented to Mindy.

"I think she's really looking forward to it. It was a good idea to get her Mom's permission first though!"

"Just what we need... Another damn psycho on two wheels! What did Dr Bennett say?"

"Well, she said that Chloe is determined to break her pretty little neck somehow, so why not let her break it by coming off a motorcycle, at speed!" Mindy replied.

That same evening Morton Grove

I was annoyed!

I had asked one simple question and they all yelled at me!

'NO!'

Why is that the one word people, always, say to me?

I only asked if I could join Fusion!

They all behaved like I wanted to borrow a gun and kill somebody!

I was very annoyed, so I had asked Mindy one simple question...

"So Hit Girl, how old were you, when you started slaughtering people?"

"Not old enough!" Mindy had replied.

So that was the end of that!

I will admit that I did enjoy the day. Firing all those guns was totally awesome and for my Chloe to help me was even better!

Talking of Chloe, I did get a big shock when I saw her combat suit; I mean, I knew that she had got hurt in New York and I had seen the wound while the dressing was being changed; Chloe never knew that I was watching. The wound was pretty horrific, to say the least! But seeing the damage to the armoured suit, was a bit much! I knew that the suit was designed to stop bullets, but these two bullets cut straight through the armour, the flesh of Chloe's shoulder and then back out through the armour again! Chloe could have been killed and then I would have lost the one person in the world that I respected the most.

I had tried to talk to Chloe about the wound and the damage to her combat suit, but she refused to talk about it. I kept asking, but just when I thought Chloe was about to hit me, she just quietly asked me to drop it and that she would tell me about it, when she was ready.

I was very young, but I knew that being a vigilante was very dangerous and any of them could get hurt, at any time, or worse!

Two days later
Tuesday

It was Abby's birthday.

I had spoken with Marty and suggested he find her a suitable gift. That gift would also be a big thank you for her work, with Fusion. Marty had managed to find the latest and the hottest laptop, he could find for Abby and it cost over seven thousand dollars!

I officially made Abby a full member of Fusion, she had definitely earned it! Dave had explained that she seemed a little nuts, at times, including putting comms on Sophia!

The team was now looking very good!

There was still a lot of training to do and I was itching to get back out and start fighting, but we still all had some recovery to do. Chloe's wounds were healing nicely, under the care of her Mom and the rest of us were getting back to normal. In the interim I had Kim to train that was when she wasn't glued to Marty, at the waist and lips! I wondered if they were fucking yet?

Chapter 70*: Joshua

Four days later
Saturday
Chicago

Joshua was in town and Chloe was going loopy!

Dr Bennett rang to tell me that Chloe was bouncing up and down like a kid on Christmas morning; Dave replied that he knew what that was like!

..._...

Wednesday was not fun, though; it was the first anniversary of the murder of Dave's Dad! Dave was pretty much out of it, for the entire day. I spent as much time with him, as I could, as I did feel at least partially responsible for his Dad being murdered!

"It was not your fault, Mindy!" Dave kept saying.

"I know! I just feel that I could have done more," I kept replying.

Finally Dave had had enough of my whining...

"Look Mindy, we both had parts to play in the deaths of each other's fathers, but neither of us were responsible, okay?"

"Yes, okay! I still..."

"Mindy!"

"Okay, jeez!"

This year was also going to be the first anniversary of a lot of things, mostly bad; the next few months would be hard on us both.

..._...

Anyway, back to the British brat!

He had partially recovered from his wounds and could now walk unaided.

He still had a lot of recovery time ahead of him, but he was young and should heal fast. Marcus had arranged for him to be fostered by Jack Bay and his wife; which meant that there would be somebody, with sufficient clout, to keep the kid on the right track! It would be quite a while before Josh was able to do any more vigilante work, but I would be able to start training him, as he heals.

Josh would be living at 'The Farm', as Jack called it.

I went up there the other day, with Dave and Sophia. Jack said we could use The Farm for Fusion, if required, as it was relatively isolated. This actually gave me an idea for Chloe and the new skills she would need to learn. Jack agreed and Dave brought up the two motorcycles in a van, yesterday. The possibilities of The Farm also gave me some other ideas, too!

I had to admit that I was a little shocked to see a photo of both my Mom and my Dad, but pleased all the same.

That afternoon
The Farm

I would admit that I was a bit wary about all of this.

My wounds still hurt and the flight did not exactly help them! But the painkillers helped and it was only a short flight. Marcus had rented a car at the airport and we drove north, to what was to become my new home. I was nervous, very nervous.

Marcus turned off of the main road, through a gate and onto a short track, towards a large house. It looked nice, this would be my home. Marcus stopped the car.

"You ready, Josh?" Marcus asked, with concern in his voice.

"I think so," I managed.

"Come on," Marcus said, leading me up to the front door.

Before Marcus could knock, the door was thrown open.

"Hi, Josh, I'm Jack Bay!"

I shook the extended hand, before being pulled inside.

"Josh, this is my wife, Natalie," Jack said, indicating a smiling woman, who stepped forward to shake my hand.

"Hello, Josh and welcome."

"Hi!" Was all I could think of to say. I felt a little uncomfortable, but Jack and Natalie seemed nice and according to Marcus, they knew all about Fusion and the circumstances of how I was hurt. This included what happened to my father and how Mindy had found me. At least I wouldn't have to try and hide all that crap!

Natalie showed me upstairs to my room; it faced the rear of the property, overlooking a small river. There was a bed, with blue bedding and a chest of drawers, plus a cupboard. It looked like the room had been freshly decorated and furnished, just for me; the blue carpet was new, too. They had really gone all out for me!

I said thank you and dumped my pack, then we went back downstairs.

Marcus and Jack were chatting like old friends, which I understood they were. I felt weird being in the company of two senior Police Officers, considering my previous activities and that both of them knew all about Hit Girl! I still had to meet Kick-Ass and the other members of the team.

Jack went through the house rules, which were basically that I could go anywhere, but I must let Jack or Natalie know if I left the property. Marcus then let me know that Dr Bennett would visit regularly to check on my wounds and where necessary I would go see her at the hospital, in Chicago. Marcus also reminded me that I would be going to school in a few weeks and that sucked! However, he also told me that I would be going to the same school as Chloe and that definitely didn't suck!

"Thought that might put a smile on your face!" Marcus laughed.

"Oh, is this the lady friend?" Natalie asked, making me blush.

"Yeah," Marcus replied. "Josh got shot, protecting Chloe."

"Well done Josh, very chivalrous!" Jack said, approvingly. "A typical Englishman!"

That same afternoon
West Ridge

"Hi Josh, I'm Dave!" I said, letting Josh and Marcus in.

"Marcus!" Mindy squealed and ran over for a hug.

"Josh!" Chloe squealed and ran over for a hug.

"You must be the kid Chloe talks about twenty-four seven!" Marty quipped. "I'm Marty and this is Kim."

"I do not talk about him all the time!" Chloe retorted, letting Josh go and blushing slightly.

"Well, Marty's not that far off!" Abby added. "Hi, I'm Abby!"

"Hi, everyone!" Josh said, looking a little overwhelmed.

"This is Sophia," Chloe said, pointing down at a rather large dog.

Sophia looked up and studied Josh, before licking his hand.

"You're safe, she won't eat you!" Mindy announced, then smirked. "Or worse!"

"It's so good to see you up and about, Josh!" Chloe announced, happily.

"At least I have clothes on this time, so no peeking!" Josh grouched and Chloe blushed.

That evening
West Ridge

We all sat down for a meal.

It was a 'lets all get to know Josh and vice versa' meal.

Josh spent the first half hour telling us about all that happened, after he had come out of the coma. It was interesting hearing about his, not so successful, attempts at being a vigilante!

"I know how you feel kid; my first few times out, didn't quite go according to plan!" I commented, to some laughter around the table.

"My first night out went a bit wrong, too!" Chloe admitted.

"You did help Dave and I!" Mindy said.

"True, but I got myself shot and knocked out!" Chloe growled.

"But the vest protected you and Mindy insisted that we took you home!" I said. "Turned out to be a good decision, if you ignore the bitchiness!"

"Chloe, bitchy?" Abby asked, smirking.

"Funny!" Chloe said, scowling at Abby and me.

"Ignoring the fact that Mindy was trying to kill you, did you recognise Chloe, the first time you saw her?" I asked, receiving a scowl from Mindy. "Was she how you remembered her?"

"The hair was a different colour and a bit longer, but the eyes were unforgettable," Josh replied, blushing a little. "Otherwise she was the same as I remembered, but maybe a bit taller and she's grown in other places, too!"

Chloe blushed at that last comment and concentrated on her food.

We had all agreed to avoid talking about Josh's Dad; that could come later. We just wanted to keep things 'happy', for now. Josh told us about his trip to Chicago, when he came looking for Fusion. Mindy looked a little uncomfortable, when Josh described seeing us getting back into Beast and driving off. Chloe then explained about Mindy getting shot. He also described, in some detail, the events that had almost ended with Mindy cutting his throat.

"It was kinda cool, being attacked by two beautiful girls! Closest I've ever got to being between a girls legs!" Josh admitted, causing both Mindy and Chloe to go bright red and everybody else to laugh, including Marcus.

"Well, Josh, you have a lot of potential problems ahead of you... Mindy being one of them!" Marcus quipped, receiving a scowl from Mindy in return.

"I can handle the bitchiness, I've survived worse!" Josh replied, with a smug grin aimed at Mindy.

"Just think yourself lucky that you're still healing or I'd really show you bitchiness!" Mindy growled, menacingly.

"Bring it on!" Josh replied, with a cheeky grin.

"Marcus, you never finished your story about Mindy and her first..."

Mindy quickly cut Chloe off.

"Chloe, you had your mother to help you and guide you through puberty. I... And no offence Marcus, but you were, well, completely useless when it came to puberty and er, female things that occurred during puberty! End of subject... Sorry Marcus!"

"No offence taken!" Marcus replied, smirking. "It was rather a nasty 'period' in your life!"

"You're being very quiet through all this Dave," Chloe said, meaningfully, digging for more.

"Don't bring me into this! I have nightmares about Mindy starting puberty, I was there! Plus she would really hurt me, if I dared reveal anything!" I said, ignoring Mindy's glare. "But I will say that there are some really epic stories that even Marcus is unaware of!"

I felt Mindy's glare of hate boring into me!

..._...

After dinner we all sat and chatted for a while.

Marty went to take Abby home and said he was going to spend the night with Kim. Both Josh and Chloe, were spending the night with us.

"Now Chloe, stay in your own bed tonight!" Mindy suggested with a smirk.

"What is that supposed to mean?" Chloe asked innocently.

"Well, you do have a habit of waking up in somebody else's bed!" Mindy reminded her.

"Oh yeah!" Chloe admitted, looking awkward.

"I'm sure Josh would love your company, but he still has injuries that need to heal!" I commented.

"I can't believe you just said that!" Chloe exclaimed, blushing with embarrassment.

"I can listen out for them!" Marcus suggested, smiling.

"He will, too!" Mindy said.

The following morning
Sunday
West Ridge

Chloe was still in her bed, when I went to wake her!

"You don't trust me do you?" She grouched.

"I trust you! I'm just fuckin' with ya, kid!" I laughed.

Josh needed a little help getting dressed, as his wounds were a bit sore from all the travelling yesterday. Chloe was very concerned about this and offered to help, but instead Dave got Josh sorted. The kid now had a lot more potential scars on his chest and stomach!

After breakfast, Chloe and Josh went into the living room to talk. Dave and I went to take Sophia for a walk, leaving them both alone, for a bit. This was both to let them have some time together, plus to show that we trusted them.

..._...

About an hour, or so, later we got back and as we entered we could hear the two kids talking, in the living room.

We didn't think they had heard us come in, so we kinda listened in...

"Chloe, why did you become Shadow?" Josh asked.

"It was after I lost you. I kinda wasn't myself. My parents decided to move away from New York, as I was starting to lose it and going back to the same school... It really hurt, very day I was there," Chloe explained.

"But why Shadow?" Josh persisted.

"Well, I was missing a big chunk of me, you. You could say that I was a shadow of my former self. I thought that being a vigilante might help to put myself back together, sort of..." Chloe explained further. "Sounds kinda lame, doesn't it!"

"No, it doesn't," Josh replied. "I'm sorry I put you through all of that."

"It wasn't your fault Josh," Chloe replied. "And thanks to Dave and Mindy, I didn't get a chance to do anything stupid!"

"You mean, like I did, in my feeble attempts at being a vigilante!" Josh said.

"You were all on your own, then. But now you have us to help you. Give Dave and Mindy a chance, they are really good people and have done everything they can to help a moody bitch, who doesn't always show how grateful she is!" Chloe said and I saw her hugging Josh.

"I know, but why would they want to help a little shit like me and a Brit to boot!" Josh replied.

"We all have something in common... D'Amico. Mindy's Dad was killed by Frank D'Amico. Dave's Dad was killed by Chris D'Amico. Your Dad was killed by Ralph D'Amico. My best friend was also almost killed by Ralph D'Amico. Finally, Ralph D'Amico tried to kill me, so I owe him, plus the bastard still has my pistol and I want it back!" Chloe responded, anger building in her tone, before subsiding. "Dave and Mindy care, they have both been through what you have. Dave learnt the hard way that you need proper support to be a vigilante. Dave and Mindy will give you that support. Please give them a chance, Josh!"

There was a significant pause.

"I will, I promise," Josh finally said. "That Mindy can be a real bitch, when she wants to be!"

"Oh, you've seen nothing yet!" Chloe replied, laughing.

"Hi! Glad to see that you're both still dressed!" I teased, walking into the living room with Dave.

"Mindy!" Chloe exclaimed. "How long have you been there?"

"Long enough to hear about why you became Shadow," Dave replied. "Sorry for eavesdropping,"

"Oh... Sorry if I said anything out of turn," Chloe said.

"You did fine, Chloe," I said, smiling and Dave and I sat down, across from Chloe and Josh. Both kids looked to have been crying, at some stage.

"You been having second thoughts, Josh?" Dave asked.

"Just getting my mind in order. I trust you both, but I suppose I just needed reassurance from Chloe," Josh admitted.

"Glad you're still onboard kid!" Dave said.

"So, you still gonna use 'Feral'?" I asked.

"No! That name was for a past life, when I was alone. I am no longer alone, I have you guys," Josh said, smiling.

"Well?" Chloe asked, in anticipation. "What name are you gonna use?"

"Jackal!"

Chapter 71*: Jackal

The same afternoon
Sunday
Safehouse A

"Damn!"

"What was that Josh?" Dave asked, curiously.

I was in the Land Rover Discovery, they call it an LR4 SUV over here. Dave was taking me to their main safehouse.

"I walked right through this area a couple of times, when I was in Chicago looking for you guys!" I explained. "I walked past several buildings and thought that any one of them could be a safehouse and I was right!"

I watched as we approached a generic looking factory unit and Dave pressed a button, mounted on the dashboard of the SUV. A wire mesh gate slid to one side, allowing us entry and closed behind us, the door to the building then slid open and Dave drove inside.

..._...

Dave stopped inside the darkened interior and I watched as the door closed behind us, then lights came on, illuminating an amazing sight.

I actually had trouble taking it all in!

In front of me was a very large mat, of the sort used for martial arts training. Beside us was parked the black SUV, that I had seen previously. I got out and my eyes went wide, when I saw a pair of hyper-cool motorcycles. The purple Ducati was obviously Hit Girl's and I assumed the green and yellow Harley to belong to Kick-Ass.

"Damn, those are cool!" I exclaimed.

Dave was actually laughing at me!

"Your face, Josh; talk about changing expressions!" Dave said, then pointed at the SUV. "That is Beast, which is currently down to replace some damaged glass."

I could see the bullet holes on the left side, plus the damaged glass. Close up I could see the armoured glass and bodywork. I went for a closer look at the two motorcycles. They were just awesome! Dave had to pull me away from them and over towards a two story brick structure, built within the main building.

"This building has accommodation, the Armoury and our Command Centre and Briefing room," Dave explained and he took me on a tour of the upstairs first.

There was a kitchen with a large table for eating and a corridor led off to a bathroom and three bedrooms. One was obviously for Dave and Mindy, with it's own bathroom. The other two rooms each had two beds and one room was obviously for females.

Downstairs, Dave showed me the Armoury.

"Damn!" Was all I could say, when I saw the weapons, swords and the combat suits arrayed all around me!

..._...

"Like what you see?" Dave asked, grinning.

"Bloody hell! You have everything in here!" I replied.

I just couldn't take it all in, my brain was overloading! I could see pistols, assault rifles, a machine gun. There was also over a dozen Katana swords. My attention was drawn to the original Hit Girl and Kick-Ass costumes and then to the newer combat suits. I recognised Hit Girl's and Shadow's, but hadn't seen Kick-Ass' up close. I spent a couple of minutes with Chloe's combat suit and reached out to touch the wrecked right shoulder, where she had been shot.

I felt Dave put his hand on my shoulder and I looked up at him.

"You okay, Josh?"

"Yes. Just seeing the damage brought back memories, mixed memories."

"You need to talk, we're all here to listen. We've all been through hell at one stage or another and can relate," Dave offered.

"Thanks," I replied.

Next we headed into the Briefing room and Command Centre. Again, I was amazed by the sophistication of the equipment on display. Enormous computer screens and several computers were at one end of the room. The other end, had comfortable couches and a large table.

..._...

Dave sat down on a couch and indicated for me to sit down opposite him.

I was starting to feel nervous.

"Time for a chat, Josh," Dave said, as I sat down across from him.

"Go ahead," I said, apprehensively.

"This is the same shit I told Chloe, so don't feel singled out. We want you to join the team, but we have rules," Dave started.

"Now, Little Miss Assassin tries to bend and sometimes break the rules and when she does, I come down on her like a fucking ton of bricks. Being a teenaged Hero, sucks. I know from personal experience and both Chloe and Mindy bitch about being a teenager, almost every other day. However, you will have responsibilities, Mindy always thought she knew everything about life and that her age was irrelevant, but she has learnt the hard way, the very hard way in some cases, that she is not invincible and despite her impressive physical and mental skills, she is still a sixteen year-old girl. You will fuck up, just like Mindy did and I will jump down your throat, or kick your fucking ass, to bring you back in line. That is for both your safety and ours. Understood?" Dave lectured and I nodded my agreement.

"You will be part of a team where you will be an equal partner. Yes, Mindy and I are the senior partners and Chloe is number three, but we are all equal. Basically, what that means is that if any of us fuck up, we expect the others to tell us we fucked up. When you fuck up, and you will, we'll tell you that you fucked up and we will tell you why and teach you how to avoid making that mistake again. I've fucked up more times than I care to think about and the famous Hit Girl has made her own fair share of fuck ups, most of them due to her age and lack of worldly experience. So, if one of us says you fucked up, don't take it to heart, learn from it. If you fuck up badly I'll tell you that you fucked up badly and if necessary stop you coming out with us and get Jack to ground you. Chloe actually stood up to Mindy, in New York the other week and put her in her place," Dave continued.

So that was what the slap across Chloe's face was all about!

"I'm used to being kicked, punched and sworn at; Mindy has tried everything, but when she acts like a stupid little teenaged girl, I tell her that and she tries to look cute and wriggle her way out of it, but that doesn't work with me any more, nor do her threats of bodily harm. While on that subject, Mindy will never intentionally hurt you, she may threaten to dismember or castrate you, but that's just her way; don't get me wrong, she is perfectly capable of carrying out her threats. She will hurt you during sparring sessions, but you get used to that and just learn to avoid her kicks and punches. Chloe actually cracked two of Mindy's ribs a few months ago, when she failed to avoid her kick. Injuries are a part of our lives. Now, we have all suffered a lot of damage to our bodies, but we're still here!" Dave finished. "So, Jackal, you still want in?"

"Hell yes. Thanks Dave. I promise to do my best, I know I'm young and I haven't a damn clue about what I'm doing, but I'll listen and I'll learn," I said, with a big grin on my face.

I actually meant it too. Chloe was right, I could trust Dave and Mindy, they would support me for as long as I wanted the support. This was everything I wanted, I knew it was going to be hard work. I had to finish my recovery and then get my body back into shape again!

But for all that Dave had just shown me, it would be worth it!

That evening
The Farm

Dave had dropped me off, back 'home'.

Natalie had an enormous meal waiting for me. The three of us sat down to eat and I told Jack and Natalie about what had happened since I had left yesterday.

I now had a 'secure' cell phone, which Dave had given me, so I could be contacted and could call Chloe, whenever I wanted! I gave this number to Jack and Natalie.

I went to bed that evening, feeling very happy with my 'new' life.

That same evening
West Ridge

"Did Josh enjoy himself?" Mindy asked.

"Just a bit! I thought his eyes were gonna pop out of his sockets, when he saw the safehouse!" I laughed, then went serious. "He kinda spaced out a bit, when he saw Chloe's combat suit, though."

"I'm not surprised!" Mindy replied.

Later that same evening
Morton Grove

My phone chirped with a text message.

I saw who it was and started to bite my lip, subconsciously and as I read the message, I could feel my cheeks getting warm.

Damn, that boy had a dirty mind, but I liked it!

Chapter 72*: Masks

One week later
Saturday

Well, that had been a fun week!

Firstly, on Monday, Chloe was in tears! The reason? She missed Curtis, who had gone home last Friday! Monday was Curtis' tenth birthday and Chloe had wanted to be with him, strange considering she usually can't stand the sight of him! Thankfully she got over that; I don't really know how to cope with crying teenagers, that's more Dave's kind of thing!

Also on Monday, Marcus went home! It was good having him to stay, but he still had a lot of mess to clear up in New York, some of which was mine!

Secondly, on Wednesday, we had reached the next anniversary: The Funeral, The Van and The Warehouse fight, closely followed on Thursday by the anniversary of my kissing Dave and leaving New York, for what I thought was for good!

Talk about emotions! I couldn't stop the damn things, I just hugged Dave and cried. Marty was having flashbacks and kept his sanity by explaining everything he knew to Kim and Chloe. Chloe had never heard the story about what had occurred that day, so was enthralled by the whole thing. She was particularly amazed by my antics on top of that van, while rescuing Dave! Not to mention my threatening to rip a man's cock off! Chloe actually asked permission to reuse that one, one day!

Josh had also survived his first week with us, too! Jack has been dropping Josh off with us, on his way to work each morning. Like Marcus he still has some clearing up to do in Chicago, some of which was Dave's mess!

Dave's little fun day, a couple of weeks ago actually proved very useful. Ignoring Dave's, unwarranted, revenge against sweet, innocent, Mindy Macready, I did learn some very useful things; archery, was one of them. According to Kim, she was very good at archery, when at both high school and college and had mastered the compound bow. I was also talking to Dr Bennett and learnt that Chloe was a competent archer, too; the little minx, hadn't mentioned that, not even when we were fighting The Archer! Dave also mentioned that among his many hidden skills, knife throwing being one of them, Josh could also handle a crossbow! Now, I am familiar with the crossbow; Daddy taught me how to use one, when I was ten. I have never used a compound bow though, but I thought that I would look into them and maybe get some for training and maybe to use operationally. They would be relatively silent as a weapon, as I learnt with The Archer!

Anyway, back to the present...

Between us all, we had discussed making changes to our combat suits.

Chloe needed a new top, as her's was wrecked by Ralph D'Amico. Marty needed some proper armour for his Battle Guy costume and Josh needed his first combat suit, as did Kim. Dave and I already had newer, more advanced armour, so we would be okay for now, at least that was what I thought, until The Armourer showed me some of the items that he could supply!

Hit Girl: This new combat suit would be very different! My upper body had different armour, that would still allow me to flex and move as I could before, but the protection was now up to Type III-A around the chest, stomach and back, the extra protection also wrapped around the sides. This new armour was black, with a purple tint and trimmed with purple and fitted on top of the under-suit, in a similar way to Kick-Ass' current suit. I had new gauntlets that were slimmer than previously, but still able to handle blades without injury. On the back of each gauntlet was an extra layer of purple armour, to allow me to deflect blows from swords, or other melee weapons. The gauntlets extended up my lower arms to the elbows, with extended sections to protect the elbow joints. These connected with armour that extended down from each shoulder, protecting the shoulder joints with Type III-A armour and extending down over the upper arms. The gauntlets were black, but the shoulder and upper arm armour sections were purple. Additional armour extended up from my chest to protect the collar bones and neck.

The under-suit was like that worn by Kick-Ass, but it was in two halves. This was mauve and made of a composite material that provided Type II protection. I had additional armour on my thighs, which also supported my Tanto, on the right and three throwing knives on the left. The purple armour from the thighs, extended down to just above my knees. My combat suit boots, were as before, but Mauve and provided good grip and protection for my feet and ankles. Type III-A armour wrapped around my lower legs, connecting with my boots and rising up to protect my knees, before connecting to the thigh armour. The lower leg armour was black, with purple highlights.

I had a separate utility belt that went around my waist and attached to the armour, at the rear of my combat suit and to points, on the front armour, just above my crotch. On this belt were my new, larger pistol holsters, as I had changed my pistols. I had various pouches, including a custom pouch for the communications gear at the back. My Katana swords had mountings for their Sayas, on the armour at the back of the combat suit.

The combat suit was finished off with my mask. This covered my entire head, except for my jaw. There was armour protection around the top and back of my head, extending down to the nape of the neck and around the sides. There was also protection for my cheek bones. The mask was dark grey and supported my purple wig that I had abandoned at the end of last year. Also back was a newer cape in a very deep purple, I believed that they called it 'tyrian purple'. The cape was a made of the same composite material as the under-suit, but in only two layers, making it light, but still able to deflect bullets and blades. This attached around the back of my neck, while still allowing me to seize my swords.

I mentioned changing my pistols.

In New York, I had selected the Glock 19 Gen4, as it had more stopping power than my SIG Sauer P232 pistols. I had decided to continue with these pistols and now had a pair of Custom Glock 19 Gen4 9-millimetre pistols, with purple grips, of course! This pistol had a fifteen round capacity and could take additional items, such as a light and laser, plus a suppressor.

Shadow: Shadow was a challenge, as usual! Her combat suit had been damaged and soaked in Josh's blood, so needed to be replaced. Chloe was also growing in height, as well as broadening out in other places, so needed a larger size anyway!

There was a new under-suit, just like mine and this was slate grey. The extra armour was the same for Shadow, as were the gauntlets, except that instead of purple, slate grey had been substituted and the armour and gauntlets were navy blue. Shadow had the same boots and lower leg protection, again with navy blue instead of purple. The mask was also the same as mine, although Shadow would retain the black ninja scarf, over the combat suit mask.

There was also a new aikidogi, in navy blue. Shadow's utility belt was attached in the same way as mine and carried her communications and other equipment. Her pistol holster was fitted on the left side, so that the pistol could be drawn with her right hand, across her body. Her left thigh had attachments for a pouch that could hold two fifty-round magazines for her P90. As Shadow would, eventually, be riding a motorcycle, the hakama would no longer be compatible and was, therefore, omitted.

Battle Guy: This was a challenge, too. I obtained a SWAT style combat uniform in cobalt blue, but made from the same composite material, that provided Type II protection. Over this there was Type III-A armour for the lower legs, knees and thighs. There was a combat vest that had Type II protection, but with additional panels of Type III-A over the chest and on the upper back. There was also Type III-A protection for the shoulders and upper arms. Gauntlets covered the hands and lower arms. These were dark grey, as was the other armour. The combat vest was black. The combat suit was finished off with a pair of black combat boots and his current mask.

A black webbing belt, had pouches for communications and other items. There was a holster for his Glock 17 and another for a Taser, the same as Kick-Ass'. I had added the Taser, as he obviously seemed capable of using one properly! He would also carry a Type III shield, in navy blue, with a white five-sided star in the centre. As far as a melee weapon was concerned, I was going to train Battle Guy on the Gladius, or short stabbing sword. There was an attachment for this on his belt.

Hawk: Now, the difficult one! Hawk basically had the same suit as Hit Girl and Shadow, except that the highlights and trim were chestnut brown and navy blue. The utility belt had a holster for a Glock 17 and a Taser, as well as the usual pouches for communications and other equipment. Her mask had a more beak like point to it, over her nose and had feather-like highlights, in a combination of chestnut and rufous browns, on either side.

The intention was to train Hawk to use the bō-staff. I had had a bō-staff made for her, very similar to Shadow's, however this staff was designed to be stowed in two halves and attachments for these were provided on the back of Hawk's combat suit. They could also be used independently or joined together at the base to form the staff.

Jackal: Now for the little twat that likes to throw himself in front of bullets! I decided to have some fun with his combat suit! There was a tan and reddish-brown under-suit, over which was the Type III-A armour. This heavier armour covered the chest, stomach and back, wrapping around each side. There were also extensions to protect his collar bones. Additional Type III-A armour extended over the shoulder joints and down the upper arm, joining up with the armoured gauntlets. Lighter armour ran around the pelvic and groin regions. Armoured combat boots attached to Type III-A armour that covered the lower legs and extended up, over the knees. This then joined onto Type III-A armour that protected the thighs. There was no utility belt, instead pouches attached directly to the combat suit. There were attachments on the upper thighs for two pistol holsters, configured to allow the pistols to be drawn across the body. Low on the back, above the equipment pouches were a pair of combat knives, mounted horizontally with a grip pointing in each direction. On his back was a mount for a single ninja-to sword.

The back armour was black, with silver highlights. The front armour was black, with tan highlights. The arm and leg armour was a reddish-brown, as were the gauntlets.

The mask was very different! The main mask was very similar to Kick-Ass' and generally of a tan colouring, with black and silver highlights. The shape of the front of the mask, was along the lines of a jackal with a distinctive tan coloured 'snout', which protected the jaw and extended out a few inches. The upper parts of the front of the mask were the same colour as the rest of the mask, tan with black and silver highlights. The other, very distinctive, feature of the mask, were the ears! Now Chloe might kill me, but I thought it would make Josh look both cool and much more sinister.

Why more sinister? Because when you look at Josh, you see a young kid of about twelve, even though he is actually fourteen! He is the same height as Chloe, which is below average, like I was and still am! Most criminals and cunts would look at him and probably ignore him. It doesn't help that Josh's voice hasn't fully broken yet, meaning that he doesn't sound very menacing, not like Kick-Ass, who can instil fear into anybody, with just a well worded snarl! I am hoping that the mask will instil some fear on it's own, without Josh having to use his voice, which I'm sorry to say, may be cute, but definitely not scary! The snout is not solid, but could be used as a blunt weapon, the main reason is the addition of voice changing technology, which Josh would be able to choose to enable or disable as required. This would make his voice unrecognisable to anybody who knows him and should hide both his age and his British accent.

Anyway, back to the ears!

They stick up about four inches and are flexible, so they won't get in the way and are made of a material that will resist them being chopped off! The ears are tan on the back and black, with silver highlights at the front. The entire combat suit was topped off with a black and silver hood, which attached at the rear of the base of the mask, covering the jackal mask and putting it into shadow, increasing the fear that the mask could instil.

Safehouse A

Everyone put on their new combat suits, except for me of course; I felt a little left out, but I already had newer armour anyway!

"Damn you look hot, Shadow!" Jackal said, in a deep voice, that sounded nothing like Josh.

"Keep your mind out of the sewer for a few minutes, Jackal!" Hit Girl laughed.

Jackal ran his hands, appreciatively, across Shadow's new armour and I noticed that Shadow seemed to be enjoying it. I cleared my throat, loudly.

"Er, kiddies, let's control the hormones and leave the petting till later, shall we?" I growled and Jackal rapidly removed his hand, which had been resting on Shadow's backside!

"You never pet me like that!" Hit Girl pouted.

"I prefer to ravage you naked!" I growled and saw Hit Girl's eyes almost pop out of their sockets!

"Far too much information Kick-Ass!" Shadow growled.

Battle Guy and Hawk looked on and Hawk giggled! Eisenhower was examining the new combat suits and having a good sniff. She seemed to approve.

"I love the ears, Jackal, but where's your tail?" Shadow teased.

"I don't have one!" Jackal growled back, sounding annoyed.

"You did, the last time that I looked..." Shadow replied, facetiously.

"Do I need to separate you two?" I growled, dangerously. "I'd say 'get a room', but that is not where you two should be, at least for another two years!"

Hit Girl brought out Jackal's weapons.

"Now Jackal, this is a pistol, the bullets come out of this end..." Hit Girl started and then laughed, before she passed two FN Five-seveN pistols to Jackal.

Jackal checked the pistols were clear, before placing them into his holsters. Hit Girl then handed over two Fairbairn-Sykes fighting Knives, these Jackal inspected before inserting them into their special locations on his back.

"You get your Ninja-To when I am convinced that you won't injure yourself or any of us, while using it!" Hit Girl said, with a smirk and received a steady look from Jackal, but due to his mask, we couldn't see his expression, which was probably for the best!

Later that afternoon
Safehouse A

"Okay, let's go through everybody," I suggested.

"Hit Girl, any problems?"

"No, Kick-Ass, the new suit is perfect, feels good too!" Hit Girl replied, grinning like a Cheshire cat and she did look hot, too!

"Shadow?"

"Fits like a glove and feels awesome!" Shadow replied with a giggle.

"Battle Guy?"

"Love the new armour, comfortable too," Battle Guy reported.

"Hawk?"

"Feels like a glove, can't wait to get out and about!" Hawk said, smiling at Battle Guy, causing Hit Girl to roll her eyes.

"Lover boy... Sorry, Jackal?"

"Frickin' Awesome, dude!" Jackal growled, making everyone laugh. That voice thing was really weird. Marty says it would do Darth Vader too, as well as C-3PO and a Goa'uld from Stargate!

"Turn that damn thing off!" Hit Girl laughed.

We had spent the early afternoon practising moving in the new suits and getting used to them, including testing the communications, which for Hawk and Jackal were new. So far nobody had any issues, which was good. Apart from Josh, everyone else would be able to go out and test the new combat suits, Josh would stay at the safehouse with Abby. The six of us: Kick-Ass, Hit Girl, Shadow, Battle Guy, Hawk and Eisenhower, would be going out tonight. Kick-Ass, Shadow and I, on two wheels, the rest on four.

..._...

"Now Jackal, keep you hands to yourself! You too Ha!" Shadow cautioned, as she climbed onto the Fat Boy, with Kick-Ass!

Jackal had removed his mask, but was still wearing his combat suit and looked a bit unhappy about being left behind, but his wounds prevented him coming with us, plus he needed trained first.

Chapter 73*: Russians

Later that evening
Saturday

We had driven around the immediate area several times, to get accustomed to being out together.

I also needed to get back in touch with my Ducati!

"You finished catching up with your best friend yet?" Kick-Ass asked over the comms.

My response was not polite!

"Bad Hit Girl! The FCC do not allow that sort of language!" Hal scolded.

"I'll tell you what you can do with the freakin' FCC!" I responded, laughing.

"I think Jackal blushed!" Hal reported.

"Jackal was always a softy!" Shadow chuckled.

"Hey! Leave the new kid alone!" Jackal retorted.

It was going to be one of those evenings! Time for a change...

"Hal, I need a location for our two CPD friends," I called.

West Washington Boulevard and North Laramie Avenue

As we approached the intersection, we could see a Chicago PD SUV parked up at the side of the road.

Kick-Ass pulled up on the driver's side while I pulled up on the passenger's side and Battle Guy pulled up directly behind.

"Well, well, well! Enjoying your doughnuts, Officers?" I snarled.

Murphy lowered his window.

"Comedy duo's back!" Murphy said, with a grin.

"Somebody looks different!" Fellowes commented, checking out Hit Girl.

"Not bad, still looking hot!" Murphy said.

"Hey! You're married Officer! Plus, she's spoken for!" I growled, meaningfully.

"Only kidding, Kick-Ass!" Murphy said, still grinning.

"You remember Battle Guy," I said, as Battle Guy appeared beside me, with Eisenhower.

"I do, hi!" Murphy said.

"And Shadow!" I said, pointing behind me at Shadow and then at Hawk, as she appeared beside Hit Girl.

"Hi Shadow and you must be Hawk! Hi!" Fellowes said.

"How you guys doing? Family okay?" Hit Girl asked.

"They're fine. Thanks to you Kick-Ass," Murphy said.

"We did what we could," I replied.

Oak Park area
Chicago

Battle Guy and Hawk had moved off towards Columbus Park, in the KAM.

Eisenhower needed to stretch her legs, at least that was their excuse!

Kick-Ass, Shadow and I had headed north-west, where we parked the motorcycles and walked down the dark street.

As we passed a dark alley, we could hear voices. Nothing out of the ordinary, but the difference here, was that the voices were not speaking English...

"Я ненавижу эту чертову город!"

"What the fuck does that mean?" Kick-Ass asked, quietly.

"Translates as: 'I hate this fucking town'," I said.

"You speak Russian?" Shadow asked, incredulously.

"She does!" Kick-Ass acknowledged.

"Теперь, когда ублюдок Д'Амико пошло, мы взять под контроль своего народа и ебать эти американцы."

"That fucking cunt!" I snarled, angrily.

"What?" Shadow asked.

"Sorry, rough translation: 'Now that bastard D'Amico has gone, we take control of his people and fuck these Americans'."

"We need to ask these two some questions!" I growled. "Follow my lead."

"Hal, we are engaging a pair of Russians!" Kick-Ass reported.

"Hal copies you are engaging two Russians!"

..._...

I moved forward and towards the men.

"Эй, влагалища!" I growled. [Hey Cunts!]

"Какого черта" One man replied. [What the hell?]

The other man tried to bolt, but Kick-Ass ran forward and threw him against a wall, knocking him out. I grabbed my man and flung him against the other wall, roughing him up, but he stayed conscious.

"Кто вы работаете?" I growled. [Who do you work for?]

"Перейти на хуй!" The man snarled. [Go fuck yourself!]

"Может быть, позже! Кто вы работаете?" I growled. [Maybe later! Who do you work for?]

I pulled out a pistol and a suppressor, then joined them together. The Russian followed every move, with widening eyes. I think he was getting scared!

"Кто вы работаете?" I growled. [Who do you work for?]

There was no response.

"Что я отстреливать в первую очередь?" I growled, menacingly. [What do I shoot off first?]

"Вы не посмеете!" The man said. [You wouldn't dare!]

"Вы знаете, кто я?" I growled. [You know who I am?]

"Должен ли я?" The man replied, with pretend nonchalance. [Should I?]

"Ах, да! Ищу Хитов Девочка!" I growled, menacingly. [Oh, yes! I am Hit Girl!]

The man braced at that!

"Твой член, может быть?" I suggested, ramming my pistol into his groin. [Your dick, maybe?]

He spilled.

"You recording this, Hal?" I called.

"Since the beginning!"

The Russian was talking fast, almost too fast for me to keep up, so I let my comms send the man's speech to the safehouse where it would be recorded and I could translate it later.

I asked Kick-Ass to dial a friend.

"Voight!"

"Evening Sergeant!" I snarled.

"Kick-Ass! How ya doing!"

"Good! Now, you remember those Russians?"

"Fuck yeah!" Voight replied, angrily.

"We have a pair in custody, they seem to be left overs from our good friend Ralph D'Amico!" I said. "Thought you might like a private chat! I've sent you the address."

"Thanks, I'll have a gentle word with them!" Voight said, sounding a bit happier.

"Hit Girl, you ready?" I asked, putting away my cell.

"Two neatly packaged Russians!" Hit Girl replied, before turning to the two bound Russians. "Прощай придурки!" [Goodbye, assholes!]

Safehouse A

We all met up, back at the safehouse.

Josh had removed his combat suit and hung it up, in the armoury. It had been good for Josh to see what happens at this end of Fusion, while the operatives were out on the streets. Naturally, he now went to help Chloe get out of her combat suit, but got his hand slapped, when he went further than the additional armour!

I had to laugh, poor Josh was a little embarrassed!

It was, unfortunately, the only happy thing in my mind at the moment. It now looked like we had Russian Mafia in Chicago. The two men we had come across this evening were most likely 'Shestyorka' or 'Associates', these were the lowest ranks of the Mafia and were usually men who had yet to earn respect and trust within the organisation. If they had been 'Boevik', which literally translates as 'Warrior', then we would have had an almighty fight on our hands; think Mother Russia with balls! There had to be some in Chicago somewhere, they worked for a 'Brigadier' or 'Avtoritet', which translates as 'Authority'. These in turn work for the Boss or 'Pakhan'.

A typical structure or 'Bratva' called for a Boss to control four Brigadiers, who then had half a dozen Warriors and Associates. Now, being Russian, nobody really trusts anyone, so there are usually a couple of 'Spies' who ensure that the Brigadiers do what they are told and don't get too powerful. These spies reported back to the Boss as required.

The enormous, motherfucker of a question was whether we could tackle a Bratva and survive. I just couldn't believe that Ralph D'Amico worked for, or with, the Russian Mafia! He would be certifiable to get involved with them! Then again maybe he is certifiable, but no, Ralph D'Amico was calculating; he would only get involved with the Russian Mafia if there was something major in it for him.

I needed to meet with this Hank Voight. Marcus said he was a good guy to know and had the same mindset as Hit Girl, when it came to certain types of criminals!

..._...

"Mafia, huh!" Dave said, matter of factly.

"Yeah!" I growled, sitting down in the kitchen.

"You never said that you spoke Russian!" Chloe exclaimed, pulling out a chair and sitting down.

"There are a lot of things I haven't told you, Chloe Bennett!" I replied, coldly.

"Sorry, jeez!" Chloe muttered and got up to get a coffee.

"That was uncalled for!" Dave said, disapprovingly.

"Chloe, Dave's right, that was uncalled for and I'm sorry," I said, feeling ashamed for treating Chloe like that.

"You're upset about the Russians, aren't you?" Chloe asked, sitting back down, with her coffee.

"I am. We're talking hardened men, who get off on killing, and before you say it, yes, I sometimes get off on killing, too. But these guys get off on killing anybody, including innocents," I explained. "Dave, call Marty, Abby, Josh and Kim up here, please."

..._...

Once everybody was in the kitchen, I started talking. I explained about the Mafia and how they were made up and what we might expect.

"These bastards know we are in Chicago and we've just assaulted and had arrested two of their men. We may now be targets. Take extra special care, when coming to any of the safehouses. If in doubt walk away, we cannot lose our safehouses, especially not this one. Help each other and try not to go anywhere alone. From now on, ensure that you have comms with you, at least a cell, preferably one of ours that we can track. Abby you should operate from home, as far as possible. Marty, you have your apartment. We will only use this safehouse after dark and when we are certain nobody is watching. Marty you have setup some extra anti-eavesdropping, anti-spy shit haven't you?"

"By 'shit', I assume you mean expensive and high-tech equipment and yes we will know if anybody tries to enter a safehouse or bug them, but I will do regular sweeps anyway. I can have our mobile command centre ready in two weeks. We still keeping it at The Farm?" Marty asked.

"Yes. The Farm is an unknown for the Mafia. We have never used it and neither are there any links to it. So we should keep it that way. Can you setup a place like we have downstairs, in Jack's basement?"

"Easy!" Marty said.

"All of the safehouses are fully stocked, if required. I'm hoping that those two Russian idiots won't reveal that they were arrested, or assaulted by us, 'cause they know that if they did then they would most probably be killed by their own side. This is serious, I shit you not!"

On that depressing note, we all went off to bed.

Chapter 74*: Training Wheels

Two days later
Monday
The Farm

Chloe was very nervous.

Bag of nerves, might be a better description!

She was wearing her full motorcycle leathers, with boots and her helmet.

I had taken a quick turn around the marked out track that I had laid out in a field at The Farm, to show her what to do. Now I pulled up on the Honda CRF100F and climbed off.

..._...

"Your turn!" I said.

Chloe tentatively climbed on and I took her through the Honda's, very basic, controls: ignition switch, clutch lever, front brake, throttle grip, engine stop button, rear brake pedal, gear shift lever, fuel valve and kickstarter. Currently the engine was running and the gearbox was in neutral, so we could ignore some of the controls for now. I showed Chloe the positions of the gear shift lever; horizontal for neutral, first gear, one notch down and then second to fifth gears above the neutral position.

For now Chloe would probably stay in first gear! I explained how the clutch operated and let her pull the clutch lever, then push down on the gear change lever.

"Ready?" I asked, smiling encouragingly.

"Yes..." Chloe said, sounding anything but positive!

"Let in the clutch gently. Remember, when you stop you must pull the clutch lever or you will stall. Ignore the front brake for now. Use the rear brake, down here. Twist the throttle backward to go faster, twist it forwards to go slower."

"Okay..."

"Don't look at the front tyre, try to look ahead and don't worry if you fall, okay?"

Chloe nodded, still very apprehensive.

"Apply a little gas, then let in the clutch gently! Try and follow the course, keeping it slow!" I said, encouragingly.

I watched as Chloe twisted the throttle gently and let in the clutch... She moved, jerkily, but she moved and kept moving. I gave a thumbs up to Jack, who was filming Chloe with a camera; he smiled back. Chloe managed a full, but shaky, circuit, before coming to a halt beside me, pulling in the clutch.

..._...

The look on her face was priceless! Her smile went from ear to ear!

"Was that good?" I asked, laughing.

"Wow... That felt awesome!" Chloe stammered.

"Well keep going then. Go around a couple more times and then we'll try second gear!" I said. "Just keep it slow; I'm the speed menace, not you!"

I had brought Chloe up on the back of the BMW, this morning, keeping it slow and steady, as I didn't want to put her off. She was building up her confidence well... Oops, she took that turn a bit tight and came off onto the grass.

I ran over.

"You okay?" I called and could hear giggling!

"That was cool! I let it get away from me, then fumbled things a bit," Chloe explained getting back up.

The engine had stalled, so I righted the Honda and held it for Chloe to remount.

"Okay, put the gears into neutral... That's right... Now clutch and kick-down once, just here... There we go, engine running. Now off you go..." I said, and walked away.

..._...

Chloe pulled up beside me after another two laps.

"Ready for second gear? Or do want a break first?" I asked.

"I'll take a break!"

"Press and hold that button, till the engine cuts out... Now push the stand down and dismount. Ignition off. Perfect," I said, smiling.

Chloe pulled off her helmet, as we walked over to the house. Jack was still filming and followed us up to the house.

"You enjoy that, Chloe?" Jack asked.

"It was totally awesome!" Chloe replied, still smiling insanely!

"You looked cool!" Josh said, encouragingly.

I had advised Josh to keep out of the way, in case he either inspired Chloe to do something stupid or otherwise distracted her! The course I had laid out covered about a quarter mile, or four hundred and fifty yards. It should give Chloe plenty of space to get used to the motorcycle and the controls, especially the gears. Jack offered to film her learning, so that Dr Bennett could see the results. I kept my helmet on during the filming, as I did not want to be filmed at all and Jack respected this!

I let Chloe spend some time with Josh, while Jack's wife Natalie, got lunch ready. I called Dave to let him know how things were going.

"Hi gorgeous!" Dave said, on answering the phone.

"Hi lover!"

"Chloe broken her neck yet?"

"No, Josh is checking her neck out right now! She's doing really well; only came off once and started giggling!"

"Good! Oh, a large, long parcel has arrived for you. Damn heavy!"

"My compound bows!"

"More toys!" Dave groaned.

"Stop moaning, ass!"

Lunch was over and was very good!

I'm glad I had my leathers zipped up tight, Josh had his hands everywhere!

I was now back on the Honda and it was an awesome feeling. I managed to start it and move off, without any help. Now I just need to pull the clutch lever and flip the gear selector up two notches for second gear... Well here goes... Wow... I'm going faster... Too fast... Twist throttle forward... Slowing down... Better!

I managed a circuit in second gear!

Mindy and I were wearing our concealed comms, for ease of communication.

"You're doing well, keep going and keep looking forwards. I'm right behind you, ignore me completely, I will keep out of your way," Mindy said, in my ear. I glanced to my right and saw Mindy about ten yards back, on the BMW and following me around the course.

"When we get around the next corner, shift into third, one notch up, okay?" Mindy said.

"Okay!"

I turned around the next corner and pulled the clutch lever and flicked up the gear change lever, one notch, then let the clutch lever out, gently. Cool... Third gear!

"Josh find any damage, when he checked you over?" Mindy asked and I almost lost control of the Honda, so my response was not very lady like!

"That was totally uncalled for!" Mindy laughed in response.

After another eight circuits, Mindy guided me through slowing and shifting down, back to second and then stopping. It felt brilliant, I could now ride a motorcycle! I knew I still had a long way to go, but it was an impressively good start!

I turned off the engine and wheeled the Honda into the barn and secured it to a post, with a thick chain. I gazed longingly at the other Honda, currently under a tarpaulin and similarly secured. Marty had been round and equipped the barn and surrounding property with security measures, so we would know if anybody went anywhere near the motorcycles. Mindy had warned me, very seriously, to never ride the motorcycle if she wasn't here with me and I promised.

"You are one smart young lady!" Jack said.

"She is that!" Mindy acknowledged pulling off her helmet.

I felt my cheeks warming up and knew that I was blushing at all the praise.

"You do look lovelier when you blush!" Josh teased, grinning.

Josh's comments didn't help either, they just made me warm up in other places!

That evening Morton Grove

"What the hell!" I exclaimed, as the front door burst open and a tornado came into the living room.

"I did it!" The tornado yelled, happily.

The tornado turned out to be my daughter!

"Had sex!" I responded, facetiously.

"No, better!" Chloe said, smiling from ear to ear. Oh, she has so much to learn!

Thankfully Mindy came in and calmly passed me an iPad and I pressed play, on the video.

"I see!" I said, impressed by what I was watching.

Once the video was finished and I could no longer put up with Chloe bouncing up and down on the couch, I turned to her.

"Congratulations!" I said, feeling genuinely proud of my daughter.

"I got up to third gear!" Chloe squealed.

"Simmer down Chloe!" I said.

"Sorry, Dr Bennett! I tried to calm her down, but..." Mindy tried.

"You'd have more chance holding back a tsunami!" I laughed and gave Chloe a big hug. "Go email your father."

Chloe was gone in a flash!

"Well done, Mindy! That can't have been easy, I am surprised she was so successful!" I said.

"Your daughter is a very intelligent girl and a very fast learner," Mindy said. I was starting to feel embarrassed at all the praise Chloe was getting!

"Thanks Mindy, you're a brilliant influence on her!" I said and watched as Mindy started to blush.

Chapter 75*: Jackal Training

Two days later
Wednesday
West Ridge

Josh has now healed enough for his training to start!

"You're gonna go easy on me, aren't you?" Josh asked, sounding worried.

I grinned at Josh, like a crocodile about to kill its prey!

"Should I be worried?" Josh asked, looking at Chloe.

Chloe just grinned back, "Oh, yeah!"

"You two are so fucking evil!" Josh growled unhappily.

"It's why you love me!" Chloe said, blowing a kiss.

"Well I've led a short life, but an entertaining one!" Josh whined.

"Quit the whining, jeez!" I complained, before kicking out at Josh, aiming for his stronger left side. The bullets had hit him on his right side, so I was going to be nice, to start with...

"Oh no you bloody don't, bitch!" Josh said, smartly moving out of the way and swinging around in a fast roundhouse kick, which I dodged.

"That all you've got Brit boy!" Mindy growled.

"Just getting warmed up, Yank; expected more from you!"

"Cheeky little wanker!" I growled, impressed.

Josh then span around in a fast double roundhouse kick, which I tried to dodge, but then he changed the second roundhouse kick into a spinning hook kick. The kick caught me on the right shoulder, sending me spinning to the ground. The fucker tricked me!

"Good to see that you're not all talk!" I said, getting back to my feet. That kick hurt! Josh is actually quite good!

Josh kept up with my attacks, for the next ten minutes, before he started to tire and I noticed him gripping his right side.

I called a halt.

"You okay Josh?" I asked, concerned.

"Sorry, I don't want to sound like a wimp, but I think I need to sit down," Josh said and he was starting to look pale.

I got a vicious glare from Chloe!

Josh saw the glare too.

"Chloe I'm fine, I can look after myself, okay. Mindy's done nothing wrong, so cut that crap out, right now!" Josh said and Chloe looked a little embarrassed.

"Sorry, Mindy," Chloe said.

"Don't worry, I've not broken him!" I teased and Chloe blushed a little, but all the same, I was a bit worried about Josh.

The Farm

After lunch we headed up to The Farm, for a different form of training.

Kim was waiting for us when we arrived. I parked the SUV beside the barn and I opened the tailgate. Inside were four large, black cases and I handed one to Chloe and another to Kim.

"Okay! Show us what you two can do!" I said.

Chloe and Kim, placed the cases down on a table and opened them up.

Chloe let out a small squeal.

Kim just said, "Wow!"

Inside each case was a custom Oneida Kestrel compound bow. Each bow was flat black with black carbon fibre limbs. Also with each bow was a quiver of eight arrows.

"You two familiar with these?" I asked.

"Compound bows, yes, but not elite bows like these!" Kim said, picking one up and looking it over.

"Same as what Kim said!" Chloe replied, looking the other bow up and down, in awe.

Both Kim and Chloe then pulled out an arrow each and after a brief check of the mechanisms, sent the arrows down range, to a target at the opposite end of the barn. Both arrows impacted the target, with a solid bang and both Chloe and Kim had enormous grins on their faces!

"Damn, those are powerful weapons; those shots would have hurt!" I exclaimed.

"Okay Mindy, you've fired a cross-bow, right?" Chloe asked.

"Yeah, but this is very different," Mindy said.

"What about me?" Josh asked.

"You'd better not, not in your condition. Mindy stressed you too much earlier!" Chloe said, grinning at me.

Bitch!

"I'll give you a personal lesson when you're better!" Chloe promised, with an evil grin.

"Can't wait!" Josh said, blowing Chloe a kiss and making her blush.

"Talk about hormones!" I groaned.

"Okay, key parts of the compound bow: nocking point, peep sight, arrow rest and forward sight," Chloe explained, pointing to each part in turn. "Normally... Mindy pay attention!"

"Sorry!" I said, sheepishly; I'd been checking a text from Dave.

"Before I was so rudely interrupted... Normally we would use a 'release'; this helps prevent sore fingers and makes an accidental release more difficult. Now we will have our armoured gauntlets, which will protect our fingers and the release won't be compatible with combat. We have them, in the cases, so we can use them, if you wish," Chloe continued and showed how to strap on a release, to her wrist.

"Next: nocking the bow. A properly nocked arrow contacts the bow at only two points, the rest and the string. This ensures that at no point during the shooting process, does the arrow make contact with any other surface, which could send it off course. Begin by placing the arrow through the rest; in this case a 'biscuit' rest, for obvious reasons. This rest is most suitable as the arrow won't fall off, which benefits us. Next, take the arrow and rotate it so that the one off-coloured vane is facing upward. Press the nock firmly onto the bowstring in the centre of the string loop, until you hear a click. If the off-coloured vane is facing upward, the arrow is in the rest and the nock has 'clicked' onto the bowstring, the arrow is properly nocked."

"Stand roughly perpendicular to the target, though the exact angle isn't important, the stance is mostly determined by personal preference and any roughly perpendicular stance will work, as long as it is not extreme enough to cause the body to twist, during the shot. After a few shots, you'll settle into a natural stance that is comfortable for you... Hit Girl are you listening? Are you pissing me off on purpose?"

"I would never do that!" I said with an evil smirk.

"Yes you would, bitch! Now listen, or you aren't shooting a single fucking arrow!" Chloe ordered, angrily.

Okay, pushed too many buttons; I remember vividly what happened last time Chloe stood up to me!

"Okay, for those interested in learning... Place your non-dominant hand on the grip... Your other 'non-dominant' hand, Joshua, jeez! Your hand should be directly behind the grip so that there is no twist, when the bow is drawn. The hand is only there to support the weight of the bow and give the dominant hand the necessary resistance to draw the bow. Straighten your arm to put the bow into position for the draw," Chloe continued.

"Begin by clipping the release onto the string loop, directly behind the arrow, then pull back on the string. The bulk of the power should come from the muscles in your back. Additionally, make sure the bow grip is centred in your hand, with the force of the weight running straight back through your arm. Even a minimal amount of twisting can make the draw more difficult, and extreme twisting can cause injury. Once the bow is drawn, you will feel the amount of pressure that it takes to hold it, decrease. This is one of the major benefits of compound archery; at full draw, it only takes fifteen to twenty percent of the total draw weight, to hold the string back. That's good for wimps like Joshua!"

"Hey!" Josh moaned.

"You'll find that the nock naturally settles somewhere on your face. This is called your anchor point. Everybody's is different, so use what you feel is best. You might need to adjust it to look through the sight. Now another advantage of the compound bow is attachments. You have the optical sight, but we can also add a laser sight... Thought you'd like that Mindy! I assume you know how to aim and pull a trigger, Hit Girl?" Chloe finished, with an evil smirk. "See it's easy, even Hit Girl could manage it!"

"Evil little bitch!" I growled.

"Oh, I learned from the best!" Chloe said, grinning.

..._...

Twenty minutes later we had all embedded several arrows into the target. Josh only managed to send a couple of arrows down range, before he started to go pale again.

It was actually quite good fun. These bows could make damn good weapons! I needed to look into some proper arrows, I've already come across explosive tips, I want to see what else we can get together!

"Thanks Chloe, you're not a bad teacher!" I said.

"Thanks Mindy. I'm starting to respect my school teachers a lot more now! They put up with a hell of a lot of shit!" Chloe replied.

That evening West Ridge

Marty was finishing his packing and moving to his apartment today. Kim was helping him and would be keeping him company tonight!

Mindy was arguing, after watching some eighties television.

"Absolutely not!" I said.

"It would be really cool!" Mindy whined.

"Not seeing it! You cannot paint Airwolf purple!" Marty exclaimed.

"Why not, that helicopter is so me!" Mindy insisted.

"Sometimes you're as nutty as squirrel shit, Mindy!" I groaned.

"That's not fair!" Mindy whined.

"You need a hand Marty? I need to find some sanity!" I begged.

"Cunt!" Mindy growled.

"No, I'll be fine, Speedy's loaded and Kim's waiting," Marty said. "I'll leave you with Little Miss Nutty!"

Marty got an evil glare, but Mindy still got up to give him a big hug.

"Thanks Marty, it's been great having you here. I hope your apartment is good for you, we'll come around one evening!" Mindy said.

..._...

"It won't be the same without him here," Mindy said, once Marty and Kim had left.

"At least he won't be living in a mad house!" I said.

"You trying to say something!" Mindy asked, indignantly.

"Trying, no!" I said, laughing and Mindy scowled.

"Don't worry, we now have the house to ourselves!" I said, grabbing Mindy and she screamed as I threw her onto the couch.

I dived after her and we started kissing, while I pulled at her t-shirt; Sophia took one look, woofed and fled downstairs!

Chapter 76: Scramblers

Two days later
Friday
The Farm

We were back up at The Farm.

Chloe was having her second motorcycle lesson. For this a field wouldn't be adequate, but to start with, I sent her to complete ten circuits of the field, to get herself re-acquainted with the motorcycle. Again, we had driven up on the BMW and I sat with Jack, enjoying a coffee while Chloe started the motorcycle herself and set off riding around the field.

"She's progressing well!" Jack said, approvingly. "You're a good teacher Mindy; Damon would have been very proud!"

I felt myself blushing at the compliment!

I had sent a copy of the video that Jack filmed last time, to Marcus. The asshole actually asked if the video was R-rated and would there be a lot of blood! Just because I was training somebody in the damn video, does not mean it's going to be all bloody! Marcus watched the video and said he was actually very impressed with me and said my Daddy would have been very proud, too! He also said it was very normal, for a change!

Once Chloe had completed her circuits, I got on my BMW and led her out a back gate; we were going off-road, along a track beside the river. This would take us several miles out and back. It would give Chloe a good run and let her experience off-road riding. Plus, I could exercise my new motorcycle! I was looking forward to this, as Dave's BMW was in the mail! This would mean that we could both go out together, which would be great fun!

I had obtained some GoPro Hero4 Cameras and attached a pair, in waterproof mounts, to the front and rear of my BMW, so I could film the ride. I had done the same to Chloe's motorcycle. There should be some interesting footage later, as my cameras were also connected into our comms system. My motorcycle had a Fusion radio in the left Pannier, with an aerial mounted on the top box. I had lunch packed into that top box, too, as well as some other emergency accessories!

..._...

We started off along a track making idle gossip. Chloe kept bringing Josh into the conversation. It appeared that she was looking forward to going back to school next week, as she wanted to see her friends and show Josh off to them! Apparently, she would have the hottest boyfriend in the grade and the best bit was that he was British! We rode along the extremely twisty route for about four miles, before we pulled up.

"You enjoying yourself?" I asked.

"Awesome!" Exclaimed a grinning Chloe.

"Let's try some more slow speed manoeuvring. That is very important to learn, so you can control a heavy motorcycle at very low speeds," I said. We moved off slowly and I had Chloe play 'follow the leader' with me, as I led her in ever increasingly tight and slow turns. Once or twice Chloe had to put her feet down, to stabilise the motorcycle, but she did very well otherwise and her balance was brilliant.

We stopped for lunch beside the river and enjoyed some sandwiches. It had been a great morning.

"So... What does this personal training, you have in mind for Josh, involve...?" I asked, innocently. "Keeping up Anglo/American sexual relations?"

Chloe almost choked on her sandwich and her eyes bulged out.

"Mindy... I... I don't know..." Chloe stammered, before blushing and running out of steam.

"Aww, you are so sweet!"

"Mindy!" Chloe growled dangerously.

"Watching you shows me what I missed out on, growing up and I'm starting to regret it. You actually make me feel more like a normal girl everyday! That sounds weird, sorry."

"No it doesn't, Mindy. You helped me get my life back on track. Without you I would never have found Joshua and he might now be dead, ignoring you trying to cut his head off, of course!" Chloe said, grinning.

"Do you have to keep bringing that back up? I apologised to the kid, I even treated his wound!" I moaned.

"You still owe me for that slap, Hit Girl!" Chloe said smugly, rubbing her cheek.

"Jeez! Hit Girl's being held for ransom by a fourteen year-old girl!" I grimaced.

"Oh yeah!" Chloe said, smiling.

"Okay, Shadow get your ass back on that damn motorcycle, you can dream about riding Josh, later!" I said.

Chloe gave me a very nasty look indeed!

It was almost two, by the time we got back to The Farm and Chloe was exhausted. I had made her ride over some quite rough terrain, including tight corners and steep drops.

Later that afternoon The Farm

Now it was Joshua's turn to learn!

I had bought Joshua some motorcycle leathers, in dark grey, with gauntlets, boots and a black helmet. His jacket and trousers had a composite armour lining, just like Chloe's and mine. He also now had his own personal concealed comms, which linked back via a Fusion radio installed at The Farm.

As with Chloe, I explained the circuit in the field, which Josh had already seen Chloe use, but going over it again was important.

Josh explained that he had had some limited experience with motorcycles and had ridden smaller scramblers, years before. I pointed out the essentials of the motorcycle: ignition switch, clutch lever, front brake, throttle grip, engine stop button, rear brake pedal, gear shift lever, fuel valve and kickstarter, as I had done with Chloe. I showed Josh the positions of the gear shift lever; horizontal for neutral, first gear, one notch down and then second to fifth gears above the neutral position. I explained how the clutch operated and let Josh pull the clutch lever, then push down on the gear change lever.

"Ready?" I asked, smiling encouragingly.

"I was born ready!" Josh said, with enthusiasm.

"Let the clutch in gently. Remember, when you stop you must pull the clutch lever or you will stall. Ignore the front brake for now; use the rear brake, down here. Twist the throttle backward to go faster and twist it forwards to go slower."

"Okay," Josh acknowledged.

"Don't look at the front tyre, try to look ahead and don't worry if you fall, okay?"

Josh nodded and started to look a little apprehensive.

"Apply a little gas, then let in the clutch gently! Try and follow the course, keeping it slow and don't forget, we drive on the right over here!," I said, laughing.

"Yeah, the wrong side of the bloody road!" Josh scowled.

I watched as Josh twisted the throttle gently and let in the clutch... He moved, reasonably smoothly too, which was impressive. He hadn't been lying about riding before. Jack was filming Josh with a camera, just in case he fell off! Josh managed a full circuit, before coming to a halt beside me, pulling in the clutch without stalling.

"Not bad, Josh," Chloe said, smiling.

"Very good!" I agreed, impressed.

"That was cool! I'd forgotten what it was like. My Dad used to take me on small scramblers, when I was about nine or ten," Josh explained, looking a little sad for a moment, before smiling.

"Okay, lets see you work up the gears, then," I said, encouragingly.

Josh went back out and worked his way up to third gear, quite successfully and managed two circuits, before he shifted down and came to a stop beside Chloe and I.

"You are a natural Josh, I am impressed; you're not the dumb shit, Chloe said you were!" I teased.

"I never said that!" Chloe exclaimed indignantly.

"Just fuckin' with ya!" I laughed.

"Thanks, Mindy. I enjoyed that, hopefully when I'm fully healed I'll be able to go out on a motorcycle properly," Josh said, smiling.

"No problem, Josh, "I said, smiling back.

I think I have some more shopping to do! With all this spending I'm gonna need to go out and get some more cash from those generous drug dealers!

Chapter 77*: New Kid

The following week

Friday

Josh and Chloe had both survived their first week at school!

From what Mindy has told me, Josh has apparently gone down very well with the other kids at the school, as they all seemed very curious about a foreign kid, not just a new kid.

Josh, though, has not survived this week completely unscathed!

I had quite a few concerns, on that first day back at school.

This was not just a new school, it was an American school and I had barely got used to my last American school, before I ended up in a coma. It was a little easier having Chloe with me, so at least I knew somebody! Of course, there was also Abby, but I found her a little too weird at times! I met Chloe's other friends: Avery and Riley, who both seemed to go all girly, when they met me, which was a little bit embarrassing. Chloe seemed to enjoy showing me off to everybody! It was also a bit daunting meeting Kyle, Chloe's ex-boyfriend. However, Kyle seemed to be a really good guy, as he said that he understood about Chloe's feelings for me and he wasn't going to get in the way, but he still wanted to be friends with Chloe and also with me. Kyle is very popular around the school, so that has helped me greatly with settling in.

I have also made two friends of my own: Mike and Ethan. We seemed to have a lot in common, but I had to be careful when any conversation turned to vigilante's or Hit Girl and Kick-Ass! Mindy had threatened me with major bodily harm and permanent damage to my, currently non-existent, sex life if I breathed even a single word about Fusion! I wasn't alone, as I understood that Chloe had received the exact same lecture!

Chloe had also given me a very detailed account of what she would do to me, if I looked at any another girl, at school! I thought that Chloe had been spending far too much time with Mindy!

All in all, it had been a good week. My injuries had been explained away, as wounds from a building collapse, which had killed my father; the best lies are often the truth, at least that's what Mindy says!

Josh had gone down really well at school, this week and I loved the looks that I got from those bitchy girls that normally tried to look down on me! They usually have the hot boyfriends, but Josh is very desirable around school and he is mine!

I had also warned Josh, with some very graphical descriptions, of what would happen, if he even looked at another girl! Those descriptions were definitely worthy of Mark Millar! My Mom doesn't like me reading those comics, but considering what else I get up to, they are rather tame!

Mind you, Mindy went completely ballistic with Josh on Sunday.

She happened to see Josh getting changed out of his combat suit, after some more training. Josh had quite a few bruises on his body, which he had tried to explain away as the results of that day's sparring. Mindy, however, was not convinced, as the bruises were obviously a few days old and nothing that had been done, during sparring, would have caused that sort of damage.

Finally, after a few graphic threats from a very angry Mindy, Josh admitted to having used the motorcycle a couple of times last week, while Jack and Natalie were out. That was why he was so good, during the 'first' training session! I wasn't at the safehouse during this, but Dave was and I understood that he had had to physically restrain Mindy, from hurting Josh; Dave said that Josh actually feared for his life, again! Mindy was yelling and screaming at Josh about being totally irresponsible and a lying little bastard, among other, very colourful, descriptions of his behaviour.

Mindy ranted on, about Josh, for most of Monday, too! Finally, on Monday evening she had calmed down and driven up to The Farm. She then sat Josh down and calmly, well calmly for Mindy, talked through what he had done. Josh, I understood, was very apologetic and promised never to do something that stupid again. Jack, meanwhile, had also gone ballistic and grounded Josh, initially till he was twenty-one! Jack then relented and grounded him for the next two weeks, which meant that, outside of school, we couldn't talk, text or email, which sucked and made me really angry with Josh, too! Mindy said that she would have lots of exciting work lined up for Josh, on Saturday and Sunday!

Now, as with most schools, there are the usual idiots who liked to cause trouble.

In this case, we had three in our grade: Raymond Miller, who was the leader, Corey Davis and Paul Martin. Chloe explained that they enjoyed going around causing trouble and she herself had punched Miller, at least twice and he seemed to enjoy it, which just infuriated Chloe even more! I have learnt the hard way, that you don't want to infuriate Chloe, if you want to enjoy a pain free life. Chloe does not hit like the average girl!

I received a visit from this trio, who thought it would be good fun to pick on the new British kid. Chloe defending me, didn't exactly help my image in their eyes, either! I just ignored them and told them to fuck off, but I had a feeling that I would probably be hearing from them again and soon!

I'm currently in the bad books of Jack, Dave, Mindy and Chloe. Why? I kinda got a bit Jealous of Chloe riding that Honda, so I took a few rides around the field, when Jack and Natalie were out on Tuesday and Thursday. I came off a few times and once I landed badly, when the motorcycle actually landed on top of me, causing the heavy bruises that Mindy had seen. I was actually quite scared, when Mindy kicked off; she looked like that day when she tried to cut my throat. Dave had to physically restrain her and it really hit me then, what I had done. Mindy came to see me on Monday evening and I knew that I had really let her down, big time! I'd also let down Jack, too, which really upset me. Thankfully he wasn't as hard on me, as he could have been. The worst was Chloe; she was pissed, as I wasn't allowed to use my cell to communicate with her. She actually spent the next few days dropping 'grand theft auto' into nearly every conversation, which started to get a little annoying, after the first few hours, let alone two days later!

But I took it like a man, stiff upper lip and all that!

Now that Chloe and Josh were at school and Marty was at university, we had limited our Fusion activities.

We obviously couldn't have Chloe or Josh going to school on a Monday with lots of injuries that weren't there on the previous Friday! However, we would still have training each weekend and nothing during the week, as they would both have homework! Marty would help where he could, between his studies and would act as our technical support from his fully equipped apartment. Abby would also help where she could, of course. If an emergency cropped up, then we might call on everybody, but only in an emergency. Otherwise it would just be Hit Girl, Kick-Ass and Eisenhower, although Hawk said that she might come out some evenings.

The other problem with those two being back at school, was that Mindy was now bored during the day.

Take Wednesday for example:

"What's that?" I asked.

"Just making a list!" Mindy said, cheerfully.

I looked over Mindy's shoulder.

"Arrows?" I asked.

"Yeah, I'm making a list of all the different types of arrows I will need," Mindy explained.

"You like the compound bow then?"

"They're really cool!"

I looked down the list.

"Interesting... Syringe... Okay! Flashbang... Listening device... Now they seem useful, but these... No... No... Hell, no!"

"I know some are a little unorthodox!" Mindy admitted, looking excited.

"Unorthodox! Where the hell do you get these, seriously warped, ideas from?" I asked, incredulously. "Ever heard of aerodynamics? A Katana arrow! Seriously!"

"Okay, jeez! Maybe I let my imagination get the better of me!" Mindy growled, in exasperation.

"There's no 'maybe' about it! I agree with some of them, maybe half a dozen, but the rest... They are just seriously messed up, Mindy! Plus, are you really going to be followed around by a truck, carrying all of these? Maybe get a trailer for the Ducati?"

"I was only having a bit of fun!" Mindy whined.

Chapter 78*: Jackal Humility

The following day
Saturday

9:00 A.M.

Josh was going to suffer another full day of training!

He also needed to make reparations for his wrongdoings.

"You have got to be kidding!" Josh groaned.

"You will clean every single weapon!" I confirmed.

"But there's dozens!" Josh whined.

"Six Heckler & Koch G36C assault rifles, two FN P90 personal defence weapons, six Glock 17 pistols, two Glock 18 pistols, four Glock 19 pistols, two Glock 26 pistols, one MP5K sub-machine gun, two SIG Sauer P232 pistols and two Heckler & Koch MP7 personal defence weapons!" I said, with a smile.

"Who the hell fired all these? Did I miss a damn war?" Josh continued to whine.

"Dave and I enjoyed a little target shooting yesterday, I was bored!" I admitted, with an evil laugh.

"This will take hours!"

"Got somewhere else to be? It is now nine o'clock in the morning. Your first shift will last two hours," I said and left a very unhappy Josh in the armoury.

"That was just evil, Mindy!" Chloe said.

"Well, he needs to learn that I don't accept failure. I went soft on Dave, but nobody else and that includes you, Shadow!" I growled. "Come to think of it Dave never goes soft with me!"

"Eww, that's just gross!" Chloe groaned, pretending to vomit.

"Okay, before I wipe the floor with Jackal, I'll practice with you!"

"Bring it on, Soft Girl!" Chloe challenged, diving at me and kicking my legs out from under me.

"Hey, I wasn't ready!" I complained.

"Playtimes over, Hit Girl!" Chloe growled. "You snooze you lose!"

"I never, play!" I growled back and threw myself back to my feet and towards that grinning bitch.

Chloe put up a very good defence, but she has a habit of telegraphing what she is about to do; it only happens rarely and the signals are easily missed, but I have learnt to recognise them. Well she can learn the hard way!

"Damn, they're fast!" I heard a voice say and was momentarily distracted, as I saw Dave and Kim standing beside the mat.

"They are that!" Agreed Dave.

I just caught Chloe's back kick, on my thigh, as I tried to twist out of her way, but ended up on the mat again! I was getting mad.

"How you doing, Mister GTA?" I asked.

"That wasn't funny the first, nor the hundredth time!" Josh moaned, elbow deep in a Heckler & Koch G36C assault rifle.

"Well, if you can't handle the time..." I started, grinning.

"...Don't do the crime!" Kim finished, with a laugh.

"Bloody funny, the pair of you!" Josh grouched.

"I'll leave you in peace, only twenty-six left to do!" I said. "You're lucky we only fired a small selection of the armoury!"

Kim and I left the armoury, ignoring the obscenities Josh was muttering under his breath, some of which I hadn't heard before, even from Mindy, who was very proficient on the subject!

"Okay Hawk, let's see what you can do now!" I said and received a brief glare from Mindy, as she whirled around the map, sparring with Chloe.

11:00 A.M.

"Right, first shift is over, Jackal!"

"Thank God!" Josh breathed.

"You have fifteen minutes to take a break, then I want you on the mat," I said.

"Oh yes! That sounds like fun!" Josh commented, with a smile.

"Get your mind out of the damn gutter!" I growled in response.

..._...

Fifteen minutes later I was facing off with Josh.

"Hit me!" I ordered.

Josh came at me with a roundhouse kick, which I easily deflected, then Josh switched to a jumping roundhouse kick, which caught me by surprise as well as in the shoulder, sending me flying into Chloe and we both landed in a heap.

"Two for the price of one!" Josh said with a smug grin.

"I'll give you points for creativity, but..." I replied and flew at Josh with my own jumping side kick, which sent Josh across the mat.

"That all you got!" Josh said, between gasps of pain.

I took a deep breath and started circling Josh, while he got up and started turning with me, never letting me out of his sight. We both gauged each other and tried to work out the other's game plan.

"Get her Josh!" Chloe shouted.

"Oh, I will!"

"Thanks for the support, bitch!" I yelled at a smirking Chloe.

Josh was slowly edging towards me, but unlike Chloe, Josh did not telegraph his actions. This kid knew some advanced kicks, so could use any one of over a dozen potential kicks, not to mention variations and combinations of the kicks! I also knew that Josh had mastered feints, too, which were very difficult to detect and counter correctly, before the real kick occurred.

Finally he moved, but I was able to catch his foot and twist him around and dump him hard on the mat. I think I hurt him this time, as he yelled out in pain when he hit the mat. I approached him, to check that he was okay, but then found myself flying backwards, as Josh grasped my left ankle and pulled. But I was able to kick out with my right foot and continue into a back flip, landing reasonably cleanly on my feet.

"She's like a damn cat!" Josh groaned, picking himself up.

"Okay bitchy, let's see you fight us both!" Chloe challenged, standing next to Josh, on the mat.

Chloe looked at Josh and nodded encouragingly. Josh nodded back, with a forced smile; he was in pain.

"Bring it on, little kiddies!" I growled.

"This is gonna be good!" I said to Kim.

"I've never seen Mindy take on more than one at a time!" Kim said.

"Oh, I have; she can handle half a dozen, easily!" I replied.

I saw Mindy flexing her muscles and she started to circle Josh and Chloe, who were preparing themselves for the fight. I noticed some whispering between them both, as they both agreed on a plan of attack.

Who would strike first? I thought that Mindy would wait to see what the pair come up with; I was sure that she'd want to see how creative they could be.

Okay, I saw that; Chloe was getting ready to move. Mindy has focused on Chloe. Oh crap! Josh just launched at Mindy, blind-siding her, while her attention was on Chloe. That was clever, Chloe knows that she tends to telegraph her actions and she also knows that Mindy knows, so she used that weakness as a distraction! Josh attacked with a reverse spinning hook kick. The kick caught Mindy on the back of the head, as it should and Mindy went down, but only for half a second, as she instantly recovered and flipped off to one side and then back towards Chloe, delivering a jumping side kick, before running at the side of the armoury and executing a perfect reflex kick!

A reflex kick is a stunning acrobatic kick, used only by the most highly skilled.

In this case, Mindy ran up to the wall of the armoury and leapt, planted one foot, high, on the wall, extended her leg and boosted away from the wall towards Josh, now with accelerated height and power and lashed out with the other leg. Josh was caught completely unprepared and found himself flying through the air and landing on Chloe, who was just picking herself up, from Mindy's last attack!

"Fuck! That was awesome!" Kim exclaimed.

Mindy had landed on the mat, like a cat, as she usually did. She was breathing heavily and looked really pleased with herself.

"Not bad, Hit Girl; seen better!" I quipped.

"You complete ass!" Mindy growled, as I gave her a hug.

Mindy then went to help Josh and Chloe up off of the mat. Josh was groaning with pain and so was Chloe. This was the second time somebody had been dumped on top of her!

"Not quite how I envisioned Josh lying on top of me!" Chloe commented, before realising what she had just said aloud and blushed bright red.

"A few less clothes, might have been nice!" Josh teased, before Chloe punched him, hard, on the shoulder.

"Well done Mindy!" Chloe conceded. "Hit Girl is still the greatest!"

"It was never in doubt!" Mindy said, giving Chloe a hug.

"Mindy's never one to let her fame go to her head!" I quipped, receiving a glare from Mindy.

"Dave, tell Josh that I am not completely cold and heartless," Mindy said.

"I would never lie to Josh!" I replied, smirking.

"I am warm and loving, ass!" Mindy insisted.

"Could have fooled me!" Josh added.

"Okay, actions speak louder than words! I think Josh has learnt his lesson and we should all help Josh finish off those weapons! If Josh would like some help, of course?" I asked.

"Please!" Josh begged.

Later that day
The Farm

We all met Marty, up at The Farm.

Marty and Abby had spent the morning putting the finishing touches to our new van. This van was to be our Mobile Command Centre, for if we needed to go out of town, or if a safehouse got compromised. It would be stored at The Farm.

The vehicle itself was a brand new, black, long wheelbase, mid roofed, Ford Transit van, with tinted glazing. Marty and Abby had equipped the rear of the vehicle with computers, screens, communications, a generator and various other equipment relevant to our operations. Between this van and Beast, we should be able to operate anywhere. While the new van was not protected to the same standards as Beast, it still boasted Type II and Type III-A armour, in essential areas. The vehicle was also air conditioned. From the outside the vehicle looked like any other van, so shouldn't attract attention.

Now, considering that two geeks had built this van, it had a geeky name: 'Lucille'! This was a reference to one of Abby's heroes, Alec Hardison, from the Leverage television show! Not my choice of name, but then the van is geek central, so I left it all to them! However, while the van was mainly for support, I did insist that a gun safe was covertly installed in the vehicle, just in case! I liked Marty's idea for a Command Van, although initially I did suggest a Command Truck, with full armoury, but Dave said a big purple, forty foot trailer, would not be very subtle, despite being fun to drive!

Even Jack thought that the van was good. He remarked that it was better than what Chicago PD used, which Marty and Abby took as one hell of a compliment!

..._...

While we were at The Farm, Dave received a delivery.

It was his own 'civilian use' BMW R1200-GS Adventure in Racing Blue. We considered the same colour as mine, but decided on something different and not green! For now, Marty would get the motorcycle equipped with the necessary communications and video equipment, similar to mine.

Sometime next week, I would take Dave out, so he could test his new ride!

Chapter 79*: Exposed

Author's Note: Please be aware that this chapter contains crude language and insinuations!

The following day

Sunday

Safehouse A

Something happened this afternoon, between Josh and Chloe, exactly what I didn't really know!

Everything seemed to have gone well; Josh had been forgiven and Mindy had given him and Chloe some constructive training. Now they seemed to be avoiding each other and would not look each other in the face. I could only assume that one or the other had said or done something, out of turn!

Mindy and I both tried to find out, but neither Chloe nor Josh were saying anything!

Three days later

Lunchtime

Lake View High School

I had to tell somebody!

At lunchtime I sat down with Mike and Ethan.

"Can you two keep a secret?" I asked, tentatively.

"For you, Josh, of course!" Both replied.

"Something happened on Sunday!" I started.

"What?" Mike asked, eagerly.

I leant closer to my friends.

"I saw a girl, completely naked!" I said, feeling my face start to warm up.

"On TV?"

"No, in the shower and for real... Like four feet away from me!" I explained.

I had to tell somebody!

At lunchtime I sat down with Avery and Riley.

"Can you two keep a secret?" I asked, tentatively.

"Of course, Chloe!" Both replied.

"Something happened on Sunday!" I started.

"Tell us then!" Riley insisted, excitedly.

I leant closer to my friends.

"My boyfriend saw me in the shower!" I explained.

"You mean, completely naked?" Ethan asked, grinning.

"Completely!" I acknowledged.

"Who?"

I didn't want to say, but...

"Chloe!" Mike blurted out.

"Yeah!" I confirmed, reluctantly.

"Did you see, like, everything?" Mike asked, grinning.

"Everything!"

"Even..."

"Everything!" I repeated, with a smug grin.

"Well, what did you do?" Avery asked.

"I just stood there!" I said.

"And he saw...?"

"Everything!" I confirmed.

"You didn't scream at him or cover up?" Riley asked, surprised.

"No and I don't know why!" I replied, a little unsure of myself.

"She just stood there?" Mike asked, incredulously.

"Letting you see her... Bits?" Ethan asked.

"Yes, she just stood there... Then she smiled at me!" I said, thinking back and smiling warmly at the thought.

"She smiled?" Ethan asked, amazed.

"I tried to say something, but as a great man once said: 'The problem is, God gave man a brain and a penis and only enough blood to run one at a time'. He was right!"

"Did he say anything?" Riley asked.

"No, but something else did!" I said, feeling my cheeks get very warm. "There was obviously no blood in his brain; so it must have gone somewhere else! But I definitely got a reaction!"

"Like where?" Avery asked, then sudden realisation hit her. "Oh... Oh...!" And she blushed.

"She noticed, too!" I said, feeling myself blush. "Damn! She was the hottest thing I had ever seen!"

"You are one lucky git!" Mike said.

"Yeah, you have one of the hottest girls in the grade and she let you see her naked!" Ethan added.

"So how did you feel?" Riley asked, with barely concealed anticipation.

"I don't know. I've never really had feelings like that before, but damn, those feeling were wonderful; those feelings felt so good!" I admitted.

"Wow!" Riley responded, wide eyed.

"You know, if he had wanted it, I would have let him fuck me, right then and there!"

"So how did she make you feel?" Mike asked, with enormous anticipation.

"I don't really know. I have never felt like that before. Nothing in those magazines ever had that affect on me!" I admitted. "I suppose I just felt so attracted to her!"

"Awesome dude!" Ethan responded, gleefully.

"You know, if she had wanted it, I would have done it, right then and there!"

"I even considered pulling him into the shower with me! Even now, that sounds so hot!" I said, blushing madly and giggled.

"Why didn't you?" Riley asked, all excited.

"I don't know, maybe I was scared. We are only fourteen and that would have been too fast, much too fast! In hindsight, one thing would have led to another and..." I said.

"My sister, Zoe, she had sex for the first time last year, when she was sixteen. She said she was glad that she had never had sex earlier; she said it felt good waiting and just touching and playing, but never sex. It made the wait all the more worthwhile," Riley said, lost in her thoughts, with a strange smile on her lips.

"So, should I take it to the next level... Touching? Then go no further?" I asked.

"Why not? A bit of touchy, feely can't hurt and by the way, Zoe says boys make a hell of a mess when they get excited!" Riley said and giggled.

"Maybe you should have dived into the shower with her?" Ethan said, with a smirk.

"I considered yanking off my shirt and shorts and diving in, but something told me to hold off. I might start something that I cannot, or rather should not, finish," I said.

"You mean sex!" Mike said, blushing as he said the word.

"Yeah. But I am not ready for that and I don't think Chloe is either. Yeah, I'd love to have sex with her; I'd be bloody stupid not to, but no, it would be moving way too fast and I respect Chloe too much to want to throw everything away, just to lose my virginity," I said, surprised at my own logic. "We are only fourteen!"

I just wish I knew what Chloe wanted!

"Honestly, you should move to the next level. Josh is fucking hot!" Riley said, blushing again.

"Keep your hands off and your legs closed, Riley!" I growled, then grinned. "He is a good catch!"

"You never know, British dick might taste good!" Avery said, making me spit out a mouthful of Coke.

"I cannot believe you actually said that, Avery!" I exclaimed, before relenting. "You could be right! Yuck... I don't think I could ever do that, though!"

I just wish I knew how Josh felt!

Chapter 80: The Next Level

Author's Note: Please be aware that this chapter contains crude language and insinuations!

That weekend
Saturday
West Ridge

We had a lot of things planned for this weekend, so both Josh and Chloe had stayed the night.

Surprisingly, Josh wasn't up early and neither was Chloe!

I went upstairs and saw that Josh's door was open and the room was empty; but Chloe's wasn't quite closed and I could hear voices, two of them, in Chloe's room. I pushed the door open and stopped in surprise.

Chloe was not in bed alone!

"Should I be worried?" I asked.

Neither Chloe nor Josh said anything, but both blushed bright red!

"Need a condom, Josh?" Dave asked, having followed me in and Chloe's mouth dropped open and her eyes almost bugged out; Josh just blushed a deeper shade of red!

"We were not fucking !" Chloe exclaimed. "We're not ready for that, we're just..."

"Exploring?" I prompted.

"Yeah, something like that!" Chloe offered, hiding further under the duvet.

I noticed that there were various items of clothing on the floor! I grabbed one end of the duvet and Chloe's eyes went wide...

"No Mindy!" Chloe screamed, as she grabbed for the duvet, before it slid too far.

"Thought so!" I laughed.

"Naked?" Dave asked, with a smirk.

"Oh yeah!" I confirmed.

"Just remember Chloe, you can't fight crime when pregnant!" I said, ignoring Chloe's look of horror and walked out, followed by a laughing Dave!

That complete bitch!

I cannot believe she actually said that! I was totally mortified!

I turned to look at Josh, who was trying not to laugh.

"It was not funny, cunt!" I said, as I threw back the duvet, then jumped up and locked the door. I noticed that Josh's eyes followed my naked body, all the way to the door and then back again to the bed!

"Like what you see?" I asked, coyly and I took my time on the way back.

I think Josh was totally speechless, but another part of him had definitely responded!

We had decided to just enjoy our bodies; absolutely no sex! Josh had only been in bed with me for ten minutes, before Mindy and Dave appeared and the little rat had forgotten to close and lock the door. He only came through to talk, but I wanted more and teased him by pulling off my underwear and dropping it onto the floor, while still covered up by the duvet! I noticed an immediate reaction in his shorts when I did that! He had slide into the bed, before he dumped his shorts and t-shirt. Just when Mindy came in, I was running my hands over his stomach, heading downwards, while Josh was running his hands over what passed for my breasts. We had shot apart very fast!

Now I could enjoy!

I had never touched one before, but it was now in my hand and it felt soft, but hard, at the same time and it was very warm. It felt even better because I knew that it was me that was making it get hard and warm! Josh's hand moved slowly and hesitantly down my stomach, but I grabbed it, just as he got his fingers into my pubic hair.

I wasn't ready for that, not yet! I was also feeling a little ashamed at being wet down there, despite being told that it was completely normal.

"Not yet!" I growled to Josh. "You need to earn that!" Josh moved his hand back up to my chest and I went back to...

I noticed that the more I touched and played with it, the more Josh's breath would catch; I thought back to what Riley had said about this and I remembered that she said it could get messy!

And she wasn't kidding! My hand was eventually covered in... Yuck, it was gross, but warm and made me feel really good!

Josh seemed to enjoy himself too!

Damn!

That was one hell of an experience. I actually saw Chloe naked, again and she was okay with it!

I'd only wanted to try and talk about what happened, but Chloe took her underwear off and she well... Ordered is probably the best word... Ordered me to get into bed! Just seeing her underwear on the floor, sent all the blood south again, so I scrambled into bed, feeling embarrassed. Then Chloe gave me a look and I slipped my shorts off along with my t-shirt. I can't say what I felt, it was just so unreal. But I was really turned on, if that's the right phrase. Inside me, my brain and my dick were both telling me that I was lying naked in a bed with a girl, who was also naked!

Chloe was running her hands across my chest and stomach, before heading south. I was feeling nervous and also a lot of other previously unknown emotions! I turned towards Chloe and ran my hands over her breasts; not big, but nice and compact, like she is. This was a first, touching bare breasts and without getting slapped! They felt really good and I got a reaction when I touched the nipples, Chloe's breath seemed to hitch, then the door opened and Mindy appeared.

I just thought: 'Oh Fuck!'

..._...

Once Mindy and Dave left, Chloe threw back the duvet and exposed me completely, before she jumped up to close and lock the door. Then she turned and kinda took a slow walk back. I had enjoyed seeing her from the back, but the front... My dick approved that was for certain! I just hoped I could control myself! Chloe had some lovely curves and my eyes moved from her grinning face, over her chest and down to her crotch.

Then she jumped back into bed and her hands went everywhere, it was difficult to keep control! I tried to slide my hand down her stomach and just got to her crotch, when she stopped me, then it happened; I lost control completely!

I thought Chloe might be upset, but she just giggled and made a face.

Josh and Chloe appeared downstairs, about forty minutes later.

Both of them looked very pleased with themselves!

"You've got clothes on!" Mindy teased.

Both Chloe and Josh just scowled in response, going slightly pink in the face.

"You two enjoy yourselves?" I asked, with a smirk.

"Yes, we did!" Chloe admitted firmly, trying not to grin or smile. "Can we change the subject please, I'm hungry!"

I was busy cooking breakfast and suddenly had an idea.

"Sausage, Chloe?" I asked, pushing over a plate piled with cooked sausages. "Not British I'm afraid!"

Chloe blushed deeply and muttered something about bacon and eggs, before turning away and Mindy was howling with laughter!

Chapter 81*: Hormones

Author's Note: Please be aware that this chapter contains crude language and insinuations!

Later that morning

Saturday

The Farm

I had gone soft, really soft!

Ass-Kick says that it's my feminine side coming out!

Did Hit Girl actually have a feminine side? Marcus always wished that she had one and I suppose Dave did too.

I had a couple of surprises for Josh and one for Chloe.

"Let's start with young Mister Grand Theft Auto!" I suggested.

"Am I ever gonna hear the end of that?" Josh groaned.

"Probably not," Dave said, laughing.

"I really don't know if you deserve this Joshua, but..." I said pulling off a tarpaulin.

"Fuck!" Chloe exclaimed.

Josh was speechless; his mouth just hung open.

It was a twin to Chloe's Honda CRF250L, only instead of begin Slate Grey and Navy Blue, it was Silver and Tan, with the registration plate: 'JACKAL'.

"Bloody hell!" Josh stammered when he finally got his voice back.

I saw his face flicker between different emotions and at one stage I was certain he was about to burst into tears! Instead he came over and gave me a big hug, which was a surprise that I hadn't quite planned on and it kinda freaked me out a bit!

"Thanks, Mindy! You're wonderful; I don't care what the others say about you!" Josh said, thankfully letting me go.

"I'm glad that's over! Now Chloe keep a firm hold of Joshua for this one, so he doesn't invade my personal space again, but keep your hands in plain sight!" I laughed. "Dave!"

Dave pulled off another tarpaulin, revealing two identical motorcycles. These were Honda CRF250R 15YM off-road motorcycles, with Honda World modifications and livery.

"These two are for off-road use only, as yourselves: Chloe and Josh; you are both too young to be able to go on the roads anyway. These are also two and a half times as powerful as that shitty little thing over there," I said, pointing at the Honda CRF100F motorcycle. "Now, I thought you two could get used to these new motorcycles for an hour or two, then we could all go for a ride, just the four of us."

"Cool!" Chloe exclaimed, all smiles.

"Read these, before you even attempt to start them!" I suggested and threw a copy of the Owners's Manual to each of them. The controls were basically the same, so there shouldn't be any major problems.

Half an hour later, Chloe and Josh were slowly edging around the field on the new motorcycles, primarily getting used to the larger and heavier frame, plus the fact that the motorcycles were much more powerful and thus much more dangerous. Both Josh and Chloe were well aware of these facts and I think they were both intimidated by the new machines. Both of them wore a harness over their leathers, which held a GoPro camera, so we could record their antics!

Dave was very happy with his new motorcycle; we had both ridden up together, I had Chloe and Dave had Josh. Jack and Natalie came out to watch and Jack was very impressed with how they both handled the larger machines.

Josh had been with us a month now, but it felt a lot longer. Jack and Natalie were very pleased with him, excluding the motorcycle incident! Jack actually mentioned that if that was the worse thing Josh did then he was going to do well. Jack admitted that his own teenaged years were a little haphazard and he managed to get himself in a lot of trouble, but refused to elaborate further! Natalie enjoyed having Josh around too, as she now had more things to keep herself busy, which she enjoyed.

The plan was to get Chloe and Josh used to riding these new motorcycles, as they were of similar power and physical size, to the road-legal machines that they would use as Shadow and Jackal. Once they could handle the bigger machines, I could then take them out on the road, but not before they learnt traffic signs and regulations, so we wouldn't have any accidents! Dave had suggested that maybe I should learn some traffic regulations, too, including speed limits; so I suggested where he could stick his speed limits, politely of course!

We eventually headed out, down the same track that Chloe and I had used previously.

I led the way, followed by Chloe, then Josh and with Dave at the rear. We rode slowly, while Josh and Chloe got used to their motorcycles on uneven terrain, as they were a good twenty kilos heavier, not to mention that the seat was twenty centimetres higher and the machine itself was also thirty centimetres longer!

I had also warned both of them, especially Joshua, that they should never, ever, take these motorcycles out on their own! Josh moaned about me singling him out and insisted that he had learned his lesson, but accepted he my warning, anyway!

At lunchtime we stopped and sat down under some trees to eat our sandwiches.

"Dave, you got a minute?" Josh asked, meaningfully.

"Okay," I replied, looking at Mindy, who nodded with a smirk. We had expected something like this.

Josh and I walked a short distance away, before sitting down again.

"Dave... I... This is a little embarrassing, but... I only have three people in the whole world that I can talk to about certain things: you, Mindy and Chloe. Now, considering what this is about, Mindy is out and considering it is about Chloe, she's out too. I know we've only known each other for a month, but you and Mindy are like an elder brother and sister to me. Anyway, this is a guy thing and well you are a guy!" Josh said, looking shy and embarrassed.

"Thanks for noticing," I replied, grinning.

"How many girls have you been with, if you don't mind my asking?"

"Mindy would be my third," I replied, honestly.

"So you're very experienced in the opposite sex, then?" Josh asked, still looking embarrassed.

"I don't know about 'very', but I have experienced different people," I said.

"Well... You know some of what happened this morning!" Josh started, looking even more embarrassed.

"You were in bed with Chloe and you were both naked, then 'Boom Goes the Dynamite'?" I suggested and Josh went bright red.

"That was accurate, I suppose!" Josh finally admitted.

"I assume you two didn't..." I prompted.

"No, it went all over her hand; I never went 'down there'!" Josh said, looking even more uncomfortable.

"So, what actually prompted all of this... Er... Activity?" I asked, curiously.

"Last week, at the safehouse, I er, walked in on Chloe, in the shower," Josh explained, grinning.

"And you liked what you saw?" I asked.

"Yeah, definitely, but what was weird, was that Chloe never tried to cover up, or scream at me! You know, the usual reaction if a boy walks in on a naked girl!" Josh replied.

"So you thought that Chloe enjoyed you looking?" I suggested.

"I suppose. She didn't exactly complain! Is that normal?"

"Considering what we do, I'm not sure if any of us are exactly 'normal'; Mindy most definitely isn't! As for Chloe, she has her moments, but she seems to be a fairly normal fourteen year-old girl. However, I was a geek and hung around with geeks, so never got anywhere near a girl, till I was almost sixteen! There were some fun times, behind the dumpsters at the comic shop though!" I responded. "That was where I lost my virginity!"

"So you two are intending to take it slowly?" I asked Chloe, who looked very uncomfortable and I wasn't exactly enjoying the conversation either! But I couldn't exactly refuse to listen, could I?

"Yeah, I wouldn't even let him touch 'down there'!" Chloe said, blushing wildly. "How did you feel, the first time Dave saw you naked?"

"Funny story there! You have to remember that I was going through a rather wild time, a little similar to Josh's experiences in New York. You know, trying to survive, but things kept going to shit! Well after Dave found me and helped me regain my more human side, I kinda surprised him after a shower, by coming out completely naked! Dave just stood there, for what felt like an hour, staring, but I enjoyed it and I had never felt so feminine, at least to that point in my life! That was my first ever 'making out' and I loved it!" I said, with a big grin, remembering.

"So Josh's reaction was normal, then?" Chloe asked.

"I suppose and you know that I haven't had that much experience with boys, at all!" I reminded her.

"I know, but you have gone beyond petting through clothes and making out with nothing on, we've only just played around a bit and we didn't really make out, just explored each other's bodies! I also got a gooey mess all over my hand, too!" Chloe said, blushing bright red.

"Now that bit I love! I assume it was under the duvet, so you didn't actually see it happen?"

"No, I didn't see it happen," Chloe confirmed, hiding her face, behind her hand.

"Oh, you must, it's cool! Although I must warn you; if you're using your mouth, be careful as they explode without warning and I got a face full the first time, but I loved every moment and I kinda like the taste, too! Don't use your teeth either, they don't like that!" I said, then laughed at Chloe's horrified expression.

"It's the most personal thing you can do for the guy you love, but it must be your choice; never feel you have to do that! Now, as for 'down there', I was nervous, very nervous that first time... Let me guess, you were nervous because with all the stripping naked and being in bed with a naked boy, you got a little over excited and you were worried about what Josh might feel, when he put his hand 'down there'?"

"Yeah," Chloe said, shyly.

"It's all normal, hey newsflash! You're a girl and Josh is a boy, it's biology bitch!" I said, wishing I hadn't used her phrase!

"I suppose!" Chloe replied, looking sheepish.

"The best thing I enjoy, is Dave going 'down there' with his hand, fingers, even his tongue! Now, don't look grossed out, it's the best feeling ever, short of full on sex!" I insisted. "I have a feeling that you have never had a full on orgasm."

Chloe looked very embarrassed and was peering out between two fingers of one hand. She just shook her head.

"Trust me, it is the greatest feeling ever! I used to get off killing, but now I've discovered something even better and that's Dave messing about 'down there'! Be warned, though, don't let yourself go too far. Once hormones and emotions are in control, you can lose control and the next thing you know, you're done! I would suggest speaking to your Mom and getting on the pill or something similar!" I said.

Chloe just shook her head, wildly!

"Think about it. Your Mom lives in the real world and will respect your wishes, plus I think she'll be pleased that you're being responsible. She knows how you feel about Josh and will probably be expecting this. I know you aren't wanting to have full on sex for another couple of years, but it doesn't do any harm to be safe! Talk to your Mom, when you get home," I advised.

"Can you help..." Chloe asked.

"No, I cannot; besides if your Mom thought I was pushing you into sex, she'd double-tap me in the head one night!"

Chloe didn't have a response to that one!

"Can you give me some clues, as to what I should and shouldn't do? I don't want to rely on the internet for things like this!" Josh asked.

"Do what comes naturally. Enjoy her body, but don't abuse it; get too rough and she'll tell you, or slap you most probably! If you're unsure about anything ask; she might be too worried to tell you that you're hurting her. Even though you might be having the time of your life, always remember that it's about giving as much as about receiving and that is what makes it fun. It's a two way street, always remember that!" I advised.

"Chloe stopped me from putting my hand between her legs; was I doing something wrong?" Josh asked.

"I doubt it! If Chloe doesn't want you exploring 'down there'; don't push the issue, let her come around in her own time. In the same way, if you are unhappy with how she handles you, then say something! Chloe won't know what will hurt and what won't, but you will, believe me! There's a good chance that Chloe will let you know when she wants you to go 'down there', but be gentle. Don't go stampeding in like a herd of elephants, she won't thank you for it! She says slow down; slow down. You're both new at this, so take it slow and learn as you go. Ignore advice from other guys at school; in most cases they haven't a fucking clue!"

"Thanks Dave!" Josh said, looking relieved.

"I'm always available, if you want to talk, about anything! I did a lot of listening some years ago, when my 'girlfriend' thought I was gay!" I said and Josh gave me a very strange look indeed. "Ask Marty, he loves telling that story! Come on, lets get back to the girls!"

"Thanks Mindy, you're great to talk to!" Chloe said, smiling.

"Here's the boys back!" I said, getting up.

"All sorted!" Dave asked.

"Oh yeah!" I replied.

"You knew?" Chloe asked, indignantly.

"We had a feeling you two might want to talk. That's why we arranged this little ride," Dave explained.

"You are too good to us!" Josh offered, smiling at Chloe.

"Tell me about it!" I said, getting back onto my BMW. "Let's roll!"

The ride back to The Farm was fun!

Mindy insisted on taking us on a very tortuous route, round tight bends and down into ditches. This really taxed my muscles, as this motorcycle was heavy at slow speeds, but I managed it and so did Chloe.

I enjoyed today, not just because of the chat with Dave, but the motorcycle ride was awesome.

I couldn't believe that Mindy had bought those two motorcycles for Chloe and I to ride. I was also completely stumped, when I first saw the other motorcycle, which would belong to Jackal! I had started to feel really guilty, about abusing Mindy's trust and going out on that other motorcycle, alone!

One thing I did notice, was that the ride back had a lot more conversation, but nobody mentioned anything about this morning!

Once back at The Farm, we cleaned down the motorcycles and put them away.

Chloe asked me to drop her off at home and she said she'd see us later. I had a feeling that she was building up the courage to speak to Dr Bennett, about certain things! Dave gave me a strange look, but I just told him not to worry about it and we headed back home. Josh rode on the back of Dave's motorcycle, allowing me to have a little bit of fun!

One minor problem occurred on the way home; I got pulled over by the Police and not just any Police Officer either. It was Murphy and Fellowes! I started to feel nervous. I had to make sure that I behaved like I had never seen them before! Dave was a couple of miles behind and I told him to ignore me and keep going, so as not to arouse suspicion.

I pulled over and the large Police SUV pulled in behind me. I turned off the ignition and raised my visor. Murphy climbed out, while Fellowes stayed in the SUV.

"Good afternoon, ma'am," Murphy said.

"Afternoon, Officer," I replied, before asking. "What seems to be the problem?"

"You were going a little bit fast, at the last off ramp," Murphy advised.

Damn!

"I'm sorry, the motorcycle's new, still getting used to it!" I tried.

"You seem like a well behaved, young lady, so we'll just leave it as a warning! There's no need to ride like you're Hit Girl!" Murphy said, laughing. "Can I see your licence and registration, please?"

My heart skipped a beat when he mentioned my alter ego! I handed over the requested documents and Murphy ran a quick check of my name and registration details, which, of course, came back clean!

"Thanks, ma'am! Nice bike, just keep below the posted limits!" Murphy advised, heading back to the SUV.

I pulled down my visor and restarted the motorcycle before heading off, carefully.

"Thanks God, that's over!" I breathed.

"Do I need to post bail?" Dave asked with a chuckle.

"Ass!" I growled in response!

Later that evening West Ridge

Chloe was back and she had the most enormous grin ever!

"So the talk went well?" I asked, as Chloe physically dragged me into another room, away from Dave and Josh.

"I expected yelling, but no. She sat me down and we talked, mother and daughter. I explained my feelings for Josh and she said she understood and that she thought I was being very mature and responsible, asking about protection. Mom says she'll get me sorted out next week!" Chloe explained, almost jumping up and down with happiness.

"Well done, Chloe! Told you it'd be fine!" I said, smiling.

"Oh, I mentioned to Mom about the whole double-tapping thing and she said no, that wasn't her style. Mom said that if she wanted to kill you, she could, but without leaving any evidence!" Chloe explained.

That sent a chill down my spine!

"Well, I'll definitely sleep better knowing that!" I grimaced and Chloe laughed.

Mindy and I were in bed and Sophia was curled up, on her couch.

"I enjoyed today, it was fun! That BMW is a great motorcycle; I felt good on it, both on and off road. At least I didn't get pulled for speeding!"

"Okay, I was going a bit fast; it's the purple part of me, it takes over sometimes!" Mindy tried, with a smile.

"Weak excuse!" I replied, dubiously.

Suddenly the peace was broken by a loud scream, followed by a yell. Both sounded like Chloe!

"I think Chloe's a screamer!" I commented and Mindy started giggling.

"That'll be the first orgasm!" Mindy said, still giggling. "How about giving me my next one?"

"I'd be pleased to!"

Chapter 82*: Mafia

The following morning

Sunday

West Ridge

Dave and I were in the kitchen having breakfast when Josh and Chloe appeared.

"So, how was it for you, Chloe!" I asked, innocently.

"Sounded very good from where we were!" Dave added and smirked at Josh. "You must have hit the spot, boy!"

Chloe just bit her lip and refused to say anything, but both had insane grins on their faces! Dave dished up some breakfast.

"Hope you washed your hands, Josh, after...!" Dave teased, just as Josh was reaching for his plate.

Chloe exploded.

"Okay, jeez! I had my first orgasm and it almost fucking killed me; scared the shit outta Josh, too!" Chloe exclaimed, with a giggle.

"And..." I prompted.

"It was awesome!" Chloe said, as she giggled and smiled till it must have hurt, with both hands over her face, as she blushed bright red!

"Well done Josh! You must have magic fingers like Dave!" I said, laughing.

Chloe actually leant over and gave Josh a kiss on the cheek, which made then him blush bright red!

Later that morning

Safehouse A

We rode to the safehouse and settled down to some constructive training.

By constructive, I meant separating Chloe and Josh, so that they could concentrate on the task in hand!

We got the compound bows out again and started practicing, using special training arrows, which had safer points. For a bit of fun, Dave wore his combat suit and allowed us to shoot at him, which also gave him an opportunity to try some defensive moves against the arrows, both with and without shields. The idea was that if Dave could deflect an arrow, then so could an enemy, so we would then come up with a defence, against the defence!

I was very annoyed to find that Chloe was a lot better, than me, when it came to aiming the bow. We also practiced with a quiver; learning to shoot an arrow, pull another arrow and shoot again, in as short a time as possible. This wasn't easy! I enjoyed the opportunity to shoot things at Dave, but I kept missing, which was starting to irk, especially as Chloe was almost always on target and Josh wasn't far behind! That must be the persona training! I had to admit, Chloe had quite a spring to her step now! She had told me earlier, that she had watched Josh this time and agreed that it was cool, but still refused to use her mouth!

By lunchtime, I had worked out the bow and was getting my arrows on target. There was no weapon that Hit Girl couldn't master! I went out to grab some pizzas, while Dave got out of his combat suit and Josh and Chloe tidied up the bows and arrows.

We enjoyed the pizzas and had a good laugh, mostly at Josh's and Chloe's expense!

"Okay screamer!" I said to Chloe, getting up and heading to the armoury.

"I am not a screamer!" Chloe insisted.

"So what was that scream at eleven o'clock last night, then?" I asked.

"A one off!" Chloe growled.

"Nothing wrong with it! Just so the neighbour's don't hear!" I quipped and received a nasty glare in return.

"Okay! No more sex talk! Here," I said, passing Chloe a training bō-staff. "Go and burn off some of that sexual tension!"

"Jackal, here boy!" I called, with a smirk.

"Woof!" Josh said, appearing in the armoury.

"Josh, you're only encouraging her!" Chloe advised.

"I can handle Mindy, don't you worry!" Josh replied.

"Okay! Josh, this is a 'Ninja-To'. It is smaller than a Katana, but larger than a Tanto and has a straight blade," I explained, handing him the sword, still in its saya. "Be very careful, as you pull it out, or you might lose those fabulous fingers that Chloe enjoys so much!"

I watched as Josh, slowly eased the blade out and his eyes went wide, as he examined the highly polished sword. I noticed that his hand seemed to be shaking. Josh seemed nervous about wielding the blade.

"Try some moves with it. Just don't kill anybody!" I said, seriously and suggested a few basic moves.

Once Josh had mastered some of the basic moves, primarily for defence, I decided to put him to the test. I grabbed a Bokken, or wooden practice sword.

"Now watch me, I'm going to move slowly, much more slowly than for real and I'm gonna be gentle," I said.

I don't think either Josh or Chloe actually believed me, but in this instance I was going to go slowly, so he could learn. He needed to master the basics, before we could move on. There was a time for fun and games, but also a time for serious training.

I showed Josh how to deflect basic attacks and let him work up the pace, as well as showing him some more complex attacks for him to defend against.

An hour later, I called time.

"Well done Josh!" I said. "You did well, very well. I'm impressed!"

"Thanks, Mindy!" Josh replied, with an enormous grin.

"Wow! I think Mindy likes you!" Chloe said, laughing. "Finally!"

That evening Safehouse A

It had been almost a month, since we last went out and I hoped that the Russians would have settled down!

Battle Guy was running comms, from his apartment. Kick-Ass and I would be on our motorcycles, hurray! We would patrol out, from the Safehouse, towards the centre of Chicago.

..._...

We had been out almost an hour and it was such a rush, being on my Ducati and being with my partner; I couldn't have been happier!

We were cruising east, side by side, when I registered a gun shot and immediately slammed on my brakes and skidded to a halt. I listened and heard another gunshot, so I span around and accelerated back, before I then took a left turn. Kick-Ass made a rapid one-eighty and followed.

"Battle Guy, I heard two gunshots... Hold on, I have two men exchanging shots... One just went down hard!" I called, skidded to a halt and drew a pistol.

"Battle Guy copies"

"Stop!" I yelled and received a bullet as a reply.

Kick-Ass stopped beside me.

"Fuck! Battle Guy, the dead man is a Cop! In pursuit now!" I called and the accelerated after the running assassin, followed by Kick-Ass.

The man vanished into a multi-storey parking lot. I skidded around a car exiting the parking lot and passed through the barrier, before it came down and I then headed directly at the man, who raised his pistol and fired at me. I swung in behind a parked SUV, climbed off and returned fire, just as Kick-Ass came past at speed, on his Fat Boy and cracked the man around the head with a baton, putting him down.

Kick-Ass came back around and stopped.

"Battle Guy. The shooter is down hard! We're all clear!" Kick-Ass called.

"Battle Guy copies all clear!"

..._...

I went over to check on the downed man, he was coming around.

"ублюдок!" The man said, rubbing his head. [Motherfucker!]

"You speak English cunt?" I growled.

"Of course I do, bitch!" The man responded.

"You killed a Cop, why should I let you live?" I growled.

"You shouldn't, because then I'd come after you!" The man promised.

"Your threats mean nothing to me, cunt!" I responded truthfully.

"You wanting to go to war, against us?" The man asked, incredulously.

"This is my City! I will not have Cops killed, in my City!" I growled, angrily. "By murdering Russian scum!"

"Don't start what you cannot finish, Hit Girl!" The man advised, then I shot him in the head!

"Let's go Kick-Ass!" I said and walked over to the Ducati.

We could hear sirens approaching, so left the scene fast.

"Battle Guy! The Russian is dead, we're clearing the area!" I called.

"Battle Guy copies!"

"Kick-Ass, I think we're going to war!" I growled.

"Could be fun!" Kick-Ass replied, dryly.

An hour later
South Chicago

"Knock! Knock!" I yelled, as Kick-Ass gave the door a good kick.

As the door burst open, I rolled into the room and came up with both pistols aimed and shot the first two men that raised weapons. The next pair of men managed to get off two shots each, all of which impacted my armour and almost made me lose my balance, before Kick-Ass nudged me forward with his foot and double-tapped each man in the head. I jumped up and moved forward, with Kick-Ass beside me.

A head appeared and Kick-Ass promptly removed it, then the big guns came out. I threw myself down, as I recognised the distinctive sound of an AKS-74U assault rifle. Kick-Ass followed, ignoring the two rounds that hit his armour.

"They seem to have some impressive firepower!" Kick-Ass said, calmly.

We both holstered our automatics and pulled around our G36C assault rifles. The AKS fire continued, over our heads. I slowly moved forwards, towards the doorway, that had the muzzle of an AKS-74U assault rifle sticking out of it. I reached up and grabbed the fore-sight, dragging the weapon through the door, closely followed by it's operator. I drove my fist into the man's shocked face, knocked him out and pulled the assault rifle out of his hands, before removing the magazine and throwing it across the room, which drew more automatic fire. This time it was smaller nine-millimetre rounds.

"Let's move Kick-Ass!" I called and advanced through the doorway. I fired several rounds into one man, who dropped his CZ Scorpion EVO 3 A1 sub-machine gun and followed the weapon to the floor, very, very dead. There were two more men, armed with the Scorpion sub-machine guns and they fired several rounds into my armour, before Kick-Ass cut down one man and I killed the other. There were no more Russians, so we started searching the rooms.

We found evidence of drug trafficking, involvement in grand theft auto and also people trafficking. There was also a large stash of weapons. These cunts needed to be taken down, they were a plague on Chicago. Unfortunately there was very little evidence "Battle Guy, we're clearing out. I just have one or two items to pick-up," I called and got a strange look from Kick-Ass.

We called in the result to Voight and headed back to the safehouse.

"What the hell have you got strapped to the back of your motorcycle?" Kick-Ass asked.

"Spoils of war!" I replied, happily.

An hour earlier

After leaving the scene of the Cop killing, we had gone to meet Hank Voight.

"Sergeant Hank Voight, meet my partner, Hit Girl!" Kick-Ass said.

"Damn! You never mentioned how hot she was!" Voight replied, grinning.

I actually felt myself blushing, but thankfully the mask covered my cheeks!

"She's spoken for, Sergeant!" Kick-Ass warned, with a chuckle! "And yes she is!"

Voight thanked us for catching and killing, the Cop killer, before getting down to business.

"That fucking asshole, Ralph D'Amico, has left the Russian Mafia dug in all over Chicago!" Voight said, angrily. "Now, those two assholes you caught last month, had some good stories to tell, including some addresses. Unfortunately, we would need somebody who was completely psychotic to go after these Russians. There are some complete nut jobs in the CPD, but none that psychotic!" Voight explained.

"Oh, I can help you there!" Kick-Ass replied, looking directly at me.

"I am not psychotic!" I growled.

"Yeah, right!" Kick-Ass laughed.

"Okay, you have your girl, Voight!" I responded.

"Wonderful!" Voight said, with a laugh. "I thought as much!"

We had then left Voight and headed towards that first address that Voight had provided.

Safehouse A

Back at the safehouse, I unloaded my new toys.

"Okay, what did you ah... acquire?" Dave, asked, pulling off his mask and comms.

"Снайперская винтовка укороченная," I replied.

"What?" Dave asked, following me into the armoury.

"SVU - Short Sniper Rifle," I replied placing the two large, plastic cases onto a table, before pulling off my mask and comms.

I opened both cases and revealed two compact sniper rifles.

"The 'Dragunov OTs-03 SVU' short sniper rifle," I said, happily.

"You have ammunition for those things?" Dave asked, hanging up his weapons.

"You really need to ask?" I replied, rolled my eyes, then pointed to a metal tin of 7.62x54-millimetre rounds; The writing on the tin was in Cyrillic.

"My mistake!" Dave replied, laughing.

Chapter 83*: At War With The Mafia

Two days later
Tuesday

Well today's trip to school, was not fun!

Dr Bennett picked me up, this morning; as Jack was busy. I felt rather uncomfortable and avoided Dr Bennett's gaze, as she smirked down at me. It didn't help that Chloe kept grinning and every time she looked at me, she blushed! It was fairly obvious that Dr Bennett knew, or at least suspected that I had been running my hands all over her naked daughter. I just really hoped that she had absolutely no idea about how far I had gone with her daughter! I was very glad when we finally arrived at school and I could say goodbye to the smirking Dr Bennett.

As we walked into school, we met Avery and Riley. Riley obviously couldn't contain herself and must have read Chloe's guilty look.

"Did you?" Riley asked, excitedly.

"Hell, yeah!" Chloe replied. "It was fucking awesome!"

I blushed and legged it, fast, looking for Ethan and Mike!

West Ridge

I was planning our strikes against the next Mafia strongholds.

The attack the other evening was easy, as they weren't expecting an attack. This time, though, they would be ready and with improved defences. I would need to work out a strategy and this was not proving to be a very easy task!

Lake View High School

I was getting approving looks and smirks from Avery and Riley, all morning!

This was getting very embarrassing! The smiles from Chloe didn't exactly help either! Ethan and Mike were a little slower to catch on, but eventually worked out why Chloe, Avery and Riley were chatting and giggling together throughout most of the morning. I was dreading lunchtime, but it came and once Ethan, Mike and I had sat down, along came Chloe, Avery and Riley, who sat down across from us. Avery and Riley were smiling and looked directly at me, Chloe however, was avoiding my eyes and looked acutely uncomfortable.

"Well, Brit boy!" Avery prompted.

"What!"

"You seem to be very er... Talented, from what we hear!" Riley said, with an evil grin.

"What did you tell them, Chloe?" I asked, indignantly, looking directly at Chloe, who continued to avoid looking at me.

"Not much...", Chloe muttered, blushing violently.

"Tell us everything, Avery!" Ethan asked, excitedly.

"Don't you dare!" I said as strongly as possible.

"Well, according to Chloe...", Avery started, ignoring me completely.

I decided to just bury my face in my arms and try to be invisible!

West Ridge

Dave and I had gone out in the SUV, to do some daylight reconnaissance.

We had identified the next three addresses, which all seemed to be a part of the same Bratva. I was intending for them all to come down over the next two, or three, nights. Kick-Ass and Hit Girl, would make the assaults, with Battle Guy and Hawk, in support.

In this case, Battle Guy and Hawk would be in Lucille, parked a couple of blocks away. Kick-Ass and Hit Girl would be using Beast.

Lake View High School

Would this day of torture never end?

I now had Mike and Ethan giving me approving looks and probing me for further information, which I refused to provide! For now, only Ethan, Mike, Avery and Riley knew some of what had occurred the other night and I had hoped that was as far as it was going to go!

Unfortunately, Abby overheard somebody talking about a British ninth-grader, who seemed to be very talented in the bedroom! She tracked me down earlier and wanted to know all about it. I suggested that she go see Chloe, as Chloe seemed very happy to blurt everything out, to everybody!

Oh well, I could have a worse reputation, I suppose!

Later that evening West 35th Street

Battle Guy and Hawk were in place, with Lucille, by around seven that evening.

They had the first Russian building under surveillance. Kick-Ass and I left Safehouse A at around eight and drive over in Beast. We had taken great care to ensure that all of our equipment was correctly configured and ready for instant use. Kick-Ass would go in with his H&K 121 machine gun and a spare belt. I would stick with a G36C, but carried extra ammunition instead of one of my Katanas. Both Battle Guy and Hawk had G36C assault rifles ready for use, if they needed to come as backup.

..._...

Battle Guy had identified that the Russians were wide awake and ready. He had seen four men, all armed with AKS-74U assault rifles. These were professionals and they didn't smoke, which would damage their night vision, or talk unnecessarily. Dave and I were both wearing AN/PVS-21 low profile NVGs. These were new and were the latest available; Marty as usual, refused to say where he had got them! These were cool, as they had a built-in heads-up-display. In this case, Battle Guy was sending us live images of the Russian watchdogs. We could approach from their blind spot, but still be fully aware of the watchdog's locations.

We parked up, half a block behind the Russian's building and headed up the fire-escape of the building next door. Once on the roof we headed over towards the Russian's building. We could see no men on the roof, so we both jumped across; I had to smile remembering the first night meeting Kick-Ass and his hesitation, when doing this! Now he didn't hesitate for a millisecond! We landed and rolled; not easy for Kick-Ass with a giant machine gun! We headed over to the edge of the building, while watching the image of the Russian watchdogs, three stories beneath us. They were all looking out, never up. Not as professional, as I thought!

"Battle Guy, we are in place on the roof, above the Russians!" I called. "Setting up the ropes now."

"Battle Guy copies, Hit Girl and Kick-Ass, in position and setting up!"

..._...

Kick-Ass and I were poised on the edge of the roof top, wearing harnesses and with ropes attached to a strong point on the roof. We were coming down on two sides. I would come down on top of the four watchdogs, patrolling outside the main door. Kick-Ass would come down and through a large glazed window, on the second floor.

"Kick-Ass, five seconds!" I called.

"Kick-Ass, copies!"

I pulled the pin on the flashbang grenade and dropped it, I followed four seconds later, just as it exploded and shattered the first floor windows and the ear drums of the four watchdogs and blinded them too. I dropped down to a balcony, on the second floor and shot each of the watchdogs through the head with a Glock 19 as they rolled on the floor, holding their heads. I dropped the harness and kicked open the door from the balcony.

"Kick-Ass, flashbang!" I called, as a warning.

I threw another flashbang and waited on the balcony for the explosion. Just after everything went white, I burst inside. Kick-Ass made his entry through the large window, glass flying everywhere. That was actually quite cool, from this point of view!

"Hit Girl, your left!" Kick-Ass yelled and I instantly threw a knife, that impacted the oncoming Russian's throat, bringing him down, gagging.

That was a first.

I had never gone down the side of a building before, but it was cool!

Yet again, it was a result of Mindy's expert training and her faith in my abilities, which often exceeded my own! Bursting through the window was also very cool and easy with the combat suit protecting me! Once through the window, I looked around to get my bearings. The room was dark, as all the lights had been shattered by the flashbang grenade, but our NVGs allowed us to see what was happening. I saw a Russian come up on Hit Girl's left side and yelled out to her; she killed the Russian with a knife to the throat. Damn, that girl had good reflexes!

Suddenly two more Russians appeared, but before I could say anything, they dived at Hit Girl, who was, at that moment, facing away from them. One Russian threw a punch, hitting her left cheek and she fell back against the wall. Hit Girl drew her Tanto and slashed open the Russian's stomach, which looked rather less gory, than usual, in the green tinted view, through the NVGs. I ran forward and drove the butt of the H&K 121 into the side of the next Russian's head. He obviously hadn't seen me in all the chaos!

"Before you ask, I'm okay!" Hit Girl reported, shaking her head and raising the G36C to her shoulder; I did the same with the 121. We could hear shouting, mostly in Russian, but some in English.

Hit Girl moved off, towards a short corridor and I followed, watching for any sign of movement. At the end of the corridor, I could make out movement, then a few bullets impacted the wall beside us. I let off a dozen rounds, down the corridor and heard screams. I fired random bursts down the corridor, to keep their heads down, while Hit Girl cleared the rooms on the left side of the corridor.

I kicked open the first door and found an empty room, I moved down to the next room and stumbled as a couple of rounds hit my armour. They were powerful rounds, which hurt! Just as I approached the next doorway, the door opened and the front sight of an AKS-74U assault rifle stuck out. I grabbed the weapon and hauled it out of the room, stabbing the attached Russian through the back, with my Tanto; he died instantly, as I severed his backbone. I checked the room and it was empty.

"Both rooms clear, Kick-Ass!" I called.

"Copy rooms clear!" I heard in reply, as Kick-Ass fired another burst past me. Kick-Ass looks really cool when he fires that huge weapon, from his shoulder!

I felt Kick-Ass come up behind me and looked up to see the enormous barrel of the 121, extending past my right shoulder. Why I should get turned on by that, I really didn't know! Focus Hit Girl, focus! I moved forward, followed by Kick-Ass. As we came out of the corridor I could see movement and then bullets started to impact the walls and our armour. I dove left and Kick-Ass dove to the right.

Kick-Ass set up the 121 on its bi-pod and poured fire across the room. The large bullets carved through furniture and men, before his first belt ran out and he had to change it. While he did this, I started firing with my G36C and moved forward. A Russian appeared to my left and I elbowed him in the face, before two more Russians jumped on top of me and started punching me very hard. I hit out with my armoured elbows and fists, connecting with flesh and bone, but these Russians seemed oblivious to the pain that I was causing them.

"Kick-Ass, I need help!" I called.

"I'm a little busy, give me a minute!" Kick-Ass replied and I could hear him breathing heavily.

Just as I went down to change the ammunition belt, I felt three men land on top of me and start hitting me with rifle butts and fists.

"Kick-Ass, I need help!" I heard Hit Girl call, in my earpiece.

"I'm a little busy, give me a minute!" I called back, lashing out with my fists and elbows, using my armour as a weapon.

Eventually I managed to hit one of the men, in the face with my elbow and he went crashing backwards, blood exploding from his broken nose. I braced my legs and pushed myself up, using every ounce of strength I could bring to bear and forced the other two men back, but not before I received a heavy blow to my head, which made me see stars for a few seconds. This did not deter me, though, as I started pounding one of the men, with my fists. I was able to catch a glance of Hit Girl; she was buried under two large men, but still fighting. I knew I had to get to her fast, as the two men were too heavy for her to battle alone.

I managed to get an arm free and reached up for a Ko-Wakizashi, bringing the butt down hard on the head of the next Russian, which put him out, I then ran the last Russian through, with the blade. I ran over towards Hit Girl, who was still fighting hard.

"I'm coming Hit Girl!" I called.

"Finished your coffee, have you!" Hit Girl growled, angrily.

"Finished your coffee, have you!" I growled, feeling angry.

Then I got a nasty shock, as I saw the tip of a Ko-Wakizashi emerge from the chest of the Russian, directly on top of me and blood ran down over my combat suit. I threw the man off and was able to punch the other Russian in the face, so I could force my way back to my feet. Kick-Ass drove his Ko-Wakizashi into the stomach of the remaining Russian.

One of the Russians was still moving, on the other side of the room so I shot him in the head, with my Glock 19.

"Battle Guy! Targets are down, exiting now!" I called.

"Battle Guy copies that targets are down and you are leaving!"

We made a brief search for any useful information, including checking out the floors above and below, but we found nothing useful and no more Russians, before heading out of the building and past the four dead watchdogs. The entire assault had taken twenty minutes and so far, no CPD had arrived; Jack Bay was slowing down any response, as far as possible. We ran back to Beast and Kick-Ass drove us away from the Russian's building, fast and back to Safehouse A.

As soon as we reported as clear, Battle Guy drove Lucille back to Safehouse A. We both arrived separately, using caution to check for tails or surveillance. None were detected and we all made it back safely.

Safehouse A

Hawk and I arrived back first and got changed out of our combat suits.

About ten minutes later, Beast pulled into the safehouse and Kick-Ass and Hit Girl emerged, pulling off their masks and comms. I noticed that Mindy looked very unstable on her feet. Kim went over and helped Mindy into the briefing room. In the more direct light I could see heavy bruising, Dave had bruising to his head too.

"Should I call Medic?" I asked, concerned.

Kim was checking over Mindy's face.

"Yes," Kim replied. "Better to be safe than sorry!"

Morton Grove

"Chloe, I need to go down to Safehouse A. You want to come?" I asked, picking up my case.

Chloe looked worried.

"What's happened?"

"Mindy and Dave have been hurt," I replied.

I saw Chloe's face go from worried to panicky and saw tears appear in her eyes.

"I don't think it's anything serious, just precautionary," I said.

"I want to come!" Chloe said, running upstairs to get dressed.

Safehouse A

Mindy was out of her combat suit and lying on the couch in the briefing room, with a large ice pack on her face. I was sitting in a chair, drinking a coffee and keeping an eye on Mindy. I had insisted that Marty and Kim go home and thanked them for their help. Reluctantly they left, in Speedy.

About forty minutes later, Dr Bennett pulled into the safehouse and Chloe came running into the briefing room.

"What's happened? Are you guys okay? What's happened to Mindy?" Chloe blurted out.

"Calm down, Shadow; its just a few bruises," I advised her.

"Good, I was worried!" Chloe said and sounded relieved.

"You don't say!" I replied, laughing.

Dr Bennett came in and looked down at Mindy.

"Let's start with you, shall we?"

Dr Bennett examined Mindy's bruised face and said it was nothing to worry about and that there was no sign of a concussion. She checked out the bruises on Mindy's chest and left side, where the Russians had hit her the hardest; again, nothing to worry about. The combat suit had prevented worse injuries.

Next, Dr Bennett moved on to me. I was pronounced healthy, but bruised. I thanked Dr Bennett for coming all the way down here, at this time of night, but she shrugged it off, saying it was much more exciting than the boring 'crap' at work!

Chloe gave both Mindy and I big hugs, before leaving with her mother. We decided to spend the night here at the safehouse, rather than drive all the way home tonight, as we were both very exhausted.

I helped a very tired Mindy upstairs to bed and after getting her under the duvet, collapsed beside her.

The following morning

Wednesday

Lake View High School

Chloe looked worried.

"Have you heard from Dave or Mindy, this morning?" She asked me.

"No, should I have?" I replied.

"Oh crap, I forgot to tell you. They assaulted the Russians again, last night and Mindy got banged around a bit and so did Dave! They called my Mom down to check them out, late last night. I've been texting them both, but nobody answers and it's like eleven now!" Chloe explained.

"They'll be very tired and are probably still asleep. Anyway, they probably saw it was you and are now ignoring your messages!" I replied, laughing.

"It's not funny Joshua! Mindy was a mess when I saw her last night!" Chloe shouted back.

"Tell the whole school, why don't you?" I growled, pulling Chloe away from the crowds of people. "Your job is going to get us all in trouble one of these days! It's bad enough that the whole damn school thinks I'm fucking you or that I am some expert at getting girls off! I'm getting bloody requests now!"

"Sorry! I had to tell somebody; it was awesome!" Chloe replied, then smiled and tried to look cute and innocent. Annoyingly, I couldn't resist her when she was like that!

"My Dad always warned me that girls and women were devious!" I replied, but smiled back at Chloe.

I dug out my mobile and called Dave.

"Hello trouble, what's up?" Dave asked, sounding tired.

"Chloe's worried and thinks you're avoiding her texts," I explained.

"I've only just woken up; we had a difficult night," Dave said.

"I heard. You both okay?" I asked.

"Yeah, just a few bruises!" Dave replied. "Mindy's face looks a bit like she was hit by a truck, but she'll be fine."

"Okay, I'll tell Little Miss Moans-a-lot here! Take care, bye," I said and hung up the call then turned to Chloe. "They're fine, they were asleep."

"I do not moan, Joshua!" Chloe moaned.

"I know you worry about them, but they're fine," I said, giving Chloe a hug.

Safehouse A

I'm actually glad that Josh called; I was sore and needed a shower.

Mindy was still asleep, so I left her and went to soak my bruised body.

About ten minutes later, I was still in the shower when I felt a pair of hands on my chest and Mindy rubbed up behind me. I pulled her around in front of me and tried not to wince, but Mindy saw my expression.

"That bad?" She asked.

"Just don't go looking in any mirrors!" I advised, with a laugh.

"Thanks, partner!" Mindy said, punching my chest lightly.

"Makes no difference to me, you always look gorgeous!" I said, making Mindy blush. She really did look bad, on the left side of her face, where she had been punched; the bruise was purple!

"Is it sore to move your jaw?" I asked.

"Not so much, but I can live with it."

"Got plenty of make-up with you?" I asked.

"Not enough for this!"

"Once we're done here, we'll head home and then you can rest," I said, smiling down and hugging Mindy. I hated seeing her visibly injured and this looked worse than it really was.

West Ridge

We spent the rest of the afternoon doing not very much, while we let the aches and pains in our bodies heal. Mindy had insisted on cleaning and checking the weapons that we had used last night, before we left. I also cleaned the blood off of Mindy's combat suit.

Sophia was glad to see us, as ever, but I think she knew that Mindy was hurt so Sophia stayed with her all afternoon. Mindy was annoyed and unhappy about being so badly bruised. The attack had been successful, but she hated getting hurt; Hit Girl should not get hurt! Mindy's bruise, as well as mine, meant that we would not be able to attack the other two addresses, until the bruising went down. I was happy with this, as it would allow us time before the next attack. Mindy worried that this would give the Russians time to build up their forces, I agreed, but there was nothing that we could do about it.

Kim had come over to check on us both and she was glad we were okay. She only stayed twenty minutes, before heading home, but Mindy was glad of the visit.

Chapter 84: Driving

That weekend Fusion Warehouse

Mindy had leased a large, open-plan, warehouse.

Marty had checked it out, to make sure that it was secure and had installed his own security systems, the previous weekend. The warehouse was enormous, about ninety-five thousand square feet and would provide a large space for anonymous training. We arrived onsite about six in the morning, for an early start. Dave and I had been down at the warehouse yesterday, to get things set up.

Dave and I drove straight into the warehouse, before closing the remote roller door. We then got out of the SUV and I opened the rear door. Chloe and Josh were fast asleep, with Chloe cuddling into Josh. I poked them in their kidney's and they both bolted awake.

"Fucking, ow!" Josh groaned, holding his side.

"Ouch!" Chloe moaned, rubbing her side.

"Wakey, wakey, kiddies!" I yelled.

"Why the hell are we here at this time in the morning, for God's sake?" Josh moaned.

"Okay you two, listen up!" I said, loudly. "You both know about the Russians. This week was hell! This is nothing like Ralph D'Amico. Now, if you think I'm normally a bitch, you ain't seen nothing yet; ask Dave! I'm gonna come down hard on both of you, to get you trained; yeah, I enjoy being a complete cast iron bitch and I enjoy making people miserable, but in this case, I'm doing it to keep you both alive; I didn't get this bruise on my face giving Dave a fucking blowjob! Understand?"

Chloe and Josh looked a little but shocked at my outburst, but both nodded, suddenly waking up.

"I have an intensive two days planned for us all, but especially for you two. Now, if you want out, just say so and you can leave Fusion, till this all blows over. I give you both this chance, as you are the youngest. Otherwise I intend to work you both to the point of passing out. If I think either of you can't hack it, then I'll tell you," I explained, seriously. "I shit you not, this is fucking serious. Ralph D'Amico was nothing compared to what we now face. I know you are both only fourteen and Josh is still healing inside, but I need you both and I believe in both of you. Please take this training seriously, as it will keep you alive, trust me!"

"I'll do whatever you say Mindy," Josh said, looking worried.

"Me too, Mindy," Chloe said.

"I don't mean to scare you both, but I promise I will do everything I can to keep you both alive," I finished.

"Please tell me this doesn't mean 'Super Bitch' is back!" Dave whined.

"In all her glory!" I quipped, in reply.

"Oh, you two don't know what hell is coming your way!" I smiled, darkly.

..._...

"What are those doing here?" Chloe asked, pointing at two cars, parked beside a large black, twin-axle, box trailer.

"Those are part of your training, young lady!" I said cryptically and walked over towards the trailer.

Dave dropped open the back of the trailer. Secured inside were the two Honda CRF250L motorcycles, with the 'SHADOW' and 'JACKAL' registration plates and my Ducati, plus some other equipment.

"You two little dears, are gonna learn some driving skills, both two wheeled and four!" I explained. "By the end of this weekend, you will both be able to ride your road-legal motorcycles and drive a car, with both manual and automatic gearboxes."

"But, we're only fourteen!" Chloe moaned.

"Chloe, when I first met Little Miss Psycho, over there, she was able to drive Speedy, with a stick shift, at eleven years-old!" Dave said. "How the hell she reached the pedals, I'll never know!"

"Funny cunt!" I growled, with a laugh. "You saying I was short?"

"Well you were only about three foot tall!" Dave replied.

"Four feet and nine inches, thank you, ass!" I replied, indignantly.

"Still kinda short!" Dave insisted.

I ignored him.

"If I could do it at eleven, then two teenagers like you, should have no problems! I bought those two cars, so that you don't fuck up anything decent, like Beast or the SUV, plus only Speedy has a stick shift and you are not fucking those gears up! The Ford Focus, in black, has a manual gearbox, the other Focus, in silver, has an automatic gearbox," I explained, before continuing. "Okay! Why do I want you both to learn to drive a car? Because if something happened to Dave, myself or the others, then you may have no choice! I want to know that you could jump into any vehicle: Speedy, Beast, Lucille or even a fucking Jaguar and be able to get out of harms way! I would have to be dead before I would let it happen; but I would also expect you to be able to ride my Ducati, too!"

I noticed that Josh winced at my pronunciation of 'Jaguar'! I was just digging for a reaction and got it.

"Problem, Josh?" I asked, innocently.

"Do you really have to massacre that word? It's Jag-you-ar, not Jag-wahr; there's a bloody 'u' in it!" Josh exclaimed, looking very serious. "Damn yanks!"

Chloe actually burst out laughing and so did I.

"Josh, don't take life so seriously!" Dave said, chuckling. "Mindy said that on purpose, just to wind you up!"

Josh blushed a little, before responding.

"If you say so, Kick-Arse!" Josh replied, smirking.

"Okay cocky cunt!" I said, unlocked the black Ford Focus then drove it away from the wall and into the centre of the warehouse, well away from any supporting pillars. I stopped, left the car in gear, pulled up on the parking brake and turned off the ignition, then removed the key and got out, slamming the door.

"Show us what you can do!" I said, throwing the key at Josh.

I caught the key and just stared at it!

Now what?

I walked over to the car.

At least I went to the correct side; always a good start! I opened the door, got in and pulled the door closed. Okay! I stuck the key in the ignition and turned it... I got the shock of my life, as the car tried to bolt forward, so I let go of the key. I looked up and Mindy was almost pissing herself with laughter! Chloe looked shocked, while Dave was smirking and trying not to laugh.

Okay, think this one through!

This car has a manual gearbox... I thought back to my Dad's car in the UK. It was a Ford Mondeo and when my Dad got in the first thing he did was wiggle the gear lever, with his left hand. This would be different because the yanks drive on the wrong side of the bloody road, so I would need to operate the gears with my right hand. My Dad would also push his left foot down, on the left most pedal. Are the pedals the same in the US, as in the UK? I pressed the pedal furthest to the left and I heard a small thunk, as something released. I moved the gear lever around, or tried to, but it would only move backwards, but then I could 'wiggle' the lever. Now, the car should be out of gear! I turned the key again, the engine started and I let the key go.

I looked up again and Mindy was smiling approvingly; she walked over, opened the passenger door and got in, pulling the door closed.

"Well done Joshua, you worked that out a lot quicker than I expected!" Mindy said, and she sounded genuinely impressed and I felt my cheeks warming up.

"Thanks!"

"Okay Josh, the engine is running. Now, in this car we have six gears, five forward and one reverse. Currently the car is in neutral; to change gear you need to use the clutch, which I think you found earlier, yes?"

"This pedal, on the left?" I asked.

"Yes, the pedals are the same, no matter which side of the road you drive on. From the left, clutch, brake, accelerator or gas. Happy?"

I nodded.

"Okay. The gear arrangement is generally the same on most cars, using an 'H' format, although reverse tends to move around a bit! So, initially we want first gear, which is left and then forward, but before you do that, you need to push down firmly on the clutch, yes, all the way to the floor. Now hold it there!" Mindy explained.

"With your right hand, move the stick to the left and then forward, you'll feel it slot into place. Keep your foot on the clutch. This is the same as the motorcycle, except it's a pedal instead of a lever, okay?"

"Yes," I responded, concentrating.

"Normally you would operate this lever here, which is the parking brake; you would probably know it better as the handbrake. For now, I will operate it, so you can concentrate on the clutch, okay?"

"Okay," I said, sounding nervous.

"You remember how you let in the clutch slowly, while applying a little gas? Do the same here; don't worry, it's not an easy technique to master!" Mindy advised, encouragingly.

I let off the parking brake and Josh pushed down on the accelerator a small amount, then gently eased off the clutch, but also eased off the accelerator, too and stalled.

"No problem. Turn off the ignition... Put yourself in neutral... Good... Now start the car... First gear... Okay, clutch out slowly, while pressing down on the gas, just a bit more..."

We started to move forward, slowly and very jerkily, but we moved!

"Okay, take your foot off the gas and at the same time, press both feet down on the clutch and the brake pedals... Gently with the brake, but all the way to the floor with both pedals... Now!"

We stopped gently...Ish. I pulled up on the emergency brake.

"Ready to go again?" I asked, smiling as encouragingly as I could.

"Yeah, this is cool!"

We repeated this another half dozen times, with Josh getting better, each time.

I kicked Josh out and reversed the car back to where we had started.

..._...

"Okay, young lady, your turn!" I said, with an evil smirk.

A very nervous Chloe got in the car.

This time, though, I showed her the gears and how not to do what Josh had done! A little while later, Chloe had managed to move off half a dozen times, improving at each attempt. Chloe was grinning wildly, by the time she had finished.

It was approaching breakfast time and we were all hungry, so Dave vanished out to get something for us all to eat.

"You two enjoy that?" I asked, knowing that they had.

"It was cool Mindy, thanks!" Both replied.

"Well, that was a bit of fun to get you both started. Next you will need to learn all the controls in the car, what the gauges and warning lights mean, how to check the oil, washer fluid etcetera. You will also learn how to change a tyre. Driving is all about knowing how to maintain the car, too," I explained.

I spent the time, till Dave got back with food, going through the basic controls inside the cars, as well as a brief look at the warning lights. Once Dave got back, we sat down on some fold-up chairs, at a trestle table and ate breakfast.

After breakfast, I had Chloe and Josh change into their combat suits, minus masks and weapons.

The reason behind this, was that I wanted them to learn to ride their Fusion motorcycles. Unlike going off-road, if they came off here, it was concrete and their combat suits would protect them. See, I could be caring and considerate when required! These motorcycles were very similar to those that they rode last weekend. Once they were changed, I had them group around Chloe's motorcycle, which Dave had pulled out of the trailer and the motorcycle was now leaning on it's stand.

"Okay, these are similar to those you rode at the weekend. Obvious differences are: instruments, lights and some extra switchgear," I explained. "These motorcycles also have an extra gear. Which means how many, Chloe?"

"Six?" Chloe responded, a little unsure.

"Not bad; five plus one equals six! Okay let's start with the instruments: speedometer..."

"Which Mindy's motorcycles have, but may as well not, considering that Mindy ignores them completely!" Dave quipped.

I glared at him before continuing.

"The speedometer, odometer, a clock and the all important fuel gauge!" I finished.

"Yeah, very important, because you drink fuel faster, when you go faster, eh, Hit Girl!" Dave added.

Chloe and Josh both laughed.

"Ignore Ass-Kick!" I said, calmly. "You also have some warning lights: neutral, coolant, turn signals and high beam. All happy?"

"Yeah!" Both kids answered, enthusiastically.

"The ignition switch is up here, plus you have a battery and therefore a starter button, here on the right along with a stop switch. On the other side, you have the turn signals and headlight switch, plus a horn!"

I turned on the ignition, checked the motorcycle was in neutral and set the stop switch to 'RUN', before pressing the start button. The motorcycle jumped to life. Chloe's eyes lit up in excitement.

"Just don't soak the seat straight away, Chloe!" I teased and got a nasty look in return. I ignored her and went over to Jackal's motorcycle and watched as Josh did the same things, starting his motorcycle.

I sent them both off to pull on their masks, comms and helmets. Due to Jackal's mask, he had an open face helmet and I deactivated the voice module, as we kinda preferred his real voice, for some strange reason! Dave and I both pulled on our comms, as with both motorcycles running it would get loud in here. I was already in my leathers, so I pulled on a helmet and started my Ducati, before riding a few figure of eights, to warm up my tyres. My Ducati sounded kinda cool inside the warehouse, too!

"Okay, kiddies, follow me!" I said.

Dave stayed near the SUV watching and acting as overall guard, watching for anything happening that I might miss, such as somebody falling off!

"Use whatever gear you feel comfortable in, but cover your brakes and try not to bounce off anything!"

I led them on a tour of the warehouse, with a few figure of eights, around pillars. Once we had done three successful laps, I gave them further instructions.

"Next, you need to start using your turn signals, watch for my signals and copy me, remembering to cancel them afterwards!" I instructed and continued riding around my circuit, with Chloe and Josh following.

"You both okay?" I asked.

"Perfect thanks, Hit Girl!" Chloe replied.

"Doing great, Hit Girl!" Josh replied.

I had to admit Josh was right, they were doing well. Dave was constantly updating me on how they were doing, using a discrete second channel, that only I could hear; I was pleased. We continued riding around the warehouse, in and out of the pillars, for another hour, before I stopped, with Josh and Chloe pulling up on either side of me.

"Cut your engines!" I said, turning mine off, too. It was useful that this warehouse had powerful extractor fans to remove the engine exhaust!

"Okay, you two can ride in a straight line and you can ride around corners and you can stop. Next we need an emergency stop. This needs to be controlled, otherwise you will either be sliding across the black top, along with your motorcycles, badly injured or you will go flying over the front of the motorcycle with the same result! Ideally you should be keeping an eye on the road ahead, so you can predict and adjust your speed accordingly. Now, as you both know, shit happens, without warning!" I explained.

"Emergency stops are difficult, as I've already mentioned. As you know, you have two brakes, front and rear. Now, if you use the rear brake too heavily, in an emergency, the back wheel can slide and overtake the front, which is not a good idea! Just use the front brake, the spinning rear wheel will help resist a slide. This will take practice and experience and to make matters worse, the surface is a huge factor in stopping. This includes loose gravel, water, ice and oil; you don't want your wheels locking up! The best solution for you guys is don't drive too fast for the conditions! Me, I'm a lunatic, as Dave will tell you, so follow my advice and ignore what I do!" I said, seriously.

"Okay, let's start slow and practice," I said.

I let Chloe and Josh, practice on there own, at first, as they gained experience. They didn't come off which was good, neither were they going very fast! Next, I had them ride up the warehouse one at a time and then randomly shouted: "Stop!", to see their reactions. They weren't too bad and managed to stop each time, the skill would build up the more they went out on the motorcycles! The warehouse floor had also gained some nice black tyre marks!

Once we had finished the emergency stops, I had Chloe and Josh park their motorcycles and get out of their combat suits. Josh enjoyed helping Chloe with this task and Chloe seemed to enjoy the help!

..._...

After a lunch of pizzas, we went back to the cars.

Once the main floor of the warehouse was clear of obstacles, I put Josh back in the manual Ford Focus, with me and Chloe in the automatic Ford Focus, with Dave. With a shaky start we managed to start driving, slowly, in circles, in and out of the pillars. After about forty minutes, we swapped over, so Chloe could gain experience with the manual gearbox. Neither got past third gear, but that was okay and it was very good progress, especially when you considered that they had never driven a car before this morning!

Today was totally awesome!

I really couldn't believe what I had accomplished so far. I had driven a car and a real road-legal motorcycle! I wasn't expecting to be able to learn to drive a car till I was at least fifteen! This was so cool and to be learning to drive a stick shift, was even cooler! I couldn't wait to tell Mom and when Dad was home, I hoped he would be impressed too.

Some of my excitement was tempered by the knowledge of why Mindy was teaching all this to us. She did scare me a bit, with her initial lecture about the Russians. We would be in harms way, so all this training was necessary to help us stay alive! I wouldn't let Mindy and Dave down. They needed me, so I was going to do everything possible to help them! I was also very sure that Josh thought the same way.

For the next hour I put them both to work, figuring out how to jack up the cars, to change a wheel!

I will admit that Dave's assistance was required to loosen the wheel nuts! Both of them managed to figure things out and change the wheel, putting on the spare. I then had them take the spare off and put the original wheel back on! Josh grumbled a lot, but still got the job done. Neither of them had realised how heavy a fifteen-inch alloy wheel and tyre were, till they tried to pick one up!

Following this I left them for ten minutes, to work out how to open the hood (or bonnet for Josh)!

When I returned Josh was smiling smugly, with an open hood, while Chloe was looking very grumpy and with a closed hood. Chloe had found the handle to release the catch, but couldn't manage to release the catch under the hood! I showed her where this was and how to operate it and prop the hood open. I then guided them around the engine, identifying key components: coolant, brake fluid, battery, fuse/relay box, air filter, oil cap and dipstick, plus the windshield (or windscreen, as Josh insisted it was called) wash. I promised them that I would test them on everything that they had learned, tomorrow!

..._...

It was now getting close to four in the afternoon and we had had a very long day, so far.

We secured the motorcycles, back in the trailer and parked the two cars, before gathering up our equipment, including Josh's and Chloe's combat suits. We then took the SUV to Safehouse A.

Safehouse A

We sat down to a quick meal, once we got back.

"So, did you enjoy today?" Dave asked, during the meal.

"That was the most awesome Saturday, in a long time!" Chloe replied, with a big grin on her face.

"I learnt a lot!" Josh admitted.

"Well that's a good start!" Dave laughed.

"Okay, after you've finished I want both of you to go and get some sleep, in your own rooms! We will be going out tonight, so you will need to get some rest. If you do not get enough rest, then I will not take you, understood?" I asked.

"Yes, Mindy," Chloe and Josh replied, together.

Chapter 85*: Shadow Archer

That same evening
Saturday
Safehouse A

Dave and I woke up and showered around nine, we then woke up Josh and Chloe, which wasn't easy.

We each had to drag a kid out of bed and then we suggested that they both got a shower, preferably individually! Finally they both appeared, looking much more awake, having had a shower and we had a quick meal of sorts, before suiting up.

The plan was to take the KAM and make a short patrol.

This would be Jackal's first patrol, so naturally he was very nervous, but we all helped to ensure that he was properly geared up with his pistols, throwing knives and Ninja-To. Shadow was wearing a black combat quiver on her back, with eight, standard, high performance arrows; my trick and custom arrows, weren't ready yet! She carried a compound bow, as well as her usual pistol. This would be a first, for Fusion and hopefully a good test of the compound bow in action. Chloe was our best archer, so she deserved to try it out first.

Battle Guy would be monitoring us, from his apartment and he would ensure that for this run, at least, we would avoid locations that were know to be used by the Russian Mafia.

I had decided that I liked Josh too much to get him killed on his first trip out!

Kick-Ass was driving and we were heading north, to start with. One thing we had noticed with Jackal, which we hadn't really noticed before, was that on comms, he sounded normal, as he used a throat mike. This was a bit weird because when you were close by him, he sounded very strange!

We headed north, up South Western Avenue and then east, along West Garfield Boulevard, where we parked up, near the S Normal Boulevard and the rail yard. It was very dark and there wasn't much activity. In hindsight it seemed obvious, but at the time it never occurred to any of us that there was anything out of order!

A boy, of about ten or eleven years old, suddenly appeared in the middle of the road and yelled one word: "Help!"

Then he was dragged off by a large man, into a semi-derelict building, just off of the road. We immediately advised Battle Guy of what was happening and jumped out of Beast, then ran down the sidewalk towards the building. The main door was just closing, when Hit Girl bounded up the steps and kicked open the door. We followed. The boy had vanished, but the man was pushed back, as the door flew open; Hit Girl grabbed him.

"Where is the boy?" Hit Girl growled, menacingly.

The man did not answer, or didn't understand. He just shrugged, which just made Hit Girl mad.

"Where is the boy?" Hit Girl growled, again.

Four men appeared in the doorway, four very large men, with pistols. The man Hit Girl was holding, smiled, then the bullets started to fly. Hit Girl flung the man past us and into the men at the door, who fell back with two falling down the steps. As we moved towards the door, more men advanced up the steps, firing pistols and AKS-74U assault rifles.

It was a fucking ambush!

"I hate to state the obvious Hit Girl, but I think this is an ambush!" Kick-Ass stated, rather obviously.

"You don't say!" I growled, dryly, in response.

Heavy rounds impacted the wall above us and chips of plaster, brick and concrete flew off and impacted our armour. I looked around, there were perhaps a dozen armed men and they were using large calibre weapons, probably 7.62-millimetre, which would tax our Type III armour. We could not afford to be exposed for long. Kick-Ass and I fired off several rounds from our Glock pistols and saw three men drop at the doorway, then I saw a man drop, with an arrow in his chest, closely followed by another. I turned and saw Shadow concentrating on aiming another arrow. I didn't think that any of the Russians had noticed Shadow and her bow. Jackal started firing one of his FN pistols, and managed a hit.

We were taking them down, but far too slowly! We also did not have a lot of ammunition with us for a prolonged fire fight. Battle Guy was aware of the situation, but was too far away to be able to provide support. We would have to get out of this ourselves! I pulled out a pair of canisters from my belt and grabbed the pins.

"On my mark, run for that doorway!" I ordered and received acknowledgements.

"Three - Two - One - Mark!" I yelled and threw the two M18 smoke grenades, about a half dozen yards away. Two seconds later an immense cloud of violet smoke pulsed out of the canisters, covering our withdrawal, further into the building.

..._...

We ran through a doorway and into a larger area, which was thankfully empty. This gave us a minute or two to get our breath back and work out a plan of escape. From this area were four doors, two seemed to go further into the building and one led into a room with no windows or other exits, so we selected the remaining doorway and ran through.

We made it twenty feet, before running into two Russians who were armed with pistols and did not look like fighters; but they died anyway, in a hail of bullets from Kick-Ass and myself. All was quiet for the next dozen yards, which concerned me no end and eventually Kick-Ass voiced it.

"I got a bad feeling about this!" Kick-Ass commented.

"Back at ya!" I replied.

We came out into a more open area, which seemed to be a meeting room. Almost immediately six Russian Kryshas burst into the room.

..._...

A Krysha is an extremely well trained and powerful Mafia soldier, normally called upon when heavy muscle is required. Only Kick-Ass had the physical bulk to battle these guys hand to hand; a Krysha could snap the rest of us in half, single-handed!

"Do not fight them hand-to-hand, or you will lose!" I advised over the comms, firing several shots from my pistols, before swapping out the magazines. There was not enough space for me to use a Katana, so I left it stowed. My Tanto would have to do, although I managed to fell one Krysha, with two knives in the chest.

Kick-Ass pulled out his Ko-Wakizashi and attacked two of the men. I headed towards the other three, trying to keep myself between them and Jackal. I saw Shadow notch an arrow and she took down one of the Krysha, but was shot in the chest before she could get another arrow ready; she fell back and rolled under a large table to get her breath back.

"I'm okay, I'm okay!" Shadow called over the comms.

I continued to battle with my two Kryshas, but then one of them screamed, simultaneously with the sound of a gun shot; Shadow had shot the man in the leg, from under the table! He fell down to one knee and then his head exploded, as Shadow despatched him with another shot! With that distraction I was able to Kill my Krysha with the Tanto. Kick-Ass had killed one Krysha and was finishing off the next, with a slash that took the man's head clean off!

I took another good look around. This building had definitely seen better days and I was surprised it hadn't collapsed yet. Some sections of the ceiling were held up with temporary support pillars. There were no windows, but there was evidence of where some had been bricked up, long ago! Shadow reappeared from under the table and stood with Jackal.

I could hear loud voices, conversing in Russian, but couldn't make out what they were saying, but they were getting closer. I headed towards another doorway, which seemed to go to the next door building. I looked through and found another room, not a big one, but there was a doorway on the opposite wall. I heard the voices again and the Russians were there, bullets started to come through the previous doorway.

Hit Girl grabbed Jackal and shoved him away from the bullets, towards a doorway that led to a corridor and hopefully a room with an exterior wall and a window.

We ran down the corridor, I was in front, with Jackal immediately behind me and Hit Girl was covering from behind. I could hear Jackal's breathing, he sounded as scared as I was. Bullets were impacting everywhere, we had almost reached the doorway at the end of the passage, when a Russian Krysha suddenly appeared from a passageway on the left, he shoved me into the wall, hurting my shoulder. Hit Girl swung her Tanto, stabbing the man in his right shoulder and he dropped his pistol.

"Shadow, run, follow Jackal!" Hit Girl yelled.

I turned and ran after Jackal then into the room. I turned to watch Hit Girl fighting with the Russian Krysha and she managed to smash his head against the wall, knocking him senseless. Hit Girl picked up her Tanto and ran towards me. I could hear Kick-Ass still fighting, further down the corridor.

Just as Hit Girl reached the doorway another Krysha appeared and caught hold of her; they both rolled into the room and started fighting on the floor. I moved to help, but a face appeared in the doorway and threw two objects into the room, before hauling the steel door shut.

I focused on the objects and my eyes went wide, then I threw myself to the floor, behind what was left of an interior wall, with my arms over my head.

"Grenades! Get down!" Hit Girl yelled.

The grenades went off, behind the wall, which disintegrated. Apparently it had been a supporting wall, as the beam it had been supporting, fell, blocking the doorway.

The beam had collapsed into the room, in a large cloud of plaster, dust and brickwork.

The only person not choking, was Jackal, as his mask filtered out the dust, but we were all covered from head to toe in choking dust. I looked around; the beam had caught Hit Girl on her shoulder and on the side of her head; she wasn't moving. Jackal was half buried under plaster and bricks, on the far side of the beam. I felt a hand grab my upper arm and looked up. The Russian Krysha, seemed uninjured and had pulled himself out of the debris; he looked pissed and he hauled me to my feet and swept up my pistol from the floor where I had dropped it.

I managed to reach behind me and grab an arrow from my quiver. I stabbed the Krysha in the hand, making him release me. He punched me hard, in the shoulder, with his other hand. I screamed and fell to the floor, then I scrambled away from the Russian and reached for my bow, grabbed hold of it and notched the arrow.

Hit Girl was trying to move, but she couldn't get back to her feet; the Krysha had his foot planted, firmly, on her shoulder. Jackal pushed, desperately, against the fallen beam, but couldn't bring his pistol to bear.

The Russian Krysha aimed the FN Five-seveN pistol directly at Hit Girl's head and grinned.

"До свидания, Хит Девушк!" He said, sounding very happy. [Goodbye, Hit Girl!]

"Shoot him, dammit!" Jackal yelled and I released the arrow, a second before Hit Girl was shot in the head.

"Ешьте дерьмо, ублюдок!" I yelled. [Eat shit, motherfucker!]

Kick-Ass was attacking the door, trying to get in, but the door was completely blocked.

"Hold on Hit Girl, I'm coming!" Kick-Ass yelled, sounding desperate.

"The doorway is blocked!" I called. "Can you get around to the west side? We have a window, but we might need your help; Hit Girl is hurt!"

"On my way, Shadow!" Kick-Ass replied.

..._...

The Russian Krysha lay on the floor.

He seemed to be still smiling; his eyes were open, but vacant.

"He dead?" Jackal asked, trying to look past the fallen beam.

"I sincerely hope so, unless he enjoys having an arrow bisecting his head! It does look kinda cool, though!" I replied, immediately wondering why I had said that. I climbed over to Jackal and helped dig him out of the rubble, without dislodging too much more!

"Help me with Hit Girl," I said, kneeling down and brushing debris away from Hit Girl's face.

Hit Girl was trying to move, but seemed uncoordinated. I dug around her legs and freed them, Jackal helped me pull her out and roll her onto her back.

"Hit Girl, can you hear me?" I said. "Hit Girl?"

"I can hear you," Hit Girl replied very quietly.

"Where are you hurt?" I asked.

"I... I'm okay. Help me up!" Hit Girl said and tried to push herself up. Jackal and I helped her to her feet and supported her. I checked that her Katana and Tanto were in place, before we guided her over towards the window. That was when I got a surprise.

"Fusion this is Medic, I am en-route to Safehouse A. Advise any injuries!"

"Medic, this is Shadow!" I called, thinking it a bit redundant, as my Mom would surely recognise her own daughter's voice! "Hit Girl is behaving strangely and is not very responsive, she was hit by a falling beam; Jackal and I are supporting her to make our escape!"

"Any blood or sign of injury?"

"None visible, but we're all very dusty," I replied. There was something comforting about hearing my Mom's voice, as I was feeling very scared, right now.

"Shadow, this is Kick-Ass, we need to get out now, before reinforcements arrive! Can you see me?"

I looked out of the window, after removing some dust from the glass.

"I have you! I'm gonna smash the window and push Hit Girl out, you need to catch her!" I said and pulled out my pistol, which I had reclaimed from the Krysha; I had already lost one pistol to Ralph D'Amico! Mindy would be really pissed if I lost another, plus this one was extra special!

I reversed it and smashed out as much of the glass as possible. Then Jackal and I shoved Hit Girl out feet first and Kick-Ass caught her, lying her down on the grass, beside the house. I jumped down, followed by Jackal and Kick-Ass ran to get Beast, while Jackal and I guarded the confused Hit Girl.

"Battle Guy, Fusion is out of the building. Kick-Ass is getting Beast!" I called.

"Battle Guy copies Fusion out of building and awaiting transport!"

A minute later Beast skidded to a halt and I pulled open a rear door and with Jackal's help pushed Hit Girl in, but before Jackal and I could get around to the other side, bullets started pounding Beast. Jackal and I ran, then dived for cover, to the side of the building, but were forced round the back.

..._...

"Go, Kick-Ass, we have alternative transport!" Jackal yelled and Kick-Ass roared off, heading back to Safehouse A and medical assistance.

"You cannot be serious! You are a grade A, British nutcase!" I exclaimed, when I saw what he was looking at!

"Fuck off!" Josh replied, climbing on.

"Hit Girl will chop your dick off!" I warned.

"No, she's gonna give me a bloody medal! Now move your fucking arse, Shadow!"

I climbed up behind him and started shooting at the corner of the building.

"You know what to do?" I asked.

"Well, the key's in the ignition, if I set this thing to that 'circle-arrow' symbol and press this..." Jackal mumbled and the engine roared to life.

"Cool!" I commented, as I changed out my magazine and fired at the Russians.

I felt Josh slip into first gear and ease forwards.

"Take it gently, asshole!" I whispered, as we accelerated forward, slithering a bit on the grass, then the tyre bit in, as we hit the black top and we roared off after Beast.

"Kick-Ass, we've escaped and we are on our way!" I called over the radio, feeling sore from where a number of bullets had hit my back armour. "In style, I might add!"

Early morning

Sunday

Safehouse A

It took only ten minutes to speed through the empty streets and it wasn't long before I slammed on the brakes in the safehouse.

Medic was already there and helped to pull Hit Girl out of Beast and I carried her through to the briefing room and placed her on the couch. Medic immediately started checking Hit Girl out, before removing her mask.

"Where the fuck are those two little shits?" I said. Then over the comms. "Jackal, Shadow! Where are you?"

"Two minutes; got a little lost, can you open the gate, we ain't got a remote!" Shadow replied.

I ran to the main door and hit the button to shut-off the lights and open the door and gate. A minute later I saw a pair of bright headlights coming slowly up the road, before turning towards the safehouse and finally in the gate and then into the safehouse. I had to laugh; Mindy would... I didn't know exactly what Mindy would do or say!

"So Mr Grand Theft Auto rides again!" I said.

"It was all him!" Shadow explained, climbing off with a grimace of pain.

"Well, when needs must!" I commented, turning back to the briefing room.

Mindy was sitting up and Dr Bennett was helping her to remove her combat suit.

"You okay?" I asked, with a smile.

"Could be better, I think, my fucking head hurts like hell and so does my shoulder!" Mindy replied. "Are the rats back? I understood they didn't come back in Beast."

"No they er, found alternative transport!" I said and Mindy scowled.

"Am I gonna like what they've done?" Mindy asked.

"Let's worry about that later!" I said and helped pull off her boots.

"You two!" Dr Bennett called to Josh and Chloe, who were standing in the doorway. "Get out of those suits, get upstairs, get showered and wait in the kitchen. I'll be up soon to check your wounds! Move!"

Josh and Chloe positively fled out of the door and shot upstairs!

I smiled at Dr Bennett, "You have a commanding manner!" I said, with a laugh.

"Got to keep those two on their toes!" Dr Bennett said, grinning.

"They are thick as thieves, those two!" Mindy commented.

"Not far off the mark actually!" I warned.

Mindy's eyes narrowed.

"What does that mean?"

"They acquired another motorcycle to get back here! It seems to be a Kawasaki Ninja ZX-10R, in Black! Josh rode it, with Chloe on pillion." I explained. "Apparently the keys were in it! It's kinda like your Ducati!"

"Well done young Joshua!" Mindy said, grinning. "And it is nothing like my Ducati; not even in the same fucking league! It's like comparing you to me!"

"Thanks!" I growled.

"At least tracking signals don't work in here!" Mindy said.

"Okay, Little Madam, here," Mindy made a growling noise, when Dr Bennett said that! "Has a concussion and significant bruising to her right shoulder. She needs to rest."

"I have Russians to kill; I don't need rest!" Mindy stated and tried to get up, but fell back onto the couch, holding her head.

"You - will - rest!" Dr Bennett stated. "Or I can always sedate you!"

"I'd like to see her fucking try!" Mindy muttered under her breath.

"Try me, Hit Girl!" Dr Bennett challenged.

"FUCK!" Mindy screamed.

"Mindy looks so cute, when she pretends to be pissed and she knows that she can't use violence to get her own way!" I quipped. "Although the book of Hit Girl says that when all else fails, turn the air blue!"

Dr Bennett laughed, while Mindy just tried to look pissed.

"Hit Girl need a hug?" I asked.

"This sucks!" Mindy shouted, before starting to giggle. "My fucking head hurts!"

"I'm used to the moody sixteen year-old!" I said. "And the moody fifteen year-old, the moody fourteen year-old, the moody thirteen year-old, the moody twelve year-old and the moody eleven year-old! I've seen 'em all!"

"Ass!" Mindy growled, but with a huge smile.

"Well, I'd better go check up on Bonnie and Clyde!" Dr Bennett said, heading upstairs.

Josh and I had separate showers, for a change!

When my Mom appeared we were both sitting in the kitchen, with a hot chocolate each, with extra marshmallows. Josh had a towel wrapped around his waist, while I had my towel covering up a bit more, but revealing a bit too much thigh, which I had tried to cover without much success!

"Were you hurt, Josh?" my Mom asked.

"Not really, the others protected me for the most part," Josh replied, then my Mom turned to me.

I looked down at the floor.

"Well, young lady?"

"I was hurt on my left shoulder," I replied.

My Mom started prodding and manipulating my shoulder, which kinda hurt a bit.

"Just some bruising, nothing to worry about... What the hell is that?" My Mom demanded. She had seen the red mark, left over from the bullet that had hit my chest.

"I was shot," I admitted.

My Mom examined the red mark, then looked at me, before asking another question.

"Where else? Don't attempt to lie, either!"

"I... My back, I was shot several times, as we escaped..."

My Mom spun me around, causing my towel to slip off, but I managed to grab it and maintain some dignity!

"So Josh hasn't seen you naked yet?" My Mom asked, innocently.

"Oh I have, quite a few times!" Josh said, smiling broadly.

"Joshua!" I growled, blushing.

"Oh, sorry!" Josh apologised, with a slight blush.

My Mom finished prodding my back, I had a few bruises from some of the larger calibres.

"You need to take more care, Chloe!" My Mom cautioned.

"Yes Mom, I will," I promised.

"You staying here, tonight, or coming home with me?"

"I have a choice?" I asked, incredulously.

"Chloe, I trust you, okay!" My Mom said, before turning to Josh. "Besides young Joshua, you just remember that I carry a very sharp scalpel and can turn you into a eunuch in two seconds!"

"What's a eunuch...? Oh... Not good!" I said, blushing as I worked it out.

"Tell me about it!" Josh said seriously and crossed his legs!

I laughed, I couldn't help it!

"You stay here and make sure Mindy behaves herself! As far as I can tell, she only really listens to you, my dear daughter!"

Chapter 86*: War Plans

That same morning
Sunday
Safehouse A

Dr Bennett headed home, alone.

Josh and Chloe went to bed in their own rooms and promptly fell asleep; they were completely knackered! I got Mindy up to bed where, despite her moaning she also promptly fell asleep, thanks to the cocktail of drugs that Dr Bennett had forced her to take, before she left.

Me, I collapsed beside Mindy and fell asleep, after checking that all was secure, around the safehouse. I also called Marty and advised him that we were all safe, which he had worked out anyway, as he had listened into everything that had happened. He said that he would probably come over to the house, later tomorrow. I also sent a text to Marcus, letting him know that Mindy had been injured, but that she would be okay and that it was nothing serious.

Before I got Mindy to bed, she had insisted on checking out Josh's new acquisition. She commented derisively on it only being a 2013 model, but she was still impressed that Josh had acquired a twenty-thousand dollar motorcycle! Not just that, Mindy was also impressed that he managed to get Chloe and himself back to the safehouse, on the thing, without killing themselves! It was a very powerful machine, but Mindy insisted it was nowhere near the Ducati!

Personally I think Mindy's a little jealous of Josh, right now!

Later that same day
Sunday
Safehouse A

None of us woke up till about noon.

I ended up sleeping on the couch in the briefing room, after finding myself on the floor beside our bed. On getting up off the floor, I found that somebody else had wormed themselves into the bed and pushed me out! I had left both girls sleeping and headed down to the briefing room.

"Hi Dave!" Chloe said and nudged me awake, before she pointed to a coffee on the table.

"Hi Chloe, you okay?" I asked; I had sensed that something was not right.

"I wanted to apologise for kicking you out of your own bed, last night!"

"You had a nightmare?"

"Yeah! Mindy almost died last night and with my own gun. I kept reliving that event over and over again, except this time, she died every time, no matter what I did..."

Chloe then started to sob and cuddled into me. Last time this happened, it was Mindy! I had to admit that apart from what was said over the comms, I had no idea what actually occurred in that room, last night.

I suggested to Chloe, that she walk me through the whole thing, from the moment they entered the room, to leaving via the window.

Chloe spent the next twenty-five minutes doing exactly that and I never interrupted, but just let her talk. At one stage the tears started again, but I coaxed her on. By the end of her explanation I was shocked and impressed. Considering Mindy was completely out of it, after the explosion, the two kids managed to hold it together and dispatch a Krysha!

I nodded to Josh, who had appeared in the doorway, during Chloe's explanation.

"You two did extremely well; I am really impressed by the way you both handled yourselves last night, well done!" I said, smiling at them both, as they both blushed deeply with pride.

"I second that!" Mindy said, coming into the briefing room and smiling at Chloe. "I heard the end of your explanation.

Thank you Chloe! You join the, thankfully very short, list of people that I owe my life to! Dave heads that list, by the way!"

Mindy then turned to Josh, who was still beaming with pride.

"As for you Mr Grand Theft Auto! I am very impressed by your two-wheeled toy out there! Well done for that; you thought on your feet and showed great initiative. It also shows that you have what it takes to become a great vigilante! Not as good as me though!" Mindy said, with an evil smirk.

"I'm just glad you're alive Mindy," Chloe said, giving Mindy a hug, but letting go quickly as Mindy grimaced. "Sorry!"

"Got bruises in places I don't care to mention!"

"Okay, let's get dressed and go home!" I suggested.

That afternoon
Sunday
West Ridge

Once we got back home, Mindy refused to go to bed, but I insisted that she at least lie down on a couch in the living room. I actually threatened her with Dr Bennett! Apparently, Mindy didn't want to be sedated, so she finally complied and also with the help of Chloe, who threatened to put her on the couch herself, the hard way!

Mindy was looking very battle worn! Her face was still a mess and her right shoulder was all sorts of fun colours! The concussion was also making it difficult for Mindy to think straight and this also meant that she was very cranky!

Marty and Kim came around mid-afternoon to check on the wounded Hit Girl. Marty also had an interesting recording to play to us.

..._...

"Er, Chloe, you got a minute?" I asked. "In the living room."

Chloe looked up from the mat.

"Yeah, Dave," She replied.

Once Chloe had sat down in the living room, Mindy turned to her.

"Don't look so nervous!" Mindy said, laughing.

"Sorry, I wasn't sure why I was being summoned," Chloe admitted.

"When did you learn Russian?" Mindy asked.

"Oh that! I just learnt the odd phrase, in case we met any Russians," Chloe said, blushing a little.

Marty pressed 'play' on his tablet computer; it was Chloe's very distinctive growl: "Ешьте дерьмо, ублюдок!"

Chloe blushed further now!

"Very creative! 'Eat shit, motherfucker!'" Mindy laughed. "Just what I might have said!"

"I had forgotten hearing that, last night," I admitted.

"Now we have two foul mouthed bitches!" Marty commented.

"Technically Mindy, is still the best at that!" I quipped.

"You record all the conversations?" Chloe asked.

"I do, just in case!" Marty acknowledged. "I heard you say something in Russian last night and got Mindy to translate it this morning."

Later that evening

At around five, there was a knock on the door!

Mindy immediately tensed up. Marty and Kim had left and Chloe and Josh were downstairs and we weren't expecting anyone! I went over to the door and grabbed a pistol from a drawer on the way. I noticed that a pistol had materialised in Mindy's hand, seemingly from nowhere!

I looked through the peep hole.

It was a Cop.

I slowly opened the door, holding my finger up to my lips, then I turned to Mindy.

"It's a Cop; he's following up on a stolen Kawasaki motorcycle!" I called.

Mindy went white!

"How the fuck did they track it here?" Mindy asked and she sounded panicky.

"Cause I'm good!" Marcus said with a laugh, as he came into the living room. "Tracked you all the way from New York!"

Mindy looked from Marcus to me and then her eyes narrowed considerably.

"You complete ass, Dave!" Mindy growled, before grinning, as Marcus sat down and gave her a hug.

"You okay, kid?" Marcus asked.

"I've had worse! But, what are you doing here?" Mindy asked.

"Can't I come by and check up on my little girl?"

"I've not been your little girl for quite a while!"

"You'll always be my little girl!" Marcus insisted. "Dave let me know about your injuries and after speaking with Jack, I decided to fly up."

"Dave, Marcus did not need to be told that I fucked up!" Mindy growled and looked angry.

"Mindy, I care about you; get over it!" I said, simply and Marcus nodded his agreement.

"Okay, I won't argue; I see I won't fucking win! Jeez!" Mindy grouched.

"Now you be a good little girl and rest!" I insisted, with a smirk. "Got a minute Marcus?"

They both really infuriate me!

But they know I won't ever hurt them!

Dammit!

This was really starting to piss me off! I managed to get suckered into a damn ambush, then knocked out! My two protégés outdid themselves by killing a Krysha (Chloe was getting really good with that damn bow), rescuing their master and then escaping! Not to mention Josh pinching a twenty grand super-bike! Me? I walk away with a pair of sniper rifles. Josh? He rides off on a fucking super-bike! That actually rankles inside and is that jealousy? Jealous of a jumped up British twat?

Not to mention that the little bitch threatened me, if I didn't rest! Hit Girl gets no fucking respect and that needs to fucking change, dammit!

My thoughts drifted to that little boy that started the ball rolling, last night. He had an American accent, not Russian. Who was he? Where did he go? Was he in trouble? Too many damn questions, as usual!

The only thing I did know, was that Fusion was now at war with the Russian Mafia. Unfortunately, I would be out of it for a week or so, but that wouldn't stop me from planning out the war!

..._...

Dave and Marcus returned about twenty minutes later, with Josh and Chloe, in tow.

"Okay Mindy, let's hear the latest Hit Girl story!" Marcus said, sitting down on the opposite couch.

"I can tell the first part, but Chloe and Josh will need to finish things, as I was out of it for a while!"

An hour later Marcus turned to Chloe and Josh.

"Thank you, both of you! Mindy may be a total nut job, just like her father, but I love her and hate it when she gets hurt, as Dave does!" Marcus said, with a smirk.

I felt myself blushing furiously.

"Thanks Marcus," Chloe replied and sounded a bit lost for words.

"Thanks Lieutenant," Josh said, blushing.

"Josh, please call me Marcus, you've earned it kid! You're all part of one big Fucked Up Super Hero Club!"

Chapter 87*: Celebrations and Remembrance

Three days later
Wednesday
West Ridge

Today was Marty's birthday!

Marcus was still with us, due to upcoming anniversaries, so we enjoyed a meal together, which Chloe, Josh and Abby were allowed to attend, despite it being a school night! We had a lot of fun, as it always was when Marty started telling his jokes. I noticed that Marty and Kim were very close now, sickeningly close! But I couldn't fault him, Kim was a very beautiful woman and she seemed to love Marty, especially the new Marty!

It was left to Dave to come up with some embarrassing stories, of which there were a hell of a lot! Those two really got themselves into a lot of shit, when they were young. I'm really surprised Dave lived long enough to even become Kick-Ass!

It was fun to find out more about Dave's past, as it was so very different to my own.

The next morning
Thursday
West Ridge

Today was expected to be a very bad day, as anniversaries go, that is.

Why?

So many bad things happened!

One catastrophic thing almost happened!

But also a couple of good things occurred!

Shall we put the good and bad shit in order then?

Firstly, that complete, traitorous, utter bastard, Red Mist conned Dave. Then I was shot, three fucking times! I really haven't got over that yet; thinking about it just makes me want to hit something! Next, my Daddy was kidnapped and then tortured to death, but not before I was able to kill them all and if not rescue him, I at least got to speak with him, one last time... 'You are the kindest Daddy in the world. I love you too, Daddy. I love you too, Daddy. Sleep tight.'

Dammit! I miss my Daddy so fucking much!

That catastrophic thing? Well that was me almost killing Dave, in the safehouse (that no longer fucking exists). I was mad and at the time, blamed Dave, but he had been badly beaten too. The stubborn bastard actually stayed to help me, too! He saved me twice and killed that bastard, Frank D'Amico; that was the first good thing! The thought of Dave with that fucking bazooka always made me smile!

The second good thing?

It was the best decision that I had ever made: I told Dave my true identity, I told him I was Mindy Macready and shook his hand; we became partners, of a sort and here we are, years later and still together, fighting for good.

"You okay?" Dave asked, hugging me tightly, as I cried.

"Yeah, I have you! I'll always be okay when I have you!"

This time last year I was alone, in this very city. Dave had made contact and I had fucked everything up and almost lost him for good. But he came back. Why does he keep coming back? Because he loves you, you stupid bitch, despite all the fucking shit that you dish out! I hugged Dave tighter, I didn't want to let him go, not now, not ever.

"What have my ribs ever done to you?" Dave asked as he struggled to breathe.

"Sorry!" I said quickly and eased my grip.

"Let's go get breakfast!" I suggested.

..._...

Marcus was in the kitchen, when we got down there.

He didn't look happy, which was understandable, as he had watched his friend and former partner getting tortured, live on the internet!

"How you doing?" He asked.

"Been better; story of my life!" I replied weakly.

"Hi Dave! How you handling it?"

"The nightmares were as vivid as ever! Don't regret a thing! I'm not saying I want to repeat it all, but..."

"I know!" Marcus offered.

"I'd like to think it would get easier as the years pass, but it's the same now as it has always been, but at least I have Dave, this time!" I said.

"I assume there still isn't any sign of any Hit Babies!" Marcus laughed, changing the subject.

My face suddenly felt very hot!

"Not the conversation for breakfast Marcus!"

..._...

We both received a very nice text from Josh and Chloe, as they both knew about what had happened that night, all those years ago. Josh and Chloe had watched that video together and were both understandably horrified! I thanked them both for their thoughts.

They really were great kids.

Marcus was heading back to New York this evening, but it was good that he could be here, during what was a difficult time, for us all. For now, at least, we could support each other and talk about the good old days! It also gave Dave and Marcus the opportunity to swap stories about yours truly! Nothing I could do about it, so I just glared at them both, but they just fucking ignored me! Okay, I've made a few mistakes in my young life, who fucking hasn't! Admittedly most peoples mistakes didn't involve sharp blades and guns, plus the odd item of explosive ordnance!

My life sucks and I hate being a fucking teenager!

The following morning Friday

"Thank God that's over for another year!"

"Tell me about it!" Dave muttered.

"Okay, back to the rest of our lives!" I said, jumping out of bed. "I have a war to plan!"

"You do that! Wake me when you're done!"

"Lazy green asshole!"

I needed to get my body back into shape, so I took Sophia for a run around the park.

It was painful, but pain is good for the soul, well that's what Daddy always used to say! It was okay when I was little, I didn't feel pain much. Mind you, my body has been through a hell of a lot over the past few years!

First time I was shot, was when? I was nine and my Daddy gave me hell for it, as I was in the wrong place at the wrong time. I won't tell Dave this story, 'cause the cunt would laugh himself stupid! I'm half surprised he hasn't noticed the scar! Okay, I was shot in the fucking ass! Left side, very low down and it hurt like fuck, not to mention that I couldn't sit down for over a week, which made taking a piss rather challenging! My Daddy laughed, he thought it was 'piss' funny and said it would teach me a lesson! Mind you, I laugh every time I think about it now!

As I ran around the park with Sophia, I was mentally planning our next assault on the Russian Mafia and that was something I was good at! By the time we had run all the way home, I had a very good plan coming together in my mind, not to mention some fun for this evening! However I had one major gauntlet to run, most possibly worse than the corridor at the D'Amico Penthouse! What was that immense hurdle? Dr Bennett!

Dr Bennett insisted on a full, top to bottom, physical before I would be allowed out. Dr Bennett also assured me that if I avoided the physical, then I would regret it. Normally I would ignore threats like that, but her smile was somewhat disturbing! So I submitted myself to the physical, which I passed, but not with flying colours I might add. Dr Bennett was not happy with my right shoulder, which she said had not yet fully healed. Nor was she happy with my other bruises that were scattered all over my body, as they had not fully healed, either!

I wasn't the only one to endure a physical either! Dave, Marty, Kim, Josh and Chloe also suffered through one too! We couldn't complain; at least we are all healthy and we would also need to be in top condition for the work we did! We were all pleased to hear that Joshua was now almost one hundred percent healed; Dr Bennett said that it must have been due to all that extra exercise Chloe had been giving him!

That evening Safehouse A

Dave and I were suiting up for a brief trip out.

This was not to be anything special, just a bit of fun! On a more serious note, it was to make sure that I was ready to go back out and into action. Dave insisted that we have a check run and I agreed, which kinda shocked Dave, as he had expected to have a massive argument over it! I agreed because I thought I was finally getting around to understand that people force me into these things because they care about me and don't want me to get hurt. Whether it is Chloe, Dr Bennett, Dave or Marcus, they were not doing it because they enjoyed it, as I might. They were just trying to prevent me from doing something stupid. It actually felt really good knowing that I had lots of people willing to look out for me and tolerate my often wayward behaviour to ensure that I was safe!

I never thought that the Russians were stupid, but one obviously was! The dick had actually reported his motorcycle stolen to CPD. Jack Bay had accidentally lost the report, but I now had the address for the idiot! Marty, with Lucille and of course Kim, had followed the guy to another address. This one was not one of the Russian Mafia locations that we were already aware of!

I had borrowed the Kawasaki from Josh, with his permission of course! We headed out, towards the address of the Kawasaki's previous owner. Kick-Ass was with me, on his Fat Boy and armed with a G36C, in case things kicked off. But we had both agreed that the moment things turned ugly, we would leave.

We arrived at the address stealthily and checked out the area. It was nothing special, just a fairly common residential neighbourhood, so we should be safe and there were also no tell tales indicating a possible ambush.

While Kick-Ass kept watch, I executed some very creative doughnuts, on the road outside the guy's house, before the guy quickly came running out, yelling his head off.

"Hey! That's my fucking bike! сволочи!" [Bastards!]

"Not anymore, cunt! Легко пришло! Легко идет!" [Easy come! Easy go!]

I accelerated away and pulled a wheelie as I went! Kick-Ass followed, keeping his G36C visible, to dissuade any retaliation.

"Well that's one way to get their backs up!" Kick-Ass laughed.

"Damn, that was fun! I replied.

Chapter 88*: Home Run

Two days later
Saturday
Safehouse A

It was time to get back in the saddle, quite literally!

We were going to kick some serious Mafia ass!

This was also going to be the first night out for the two kiddies and their motorcycles.

"You will do as I say, every fucking step! No show-boating, Jackal!"

"Hey!"

"Just 'cause you can pinch a damn motorcycle, doesn't mean you can ride one in every situation. Got it!" I cautioned.

"Yes!" Both kids agreed.

"Okay, let's roll!"

Southern Chicago

It was dark and getting cold.

Traffic was fair, so we were able to cruise and keep a good pace. I wasn't on the Kawasaki, but on my Ducati, which was much better. Abby was in the Command Centre at Safehouse A, while Marty and Kim were geared up in Lucille. Currently Marty had cameras on the Russian Mafia building. We had our NVGs on, so we could approach stealthily and via the heads-up-display, we could see that the Russians were expecting a possible attack, but seemed not to be expecting one at this site; there were token defences but that was all. Marty had counted twenty-three men of which around a dozen seemed to be Kryshas. Shadow was carrying her trusty compound bow, although this time, her quiver was packed with fun; these new arrows would be a game changer!

Both Shadow and Jackal were doing well with their motorcycles and successfully kept up with Kick-Ass and I. They seemed to be taking things seriously and kept together, side-by-side, behind me, with Kick-Ass following. We kept the speed down, so as not to attract attention and to give Shadow and Jackal a good learning experience.

We pulled over about twenty yards from Lucille, which was about forty yards from the Russian Mafia building. None of us were showing any lights and we hoped that the building between us and the Russians would mask our engine noise.

..._...

Kick-Ass and I headed towards the Russian Mafia building, followed by Jackal and Shadow. When we got to within ten yards of the Russians, we readied ourselves for the assault. First, though, Shadow would prepare the way ahead. Arrayed in front of her were four arrows, each of a special design with payloads near to their tips. Shadow would fire these in rapid succession, which she was now an expert at.

As the clock ticked towards ten o'clock, Marty gave us a countdown and Shadow notched her first arrow.

"This is Battle Guy! Ten seconds - five, four, three, two, mark!"

Shadow released her first arrow, scooped up the next arrow and released it into the air, before repeating the operation with the next pair of arrows; it only took a few seconds for all four arrows to be in the air and heading for their targets.

..._...

The first pair of arrows landed in the grass, each one near a group of watchdogs who were guarding the exterior of the building and none of the watchdogs noticed the arrows landing. A split-second later both arrows detonated in a bright flash of light and a deafening explosion. The next pair of arrows impacted the double, wooden, door of the building. Nothing appeared to happen immediately and a watchdog at the door, leant closer to the the arrows, inspecting the attached payloads.

"Ready to breach in ten!" I called.

"Detonating in three, two, mark!" Battle Guy called and the last two arrows detonated violently, blasting the doors to matchwood and shredding the nosy watchdog!

"Fusion, forward!" I called and we all ran towards the shattered doors; on the way Kick-Ass clubbed the fallen watchdogs before they could recover from the flashbangs. We raced through the doorway, Shadow was in front with her P90 up and ready to fire. I followed behind, with Jackal, while Kick-Ass kept an eye on our rear. We could hear men shouting in Russian; there was total confusion, which was perfect for us and we would take every advantage we could get!

"Battle Guy and Hawk are leaving Lucille!" Battle Guy called. They would provide backup and ensure no more Russians came in behind us.

Our first targets appeared round a corner and Shadow opened fire, dropping three Russians, while I took down a fourth with my G36C.

"Ha! Four down, moving on!"

"Ha! Copies four down!"

Another twenty yards and Shadow had her P90 ripped from her hand and she was thrown, bodily, against the wall by a Krysha; Shadow screamed in pain and fell to the floor. I shot the Krysha in the head, just as four more came from a passageway to the right and I was punched in the face again! Why can't these bastards leave my fucking face alone! I span around in anger and cut the man's throat with my Tanto and let him bleed out. Shadow was back up and drove her compound bow into the face of another Krysha breaking his nose, before she kicked the man's left knee, putting him down. Jackal followed up with his Ninja-To through the man's heart.

Kick-Ass was engaged in a blade fight with a Krysha, who was armed with a machete. The other Krysha came at me and I used his momentum to throw him behind me, where I shot him in the head with a pistol. Kick-Ass finished off his Krysha with a blade across the man's stomach, emptying his entrails onto the floor.

We moved on, after changing out magazines and checking each other was okay. Shadow was a little shaken, but okay to continue. The first floor was clear and now we had a large set of stairs in front of us, with an unknown opposition at the top. There was definite movement, but we had no idea what was up there. Cue Shadow and her bow!

Shadow notched another flashbang arrow, before aiming for the ceiling at the top of the stairs. We all covered our eyes and ears, ready for the visual and auditory assault. Once the bright flash had occurred and the explosion was echoing around the building, Kick-Ass and Jackal ran up the stairs; Kick-Ass with his G36C and Jackal with his P90, which I had spent some of the past week exhaustively drilling him on.

At the top of the stairs I saw several bodies, all of them moving and trying to clear their heads.

One managed to aim and fire off his AKS-74U assault rifle, before I shot him, but I heard Jackal yell, as the bullets impacted his armour and he fell backwards down the stairs.

"Hit Girl! Get Jackal, he's coming down the hard way, got shot!" I called.

"Copy that!" Hit Girl replied.

I moved forward and shot anybody I saw with a weapon, which turned out to be four of them, the other three I clubbed into unconsciousness. More AKS fire erupted, from further along the passageway and I dove through an open doorway into an empty room.

"We have Jackal, he's shaken up, but okay. He's staying downstairs, to watch our backs." Hit Girl reported.

"This is Kick-Ass, I'm pinned at the top of the stairs!"

"I'm on it!" Shadow reported.

About a minute later I heard Shadow's voice again.

"Fire in the hole, cocksuckers!"

This was followed by an explosion, seconds after Shadow had released an arrow towards the other end of the corridor. I heard screams as the explosion reverberated around the building and dived out of the room and joined Shadow, who slung the bow on her back and raised her P90.

"Good shooting, kid!" I growled, as we moved forward together, along the corridor.

There were three doors at the end of the corridor.

"You take the first door on the left, I'll cover you," I called to Shadow.

"I'm with you Kick-Ass!" Hit Girl called and touched my shoulder, so I knew she was there.

"Going in!" Shadow called and kicked in the door and dived in, rolled forward and came up on one knee. I followed to find a large, portly, man with his hands raised and Shadow with her P90 pointed directly at the man's head.

I ran forward and secured the man's hands with plastic ties.

"Stay there, asshole!" Shadow growled.

Hit Girl took the next door on the left, which led to an empty room. There was just the one door left. I waited until Shadow and Hit Girl were ready to cover me, then I kicked the door open and promptly received several bullet impacts to my chest armour. There was a pair of Krysha in the room, apparently guarding a store room beyond. I fired several rounds which hit the two Krysha in the chest, but they just staggered back.

"The bastards are wearing body armour!" I called, over the comms.

"This is Hawk, we're taking fire outside!" Hawk called.

"Jackal, go support Battle Guy and Hawk!" Hit Girl called.

"Jackal moving outside!"

This was getting complicated!

Shadow came forward and fired several rounds at each Krysha, her rounds passed through their body armour and dropped them both.

I ran out the doorway and found Hawk and Battle Guy behind a car and taking fire from several men, who had arrived in a pair of SUVs.

Both of them were replying with their G36C assault rifles. I engaged, from the cover of the doorway, cutting down one of the men. Unfortunately, I then received several shots in return!

"Hawk! I'll cover, so you can flank them!" I called.

"Copy Jackal! Ready to move in five, four, three, two, mark!" Hawk called, as I hosed down the two SUVs and Hawk dove towards the far side of the road and cover behind another vehicle. I quickly swapped out the magazine and continued firing, slower this time, to conserve ammunition.

As the two Krysha fell to the floor of the room, I kicked open the door to the storeroom and Shadow went in, with her P90 up in front of her. The light mounted on the side of the weapon illuminated a small room and a second later the beam settled on a boy, wedged into a corner and scared shitless.

"We're the good guys! We're here to rescue you!" Shadow said quietly and smiled down at the boy.

Shadow picked the young lad up off of the floor. He must have been about ten or eleven and was bleeding from a cut to his forehead, not to mention several hefty bruises. He was the same kid that we had seen the other night.

"Hi, I'm Shadow, what's your name?"

"Tommy," The boy answered in a shaky voice.

"Where do you live?" Shadow asked.

"Nowhere... I was kidnapped... From New York..." The boy answered.

"What?" I asked, turning around, as Shadow came out of the store room. "Your name is Tommy and you were kidnapped from New York? From outside a store, looking after a dog?"

"Yeah, couple of years ago, I'm ten and a half."

I looked at Hit Girl: "It couldn't be!"

..._...

I saw several emotions spread across Hit Girl's face, before her face went dark and she stormed through to the office across the corridor. I followed, sure of what she was about to do.

"You fucking bastard!" Hit Girl yelled, throwing the man to the floor. "You take kids! You hurt kids!"

"You cannot hurt me, I have diplomatic immunity!" The Russian said, smiling smugly through his pain. I noticed a green passport on the desk with Cyrillic writing, that I assumed was a diplomatic passport.

Hit Girl raised her pistol and pointed it directly at the Russian's face.

"Diplomatic immunity!" The Russian repeated and the bastard looked very sure of himself, as he pointed to the passport, on the desk.

I saw Hit Girls trigger finger tighten and then the Russian's brain's spread over the wall behind him.

"It's just been revoked!" Hit Girl growled and smiled, before she turned and left the room.

"Grab the boy, let's go!" Hit Girl ordered. "Hal, we have the boy! Exiting now!"

"Hawk! What's happening?" Kick-Ass called, as we headed towards the stairs. He was carrying the boy on his left arm, allowing him to keep his G36C ready for action, in his right hand.

"Doing well, last couple to take down!" Hawk replied.

By the time we got down to the destroyed main door, the shooting outside was over.

"Exit is clear!" Hawk reported.

We left the building and headed towards Lucille. Hal called Voight and told him to meet us a few miles up the road. Hawk took Tommy and with Battle Guy, drove to the rendezvous, the rest of us followed on our motorcycles.

A few miles up the road

I dialled the number: 212-012-86669.

"Hello?" A familiar woman's voice answered.

"Shannon?" I asked.

"Yes, who is this?"

"You may remember me, I'm Kick-Ass!"

"Kick-Ass! Hi, how are you doing?" Shannon Morgan asked, excitedly.

"I have somebody who wants to talk to you," I said and handed the phone over.

"Mommy?" The boy asked, tentatively.

The boys face suddenly lit up and tears streamed down his face.

Bingo!

I looked at Mindy and I was sure that I could see tears of joy in her eyes.

Chapter 89*: New In Town

Five days later
Thursday
West Ridge

We all felt pretty good about the previous weekend's events.

Tommy was now back with his family, in New York, after his terrifying ordeal. Voight and Jack Bay had seen to that. I was annoyed about even more bruises to my face; they were never going to heal at this rate! Chloe had some vivid bruises on her back, but otherwise we seemed to have survived and we felt that we had done some good at the same time. Indications were that the Russian Mafia was badly dented and had curtailed almost all of their activities in Chicago, which was a great victory!

Voight, as expected, didn't give a shit about the diplomatic passport and thanked us for the intelligence gold mine that this last building had provided. In hindsight shooting that man might not have been the best idea, but at the time I was raging and he deserved it.

The past few days had been spent getting the aches and pains out of muscles and joints and letting the bruises fade. We had all had a visit from the dreaded Dr Bennett, who passed us all fit, except for the bruises and the fact that we were all very exhausted. Chloe had been surprisingly quiet this week, but I just put that down to her getting stuck into school work and recovering from her bruises. Josh was constantly sending texts, which were starting to get on my nerves right now, as they were almost constant!

I was also very pleased that my new arrows had worked so perfectly and that Chloe had delivered them so accurately, too! I decided that I would need to get some practice in with these compound bows, myself.

..._...

I received a weird call from Voight this afternoon:

"Hey Hit Girl, you doing good?" Voight asked.

"I think so!" I growled back.

"You have a pair of heroes, who dress all in black and are about five and a half feet tall?" Voight asked. "Speak with a British accent?"

"No we don't. We all have colours on our combat suits. Plus, we are all American," I replied. Josh was technically American; well at least half! "Why?"

"We've had some reports of these two causing trouble. Just wanted to know if they had anything to do with you guys! Didn't think so, though; they aren't disciplined like your team, Hit Girl!"

I enjoyed that complement!

"Well, we'll keep an eye out for them, if you wish!" I said.

"If you could; we've had no success so far!" Voight said.

..._...

I relayed all of this to Dave, who was also a little puzzled.

"Josh?" He asked, tentatively.

"Josh is too short!" I laughed.

"True. Well, at least Voight thinks we're disciplined; obviously doesn't know us too well!"

"Hey! We are disciplined!" I growled, giving Dave a punch on the arm. "Well, I am, at least!"

"Come on, let's go for a ride; see if we can't find these guys!" Dave suggested.

Later that evening

We headed out on our BMW motorcycles, as ourselves, cruising through Chicago.

The leathers and helmets allowed us to wear concealed comms and carry a concealed weapon, which in this case was a Glock 26 for each of us. I enjoyed riding, side by side, with Dave, anonymously, through the streets, with the odd detour down an alley, looking for these mysterious British vigilantes. We enjoyed chatting to each other over the comms, too. I actually hoped Marty wasn't recording this conversation, as it got a little dirty at times!

About nine, Dave slammed on his brakes and turned into an alley, cutting his lights. I followed suit.

"What do you see?" I asked.

"Two people, dressed in black! Just ducked in behind the fourth dumpster, down on the right!" Dave replied.

"Plan?" I asked.

"Go around the far end, call me when you get there! Give you five minutes?"

"I'll be there in less than two, ass!" I replied and accelerated away.

..._...

Just under two minutes later, after a fast and fun ride around the block, I entered the far end of the alley, with my lights on full and started down the alley.

I saw movement and two black shapes ran off down the alley.

"They're coming your way!"

I saw two black shapes heading my way, and advanced towards them on foot.

They saw me and hesitated, then turned to check behind them and saw the dazzling lights of Mindy's motorcycle.

Both of the black shapes moved; one jumped and climbed up a fire escape, while the other scrambled over the dumpsters, jumping past me and out of the alley. I didn't pursue; I wasn't equipped for that.

"Well it looks like we've confirmed that these two actually exist!" I said to Mindy, as she pulled up beside me.

"True. They seem very athletic, don't they. I'm reasonably sure one of them is a girl, too!" Mindy replied.

"Brother and sister vigilantes?" I asked.

"Weird, huh?"

"About as weird as an eleven year-old vigilante!" I reminded Mindy.

"Oh yeah! I forgot about that!" Mindy laughed.

We continued our evening, driving around, but never saw the two black vigilantes again; we must have scared them off.

I had a feeling that it would only be time, before we met again.

On the way home we stopped off and grabbed a late night burger, which tasted totally crap, but food was food! It also wasn't often that Dave and I got to spend time out together, doing something that we both enjoyed and Dave used the time to wind me up, with kisses and questionable comments!

I won't say that I didn't enjoy it, but there was a time and a place for everything!

That place was the bedroom and the time was when we got home. We were then able to continue with Dave's dirty thoughts.

Chapter 90*: Young Love

Two days later
Saturday
West Ridge

The weekend had arrived and with it trouble!

Josh had arrived first and he was not happy!

He was ranting about Chloe; apparently she had embarrassed him at school yesterday and he wanted payback. He told me that the moment he saw Chloe again, he was going to floor her and apparently he didn't give a shit about the consequences! I was actually impressed, I had never seen Josh so focused or so angry; I had better keep those two apart today!

I went upstairs and took a shower. Dave appeared as I was getting dressed and I told him about Josh and that we would probably need to keep him and Chloe apart today.

"Oh shit!"

"What...?"

"I just let Chloe in; she went downstairs to see Josh," Dave said.

"Oh fuck!"

I ran downstairs, with Dave close behind me.

As we got to the bottom of the stairs I could hear shouting; Josh and Chloe were well and truly at it! I rushed down the next flight of stairs to a major fight. Josh was raging and kicking out at Chloe. Chloe in turn was fighting back, as expected! Josh's face was a mess; it looked as though Chloe had punched him hard, in the face. Chloe so far seemed unmarked, but that was before Josh kicked her legs out from under her and then span her around, so she landed on her front, with her face absorbing some of the blow. I saw blood fly from her nose and she screamed in pain. Josh moved in to attack her again, but I had had enough and I ran towards them both, then kicked Josh to the floor with a well aimed kick to his chest.

Dave went to scoop Chloe off the mat.

We sat Josh and Chloe down and cleaned them both up.

"What the fuck are two playing at?" I growled angrily.

Chloe's face was bruised, but thankfully for her, her nose wasn't broken. Josh's face was bruised too and he had a black eye.

"He attacked me, so I fought back!" Chloe said.

"Well you fucking deserved it, you fucking psycho!" Josh retorted.

"Calm the fuck down, both of you!" Dave roared, getting an instant reaction from Josh and Chloe. "So Chloe embarrassed you, fucking get over it and grow the fuck up!"

"Don't you dare come here and start fighting like that, Chloe! I really expected better from you; don't let Josh provoke you. So Josh looked at another girl, get the fuck over it! He's a boy; I thought you'd worked that out! Boys can't control their urges; they think with their dicks!" I said.

"You two gonna be friends now?" Dave asked.

"With her? Fuck that!" Josh retorted angrily.

I noticed that Chloe looked upset with Josh's response.

"Right! Both of you little shits sit down and neither of you are leaving till you both make up and start talking to each other! Anybody starts or takes part in a fight and I'll make you both regret it!" I said vehemently. "Joshua sit!"

I went back upstairs with Dave.

"How long?" I asked.

"Five minutes!" Dave said, chuckling.

Five minutes later

I went back downstairs and... Oh...!

Josh and Chloe were kissing and well... I couldn't really tell where Josh finished and Chloe started! Josh's left hand was up her top and his right hand was caressing her backside. Chloe was moaning and seemed to be enjoying herself!

"Don't let me disturb you two!" I tried, but I was completely ignored.

I went back up to Dave.

"Well they've made up! Must have been a while since they last interacted, if you get my drift!"

"I see!" Dave said and laughed.

Twenty minutes later

I wandered down to check on Josh and Chloe, as we hadn't heard a word from either of them!

They were still at it!

"Er, Chloe, don't suppose you fancy covering up?" I asked, averting my eyes, as Josh seemed to have stripped Chloe topless.

Chloe looked up at me and then down at her chest, blushed and held her t-shirt over her chest; Josh looked up and blushed too!

"Love won out in the end then?" I asked with a smirk.

"Yeah, we were both being stupid idiots!" Josh admitted.

"Speak for yourself, Josh!" Chloe said. "Seriously though, we're both sorry, Dave!"

"Yeah, we are!" Josh agreed.

"You seemed to be enjoying yourselves, I have to admit!" I commented and went back upstairs to allow Chloe to get her bra and t-shirt back on.

..._...

"They're okay; Chloe was topless by the time I got down there, but they did both apologise for the fight! If we'd left it another twenty minutes, they'd probably have been having full on sex!" I told Mindy and she laughed.

Josh and Chloe soon appeared from downstairs looking a bit sheepish and both apologised again for their behaviour.

After lunch we settled back down to training.

I concentrated on Josh and his Ninja-To; improving his movements and cuts.

"Mindy, have you ever thought of starting a training centre for this kind of stuff?" Josh asked.

"You mean a dojang for Taekwondo?" I replied.

"Yeah, you're really good at teaching. Hell, you trained Dave; Marty told me that he was a complete wimp, not that long ago!"

"Thanks for the vote of confidence, Josh!" I replied. "I am good, aren't I?"

"Josh, her ego is big enough; don't encourage her, please!" Dave said.

"I really hate to admit it, but Josh is right! You should open a dojang and teach others how to defend themselves," Chloe said.

..._...

As well as getting Josh using his weapons correctly, I wanted to get Chloe into some more advanced movements with her body. This generally involved back flips and other more advanced movements that might assist her, when in a combat situation. Chloe, in general, was very flexible and should be able to cope with these enhanced movements, easily.

I started her off with some simple exercises, to loosen up her body. Then demonstrated to her what I wanted her to learn, which Josh thought was really cool, as I managed a couple of back-flips in the limited space available.

"You think I can do that?" Chloe asked and sounded a little unsure.

"You can do anything that you put your mind to, Chloe," I replied.

..._...

Over the next hour, I managed to get Chloe performing a good back flip, which would improve with time and practice.

"That was pretty cool, Chloe!" Josh said.

"Thanks!" Chloe replied and blushed a little.

I had a thought.

"What about you Josh?" I asked.

"Me?" Josh asked, incredulously.

"There's absolutely no reason why you couldn't do a back flip!"

"Okay, I trust you... I think! Just go easy, I like my neck intact!"

..._...

The next hour was fun!

Josh was not the acrobatic type, but with Chloe's assistance we managed to get him doing a reasonable back flip, it need a lot more work, but it was a start! Chloe and I had tried not to laugh at Josh's attempts, but Josh didn't seem to mind; he seemed to see it all as a bit of fun too!

I advised Josh to keep practising, as he might need such skills at some stage in the future.

..._...

I had explained to Chloe and Josh about the two vigilantes that Dave and I had observed the other night and who seemed to be out causing trouble.

Surprisingly, it was Josh who asked the intelligent question that had not even occurred to me yet!

"What are they accomplishing? Are they acting for good, or for bad?"

I was actually stumped by the question.

"That was a very well reasoned and thought out question Joshua!" I commended him.

"Always the tone of surprise!" Josh moaned and Chloe and I laughed.

"You have your moments, Josh!" Chloe said, giving him a hug and getting a kiss in return!

"So far these two vigilantes have just been getting in the way. They haven't hurt anybody that we know of! They haven't stolen or damaged anything. I think they're just kids, out being kids!" I reasoned.

"How would you know what 'being out and being kids' would be like?" Dave asked.

"Okay! I don't, but you know what I mean, ass!"

"The only thing we know for certain, is that they are British!" Josh said.

"You're not alone, kid!" I quipped.

"No, I have Chloe!"

"Yuck!" I groaned.

That evening
Safehouse A

"You ready, Jackal?" I asked.

"I was born ready, Shadow!" Jackal replied.

"Bit sure of himself isn't he!" Kick-Ass commented.

"Cocky little shit, more like!" Hit Girl chuckled.

"He does look kinda cool, though!" Abby added.

"Thank you, Abby!" Jackal growled, with his voice modulator active.

"He sounds cool, too!" Abby commented.

Southern Chicago

The night was dark and cold.

I hated these late nights, I never felt safe walking home; what young woman does enjoy walking home alone after dark!

I had this weird feeling that I was being watched. I stopped and looked around, but saw nothing out of the ordinary; just a few cars heading home. I continued walking up the street, towards home.

A few minutes later, I felt something jammed into my side.

"Into the alley bitch, now!" A voice said, into my ear.

I started to shake, but complied. I was sure that I had just heard a large motorcycle not too far away, but I was pushed into the alley and then shoved against the wall.

"Purse, jewellery, everything!" The man ordered.

I sensed movement close by and heard a voice, a British accent!

"You don't want to do that, dickhead!"

I looked up and to my left and saw a figure wearing all black, on a fire escape above me.

"Who the fuck says?" The mugger asked.

"I do!" Another voice growled.

I looked to my right and saw another figure; this one clad in black and purple armour. It was Hit Girl!

Hit Girl strode forward, grabbed the mugger and threw him bodily across the alley.

"That wasn't very nice!" The black clad, British vigilante exclaimed.

"Fuck off you British twat!" Hit Girl growled. "I'm working here!"

"You okay, ma'am?" Another voice asked. I turned to see Hit Girl's partner, Kick-Ass.

"Yeah, I'm fine, just a little shaken, is all!" I replied.

"You should go, you will be safe!" Kick-Ass said.

"As for you two!" I growled.

"What you gonna do Hit Girl?" The black clad vigilante said, as he was joined by another, similarly clad, partner.

"Oh wonderful, it's the Dynamic Duo!" I growled and rolled my eyes.

"Let's go Hit Girl!" Kick-Ass called.

"Yes, time to go Hit Girl, listen to your boyfriend now!" The other black vigilante said and laughed. This one was definitely a girl.

I was getting very annoyed with these British vigilantes.

"I advise you both: keep out of my way!" I growled.

..._...

Kick-Ass and I headed back over to Shadow and Jackal.

"Why is it that all the Brits I come in contact with are cocky bastards!" I growled.

"You love us deep down!" Jackal replied.

"Very deep down!" I grimaced.

"That hurts!"

"Get over it!"

Chapter 91: Jumping

The following morning Sunday

Well it was kinda useful meeting those two new British vigilantes, I suppose.

They got under my damn skin though!

I really needed some stress relief, so I was glad that I had arranged something fun for today.

The Farm

"Hi Jack!" I called.

"Morning Mindy! Josh is inside, on his laptop; please go in Chloe!" Jack replied and Chloe rushed in.

"Those two are almost inseparable!" I laughed. "How's Josh doing?"

"He's doing good and he's a great help around the house; a perfect gentleman! You look shocked, Mindy."

"Well, Josh isn't always the 'perfect gentleman'! But, it seems, he knows when to be well mannered and when not! He's a good kid and I don't regret recruiting him; at least not yet!" I said.

"You are a good judge of character, Mindy and your training of Josh and Chloe is first rate; Damon would be very, very proud to see what you have built. Marcus says the same; you do know we talk regularly? I'll go get the love birds, so you can head on out!" Jack said and I felt really good inside.

My plan was to take the Honda off-road motorcycles out again. Only this time, I intended to teach Chloe and Josh some more advanced motorcycle riding, including slow speed manoeuvres, alternative stopping and a bit of fun with wheelies and jumping! I had selected a good site where they could both learn to jump and if things didn't go well, they would have a soft landing, well, hopefully.

..._...

After riding for twenty minutes, we arrived at the location that I had chosen.

"You two look nervous!"

"We both want to keep our necks intact, if that's at all possible!" Josh said and Chloe readily nodded her agreement.

"Okay! Most important; always remember that what goes up, usually comes back down again! So you not only need to learn how to take-off, but it also helps if you learn how to land, preferably in a safe manner!" I explained. "As you approach the jump, look for the smoothest part, it will help you keep a straight line, so that you aren't knocked off by a bump. Now, assuming that you also want to land, after taking off, it's a good idea to checkout the landing zone, before you ride. For us, operationally, that may not always be possible, but we do what we can. Don't take chances if you can avoid them; you tend to live a lot longer!"

Josh and Chloe still looked nervous.

"Now, your bodies. Your own body, Josh! Grip tight with your legs, keep good control of the bike by not gripping too tightly with your hands. You need your hands for the controls, so try to resist a tight, reflexive, grip. Next you're gonna need good throttle control. This is gonna be your first jump, so keep to a medium power setting and slightly pause as you approach the jump, before bringing on the power until both wheels are off the ground. If you back off too early, then the front of the bike will dip down, which won't be good! When you go up the ramp, to take-off, don't drop off the back of the bike! You do that, then you pull up the front wheel, which may not end well! You two scared yet?"

They both looked petrified!

"Keep your head over the handlebars and resist any temptation to move backwards. When you land, apply a bit of power and job done! Ready?"

Chloe looked at Josh, grinned and then turned to me.

"Let's go!" She said, warily.

Firstly, I took them both over the jump, on foot, so that they could examine the ramp and the landing zone. Then I suggested that they go, one at a time. Chloe reluctantly volunteered to go first and I guided her over the comms.

"Keep it slow... Look for the smoothest part of the ramp... Keep your legs tight together... Good general advice that, not just for now! Don't grip too tightly with your hands... Okay, you're airborne... Power... Not bad!"

Chloe came back around to us and her eyes were sparkling!

"That was so awesome!" Chloe almost yelled.

"Okay boy, your turn! Keep it slow... Look for the smoothest part of the ramp... Keep your legs tight together... Don't grip too tightly with your hands... You're airborne... Apply power... Control the skid! Well done, Josh!"

That was close; Josh almost lost control on landing, but he reacted well and corrected just in time!

"That was fun!" Josh said, dubiously, once he had stopped beside us.

"You didn't enjoy it?" Chloe asked, incredulously.

"I did, but it was just a bit scary!" Josh admitted.

"Wimp!" Chloe stated.

"Chloe, just 'cause you've become a fearless speed freak, doesn't mean everybody has!" I said, with a laugh and Chloe scowled.

"Give me time, I'll get there!" Josh said.

"I agree!" Dave agreed.

..._...

After a couple of hours we had all been over the jump, including Dave! Josh was feeling a lot more confident about jumping and his landings had improved. I enjoyed the jumping, too and so did Dave. Jumping the BMW motorcycles was not easy, mainly due to their weight. The kids off-road Honda motorcycles were designed for the larger jumps, however. I missed jumping, as my Ducati was definitely not designed for them!

Anyway, I didn't mention the speed demon!

I am a little concerned by her 'need for speed'! As Dave very happily reminded me, I am not a great deal better! However I have absolutely no desire for Chloe to break her little neck! Chloe, however, seems completely oblivious to the fact that there are consequences to riding fast and without due care and attention!

I reminded Chloe that I had come off my previous Ducati and that it had hurt, a lot! Thankfully that had been at a relatively slow speed and I could have been badly hurt, if I had been riding at my usual pace! Chloe just didn't seem to get it. Her motorcycle riding skills are very good, I admit that, but she needs a lot more experience.

..._...

I was now a bit dubious about covering wheelies, as Chloe was definitely enjoying her adrenalin buzz! I was a little concerned that she would do something stupid!

Oh well!

Forty minutes later, Chloe was on her backside again, which must be well and truly bruised by now! Chloe has come off the back of her Honda, twice! She just won't give up and insists on pushing it to the limit. Josh managed reasonably well, but was much more cautious and needed a lot more work!

I decided that now was as good a time as any to call it a day, before Chloe broke something that didn't heal!

That night
Morton Grove

"What the hell happened to you?"

"Josh and I got into a fight, yesterday morning!" I offered and tried to go up to my room.

"Back here young lady! Sit down!"

I turned around.

"I'd rather not, my ass is bruised to... Well you know; I came off of my motorcycle this afternoon, twice... Don't laugh, it hurt!"

"I'm waiting!" Mom said sternly.

"Okay, I smacked Josh and we started to fight, but Josh refused to hit me. He kicked my legs out from under me and I landed on my face!" I explained rapidly.

"So, you two made up, then?"

"Yeah!" I replied and hoped that the conversation would end there, but my Mom looked at me closely.

"Maybe instead of 'made up', I should have said 'made out'!"

"Mom, we are not having this conversation!" I said as forcefully as I could.

Mom just stared at me!

"Okay, jeez! We made out on the mat and well... Josh got carried away and I kinda lost my bra and t-shirt. Then Dave came down and saw me topless!" I explained, with my face feeling very hot.

"What are you complaining about; it's not like there's much to see!"

I just stood there with my mouth open; I couldn't believe my Mom had just said that!

"Sorry, Chloe; couldn't resist!" My Mom said and laughed.

"Josh never complains!" I retorted, then instantly regretted it and clamped a hand over my mouth!

"Is that so! Don't worry, if you're very lucky your tits may grow as big as your mouth!"

Chapter 92*: Archer Girl

Three days later
Wednesday
Lake View High School

"Josh!"

It was Kyle.

"Hi, Kyle! What's up?"

"You're British, right?"

"Yes," I said slowly.

"And you have a British accent."

"Yes... Where you going with this?" I asked, confused.

"There are rumours that there's a team of new vigilantes out there and they have British accents..."

I now knew where this was going!

"... Are you one of them Josh?"

"I promise you that I am not one of those new vigilantes!" I replied.; actually proud of myself, as I didn't lie!

Kyle didn't look convinced.

"Chloe could be the other one!" Kyle exclaimed, suddenly.

"As if! Chloe's scared of the dark; she could never be a vigilante!" I retorted.

"Oh, okay!" Kyle said and walked off.

Later that day
Lake View High School

"Joshua!"

It was Chloe.

"Hi, Chloe! What's up?" I tried and smiled at her; she looked mad.

"You're stupid, right?"

"Depends!"

"Why did you tell Kyle that I'm scared of the dark?" Chloe demanded.

"All I could think of at the time! He thought that I was one of the new British vigilantes and you might be my partner!" I explained.

"Oh! That could have gone worse, I suppose!" Chloe admitted.

"Yeah!" I agreed.

"Good thinking!" Chloe said, kissed me on the cheek and then ran off.

That evening

Western Chicago

The man crept down the alley and waited at the entrance to the street.

He didn't need to wait long. The woman walked down the street, completely oblivious to the trouble awaiting her. As she got level with the entrance to the alley, the man raised his right arm; the hand held a pistol. The woman saw it and screamed, but stopped suddenly, as something streaked past her and hit the attacker, square in the chest.

The attacker started to convulse as nineteen pulses per second coursed through his body. Then the man fell to the sidewalk and convulsed once or twice more, before lying still.

"You okay!" A voice growled.

The woman turned to see the famed vigilante, Hit Girl!

"Yeah, he never got the chance to do anything!" The woman replied and gazed down at the man, on the sidewalk. There was an arrow, lying beside the man, but the point was not a point, it was a pair of electrodes, which had pierced the man's clothes and impaled themselves into the man's skin.

"You're safe now!" Hit Girl growled.

"Thanks!" The woman said as she walked off, down the street.

Hit Girl crouched down to remove the arrow and check the man's pulse. He was already starting to come around.

"Nice shot!" I commended her.

"I thought it was good, too!"

"The ever modest Hit Girl!" I said dryly.

"Well looky what we have here! Halloween aint for weeks, kiddies!"

We turned to find a group of a dozen young men, some of whom were obviously under the influence of alcohol.

"What happens next is your choice!" Kick-Ass snarled. "I suggest you leave!"

"We don't like vigilantes in our town; we suggest that you leave!" The 'leader' suggested strongly.

I really didn't want to hurt any of these youngsters.

"Kick-Ass, batons only!" I cautioned.

"Way ahead of you!" Kick-Ass replied and I saw him with his batons ready.

"You go first!" I suggested.

"Brawn before beauty!"

"Time and a place, ass!" I laughed.

I drew my swords and advanced a dozen feet behind Kick-Ass. The 'leader' started to look worried; he pulled out a pistol, an old Browning Hi-Power.

"That all you got!" Kick-Ass snarled, as he continued forwards.

The leader snapped off three rounds, which Kick-Ass ignored.

"Fuck this!" Several guys shouted and turned to run.

Kick-Ass stared down the 'leader' and as he got closer, Kick-Ass simply stowed his batons and then reached out and plucked the pistol from the 'leader's' hand.

"I'll take that!" Kick-Ass announced, expertly ejecting the magazine and dumping the chambered round into his hand, with the magazine.

The 'leader' and his remaining team vanished.

Four miles away

"Goddammit!"

"Will you two stop trying to give us both heart attacks!" Sergeant Sam Fellowes complained.

"Those doughnuts'll get you first!" I growled.

"So... What do you jokers want?" Sergeant Paul Murphy asked.

"Present for you!" Kick-Ass announced and passed over a plastic bag.

"Okay! Not doughnuts! Browning?" Murphy asked.

"Took it off some idiot who said he didn't like vigilantes!" Kick-Ass explained.

"You don't want it?" Murphy asked Hit Girl.

"I have several already, thanks!" I growled in reply.

"I'll bet!" Fellowes allowed.

"Oh yeah, almost forgot! You'll find a mugger, four miles back, he's waiting to be picked up! Enjoy your doughnuts!" I called, as we walked off, back towards our motorcycles.

A few miles further north

We hid our motorcycles in an alley and continued our patrol on foot.

Kick-Ass took the lead and climbed a fire-escape onto the flat roof of an apartment block. We were able to walk along the flat roofs of the next few blocks and had a good view of several alley ways and streets. It was getting late and approaching the time for shops to close and their owners to bank the days takings.

We sat down and spent a few minutes chatting, which we rarely got to do when we went out together. Using the comms we could still patrol the length of the roof top, without breaking our conversation.

Around eleven, things started to kick off. We could hear shouting and generally rowdy behaviour, which was expected from young adults leaving the bars having had one or more too many! Kick-Ass identified a group of men, keeping to the shadows, who looked to be waiting to ambush an unsuspecting shop owner. Strategic street lighting had been smashed.

"Hit Girl, I think they need some more light down there!" Kick-Ass suggested.

"I can do that!" I replied and notched an arrow. "Let there be light!"

I released the arrow and watched as it streaked downwards, before it hit the sidewalk and sputtered to life; the flare illuminated the area in brilliant, incandescent light. The group of men ran, like cockroaches seeking darkness. We watched as a couple of late night stores closed and their owner's headed for the nearest bank, protected by the glare of the flare.

"That worked well!" Kick-Ass commented. "You make a good little Archer Girl!"

"Little!" I responded, with mock anger.

"You know what I mean, purple menace!" Kick-Ass replied, laughing.

We stayed on the roof and watched till after midnight, ensuring there was a peaceful night. I retrieved my arrow, once the flare had burnt out. All in all, I was very happy with the compound bow and the arrows. Chloe was an excellent teacher and had helped me master this complex weapon. Even Kim and Josh, were doing well. We now kept two compound bows and a large selection of arrows, in Lucille, just in case! I also added similar items to the other safehouses.

One thing that I did need to work on was my upper body muscles. The compound bow relied on muscles that were not usually used in this way, so I just added some new moves to my daily training rituals.

Chapter 93*: Four Wheels Good

Three days later
Saturday

The Ford Focus completed a reasonable handbrake turn, at the end of the parking lot, before it powered back towards the centre of the open area and executed a perfect, if not exactly straight, emergency stop. The vehicle then accelerated backwards at speed before it flicked around in a good attempt at a J-turn. The car drove around the edge of the parking lot, clockwise and returned to the entrance, where the SUV was parked and pulled up sharply.

"Fucking women drivers!" Dave exclaimed, as he jumped out from the passenger side, the moment the car had stopped. He was followed a few seconds later, from the driver's side, by a laughing Chloe, who grinned from ear to ear!

"Hey! Watch what you're saying, cunt!" I growled.

"I've seen your driving, gorgeous!" Dave laughed. "I speak from experience!"

"Our turn, Joshy boy!" I said and directed Josh to the driver's side. "Think you can match that!"

"Easy!" Josh said and threw a smug look at Chloe, who scowled in return.

"That was fucking awesome!" Chloe said, as I climbed into the car.

We had been at it for four hours and both Chloe and Josh were doing very well. We were using a large, currently unused, parking lot that, in southern Chicago. The plan was to give the kids some more wheel time and also to teach them some defensive and offensive driving. So far they had both learnt to perform a handbrake turn, a J-turn and also had an introduction to drifting. Right now we were letting them get in some fun driving. Chloe tended to have rather a heavy right foot, just like me! Josh liked speed, but was a bit more cautious and preferred to be in better control of the car, when driving. Chloe would get a little carried away with the gas and find herself out of control and skidding off sideways! Needless to say, I thought I would be buying some new tyres soon!

Marty would be coming by later, with Speedy, so we had a decent car with some power and rear-wheel drive! I made a mental note to talk with Dave about obtaining a replacement for Speedy, for Hit Girl to use of course!

Later that afternoon
Safehouse A

The training for this afternoon was to be about disarming.

I wanted to teach Chloe and Josh what to do if they were attacked by somebody armed with a blade or a firearm.

"A knife. In this case a Fairbairn-Sykes fighting knife. To us, when we are wearing our combat suits, this knife has no real affect. We can grab it by the blade, using our gauntlets, without injury. We can also deflect the knife, without injury. Lastly, we can be stabbed, also without injury," I explained. "Now, don't get complacent, you might not always be in your combat suit! You know what I mean, don't you Chloe!"

"Yes, Mindy, I do; the bank!" Chloe confirmed.

"Luckily, that time, we were facing a group of dickheads, who were just completely out of their depth and Chloe despatched one very smoothly! Okay, that went well, but in a similar situation you may find yourselves facing competent cunts, when you have no armour and no weapons. So what do ya do?"

"Wind them up, by pretending to be a brazen little hussy?" Josh suggested, with a smug sidewise glance at Chloe.

"Yes, Chloe's unorthodox distraction did help! Unfortunately, you just don't have the legs, Josh!" I replied and we all laughed.

"Normally the knife would be used as a hand-based weapon, not thrown. Therefore, there are different methods available, including the obvious; deflecting the weapon, to point elsewhere; preventing the attacker from bringing the knife to bear and keeping you distance, then they can't stab you, or slash you. Most importantly, keep your cool, clear your mind and focus. Ensure that you always have plenty of room to move, so don't get yourself pushed into a corner or against a wall. You can't fend off the attacker, if you get pinned. Anticipate what the attacker might do, quite often they may not be trained, so they will telegraph their actions."

"Sacrifices may have to be made. Concentrate on protecting your face, neck and vital organs. By face, I mean your eyes primarily, plus you don't want any nasty scars! One stab or slash in the wrong place on your body and you will be neutralised instantly; game over! If you need to defend yourselves, use your forearms. Yes they might get cut, but the cuts won't damage anything vital and you will still be able to fight."

"Dodging and weaving is always useful; the more lithe and agile the better! Keep in motion; a moving target is the more difficult to stab. Pull your body away from any strikes; stomach, head, legs etcetera. You may have to wait to disarm the attacker; an experienced attacker will make sure he is ready, before he strikes, as they will then be open to attack and being disarmed themselves. Always remember that you can back off and rethink things. If you keep your distance, you will be safe. A seasoned attacker may try to lower your defences by making half-hearted attacks, causing minor injuries and weakening your resolve."

"Try counter-attacks when possible. Block with one arm and strike with the other, preferably into the attackers face. These counter-attacks may be better than trying to disarm the attacker and failing. You understand all of that?"

"Kinda!" Chloe admitted.

"A lot of it is logic and common sense," Josh said.

"We really don't give you enough credit Josh! You are a really intelligent kid, I'm very impressed!" I replied as Josh blushed and Chloe scowled. "Josh is right. Self defence is logic and common sense; in a lot of situations people fail because they over think things, or just couldn't focus and think through the problem facing them. You rush in, you die, simple as that! Even I have made that mistake, several times, but thankfully I got out, by the skin of my teeth!"

"Another good and useful skill to learn is Krav Maga. This is all about getting away, not the fighting. Some might say that escaping is cowardly, but you must know your limitations and sometimes it is better to leave and heal, before attacking again. He who fights and runs away, lives to fight another day! Krav Maga concentrates on blocking and defending at the same time. There are situations where you just can't escape, so you must create an exit, or buy time to be rescued. Krav Maga can do that for you by breaking the attack pattern of the attacker, then you can start to get control of the situation. Initially we will focus on single attacks, that is one-on-one. Then we can move onto multiple attackers. Those attacks are my favourite; you should be able to manage four simultaneous attacks easily. Let's start some practice, masks on, as this will be full contact!"

..._...

"Okay Jackal! Stab me!" I challenged.

Jackal held the fighting knife with the blade pointing downwards and started moving towards me. I turned squarely towards him, then he lunged forwards, almost catching me by surprise! I fended off the knife in his right hand, but the little shit, had pulled his other fighting knife and now held it to my throat, in his left hand!

"You move, you die, Hit Girl!" Jackal growled.

I threw myself backwards, moving my throat away from the blade and kicked Jackal in the chest as I finished off my back flip. Jackal fell backwards, dropping both of his knives, I dove forwards, swept up both knives and held them to his throat. I quickly whipped them away, as I got flashbacks of doing almost the same thing to Josh, a few months ago and almost killing him. I think the same thing must have happened to Josh, as he ripped off his mask and gasped for air.

"You okay, Josh?" I asked, very concerned and I could see tears in his eyes.

"Just brought back a nasty memory, that's all!" Josh admitted and smiled up at me; I could tell that the smile was forced. I was appalled with myself for not thinking before I put the blades to his throat. I could still see the small scar, from where I had cut him that last time. Chloe pulled off her mask and her eyes were blazing as she glared at me.

"I'm really sorry Josh, I didn't think, you kinda caught me off guard with your moves!"

"Honestly, I'm fine Mindy!" Josh said pointedly, then turned to face Chloe. "And don't you start either, Chloe!"

"Let's call it a day!" I suggested and pulled off my mask.

I left Josh and Chloe on the mat and went to the armoury. Just as I had hung up my combat suit, Chloe came in. She looked very angry.

"That was uncalled for Mindy, you scared the shit out of him!" Chloe exclaimed. "Just like last time!"

"I've said I'm sorry, I just reacted, okay!" I retorted.

"Just stay away from him!" Chloe said fiercely.

"No you won't Mindy! Chloe, I don't need protecting. Mindy did not do anything wrong. I'm glad this happened here, rather than out there, when some cunt has a knife to my throat!" Josh said, as he came into the armoury. "Mindy, will you help me get over this, er, problem?"

"Of course Josh. You know I would never hurt you. I'm sorry that I nearly killed you in New York, believe me, please!"

"I would have done the exact same thing! You've done nothing wrong, Mindy; I just have some more healing to do, that's all!" Josh said, then turned to Chloe and glared at her. "If hear about you giving Mindy a hard time over this, then we're gonna talk, you and I and you won't enjoy it!"

Chloe looked a little shocked, this was another side of Joshua that neither of us had seen before.

"I understand and I'm very sorry, Mindy; I overreacted," Chloe said.

"Good, all made up? Let's get back to our lives then!" Josh stated and left the armoury.

Chloe and I were left staring at each other, rather uncomfortably!

"You know that I would never hurt Josh, don't you?" I insisted.

"Yes, of course I do! I don't know why I said that," Chloe said and she looked upset.

"It's called love, Chloe and there's nothing wrong with that, nothing at all!" I said and gave Chloe a hug.

Chapter 94*: The Vigilante Landlord

Five days later
Thursday

It was very dark and it was cold.

The thug aimed his gun at the man, who had just climbed into his car; the man in the car was about to drive off, when he saw the gun that was pointed at his head and put his hands up. The thug started to threaten the man, but was cut short when a very sharp and very shiny blade appeared at his throat.

"Good evening!" A voice growled, almost pleasantly.

The thug slowly turned his head, to his right and followed the shiny blade, to the purple hilt that was held by the black and purple armoured gauntlet. He continued to follow the slim, armoured, arm before finding the masked face that gazed at him with sheer malice.

"This is my neighbourhood, cunt and you and your kind, are not welcome! It is against my better judgement, but I am going to let you live... So that you can spread the word about this neighbourhood!" The monstrous form growled vehemently.

Then far more menacingly: "It... Is... Protected!"

The thug dropped the gun and ran, while the man in the car nodded his thanks and rapidly drove off.

..._...

"You enjoyed that, didn't you!" I stated, with a chuckle.

"Just wanted to check that I could still instil fear!" Hit Girl replied, with a smile and walked back down the sidewalk, towards me.

There was general applause from nearby doorways and Hit Girl bowed to the crowd, as she stowed her Katana. She was lapping it all up! Marty had let us know that the neighbourhood, where his apartment was located, had been having a few problems with some rather unsavoury people. Mindy immediately jumped at the chance to perform some form of Community Service, especially as this was where her apartment block was located anyway!

Next, we patrolled the neighbourhood; I let Hit Girl take the lead, as she seemed to be enjoying herself and it felt good to be dealing with street-level thugs instead of the Russian Mafia! The next target was a drug dealer; Hit Girl's favourite form of scum!

I had to give the dealer credit; the moment he saw Hit Girl, he ran and left everything behind! Mindy had, somewhat reluctantly, agreed not to kill anybody tonight: as long as they all complied with her requests to leave the neighbourhood of course!

It seemed that Hit Girl's reputation as a bad-ass, had preceded her!

We continued to checkout the alleys and streets, looking for people who were up to no good and depressingly, it didn't take long!

"What the fuck are you doing?" I growled and picked up the hooded miscreant, who was trying in vain to break into a car, by the scruff of their neck.

"Oh crap!" The kid groaned and hung motionless.

I was a bit shocked at the voice and the language and almost dropped the kid. I shoved the hood back and saw that it was a young girl, a very young girl.

"How old are you?" I growled.

"Ten, bitch!" The girl replied, grudgingly.

I heard Kick-Ass laughing!

"Talk about deja-vu!" Kick-Ass commented.

"You can fuck right off!" I retorted angrily, as I understood what he meant. "She is not me!"

"Short, female, foul-mouthed... Should I go on?" Kick-Ass chuckled. "I have more, much more!"

I ignored the asshole!

"Look kid. This is my neighbourhood and I am not having any trouble in my neighbourhood!" I growled. "You got that?"

"Yeah, I damn well got that!" The girl replied, exaggerating the last two words.

I dropped the girl tot he sidewalk and she ran off. I turned to Kick-Ass and could almost see the dorky grin beneath his mask!

"Not one fucking word!"

Mercifully, the rest of the evening was uneventful.

It seemed that Hit Girl's message had spread like wild fire and it seemed that anybody who so much as thought about breaking the law, wisely came up with something else to do with their time, this evening!

I spent the walk back to the motorcycles winding up Hit Girl and at one stage was very grateful to be wearing full body armour, as I could almost see the steam rising from Hit Girl as she got angrier and angrier! Finally she just swung her armoured gauntlet into my stomach and winded me; it could have been worse, much worse!

The following morning Friday, West Ridge

There was a knock on the door.

Strange, it was only eight in the morning, I thought. I was alone in the house, as Dave had gone out to see Marty. I answered the door and got a bit of a shock!

"Josh!" I exclaimed. "You should be at school!"

Something didn't seem right, Josh looked very uncomfortable and didn't answer; he just stood there.

"Come in!" I said. "Were you looking for Dave?"

"No, I wanted to talk to you," Josh said and looked even more uncomfortable.

We both sat down in the living room.

"I'm sorry, I don't want to talk to Dave; I think I feel more comfortable talking with you," Josh explained.

Oh Shit!

This is something that I am not good at! Ask me to do something easy, like killing a man with a Big Mac and I wouldn't bat an eyelid; but ask me to cope with upset teenagers and I'm completely lost and haven't a fucking clue.

"I had a bad night last night. Jack and Natalie don't know and I don't want them to know, either," Josh said pointedly.

"Okay, tell me about it," I said.

"I had a very nasty nightmare, involving my father and how he died... It really shook me up..." Josh faltered and it was now my turn to feel really uncomfortable, as Josh started to cry and I mean Niagara bloody Falls! It occurred to me that Josh had probably never actually talked to anybody about his father's death. It also occurred to me that we must be close to the first anniversary of his father's death and also of Josh, himself, going into the coma. I knew for a fact, that the first anniversary of my Daddy's death did not go well! Admittedly my way of coping involved blood and lots of it!

Sophia came in, wondering what all the commotion was and cuddled in next to Josh. For now, I just held Josh and let him cry; just like Dave did with me.

..._...

About an hour later, Josh and I were drinking coffee and talking in the kitchen. I had sent a discrete text to Dave, suggesting that he stay away from the house for now.

I had let Josh cry and talk about his Dad; I asked him questions about his Dad and Josh was happy to answer them. I learnt a lot of things that I never knew! For example, Josh's Dad was an ex-Royal Marines Commando, which meant that he had been a member of what was, arguably, one of the top fighting organisations, in the world. The Royal Marines Commando were elite troops, but Josh's Dad had passed selection for the next step up! The next step up was the Special Boat Service or SBS. These troops were very secretive and were often the first ashore during an amphibious assault. Those troops were seriously scary, even to me; those guys would have eaten Mother Russia as a starter, in five seconds flat!

This was where Josh had learnt most of his skills, including the preference for his Fairbairn-Sykes fighting knives. I told Josh that he could always come and talk to me, no matter what. I also told him that things would be difficult, as he got closer to the anniversary, but that I would do my best to help him. He apologised for going all wimpy and crying; he was a little embarrassed too! I told him that it didn't matter and that shit happens, we lead a difficult life, both mentally, physically and emotionally; we needed each other for support.

"You gonna head to school, then?" I asked, finally.

"I should do... Yeah, I will," Josh replied. "Thanks Mindy!"

"I'll call Jack and tell him that your're staying here tonight, okay?"

"Okay! I think breaking into your safehouse was the best thing I've ever done!" Josh replied and smiled for the first time that morning.

"I could disagree, considering I don't actually have that safehouse any more!" I growled and Josh grabbed his bag and left laughing.

..._...

Now I had cheered Josh up and he had gone to school, I sent a text to Dave to tell him that he could come home. I then called Jack and mentioned that Josh would be staying with us tonight, but said nothing else about what had actually happened.

It was actually good to talk with Josh; up until now I had never really had the chance for a one-on-one chat. He's actually a good lad to chat with and I felt pleased that he had felt able to talk with me about such a personal thing, as his Dad's death.

When Dave got back, I explained what had happened. I had asked Josh if it was all right for me to tell Dave and he said that it would be fine, but nobody else and definitely not Chloe. I respected Josh enough, not to go against his wishes, even if I did disagree with them.

Chapter 95*: The Miniature Vigilante

That evening
Friday

I had decided that I wanted to spend more time with Josh, or more precisely with Jackal.

Right now, we were riding side by side, towards the south east of Chicago. Dave would be following our progress from the safehouse and he said that he would be ready if we needed his help... As if!

"You doing okay?" I asked. I had ensured that our conversation this evening was not being recorded, for Josh's privacy.

"Yeah, it felt good to finally talk to somebody," Jackal replied and he definitely sounded happier. "Thank you."

"Why me and not Shadow... Or even Kick-Ass?"

"I knew I might cry and I didn't want to do that in front of Dave and well, you're a girl and I knew that you could relate, Shadow can't and I'm very glad that she can't!"

"That's fair. Just be warned that I'm not very good with people crying on my shoulder, I usually do that on Kick-Ass!"

"You! I can't believe Hit Girl has those kinds of emotions!"

"Believe me... She does! Until I met Kick-Ass, I had never cried in front of anyone, not even Daddy. Three weeks ago, Kick-Ass held me while I cried over my Dad's death and it's been five years. I'd love to tell you that it gets easier, but I won't lie to you, Jackal, not about something like that."

"Thanks for trusting me; I won't tell anybody," Jackal said.

"I know. It's trusting that makes us a team... Trust Shadow! I wouldn't recommend starting off on a relationship without letting her know all about you, including your, er, problems! Kick-Ass and I have no secrets, I know all about him and he knows nearly everything about me; the only things he doesn't know about, are the things he doesn't want to know about! In fact Kick-Ass knows far too much about me and a lot of what he knows is really embarrassing; Kick-Ass met me at a very difficult time in my life!"

"Such as?" Jackal asked.

"Never you mind! Lets just say that the twelve year-old Hit Girl tended to be a little hot headed and one hell of a bitch!" I explained.

This touchy-feely stuff was not easy and it was starting to get a little too close to home!

South East Chicago

I was enjoying being out with Mindy, or rather Hit Girl.

It felt good having been able to talk to Mindy earlier today and I'm really glad I went over to the house this morning. I really liked Mindy and trusted her one hundred percent. Currently, Hit Girl was down an alley; she had told me to wait here. There was something making a racket down the alley and she wanted to investigate. After a few minutes, Hit Girl reappeared and she was struggling with something. That something, was trying to bite Hit Girl's gauntlet, without much success, of course.

"Look, brat, you're only gonna break your goddamn teeth!" Hit Girl growled.

The 'brat' turned out to be a small girl!

"Let me go, bitch!"

"Aren't foul-mouthed little brats supposed to be in bed at this time of night?" Hit Girl growled and dropped the girl onto the sidewalk.

"You're not!" The girl retorted brazenly.

I could have sworn Hit Girl almost grinned at that!

"Come on, help me out here! I'm just thinking of your safety and your Mom will be worried!" Hit Girl tried.

"What's your name?" I asked and the girl turned to see me, for the first time.

"Who the fuck are you supposed to be?" The girl blurted out, looking a little scared.

"I'm Jackal! Who are you?" I asked again.

"Well my name ain't 'brat', HG!" The girl said as she glared at Hit Girl.

Hit Girl put her face in her hands and shook her head in mock despair.

"My name is Megan, okay!"

"Can we take you home?" I asked.

"I'm not a lost puppy 'Jack'!"

I had an idea, so I tried again.

"It's dark and it's cold, I can't leave you out here on your own. I'm a vigilante and we can't do that, it's against the code," I explained.

Megan cocked her head and looked up at me; I could almost see the cogs whirring in her head. Hit Girl also looked at me strangely, but I could see an approving smirk start to appear.

"Okay, just this once!" Megan acceded.

..._...

We escorted Megan across half a mile of the City and back to her apartment block. All the way, Megan was asking Hit Girl questions, very few of which Hit Girl actually answered, often due to the fact that Megan rarely left a gap for a reply in between the questions!

"How old were you, when you started as a vigilante?"

"Why are you a vigilante?"

"Why do you wear purple?"

"How many people have you killed?"

"Is that suit bullet proof?"

"Can I see your swords?"

Finally, just as we got her home, Megan asked the question that I had expected:

"How do I become a vigilante?"

This time Megan actually paused for a reply and I looked at Hit Girl, who seemed genuinely at a loss!

"Firstly, you wait until you're at least eighteen, then you give it a lot more thought!" Hit Girl finally replied, after a long pause.

"That's bull..."

"That's all you're getting!" I interrupted strongly.

Reluctantly Megan agreed.

"Night guys!" Megan called, as she went into the building.

..._...

"How did you manage that?" Hit Girl asked. "Getting her to go home, I mean."

"You're really asking me that question?" I asked, incredulously.

"Yeah!"

"Jeez, I always thought you were intelligent! She wants to be a vigilante, she wants to be you! Was it that hard to work out? You have a fan Hit Girl, whether you like it or not!" I explained.

"You're starting to sound like Kick-Ass!" Hit Girl growled. "And not in a good way, either!"

Safehouse A

"You guys have fun?" Dave asked.

"It was a good evening and Mindy got herself bitten!" I laughed.

"Oh!" Dave asked, with a worried expression and looked at Mindy, as she appeared from under her mask.

"That little bitch!" Mindy growled.

Dave suddenly grinned.

"You mean Mini-Mindy!" Dave said and laughed.

"Yeah! At one stage it was difficult telling who was who!" I teased.

"You fucking little..." Mindy started.

"Was Mindy like that, when you first met her?" I asked Dave, who ignored Mindy's warning glares.

"Kinda. Mindy was eleven when I first met her. Fucking show off, too! Almost got herself knifed in the back, when she got carried away showing me how good she thought she was!"

"Thought she was!" Mindy exclaimed angrily.

"I know all the right buttons to push!" Dave explained happily. "Unfortunately I haven't found the 'mute' or 'off' buttons yet!"

"Oh, two people are gonna die tonight; it's gonna be a fucking blood-bath!" Mindy growled ominously.

"I do know where the 'de-fuse' button is, though!" Dave said and promptly kissed Mindy, full on the lips for almost a minute.

I think I had blushed almost as much as Mindy, by the time Dave let her go! Mindy was still glaring and breathing heavily, but I could tell that she was no longer dangerous!

"Asshole!" Mindy groaned and she obviously wanted more.

"Well, I won't be pressing that button on Mindy, but I might try it out on Chloe!" I said.

"I'm very pleased to hear it, or I might have to break your legs!" Dave laughed.

I wasn't sure if he was joking, though!

Chapter 96*: Premonition

"You probably don't think I'm a very nice guy!" Ralph D'Amico growled. "Do ya!"

"Buddy, I think you're slime!" I said, in reply, from the floor where I was pinned.

D'Amico's cronies laughed.

"See I got this problem, vigilantes don't like me; so I don't like vigilantes!"

D'Amico tracked the pump-action shotgun across my body and blew off my right hand! I felt nothing, I was instantly in shock, then the pain hit full force and I couldn't breathe.

"Well give the girl a hand!" D'Amico laughed and walked off. "She's all yours!"

I managed to get back to my feet and started to hobble away, cradling my arm. The pain was beyond unbearable.

"Hey turn around!" I heard a voice say behind me.

I slowly turned to see four men.

One fired his shotgun, removing my right arm. I screamed and screamed. The other men started shooting, which overloaded my body armour and started cutting into my flesh.

"Does it hurt? Does it hurt?"

I sank to my knees, the pain was indescribable, then D'Amico came into my vision and raised a pistol, then I saw a flash...

The following weekend Saturday, West Ridge

I woke up with a violent start.

I was quite literally dripping sweat.

Fuck!

That dream was surreal and so realistic, but I knew that it wasn't; it was a scene from RoboCop!

I knew watching R-rated movies when I was young, would come back to haunt me!

Why am I having nightmares about D'Amico killing me? The last time I had them was the week before he escaped from prison. Was I getting premonitions? If so, then did that last dream mean that I am gonna be seeing that bastard again soon?

I sat up and Dave reached over.

"Sweaty Hit Girl, nice!"

"Not now Dave, go back to sleep!"

I hated nightmares and was very glad to have Dave with me, when I had them, but this wasn't really a nightmare, it was just plain weird!

That evening Southern Chicago

Kick-Ass and I were on patrol. Just the two of us; Josh was grounded for the weekend, as he had got behind on his homework. Chloe, well, she said that she had something else on.

Coming down the street I noticed somebody sitting on the ground, at the side of the building. As I got closer I was able to identify who it was.

"Shit! It's Megan!" I called. "I think she's hurt!"

I knelt down beside Megan. She was crying and had an enormous, very fresh, bruise on her left cheek. She looked up at me and tried to smile.

"What happened to you?" I growled.

"Some asshole upstairs! This place sucks, big time; it's full of druggies and other losers. I wish we could move, but my Mom works every hour she can and doesn't make much, so..."

"Come on! Show me where you live," I said and pulled Megan back to her feet, then turned to Kick-Ass. "You keep out of sight!"

"Yes, ma'am!"

I led the way and showed Hit Girl the way back to the apartment block, where my Mom and me lived.

As I came around the corner of the building that idiot was still there; the one who had hit me earlier on this evening.

"What the fuck did I say, you little shit? When I'm around, you're not! Want another fucking bruise, to match the first?"

"Fuck you, asshole!" I yelled back and felt the anger build inside of me.

"You little..."

"Why don't you pick on someone your own size, cunt!" Hit Girl snarled malevolently, as she came around the corner and stood behind me and placed a reassuring hand on my shoulder. I just smiled smugly at the man.

"Hey! I want no trouble!"

"You beat up ten year-old girls! You've fuckin' got trouble, asshole!" Hit Girl growled, then ran forwards and let fly with her fists and floored the man. I followed up with a kick to his ribs. The other men ran off.

Hit Girl looked down at the man. "You ever hurt another living soul...", She growled.

"Never! I'm sorry, I really am!"

We ignored him and headed inside and climbed up two floors.

"Elevator's busted as usual," I explained, as we stopped outside a badly gouged and dented door. "Here we are!"

..._...

I used my key and opened the door, then pulled Hit Girl through into the kitchen.

"This is my Mom!" I said and waved vaguely. "Mom, this is Hit Girl!"

"Er... Hi... I'm Paige Wilson!" A rather startled, Mrs Wilson said. "Megan said she'd met you, but I wasn't inclined to believe her!"

"Your daughter got hit, rather hard this evening, so I took care of the idiot for her," Hit Girl explained.

"Thank you!"

Hit Girl looked around the apartment uneasily and then she knelt down in front of me.

"Take this!" Hit Girl said and pushed a card into my hand.

"Go to the address, on the back of the card; give the man there the card, he will sort you out."

I looked down at the card. It was purple (not a surprise there) with two, large, embossed letters: 'HG'. I saw the swish of a cape, out of the corner of my eye and when I looked up, Hit Girl was gone. I passed the card to my Mom, who took it and stared at it.

"We can trust them Mom and we will!" I insisted.

..._...

An hour later we climbed out of a cab at the address Hit Girl had provided; it was a large apartment building. A tall man was standing outside the main door; he smiled at me. I went up to him and felt more than a little apprehensive; I offered him the card.

"Come with me!" The man said. "I'm Marty!"

We followed Marty to the second floor, where he opened the door to apartment '202' and then passed the keys to my Mom.

"All yours! Any problems, give me a call on this," Marty said with a huge dorky grin and passed over a cell phone. "You will be one hundred percent safe here. The person who gave you that card protects this building, personally!"

I looked around quickly, it was a large two bedroom apartment and very clean! Nothing like the rat hole we used to live in and the elevator worked!

"We could never afford this!" Mom said to Marty.

"Pay what you can, don't pay what you can't! Take care Mrs Wilson, you too Megan!" Marty said, as he left.

My Mom sat down and cried, so I gave her a big hug.

"We're gonna be okay now, Mommy!"

"You know, you're never gonna make much of a profit out of these apartments!"

"I know, Marty, but that's what Hit Girl does, she helps people. I can't help everybody, but I'm gonna damn well do what I can!"

"Not just 'cause she's a 'Mini-Mindy'?"

"You've been talking to Dave, haven't you!"

Chapter 97*: Dreaming

The following day

Sunday

West Ridge

The street was full of the enemy.

Dave was beyond them and needed my help.

I drew both of my swords and ran forwards. The first attacker came at me with a wooden baseball bat, which I simply severed with one blade, then removed his head with the other. Brightly coloured blood flew into the air, as I pushed past the falling corpse.

The next attacker had a pistol and he managed to fire two rounds, before I severed the man's wrist. The man screamed just long enough for me to remove his head and I watched it bounce on the black top, beside his severed hand and the pistol. Damn this was a turn on!

I surged forwards and weaved my twin blades to the left and to the right. Two more men fell and screamed, while their intestines emptied onto the ground, closely followed by their almost dead corpses. I felt the warm blood, as it ran down my face and enjoyed the feeling immensely; it helped spur me on, as I cut through the men before me. Strange really that it is always men that I face, never women!

I felt myself knocked to the ground by several bodies that had driven into me. I pushed behind me with my elbows, which helped me push up and through the men above, at least enough to drive my elbows into some faces and make a larger gap so that I could bring me swords back into play. I heard Dave shouting, this galvanized me and the adrenalin surged to every muscle in my body. I pushed forwards, stowed my blades and pulled my Glock pistols out of their holsters.

I started shooting. Each pistol held fifteen rounds and I made good use of these with head-shot after head-shot. Blood and brains flew all around me, as the bodies fell to the black top. I felt bullets hitting my armour, but shrugged them off and pushed ever forwards. Within a minute, my pistols were locked back on empty magazines, which I dumped and swiftly inserted fresh ones.

More bodies fell, below the clouds of blood and brain matter, as 9-millimetre bullets impacted their heads. Finally the end was in sight and so was Dave.

Ahead of me were four large men and all of them were wearing obvious body armour, including full face masks. This would be a challenge! I holstered my pistols and pulled my old and faithful bō-staff from my back. Now, the one question left was how good their armour was and whether it was inferior to mine. It was obvious that the men were intending to rely on pure brawn and strength to defeat me. Each man must have weighed the same as at least four or five of me!

Two of the men started to move towards me. I back-flipped to stay ahead of them before I jumped up and onto the shoulder of one man. I drove the blade at one end of the bō-staff into the man's neck. It seemed that the back of the neck was not as heavily armoured as the rest of him! The man fell with a crash and didn't move. As the man fell I jumped clear and pulled out my blade before landing softly on the ground behind another man, who moved remarkably fast for his bulk!

My only chance, now, was to keep moving and to stay out of the men's hands. If they got a good hold of me, they would break my bones in seconds! I was getting seriously tired by this point and drew on everything that I had available. I swung the bō-staff and attempted to sever a leg, but the armoured grieve was made of solid stuff; I gouged it deeply and caused the man to stumble. I separated both sections of the bō-staff and drove them both directly upwards into the man's groin, which appeared not to be as well protected as that area probably should have been!

The man faltered and then started to scream. Blood gushed out from between his legs. Damn! Talk about a heavy period! I must have pierced something important internally, as the man started to bring up blood through his mouth and nose. The man tried to continue screaming, but was downing in his own blood. He collapsed and I left him to bleed out.

Two to go!

The remaining pair stood back and kept their distance while still circling me. I was dripping blood from all my conquests so far; I felt good, I really did. I just needed to get past these enormous oafs. It worked the first time, let's try it again. I rejoined my blades and got a good grip on the bō-staff. Then I sprang forward.

I landed on the shoulder of the first man, digging my blade in deep then sprang off, somersaulting through the air and driving the opposite end of the bō-staff into the last man, at the neck. I continued my move and landed on the ground just a few feet from Dave and his two captors. I didn't pause for even a second and after separating my blades again; I drove one blade into each of the two women holding Dave captive.

Both women sank to their knees in growing pools of blood. I grabbed a throwing knife and severed Dave's bindings then embraced him tightly. Dave clamped his lips over mine and we kissed, the deepest kiss that I had ever felt.

I had my Dave.

My life was now complete.

I awoke with a start.

"Damn! That's an enormous smile!" Dave said. "Hot, too!"

"Weird!" I exclaimed, sitting up.

"Had an interesting dream?"

"Yeah."

"Violence?"

"Lots!"

"Blood?"

"Gallons of it!"

"Outnumbered?"

"Massively!"

"You succeeded against all the odds?"

"Of course!"

"Best dream ever?"

"Hell yeah!"

"You're really strange, Hit Girl... But that's why I love you!"

That afternoon

Chloe, Josh, Dave and I went swimming.

We all enjoyed swimming and it was a good way to exercise. I just wished that I could do it more often! Chloe and I had both gone for one-piece costumes, as neither of us really wanted to show off our bodies in public! Mine was purple and Chloe's was navy blue. Dave and Josh both wore swim shorts. Chloe posed for Josh.

"You like what you see?" She teased.

"Chloe, behave!" Josh retorted and looked uncomfortable.

I smirked and tried Dave.

"You like what you see?" I asked.

"Always!" Dave replied and then the cunt pushed me in!

When I surfaced, Dave was in front of me and he always looked so hot when he has water running off of him! Josh was busy chasing Chloe across the pool; Chloe was giggling her head off! I suddenly found my self rising through the water and my feet had left the bottom of the pool. I flew through the air and screamed, then I hit the water. I surfaced again and swept my hair out of my eyes and spat out some water while I grabbed a deep breath. I saw Dave as he advanced towards me, I dove forward and under the water kicking hard towards Dave's legs and managed to sweep his legs out from under him, but the cunt was ready for me and grabbed me around my waist and lifted me out of the water and kissed me on the lips.

"Is there a girl under all that hair?" Dave asked.

"Asshole!" I growled and pulled my hair back into it's pony tail.

"You do look good in that swimsuit, but you look a lot better out of it!" Dave said smoothly and I felt my face warming up!

"Not here!" I hissed.

"Why not! The water should keep you cool!" Dave said in reply.

I heard the unmistakable sound of a hand slapping a face and turned to see Josh with his hand on his left cheek and a very angry looking Chloe!

"Don't touch, means don't touch!" Chloe said loudly.

"You really are hot when you're mad!" Josh responded.

"You are so damned annoying!" Chloe almost screamed.

"It's why you love me!"

"Dammit!" Chloe exclaimed. "Yes it is!"

I swam over underwater and came up under Chloe and threw her upwards. I heard her scream and she crashed back down into the water.

I surfaced and took a few seconds to get my breath back and saw Mindy; she was giggling fit to burst!

Bitch!

Josh was smirking and I could see my hand print on his cheek and felt a little bad about it, but only a little!

"That was not nice!" I growled.

"Neither's that!" Mindy said and I felt strong hands on my waist and I was thrown several feet back into the water. I screamed again.

I surfaced and caught my breath, then smirked at Mindy.

"Dave, your hands feel awesome; very strong and manly!" I said.

I watched both of them as first Mindy's mouth, then Josh's mouth dropped open, in shock. I heard Dave laugh.

"Brazen hussy!" Mindy growled, then she laughed.

"So my hands aren't manly then?" Josh asked, indignantly.

"Your hands are fine Josh, they're just not as big as Dave's; you still have some growing to do!" Chloe said tactfully.

"Well, I'll show you what my hands can do!" Josh said and dived under the water and came up behind Chloe, who seemed to melt into Josh's arms, as he wrapped them around her and his hands vanished under the surface of the water.

That evening

The evening's patrol had been boring, to say the least.

It was just me and Hawk, tonight. Hit Girl was at Safehouse A, following our progress. Kick-Ass had the night off and was at home. We had parked Beast and had been patrolling the area on foot. I enjoyed being alone with Hawk and she enjoyed my company, too! We decided to call it a night just after midnight and headed back towards Beast. We had just turned the final corner, when I came to a rapid halt and pulled Hawk back into cover.

"You have got to be kidding me!" I said to Hawk.

"What is it?" Hawk asked.

"Look at Beast!"

Hawk looked and then she laughed.

"That guy has to be the thickest criminal in Chicago!" Hawk commented.

"You guys having fun?" Hit Girl asked over the comms.

"You're not gonna believe this, Hit Girl!" I said.

"We're watching Chicago's top criminal mastermind trying to break into Beast!"

I heard Hit Girl start to laugh and she wasn't stopping!

"Er, Hit Girl, when you recover could you call Murphy and Fellowes and get them over here?" I called.

..._...

"Hey! Can we help? I think you might have the wrong vehicle!" I suggested, walking towards Beast.

The man span around and he had a slim jim in one hand and a large knife in the other.

"Mine's bigger!" Hawk said, brandishing her bō-staff.

"You do know that's our SUV that you've picked?" I asked.

The man looked a little dejected as he dropped the items that he had been holding.

"Since when could you slim jim an armoured Range Rover?" Hawk asked the hapless car thief, who just shrugged.

A couple of minutes later blue flashing lights heralded the arrival of Murphy and Fellowes. They stopped and got out.

"What have you got for us?" Fellowes asked. "We understand it's something good!"

"Yeah, Hit Girl couldn't stop laughing when she called us!" Murphy added.

"We seem to have caught Chicago's number one car thief!" I said.

"He was trying to steal Beast!" Hawk added.

Fellowes and Murphy both started at the dejected car thief.

"Are you stupid?" Murphy asked, with a laugh.

Fellowes grabbed the man and cuffed his hands behind his back. The man was then placed in the back of the CPD SUV.

"Thanks guys, you've made our night!" Murphy said with a chuckle. "This guy will be the source of many jokes once we get back!"

Once Murphy and Fellowes had left with the rather unfortunate car thief, Hawk and I headed back to Safehouse A.

Chapter 98*: Halloween

Author's Note: Just as a reminder: 'South Cottage Grove' is the larger of the two apartment blocks that Mindy owns. This is also the location for Safehouse B and Safehouse C.

Three days later
Wednesday

I followed on from Josh's idea and went to look at some potential sites for a dojang.

The perfect place became available just off of the Dan Ryan Expressway, in the Lower West Side of Chicago. It was previously used for martial arts training and had both the space and height required. I might even consider turning part of it into a safehouse due to its perfect position, so near to the centre of the City!

I made an offer and we now have wait to see what happens. The building would come with quite a bit of existing equipment, which would be useful. Next I would need to find some staff - people who knew how to run a public facing business!

Two days later
Early evening
Friday

It was that one night of the year when all the weird costumes came out!

It would also mean that there could be trouble; there usually was. The whole team were on alert and out on patrol. Hawk and Battle Guy were staked out in Lucille, with Eisenhower, near to Marty's apartment, so that they could keep an eye on the neighbourhood. Hit Girl, Kick-Ass, Shadow and Jackal, were to be a roving patrol. Hal was manning the Control Room at Safehouse A, along with Medic and would be in contact with Fellowes and Murphy.

We were all going to go out on two wheels this evening, which would be great fun. I warned Jackal and Shadow that there would be lots of kids all over the streets and they would be more interested in candy than traffic and it would look kinda bad if we squished any kids!

The first stop of the evening would be to a little friend.

South Cottage Grove

It really sucked when you were young and you had to go out trick-or-treating alone!

Don't get me wrong, there were a lot of other kids out, but most of them were bigger than me and it was a little bit scary as I didn't know anybody yet; having only just moved into the area!

Just then, I heard a loud noise and me and all the other kids turned to see what the noise was. Four motorcycles came up the street and one stopped beside me. The motorcycle was purple and was ridden by the most vicious vigilante out there, except she removed her helmet and smiled down at me.

"Hi Megan! How you doing?" Hit Girl asked.

I was a little overwhelmed at seeing Hit Girl again and in public.

"I'm fine, thanks, er, HG!"

"Hi champ!" A weird voice called.

I turned to see Jackal.

"Hi Jack!" I called back.

"This is Shadow and Kick-Ass!" Hit Girl growled.

"Hello!" I replied and the two vigilantes nodded back. Kick-Ass was huge and so was his motorcycle, which just made him more than a little intimidating! Shadow looked very cool, too!

Then Hit Girl grabbed me, lifted me up and sat me on the purple motorcycle, in front of her and we rode forwards a few feet. That was totally awesome! Other kids were now starting to crowd around the four vigilantes.

Kick-Ass then reached into one of his rear carriers and started handing out candy to all the kids. Two passing Chicago PD cops just stood and watched, but did not interfere. Shadow spoke to Kick-Ass and then climbed off her motorcycle, leaned it onto its stand and walked over to the two Officers, who started to look a little nervous.

"Candy, guys?" Shadow growled and held out her hand; both Officers accepted! I couldn't believe that Shadow had the nerve to offer candy to two cops!

After another few minutes, Hit Girl placed me back on the sidewalk, before she smiled down at me and then replaced her helmet before moving off down the street, followed by the other vigilantes.

Several of the kids came over and started asking me questions about Hit Girl and what my name was. I was suddenly very popular and everybody wanted to be my friend!

I enjoyed that!

A simple little thing, for a fan!

"Very nicely executed Hit Girl!" Kick-Ass said, approvingly.

"Yeah! Not so sure about Little Miss Brazen! Giving candy to cops, I ask you!" Jackal commented.

"Quit moaning; I was just having a little fun!" Shadow retorted.

"How you guys doing, in Lucille?" I asked.

There was quite a significant pause, before a response was received.

"We're fine!" Battle Guy replied and sounded a little out of breath.

"Testing the suspension are you?" Kick-Ass asked.

"Keep your mind out of the gutter, Kick-Ass!" Hawk replied.

Maybe we need to get Eisenhower a blindfold!" Quipped Medic.

"Poor dog; that's cruel and unusual punishment!" Hal added.

We all had a good laugh at Battle Guy and Hawk's expense, but it was now time for some cop baiting!

"Battle Guy, you have a location for our favourite cops?" I asked.

"Sending it to you now!" Battle Guy replied.

"What the fuck is that?" I exclaimed, as a route map appeared in my visor.

"Sorry, forgot to say; I've upgraded your helmets with a heads-up-display. We can now display anything you like, just like on the NVGs... How about these Kick-Ass!"

"Cool... But not the right time for topless women, Battle Guy!" Kick-Ass responded with a laugh.

"Hey!" I exclaimed. "No porn guys!"

"What about me?" Jackal asked.

"Sorry, you're under age!" Battle Guy replied.

"I watch porn on my laptop, all the time!"

"Ewww! I'm never touching that laptop again!" Shadow commented. "Why do you need porn? You have me!"

"This conversation is starting to wander a little off topic, Shadow!" Medic advised.

"I think we need improved content filters on Jackal's laptop!" I commented. "Let's focus, people!"

..._...

I followed the route, provided by Battle Guy and we pulled up on both sides of a Chicago PD SUV.

"Trick or treat!" I growled.

"Evening Hit Girl!" Murphy said.

"Having fun?" Fellowes asked.

"We always do!" I replied.

"Candy?" Shadow offered, on the other side of the SUV.

"Have you no shame?" Jackal growled.

"That is one creepy voice!" Murphy commented.

Fellowes helped himself to candy and passed some to Murphy.

"That's four cops you've corrupted this evening, Shadow!" I said.

"What's wrong with supporting the CPD?" Shadow asked, indignantly.

"Maybe she likes men in uniform!" Kick-Ass growled.

"I need to listen in to you guys more often; I'm learning a lot about Shadow, this evening!" Medic said.

"Watch out, Medic! You might hear something that you may not like!" Shadow quipped.

"Any excitement this evening?" I asked Murphy, getting back to the patrol.

"Nothing out of the ordinary. Couple of idiots getting drunk and harassing kids and a couple of idiots trying to steal candy," Murphy replied.

"We'll leave you guys to your candy!" I said and started my Ducati. The others followed suit.

"Thanks for the Candy, Shadow!" Fellowes called over the roar of the motorcycles.

We proceeded on our patrol and headed towards the more residential parts of town, where the kids would be trick-or-treating and assholes would try to steal their candy!

Depressingly we found just those kind of assholes.

After coming around a corner and onto a residential street, we found a group of dejected looking kids sitting on the kerb.

"What's up?" I growled as I pulled up alongside the kids.

"Wow! It's Hit Girl and Kick-Ass!" One kid exclaimed.

"Three guys, they took our candy... Everything!" Another kid explained.

"There, down the end of the street..." Another kid said, pointing down the street.

I could see three people walking away carrying sacks of candy.

"Leave this to me!" Kick-Ass said and accelerated down the street.

I watched as Kick-Ass shot down the street before braking and turning in front of the three young men.

I could only hear Kick-Ass' side of the conversation, but I could see his movements.

"Stop there!" Kick-Ass ordered.

I could see the young men stop and start to back away. I revved my engine and the men turned to look in my direction, then stopped and handed over their stolen haul to Kick-Ass.

"Time to rethink your lives!" Kick-Ass suggested, then he performed a U-turn and headed back down towards us. The three men had run off.

..._...

Kick-Ass stopped and handed back the candy to the kids, who were overjoyed. Kick-Ass also added some of his own candy to the kids' haul.

"You guys are awesome!" The kids all agreed.

Safehouse A

We arrived back at the safehouse having enjoyed a good night out.

We all got to ride our motorcycles and have a lot of fun, as well as protecting Chicago! I was also very pleased that I had been able to make Megan's evening. On the other hand I was a little concerned with Chloe's brazen behaviour, but then that's just how she was!

I went to bed happy, that night.

Chapter 99*: Seventeen

Author's Note: *This chapter is the lead up to the big Chapter 100! I thought it would be good to mark the hundredth chapter with something special, just for Forsaken!

Two days later
Sunday night

"What the hell has gotten into you?"

"I'm excited!"

"Excited! I've seen more relaxed nuclear explosions!"

"You know what tomorrow is?" Mindy asked, then sounded worried. "You do, don't you?"

I knew full well what tomorrow was!

"Why... Should I?" I teased.

"Stop being a fucking asshole!" Mindy growled, angrily. "You know how important tomorrow is to me!"

More important than you would ever believe, I thought to myself!

"Try to control your energy and go to sleep, Hit Girl!"

"I can't! I'm too damned excited!" Mindy whined.

Who needs sleep!

The following morning
Monday

It had finally arrived!

My seventeenth birthday and it had taken too fucking long getting here, too!

"Get up, green asshole!" I yelled, shaking Dave back to consciousness.

"Here we go again!" Dave groaned and buried his face into his pillow.

I laughed; I vividly remembered my sixteenth birthday and waking Dave up violently then, too! I also vividly remembered my sixteenth birthday, for many other reasons; maybe this birthday would be just as memorable too!

I followed Dave out of the bedroom, where he pounded on Marcus' door.

"What!" Came a tired yell.

"Marcus, the tornado's awake!" I replied. "If I'm up, then you can damn well get up too!"

"Damn teenagers!" Marcus shouted, making Mindy blush.

Marcus had arrived last night, which was a wonderful surprise; I was really pleased that he could be here for my birthday!

..._...

A grumpy Marcus finally appeared downstairs.

"You are a major pain in the ass, Hit Girl!" Marcus moaned.

"Oh get a grip, old man!" I retorted and grinned at him.

"You think we should tell her?" Dave asked Marcus.

"Tell me what?"

"Nah, far too early!" Marcus replied.

"Tell me now!" I growled and glared at them both.

"Can I get a coffee, please, Dave."

The fucking assholes were doing this on purpose!

"Blood will start to flow if I am ignored!" I growled.

Marcus just fucking grinned at me! I glared at them both menacingly, but I knew that these were the only two people in the entire world that I didn't have a hold over. Sophia appeared to see what all the noise was and sat down to watch.

"Dining room!" Dave finally admitted and I ran out of the kitchen and almost skidded on the wooden floor; I could hear those two assholes as they fucking laughed at me!

..._...

Two long boxes were on the table, wrapped in purple paper.

I looked behind me and saw Dave and Marcus, as they watched in anticipation.

I attacked the wrapping on the first box, which did not take long. Inside the paper was a long, glossy, black box. I had a good idea what was in both boxes and just the thought of what might be in the box, started to make my hands shake. I gently eased the lid open and started to squeal; I couldn't help it!

Inside the box was a long, thin, purple bag, made of silk. Very carefully, I opened the top of the bag and eased out the contents. My eyes went wide and I was completely stumped.

I pulled the Wakizashi from the bag and held it out in front of me with my right hand. I moved the Wakizashi very slowly, as I checked out every inch and then removed the sword from the Saya and watched the lights reflect off the highly polished blade. The sharp, mono steel, blade was made from high carbon (T10) steel, with a 1.76 Shaku, Long Hi and 0.8-centimetre Sori. The blade was finished with a straight Hamon and had been stone polished by hand. The point was a long O-Kissaski. The Habaki and Seppa were Red Copper. The blade was attached to a 24-centimetre Tsuka which was wrapped in a purple cotton Tsuka-ito with black ray-skin. The Tanto was finished off with black Fuchi, Kashira and Tsuba. The blade was housed in a matte black Saya, with purple highlights. The Koikuchi and Kirigata were wood and the Sageo was purple silk.

I carefully placed the sword and saya onto the table and attacked the second package. It was an identical Wakizashi, which I examined before removing the blade from the saya.

I gently weaved both of the swords through the air, felt their balance and watched the light glint off the highly polished blades.

They were of the same design as my Katana and Tanto blades, but were shorter than the Katana, but longer than Kick-Ass' Ko-Wakizashi. I gently inserted both blades back into their saya and placed the swords into their silk bags and back into their boxes.

I turned to Dave and Marcus and felt tears forming in my eyes. Those assholes knew full well the effect that blades, like these, had on me. But that's exactly why they gave them to me; the two people that I loved the most in the entire world, knew me and understood me!

"After the fights with the Russians, I noticed that you needed something in between the Katana and the Tanto. I knew you wouldn't be happy with just one, either, so Marcus and I chipped in together," Dave explained.

"Thanks," Was all I could think of to say, before I hugged them both, starting with Dave.

"I know how much you love those damn things!" Marcus said dryly and hugged me tightly.

The rest of the day was spent shopping, as apparently Dave wanted me to be dressed right for going to dinner, tonight!

Dave assured me that it would be formal, but nothing special; but I knew that he liked it when I got all dressed up, so I did my best to get something 'hot', including 'hot' underwear 'cause I hoped for a fun and hopefully memorable night tonight... After dinner!

I also received a phone call from Josh, Chloe and Abby, around lunchtime, when they all sang Happy Birthday to me! Dave thought that it was uproariously funny, but it was nice all the same!

Chapter 100: Diamond

Author's Note: Well this is it! Chapter 100! I hope you all like it and have as much fun reading it, as I did writing what has become my biggest chapter, ever! Also there is smut, an awful lot of smut, so be warned!

That evening
Monday
West Ridge

Mindy had never looked so beautiful and appealing.

She was wearing a long, ankle length, purple dress. There was a slit up the left side, which ran from the bottom, all the way to almost the top of her, well formed, thigh. Mindy had pulled out all the stops and she was actually wearing heels, which I knew that she detested! Only a couple of inches, but still heels, which were open and mauve in colour. Her soft, flowing hair was down and draped across her shoulders, in heaps of very desirable curls.

Damn! My being turned on by her, at that very moment, was one hell of an understatement!

If Mindy only knew what I had in store for her... If she did, she would probably shoot me and run!

I drove and we headed directly into the centre of Chicago. I pulled the SUV up, outside a hotel, a very nice four-star hotel; The Ritz-Carlton.

"What the hell are we doing here?" Mindy asked, a little confused.

"Dinner!" I replied simply.

"You're up to something!" Mindy growled, dangerously.

"Me?" I replied with an innocent smile and climbed out.

The valet opened Mindy's door and helped her out; which, of course, Mindy was not used to. I just sincerely hoped that she would behave and keep a civil tongue in her head! Surprisingly she did; maybe she was enjoying all the attention that she seemed to be getting from every male in sight!

..._...

We were shown to our table, in a fairly private corner of the dining room and we sat down.

Mindy looked so damn captivating, it was unreal and she also seemed so normal!

We enjoyed an enormous meal. Mindy seemed to be able to eat almost anything; her father had introduced her to many different foods, from around the world. We both put away a lot of rich food and Mindy swore that she would need to run about sixty miles, just to get rid of the extra weight she'd gain! We declined alcohol and stuck with soft drinks only.

I didn't know why doing this felt so different, but Mindy's smile was just so damned enchanting and she kept blushing, which made her cheeks match her dress! And yes, she was getting an awful lot of attention from around the dining room; I could see a lot of both admiring and jealous looks! The reason behind the blushing was not just my conversation, but also the fact that Mindy knew full well that she was attracting a lot of approving looks and stares! Considering Mindy was now about as far out of her element as she could get, she was doing very well!

If the other diners only knew what this girl's career was!

We enjoyed some good conversation, which was of course limited, due to our being out in a very public place! However, it was good to be able to talk about normal-ish things; even if we did spend about twenty minutes talking about motorcycles!

..._...

I had to admit that I was doing my best to drag out the meal; I was nervous and I hoped that Mindy hadn't noticed. Finally, just as our coffee arrived, I took a deep breath and stood up.

Damn! Facing down Frank D'Amico, with a bazooka, had been way easier than this!

Mindy gave me a strange look and then scowled! I momentarily re-considered my actions, but only for a few milliseconds; I was committed and I had been rehearsing this for weeks, but it had felt like months.

"Mindy," I said, going down on one knee.

"What the hell are you doing Dave?" Mindy exclaimed, putting both hands up to her mouth in shock and I could also see that her hands were trembling.

I was focused on Mindy, but I still noticed that some the other diners had now started to look in our direction and most of the nearby conversation had ceased completely.

I pulled out a small, purple, ring box and flipped it open. The box contained a single, diamond solitaire ring, in Mindy's size - not easy to get, considering Mindy never wears rings! The band was 18-carat pure white gold, with a brilliant cut, three-quarter carat, clear diamond.

"You're smart, you're beautiful, you're funny and you're the strongest person I've ever met, you can do anything! You are the most important person in my life and have been for the past few years. For many, many reasons, I owe my life to you and I want to ensure that I can spend the rest of my life with you," I said. "I lost you once; I will never lose you again!"

Mindy was now physically shaking and looked to be in shock; I could also see tears in her eyes. She bit her lip, as she does when she is worried or unsure about something.

I grasped Mindy's left hand firmly, to stop it shaking and placed the ring onto her ring-finger. Thankfully, it was a perfect fit!

"Mindy Macready, will you marry me?" I finally asked, staring up into her enchanting and scintillating green eyes.

Our end of the dining room was now completely silent and everybody looked directly at us.

Mindy stared down at her left hand, which was still shaking. Tears were running down her cheeks and she was still biting her lip. Now, this was rare, very rare. Hit Girl was speechless and had absolutely no idea what to do next! Usually, this sort of situation would mean Mindy defaulting to some form of extreme violence!

This was the longest pause of my life; I knew it was only a second, but it felt like hours.

"Hell, yes!" Mindy finally replied and I stood back up.

Mindy jumped into my arms and kissed me very, very deeply and for what seemed like an age, as the dining room erupted into instantaneous applause!

Mindy's face was very red by the time we had separated and she looked around sheepishly before burying her face into my chest.

A couple of people shouted their congratulations.

There were also one or two shouts to me, along the lines of: 'You lucky son of a bitch!' and other similar quotes.

We both sat back down and ignored everybody but ourselves.

After finishing off our coffee, rather quickly I might add, I led Mindy out of the dining room, but away from the exit. Instead, we headed for the bank of elevators.

"Now where are you taking me?" Mindy asked quietly. I had a distinct feeling that Mindy was starting to get a little bit overwhelmed, which with Mindy could backfire spectacularly; again Hit Girl has certain defaults that kick in automatically as defensive measures, when things got out of her control.

"To bed!" I replied cheerfully and we both took the elevator up to the thirtieth floor. Mindy was looking very radiant, but didn't say another word; she actually seemed completely stunned! When the elevator finally stopped and the doors slid open, I had to gently guide Mindy out of the elevator and down a passageway. I found our room, suite would have been a better word and slid in the key-card that the waiter and surreptitiously passed to me earlier that evening. Once

I had closed the door, Mindy looked around the suite and then back at me.

"You've been planning this for a while!" Mindy challenged accusingly.

"I've been planning the act of proposing to you, for over a year!" I replied.

Mindy opened her mouth to reply, but couldn't. She was behaving very strangely; this was not the normal Mindy Macready or even Hit Girl! I picked Mindy up and dumped her onto the enormous bed.

"I love you, future Mrs Lizewski!" I said, giving Mindy a kiss.

"Oh no! Mr Macready!" Mindy replied.

"Hey, Hit Girl, news flash: Kick-Ass wears the pants in this partnership!" I replied, running my hand, gently, up and down the exposed thigh and leg. Mindy shuddered at my touch and closed her eyes, before she answered.

"I don't fucking care, as long as I have you Dave!" Mindy replied and I saw tears start to spill down her cheeks.

"Tonight was so wonderful, Dave. I never expected it and never thought that anybody would want to be with somebody... Somebody like me... For ever!"

"Okay, I'm certifiable, but I still love you and want you to be mine!" I said and pressed 'play' on my iPad.

"You trying to say something, ass?" Mindy asked, after listening to the first thirty seconds or so.

"You trying to deny that this song sounds like you?" I asked.

"I am not a 'wild child'! Not anymore, at least!" Mindy giggled, then she stopped and looked up at me as a thought hit her.

"What will Marcus say?"

"Nothing!" I replied nonchalantly. "He already knows!"

"WHAT!"

"I asked his permission way back in September, you know, when he came up to Chicago, the day after you gained that little bruise from those Russians," I explained.

"It was not a little bruise. Somebody dropped a fucking great beam on my head!"

..._...

I eased off Mindy's shoes, pulled her back to her feet and stood behind her then wrapped my arms around her warm, soft body. The dress itself felt very soft, as I nuzzled Mindy's neck and gently eased off the straps, from over her shoulders and let them fall down each arm. Her shoulders were soft and oh so smooth. Mindy's breathing was hitching as I ran my hands, very gently, over the amazingly soft skin of her chest above her breasts and up her throat, to her jaw and succulent lips. Mindy's eyes were closed and she had started breathing heavily; I took my time unzipping her dress and Mindy shuddered, as the soft, purple material slithered off her slim body, completely unhindered.

Under the dress, Mindy was wearing mauve underwear that revealed a lot more than it covered up! I gently massaged her breasts and ran my hands across her chest and firm, muscular, stomach. Mindy shuddered at every touch and still had her eyes tight shut. Her right hand was massaging the front of my trousers, which suddenly felt rather tight! She moaned, as I eased the straps of her bra, off of her shoulders, one by one and I ran my fingers inside the cups and felt the hard nipples of her breasts and then she groaned, immediately followed by an excited and very happy, squeal! Mindy's lips broke into a broad smile, as she tried to control her breathing.

I ran my hands down, all the way past her stomach and felt her silky, soft panties, which were noticeably damp and Mindy pushed her crotch into my hand with gentle and rhythmic thrusting movements of her thighs. Again, moans and the odd squeal of pure delight, as I ran my fingers between her legs, feeling the outline of what was beneath those silky soft and very sexy items of lingerie. I moved back up to her bra and with one hand, flicked off the catch at the back and let the mauve bra drop, effortlessly, to the floor of the bedroom.

I smoothly picked Mindy up and carried her through to the living room and lay her on the rug, in front of the fireplace that of course had a fake gas flame, but the effect was still perfect! Mindy was uttering moans and I ran my hands over her compact chest, getting a soft squeal every time that my hands passed over her nipples. I ran my hands back down her sides, causing her thighs to buck, as I got close to her crotch.

I ran my fingers down the insides of her panties, to the bottom and then gently eased the panties down her legs and off. I threw the, somewhat damp, lingerie behind me; Mindy was now completely naked and she had never looked so gorgeous. She looked up at me and giggled, then closed her eyes while I continued to run my fingers around that most personal of places, until Mindy's eyes flew open and she glared at me!

"You are a fucking tease!"

"Do you want me?" I asked, with a smirk.

"Yes dammit!"

"Then what are you waiting for, hot stuff!" I teased and knelt down beside Mindy.

She sat up and removed my jacket, then threw it onto the couch.

I ran my lips over his and gently undid his tie, before draping it around my neck. Dave's blue eyes watched every move and by the object that was threatening to burst out of his trousers, he was enjoying himself!

I ran my hands down his chest and undid each button of his shirt; damn, I didn't know if I could bear the wait! Once all the buttons were undone, I eased my hands in to his chest and ran them over the superb abdominal muscles that always turned me on with just a look and had done ever since I had first seen them, over a year ago, at the safehouse, but a feel... I shoved Dave backwards and to the side, so he fell onto his back, kinda gently! He laughed and I removed his shoes and socks, before placing a knee either side of his own and started working on his belt. I whipped it off and it joined the jacket, on the couch.

This was where I had been making for! I undid Dave's trousers and eased them down and off, chucking them towards the hallway. Now only one layer of cotton separated me, from my target! I ran my hands up his muscular thighs and then over the bulge and heard Dave catch his breath, as my hands passed over the pulsing, warm bulge, in his shorts. Then I gently pulled the shorts down and I couldn't resist smiling in glee at the sight. Dave laughed! I pulled the shorts completely off and they went in the same general direction as his trousers.

I grabbed my favourite part of Dave and gently rubbed my hand up and down, enjoying the sounds being emitted by Dave, both voluntarily and involuntarily! I continued to run my hand up and down while I gently caressed the sensitive tip of his penis, with my lips. I eased him into my mouth. He always says I have a big mouth, but my mouth is definitely not big enough for this! I alternated between running my tongue around the tip of his penis and almost shoving him down my throat. Every time my tongue touched a certain point, Dave started breathing heavily and his hips would move around; I hoped that he was enjoying this as much as I was!

I teased him with my teeth, glancing up regularly to see his expression and saw him mouth 'evil bitch!' I grinned, then squealed and almost bit down, as Dave's left hand wormed it's way between my legs and a finger explored my pubic hair, before entering inside me. Damn! I couldn't take any more of this; I'm very flexible, but my body was trying to buck in several different directions at once, not to mention that I was trying to administer to Dave!

I finally gave up, rolled on top of Dave and started kissing him for all I was worth; it felt so good, feeling Dave's warm skin against my own and I was able to look into those incredible blue eyes. It was actually a strange feeling, both of us naked and on the floor in front of a roaring fire, but it was an awesomely good feeling, too!

Suddenly, Dave flipped me over and he was now on top, smiling down at me, as he shrugged off his shirt. He gave me a soft kiss, on my nose, which made me giggle. then he started moving down my body, before clamping his lips onto my left nipple, which made me breathe in and then squeal with delight. I felt his right hand moving down my stomach and that nervous feeling started again in earnest, as his fingers entered my, now very moist, pubic hair and dived straight in. Dave was unbelievable with his fingers, he knew exactly which parts to touch and which to concentrate on. I dug my nails into Dave's back, I had to; I had the feeling that this was going to be the orgasm from hell!

..._...

Several minutes later, I was not to be disappointed!

I hope I didn't disturb anybody else in the hotel, because I screamed loudly, before I clamped a hand over my own mouth and continued to scream through my hand! Damn, this was worse, or better, than anything I had ever encountered to this point in my life! Hell, I had only been having sex for a year! I summoned every ounce of Hit Girl from within me, to help battle the sensations that roared from between my thighs, through my breasts and into my brain! Dave had rolled off to one side, which had allowed me to bring my legs up to my chest and I gripped them tightly with my arms. My eyes were tight shut, as I battled through the intense pleasure that coursed throughout my body and threatened to tear my body apart!

Finally, it was all over and I could start to breathe normally. I released my legs and looked up at Dave, as he smiled down at me. I could see his love and the desire that he had for me.

Damn! Could this night get any better?

"How was that for you?" Dave asked, with a chuckle.

"Words cannot describe what I have just experienced! If these things increase every time I get a year older, I'll be dead before I reach twenty-one!" I replied and giggled.

"You definitely tasted and felt good!" Dave responded.

"I want to remember how you taste now!"

I pounced and started on Dave with my lips and my hand; I caressed and encouraged him. Dave started to thrust and I had to be careful he didn't choke me, but it all added to the sheer excitement that I felt inside me! I could hear Dave as he groaned and felt his hands as they massaged my back, using quite a bit of his strength, which made it a little sore, but it was nothing that I couldn't handle!

Now we approached the part where things would get interesting, some might call it gross, but I just had a major fascination (just don't ask me why as I don't know) with what was about to come (yeah, pun intended)! Dave never disappointed and he didn't this time when he groaned loudly and dug his fingers, rather painfully, into my back and suddenly I almost choked on the thick, creamy substance that impacted the back of my throat. I instantly swallowed and savoured the remainder on my tongue, before I pulled back and allowed the rest of the warm fluid to spurt over my chest and hand.

Dave panted, out of breath and I was over the fucking moon! Only one thing could beat this and that was having Dave inside of me!

I was having serious difficulty getting my breath back!

Mindy always manages to ignite the damn fuse and then bang, it almost rips me apart! I turned to Mindy and pulled her into a hug, I felt the remnants of my semen on her chest, but ignored the gooey feeling and started kissing my fiancée.

Fiancée! Now that was a lovely word, for a lovely young woman! We kissed and it was a kiss that went on forever, or at least until we ran out of air! I started to ravish my woman, damn I really couldn't control myself, as I massaged her breasts, none too gently, but then Hit Girl has always liked it rough! Then we continued kissing and being kissed.

"You fancy a break, Hit Girl," I asked finally, as I gazed into Mindy's hypnotic green eyes.

"End of round one?" Mindy asked, seductively.

"Don't see why not!"

I pulled Mindy up and we each pulled on a soft, fluffy, hotel robe.

"I'll leave you to order from Room Service," I said and headed towards the bathroom.

By the time I returned from the bathroom, Mindy had ordered and we waited for the arrival of something to rebuild our energy levels.

Turned out that Mindy was desperate for chocolate and Red Bull! We also both got a very interesting look from the guy who delivered the food, too, when he saw our clothes scattered all over the place!

..._...

I will admit, the chocolate desserts (yes, plural) tasted good and Mindy seemed to enjoy hers too; I also knew that after several cans of Red Bull, Mindy would be buzzing and she would then start going loopy! Not that I was complaining; round two was coming up!

Once we had finished our food and a couple of cans of Red Bull, Mindy dumped her robe and walked, completely naked, through to the bedroom, before she turned and beckoned to me, very seductively, with her finger. Mindy had a very captivating look on her face, so I rapidly dumped my robe and followed.

As I entered the bedroom I grabbed Mindy around the waist and threw her bodily onto the bed; she screamed, then giggled as she bounced around. I then dived after her and went back to enjoying my new fiancée. I started with licking her lips, as she still had some chocolate lingering!

Chocolate Mindy tasted good, very good!

I ran my fingers around the outer edges of Mindy's breasts and gently breathed on the nipples, getting a soft, alluring moan in return. I purposely avoided touching the nipples and gently kissed the surrounding breasts and I could tell that Mindy was getting impatient, but then so was I; but all good things come to those who wait! Mindy's breasts were warm and very, very soft and her breathing was starting to get heavier, not to mention the moaning, as I gently caressed them and she was definitely getting aroused! Just as I thought Mindy might explode with my teasing, I moved my fingers up and gently teased her nipples, getting an immediate reaction from Mindy. Her breathing increased and she kept moving around the bed, restlessly.

Up until now, her eyes had been shut, as she enjoyed the moment. Suddenly they flicked open and she looked directly into my eyes, with her own, bewitchingly green, eyes.

"Dave, fuck me already!"

"Clear and concise as always, Hit Girl!"

"Quit with the talking and start with the fucking, asshole..."

I clamped my lips over Mindy's own, before she could say another word and she seemed to melt under me as she spread her legs and I eased myself into her. Mindy gasped, but smiled her pleasure and I started gently thrusting.

"Come on, you're fucking Hit Girl for God's sake, I won't bloody break! Put your damn back into it Ass-Kick!"

I laughed, then steadily increased my thrusting and 'put my back into it', as requested! Mindy started to moan and dug her fingers into my back, then wrapped her legs around me. Her breathing was getting heavier as I fucked her harder and faster. Finally Mindy screamed and she almost squeezed me to death, then I exploded into her and we both split apart, breathing heavily as we lay side by side on the bed. Mindy's hand found mine and gripped me tightly. Neither of us had the energy left to talk. I turned to face her and gazed into her eyes and her into mine.

I had never loved my Mindy so much.

"Thank you Dave, I couldn't be happier!" Mindy said, as we both fell asleep.

The following morning

Tuesday

The Ritz-Carlton

I awoke to find the bed empty and felt a momentary feeling of panic.

Where was my Dave?

I felt sore and grimaced as I sat up and put my feet on the floor. Why was I naked and what was this stuff on my chest?

Suddenly it all came back to me in a huge tsunami of images. I was engaged, to the best man possible and he had treated me like the woman he loved, all last night! I checked out my left hand and it was still there: that ring with the beautiful and enormous, diamond. I had received many things throughout my life, but this was the most special to me and outshone everything else, even my Balisongs; sorry Daddy!

I heard the shower running and grinned. Time for some fun!

I headed over to the bathroom and gently pushed open the door. There was my Dave. His body had never looked so good; the well-defined torso and strong muscles that rippled throughout his arms, stomach and thighs. A far cry from the early Kick-Ass of over a year ago, when I first started to train him! Just as I crept towards the shower...

"Not so ninja this morning, eh Hit Girl!"

Mindy blushed as I turned to look at her.

I reached out and pulled her into the enormous shower. I watched as the water ran over and down her curvaceous body. I gave my fiancée a kiss and ran my hands down her body and around her backside. I picked her up and she wrapped her legs around me. We continued kissing, as the water cascaded over our bodies.

"You happy, this morning, gorgeous?" I asked, during a break in the kissing.

"I am the happiest girl alive, right now!" Mindy replied, with an enormous grin and unwrapped her legs. "Gonna help me wash?"

What blood was left in my brain, drained in an instant and headed south!

..._...

After the extended shower, I helped dry Mindy off, which kinda started round three! But we were interrupted by a knock on the door; it was breakfast and we were very hungry, so put round three on hold! I had ordered breakfast, before getting into the shower and I had decided to eat in our room, as I had the feeling that neither of us would be bothered about getting dressed!

It was a different guy who delivered the breakfast, but he left with a very jealous look on his face!

Understandably we both had large appetites this morning, so got stuck in.

..._...

After breakfast we, reluctantly, went to get dressed.

Mindy was studying the rather creased and crumpled dress from last night, not to mention the abandoned underwear that she obviously wasn't too keen on putting back on again!

"Try these," I suggested and passed over a small case of clothes.

Mindy smirked.

"You planned this well, didn't you? How did this case get here, with my clothes in it?" Mindy asked accusingly.

"I packed the case and Marty delivered it here yesterday afternoon!" I replied.

"So, basically, I was the only person not to know about all of this!" Mindy groused.

"Not quite. Only Marcus, Marty and Kim knew. They helped me plan all of this, for you, gorgeous!" I explained.

Mindy just sat down on the bed and started to cry; I sat down beside her and hugged her to me.

I knew they were tears of happiness.

Not for the first time, in the past twenty-four hours, Hit Girl was at a complete loss for what to say or do!

We left the hotel at around ten, that morning.

Despite being dressed in trousers, a jumper and boots, Mindy still got some very approving looks, which caused her to blush a little. Secretly though, I'm certain Mindy was enjoying all the attention!

Mindy didn't want to go straight home, so we drove around for a bit and enjoyed each other's company. This was the first day of the rest of our lives together.

Together.

We both loved the word!

That afternoon
West Ridge

"Okay! Tell us everything, but stop before you get to the suite, I don't want to hear about that part!" Marcus said, as we got back home, around lunchtime.

"That's the part I do want to hear about!" Marty quipped, before getting an, almost playful, slap from Kim.

"Thanks, all of you! That was the best evening and night, of my entire life!" I exclaimed and felt tears spilling down my face. I was so happy seeing and being with my friends and family, people who meant everything to me and people who had gone out of their way to do something so special and so personal for me.

"Damn! Hit Girl's at a complete loss for words!" Marty said, smirking. "Now that's a first!"

"Right now, Marty, I'm just plain old Mindy Macready and I'm really glad to be too!" I said and hugged Marcus tightly. "Thank you for giving Dave your permission."

"Who the hell else would want you? Should give me a peaceful life!" Marcus quipped and made me blush. "You're his problem now!"

..._...

I detailed Dave's proposal, from the moment we had arrived at the restaurant, to the moment that we headed upstairs. This annoyed Marty, as he wanted to hear all about the night's action, too! I couldn't help crying, when I got to the part about Dave getting up, with the ring and Kim started crying too! I showed everybody the ring, which, I was very pleased to see, nobody else had seen till now.

Marcus apparently noticed my fragile state and suggested that we all went out to walk Sophia. This would give me time to get my feelings in order as, so far, I kept bursting into tears! Damn! Is this me learning more about being normal? Marcus for one, seemed to be happier than I had ever seen him before; maybe he was pleased that I was finally doing something so normal, like getting engaged.

Even I felt normal, for a change and a long way away from Hit Girl; was that good?

Author's Note: Well, did you enjoy that? Please let me know!

Chapter 101*: Back to Earth

That afternoon
Tuesday
West Ridge

I felt different.

Why?

I couldn't figure it out, but something definitely felt different. I wasn't worried, it was a good feeling, a good different!

Was it the ring that now sat on my left hand? It had to be, as that was the only thing that had changed! Why should something like a ring change me? I am Hit Girl and that is always who I intend to be. But, I am now older and you'd hope, wiser! I may only be seventeen, but I have had a whole lifetime's worth of experiences tucked under my belt. Yes, most of those experiences were R-rated, or worse, at the very least. But since I had met Dave, I had been experiencing other things; friendship, sex and now bonding. Is that the right word? I thought so, but what worried me then, was the next step - marriage and then... Getting pregnant! Did I want a family? Yes! Did I want a normal family? Yes! Would I let my kids do what I did? No! But why not?

The past year or so had seen a lot of changes within me. I had gained a true partner, last summer and now he was my partner in more ways than one! Although in reality Dave had been my partner since I was eleven. I have always known that Dave cared about me and I knew that Dave loved me; he proved that to me on my sixteenth birthday and he has stuck by me through a lot of shit; a lot of which I had dished out to him! That ring he gave me; that ring showed me that he was not bluffing and he intended to stay with me, by my side, no matter what!

Damn! Every time I think about Dave's sacrifices for me, the sacrifices he had made to give me that ring, I start to fucking cry! Dammit, I'm Hit Girl; Hit Girl does not cry! But as well as being Hit Girl, I am also a woman, a young woman, but still a woman and despite many of my seemingly inhuman acts, I am also a human being and as such I have feelings. Normally those feelings are buried deep down and suppressed, but Dave was able to constantly bring the good feelings to the surface, as did Chloe and Josh, in their constant battle to bring out my more human side, as their friend. What would I be without them? I dread to think about what I might be like now, if Dave hadn't found me, or even if my Daddy was still alive. He would not have allowed me friends, or a boy-friend and marriage? Never!

Daddy I wish you could be here, but you taught me to be obedient, so I would have always done as you wished, even if it went against what I really wanted.

Yesterday and especially last night was amazing; the best day and night of my short life, so far, but now it was time to come back to earth and back to reality and my real life. Only, I knew that I belonged, I know that somebody really loved me for who I was.

We were intending to have a small party on Saturday evening to celebrate. Marcus was staying in town; he said he was attending some weird cop seminar thing. What did worry me, though, is that Marcus said that he'd be able to tell everybody some embarrassing stories about me! I had threatened him with bodily harm, but that never works, dammit!

Four days later
Saturday morning
West Ridge

"You did what!" Josh and Chloe both exclaimed.

Dr Bennett had just arrived with the two kids and I had told them about what had occurred on Monday night, but I left out some of the more personal activities! Even Dr Bennett was shocked.

"Show me the ring, dammit!" Chloe demanded. She was so excited I thought she might piss herself!

I held out my left hand. Chloe and Dr Bennett gasped and were both speechless.

"That is awesome!" Josh admitted and gave me a brief hug. "Congratulations Mindy and you too Dave; you've made one hell of a catch, a dangerous catch, but still one hell of a catch!"

"Yeah, congratulations, both of you!" Dr Bennett said and hugged us both.

"You all coming to the party tonight?" Dave asked.

"Try and stop us!" Dr Bennett replied enthusiastically.

That evening West Ridge

The house was packed!

Just about everybody who knew about Fusion was here, including Jack and Natalie.

"Damon would have been proud! He may not have gone along with it willingly, not at first, but I'm convinced that he would have given in, eventually!" Jack said. "Congratulations, both of you!"

"Thanks Jack," I said.

Most people had dressed up for the occasion and everybody wanted to see the ring again and again! Chloe had actually decided to wear a dress, which Josh liked a lot and his eyes were always on either her legs, or her chest! Kim was permanently wrapped around Marty and they spent most of the evening on the couch together!

..._...

As I had both expected and dreaded, Marcus started to tell stories, which initially were cop ones, which was fine.

"Give us a good story about Mindy, Marcus!" Dave suggested.

"Don't you dare!" I warned, but Marcus completely ignored me, as usual.

"Let me see... Oh, yes! This would be a few years back and well... I heard shouting coming from her room... So I went upstairs, I was a little concerned! Now, remember this was a pre-teen Hit Girl and well, back then it didn't take much to make her blow a fuse! I knocked on her door and all went silent. I asked her if anything was wrong, but she replied that everything was fine, in her usual polite manner! Then as I started to walk away, she started turning the air blue again, then finally the shouting stopped and Mindy opened the bedroom door. She was wearing her Bratz pyjama bottoms and her new bra. She was red in the face with all her shouting and exertions. I asked her what was wrong and... I'm really sorry Mindy, but it was just hilarious... She growled at me, in that way she does and her face was getting redder and redder, then she finally blurted it out: 'I can't undo this damn bra'... I just lost it and burst out laughing and I swear the look on Mindy's face was pure malevolence, but I unclipped it for her and suggested that she get some practice!" Marcus explained.

"Evil fucking cunt!" Mindy breathed, as she blushed a nice shade of red and we all had a good laugh.

"I remember that time! Mindy wouldn't stop itching and fiddling with her new bra at school! She wasn't wearing it the next day and she said she was never wearing the damn thing again, ever! I suggested that it might, in fact, be a good idea if she continued wearing it!" I added. "She was starting to, er, show!"

Mindy glared at me, but stayed silent.

"Chloe was the exact same!" Dr Bennett said. "She refused to wear her bra after the first day, took me three weeks to get her to wear it again."

Josh burst out laughing.

"Mom!" Chloe yelled, indignantly and blushed bright red.

"Damn thing itched like fuck and there really wasn't much there to be supported anyway! But I gave in after a couple of days and started wearing it again," Mindy admitted grumpily.

"Now, about a month later, I was awoken from a very sound sleep by my cell ringing! I looked at the phone and saw that it was Mindy... Actually back then instead of it displaying 'Mindy', it just displayed the word 'Trouble'! I checked the time; three in the fucking morning! So I answered and Mindy was screaming down the phone; I couldn't make head nor tail of it, so I just yelled back until she shut up! Then I asked her what was wrong. 'Dave, I'm soaked in blood', she replied and actually sounded scared! I'd never heard a scared Mindy before, so I asked if she was hurt or injured and she replied 'no, I'm in bed'; then it clicked! I asked her if she had started her periods yet and she started to say no, but then just said 'thanks Dave' and put the phone down." I explained. "She refused to look at me for about a week after that!"

"When I saw the bed in the morning; there was so much blood that I thought Mindy had brought some of her work home with her! She threatened me with everything she could think of, if I ever dared to tell anybody!" Marcus laughed.

We all had a really good laugh over that, except of course for Mindy.

"That week was totally mortifying for a twelve year-old, who was on her first period! I'm generally fine with blood coming from other people, but from myself? Especially when it was completely unexpected...! Also, at the time, Dave was the absolutely last person that I wanted to know about it, too!" Mindy moaned. "Okay, I had a few problems growing up. Nobody's perfect!"

"A few problems?" Marcus quipped. "Oh there were many, many more!"

I was forced to endure several more anecdotes about my life, before Marcus decided to take pity on me! Thankfully the attention was then put on Dave, as Marty proceeded to tell everybody, in detail, about Dave's 'gay period'! It was so good to have everybody here and enjoying themselves. Even better, they were all here for me and Dave!

When it was time for Dr Bennett to go home, she had to prise Josh and her daughter apart.

"Time to take a breath! You two staying here?"

"I have a choice?" Chloe asked, a little surprised.

"You get pregnant and I'll kill you both!" Dr Bennett replied and it was difficult to tell if she was joking or not!

"Love you Mom!"

Chapter 102*: Memories

Author's Note: This chapter breaks through the two hundred thousand word mark, for 'Forsaken'. Thank you to everybody who has stayed the course and read each and every word!

Two days later
Monday evening
West Ridge

Josh would be spending the night with us, due to the anniversary that was arriving tomorrow.

Dave and I sat down with Josh, so that he could take us through the events leading up to that day and the day itself, a year ago. Rather strangely Chloe said she couldn't be here, or spend the night, as she was busy doing something else; she wouldn't say what!

It turned out to be quite a coincidence that Dave and I had been in New York, that very same day, stripping Safehouse C, before we had then driven home the following night!

One year previously
Monday, November 11th, 2013
New York City

I got up at my normal time and went into the kitchen for breakfast.

Dad looked very uneasy that morning, worse than he had been over the past few weeks. It seemed that he had been up most of the night and there was evidence that he had been cleaning his weapons, at the kitchen table. Normally, my Dad only did that when he was trying to get his mind off of something serious. I knew that things had been going bad for Dad, ever since he had decided to get away from that sadistic bastard, Ralph D'Amico.

..._...

That D'Amico actually scared the hell out of me! At least, at the weekends, I was able to forget about all of that shit and concentrate on having fun with my friends. I spent hours down at Atomic Comics with Chloe, Jake and Danny. They were my best friends from school and Chloe was also my girl-friend! I actually had a chance to be a normal kid, when I was around them. When I was at home, though, things were different. It wasn't just getting used to being in a foreign country, it was also the fact that Dad was constantly making me check my surroundings and watch out for trouble. Dad also checked to ensure that my skills were up to scratch, when it came to using a pistol and my knives! Not a very normal childhood, I would admit, but it never had been normal.

Ever since my mum had died of cancer, when I was nine, things had really gone to shit for us both. My Dad had left the SBS, to look after me full time. By the time I was ten, I had worked out that my Dad really missed his colleagues in the Royal Marines and the SBS and desperately wanted to get back into action.

Finally, my Dad had got involved with organised crime, in London and then he got involved with another guy who advised him of some well paid work in New York! My Dad decided we could both do with a fresh start. So, in June, we ended up in New York City, in the United States of America! At the time, we weren't aware of Ralph D'Amico and how particularly vicious he was.

I started to hear stories about Super Heroes; not the comic ones, real ones! My Dad brought back stories and rumours about a pair called Hit Girl and Kick-Ass and I passed these stories onto my new friends, including Chloe. Chloe then fancied herself as a Hit Girl wannabe! During August, I started to hear about some new Super Villain called The Mother Fucker and I understood from Dad that Ralph D'Amico was not amused, to put it mildly!

The next thing I knew, The Mother Fucker was dead! This seemed to encourage Ralph D'Amico to start spreading his 'good will' and Dad was soon starting to make plans to get away from Ralph D'Amico.

..._...

"Morning Joshua!" Dad said.

"Morning Dad!" I replied.

"I need you to stay with me, today. I'm concerned about that fucking bastard D'Amico; I think he's wise to me wanting to leave! I need to meet with Billy tonight and then we can hopefully get the hell out of here. Probably head west."

"Okay!" I replied and helped myself to some cereal. Missing school that day and possibly never going back would be no big deal, but I would miss Chloe!

..._...

That evening, we had left the apartment after dark and caught a cab, east. I had noticed that Dad had brought along his Glock 17 pistol. He only did that when he was on a job, or was concerned for his or my safety; he didn't have a permit for any of our weapons!

We got out of the cab, several blocks from our destination. Dad was constantly looking all around us; he told me he wanted to be absolutely sure that nobody was tailing us and I could tell that he was very nervous. My Dad told me to stay close as we walked the last two blocks and then my Dad pulled me down a dark alley and told me to wait. He also told me that if he wasn't back by ten o'clock that night, then I should run and keep running.

I didn't know it then, but that would be the last time that I would ever talk to my Dad!

..._...

It was fucking freezing.

I was huddled in the alley, down between two dumpsters. It was nine-thirty and I was starting to get very worried. Dad had been gone for over an hour and I was now very concerned for his safety. What would I do without Dad? Where would I run to? How would I survive? I knew where money was stashed, but that wouldn't last long.

I was deep in thought about my potential predicament when suddenly, I heard gunshots, several gunshots followed by shouting. Then Dad appeared at the end of the alley. It would be the last time that I would ever see my Dad alive.

"Joshua, run!" And that was the last time that I ever heard his voice. The last words that he ever said to me. He started to run towards me, but that was when the whole bloody world came apart.

There was a huge explosion and the building started to come down. Brickwork hit the dumpsters and I saw Dad get buried, then nothing...

The present day
West Ridge

"...Next thing I knew, I was waking up in hospital, months later!" Josh finished.

The boy had tears running down his cheeks and he was gripping my arm, tightly. I really felt for the kid; it was the first time that Josh had told anybody about that day, a year ago and apparently I wasn't the only one to have seen their Dad killed right in front of them!

I just did the only thing that I could do, I hugged Josh tightly, as he cried.

The following day
Tuesday
West Ridge

Josh got up later than usual.

His eyes were very red and swollen; it was obvious that he had been crying. Dave had cooked him some breakfast. I had considered cooking, but Dave suggested that the day would be bad enough for Josh, without him having to try to eat my cooking!

Later that morning
Safehouse A

Dave and I took Josh down to Safehouse A.

We had something special in store for him. I took the, rather confused, Josh into the briefing room. On the far wall hung the, admittedly rather dorky, photo of my Daddy. Next to it was a photo of Dave's Dad. Dave and I had decided that it was time to update these two photos and add some more, as a reminder of what we were fighting for.

I removed both photos and Dave stood ready with a hammer and some picture hooks.

First up went a copy of the photo that I had seen at The Farm; it had both my Daddy and my Mom in it and had obviously been taken before little me had actually been born and also in much happier times!

Below this photo went the one of Big Daddy and Hit Girl that Dave thought was really cute! I used to be able to scare the shit out of Dave in that costume, but somehow I seem to have gone from being able to scare the shit out of Dave to cute; how the mighty have fallen! Josh actually thought I looked quite menacing, but also kinda hot and he actually blushed and so did I! Josh had never seen me in my original Hit Girl costume and now I thought about it, nobody else had, in this sort of detail, except for Dave! The online videos were not all that detailed back then. That was also the first time that Josh had actually seen a picture of Big Daddy and one of me when I was younger and as Josh commented, a lot shorter!

To the right of the first photo, went a picture of Dave's Mom and Dad, on their wedding day. Dave added another hook below the other pictures and we hung a photo that showed the original Justice Forever team that Marty had provided. We all took a moment and Dave named each person and explained them to Josh, including how the Colonel and Night Bitch had died. I saw that this was hard on Dave, but I was glad that we had taken the time to put the picture up. Josh actually laughed when he saw Battle Guy!

Dave hammered in one final nail, then I turned to Josh.

"That last hook is yours, Josh," I said and passed him a package.

Josh looked at me curiously and then carefully opened the package before I saw tears start to run down his face. Marty had done some digging and had found a photo of Josh's Dad, in his full Royal Marines Commando dress uniform, with Josh's Mom, on their wedding day. Josh looked at me dumbfounded and I helped him hang the picture. Even I was crying, as I looked at the pictures of my Daddy.

"See Josh. I may be the cold hearted bitch, Hit Girl, but I still cry and feel emotions," I said as I hugged Josh and Dave.

"Thank you, both of you. You don't know what that picture means to me."

"Yes, we do Josh," Dave replied.

We actually spent quote a few minutes just standing and looking at the pictures.

I was over the moon to see the picture of my Dad and my Mum; especially today. I was also glad that they could both be a part of my new life, here, in Chicago as Jackal. I really had no words to describe my feelings, to Dave and Mindy, but they had managed to help me in a way that nobody else could have done.

I finally let go of Mindy.

"Sorry for all the cuddling Mindy; I know you don't like me invading your personal space," I said with a smile.

"I'm getting used to it! It kinda feels good and makes me feel more human," Mindy replied, drying her tears.

It had been a bit of a shock to see Mindy crying; I had never seen her do anything like that before.

"You are only the second person to ever see me cry, Josh; Dave was the first, last year!" Mindy said.

"Not so much," Dave said. "I first saw you cry, back when you were twelve. You didn't know that I could see you and I never let on."

"Marty was right, you can be soft and cuddly!" I replied.

"Just don't go spreading it around; I have a reputation to uphold!"

I had to laugh and it was infectious, as Dave and Mindy laughed, too.

"Come on, let's go get something to eat!" Dave suggested.

Chapter 103*: Shadow Taken

Two days later
Thursday night
Western Chicago

I could hear voices.

They seemed far away, but that might just have been my mind which was feeling groggy and my head hurt.

"What the bloody hell do we do with her?"

"Bugged if I know!"

The first voice was a girl's voice, the second a boy's.

"She's got some cutting-edge armour; she's the real deal!"

"You fucking plonker, you clobbered a damn Hero!"

Everything went black again, after that.

The following day
Friday afternoon
Western Chicago

I awoke again.

My head was really hurting now.

Where was I?

I thought back... I remembered seeing two people acting strangely. I closed on them... They separated... Then nothing.

I reached up to my head and felt my hair... Oh fuck!

Sudden realisation struck me; my mask and comms were missing! I rapidly ran my hands over my body; my utility belt and weapons were missing, but I was still wearing the rest of my combat suit. The left side of my face was very painful; it was bruised and swelling. Only now did I realise that I was bound at my wrists, with plastic ties. I moved my feet and found them to be bound too, but at least I was still wearing my armoured boots.

I looked around me. I was lying on the floor of what looked like a derelict apartment and it was daylight outside.

That was not good.

I was not supposed to be here and nobody even knew that I was out; I should have been home hours ago!

Oh fuck!

I was starting to panic now; I'd fucked up big time!

If I didn't die, Hit Girl would fucking kill me herself!

Calm the fuck down, idiot and think!

First, get a good look around.

I flexed the muscles in my arms and brought my elbows down either side of me, fast and hard and with my gauntlets protecting my wrists, the plastic ties snapped. I reached behind me with my right hand, under my rear armour and pulled out a black double-edged knife with a four and a half inch blade.

I cut the plastic ties holding my ankles together and stood up. I looked out of the window, the sun was high and from the south, but angled to the west, so it must have been past midday and I also discovered that I was on the fifth floor. I couldn't work out where I was located in Chicago, though, the view was blocked. The door to the room was wood; I slowly turned the handle and eased the door open. I was a little surprised that the door hadn't been locked or bolted.

..._...

Outside the door was a corridor and from the far end I heard the same voices that I had heard earlier.

I listened.

"Maybe we should ask her for help," The girl's voice said

"After you bloody cracked her with a damn pole!" The boy replied, angrily. "She might turn on us!"

"She's a vigilante, part of the famous Fusion. I think she might be Shadow; there's not much information on these guys. A lot of the websites that purport to have information, on Fusion, are corrupted! They are the good guys, Cam!" The girl again.

"When she wakes up, she may still kill us, Nats! You've heard how violent they can get and look at the impressive weapons she was carrying! I have a feeling that she can cause shit, without those weapons, too! You removed her bloody mask; we can recognise her! I told you not to remove the bloody mask!" The boy said.

"Yes, but what was that you said, when I did remove the mask? 'Fuck she's hot!'" The girl retorted.

I felt myself blushing!

"So what if she is hot?" The boy replied.

"Can't you control your damn hormones for two bloody minutes?"

I couldn't believe that I was listening to two people discussing me, like that!

Then it suddenly hit me!

These two were just kids, not much older than me and they were as British as Josh; the accents were the same. These were the two that Mindy had told us about a few weeks ago; the two British vigilantes!

..._...

What the fuck do I do? The boy was right, they'd seen me without my mask.

Okay, build up information; information is power.

I know their names; Cam and Nats, apparently. That's more than I knew earlier and they both seem scared of me; they also sounded like they regretted having attacked and seized me.

I spent a couple of minutes arranging my thoughts.

Do I attack?

Do I offer help?

Would they trust me?

They knew that I'd be very pissed about them removing my mask; and I was!

What would Mindy do? Answer: She'd never have get herself into this fucking position in the first damn place!

I pulled the door open slowly and slid out, knife in hand and headed toward the voices.

Earlier that day
West Ridge

My cell rang.

"Chloe went out, straight from school last night and she hasn't come home!" Dr Bennett said, sounding worried. "Has she been with you?"

"No, but I'll check with Mindy," I said. "Mindy, when did you last hear from Chloe?"

"Couple of days ago," Mindy replied.

I went back to the cell.

"Mindy's not heard from her either. You called Josh?" I asked.

"Yeah and he's not heard from her and she's not at school, either!"

"Leave it with us, Doc! I'll call you the moment we find out anything!" I said and killed the call.

"Mindy, Chloe's missing! I'm heading down to the safehouse!" I called.

"I'm coming too!" Mindy answered.

Western Chicago

I followed the sound of the voices, along the corridor and came to another doorway which lead to a large living room.

There was one voice, the boy's, but I couldn't hear the girl.

A chill suddenly ran up my back, I'd made a mistake, a big mistake! I span around to find the girl creeping up behind me. She held a large chunk of wood, which she swung at my head. I tried to dodge, but the wood caught me and I fell to the floor, my vision blurred for a short time, then I felt myself being dragged into the living room. I then felt my hands being bound, roughly, behind my back, with rope.

My vision finally cleared and I found myself leaning against a mouldy looking couch. In front of me was a wooden table, on which I could see my mask, comms and utility belt, with my pistol. Leaning against the table, was my bō-staff. The two Brits were looking down at me. I glared back, as strongly and malevolently, as I could. They were both similar in looks; the boy was a little taller than Mindy, while the girl was slightly taller than the boy. I thought that the girl was the natural leader, but that was just my assumption. Both of them were of an average build, like Josh and neither were fat. They both wore black combat gear, with light combat boots. Their expressions were of confusion. I would need to somehow guide them, as they seemed way, way out of their comfort zone! The girl had long brown hair, tied up in a ponytail. The boy also had brown hair, which was short, like Josh's.

"Do you have to keep hitting me with that damn thing?" I growled.

"You're dangerous!" The girl replied.

"To criminals, yes, but not to you," I growled back.

"How do we know that?" The boy asked.

"You don't! But Fusion is about doing the right thing and hurting you, would not be the right thing."

"No it wouldn't!" The girl agreed.

"You have names?" I asked.

The two looked at each other, then the boy answered.

"I'm Cameron and this is my sister, Natasha."

"Hi Cameron, Natasha," I said. "I'm a very pissed off Shadow!"

"Told you!" Natasha said to her brother, with a smug grin.

"Care to untie me?" I tried.

"Not yet, er, Shadow!" Cameron said. "We need to go out and well, we don't trust you!"

"Great!" I growled in frustration.

Safehouse A

"Her armour and weapons are missing! I checked the CCTV and she left about eight, last night, all kitted up!" Dave said.

"Fuck! I'm gonna skin that little bitch, alive!" I yelled. I was livid; what the fuck did that girl think she was doing, going out on her own?

"I've told Marty and Kim and they are on their way to us, now," Dave advised.

"Let's get kitted up and see if we can locate her cell and comms," I suggested.

..._...

By the time Dave and I had got into our combat suits, minus the masks, Marty and Kim had arrived. Marty dived straight in and started to track down Chloe, while Kim went to get into her combat suit.

"Okay! I have her radio, GPS doesn't have a good lock; she must be inside a solid building. Downloading her previous track, now. Her cell is turned off, so nothing from that," Marty informed us.

"Thanks Marty. Can you turn on VOX, so we can hear her?" I asked.

"Can do!"

Western Chicago

"Shadow, this is Hit Girl! You're on VOX, over!"

"What was that?" Cameron asked.

I tried not to look at the radio headset, not three feet away from me that was buzzing. I was sure it was Mindy's voice. Thank God! Cameron picked up the headset and held it to his ear, then dropped it.

"It's Hit Girl, calling for her!" Cameron yelled and he sounded scared.

"What?" Natasha shouted.

"They know where we are; we need to get out of here!" Cameron replied, calming down.

I started to hear voices, elsewhere in the building.

"You have anybody else in the building? I hear voices!" I growled.

"Nobody! Oh God, it's your lot, Shadow!" Natasha said and it was her turn to sound scared.

"No! We use radios, we don't shout when we attack!" I growled back. "Let me go and I can protect you!"

"We can't..."

Then my blood ran cold.

I heard a voice, that voice.

"Keep going! Those little bastards are up here somewhere!"

Safehouse A

We had heard everything that was being said; somebody else was in that building, but then my blood ran cold when I heard what Shadow said next!

"It's Ralph D'Amico!"

Chapter 104*: Double Trouble

Friday afternoon
Western Chicago
Fifth Floor

"Let me go! You've got to let me go! That man is the nastiest man alive! He shot me twice, in my shoulder, with my own pistol! Not to mention him almost killing my partner!" I all but pleaded. "I must get my mask back on, or many people will die!"

Cameron looked across at Natasha, then he grabbed up my knife and cut the ropes binding my hands. I leapt up and grabbed my utility belt, securing it in place. Next came the comms; I strapped on the throat mike and inserted my ear piece. Lastly I pulled on my mask and wrapped around my ninja mask. I pulled out my pistol, checked it was all correct, then chambered a round and re-holstered it. I noticed Cameron and Natasha watching everything I did; they had both pulled on their ski masks. I grabbed my bō-staff, twisting it through the air, in a menacing fashion.

"Fusion, this is Shadow!" I called.

"Thank God, Shadow! Are you safe?" Hit Girl responded, almost immediately.

"I'm fine! I'm in shit and need help! I'm so sorry..."

"We're on it Shadow! Mission first, recriminations later! Battle Guy has your approximate position; turn your cell on and try to avoid contact. Keep your comms on VOX. We're on the way to you!"

"How...?"

"Shadow you have the skills you need; use them! You can do it, I know you can! Get to it Shadow!" Hit girl ordered.

I turned to the two frightened teenagers.

"We need to get off this floor! Natasha, Cameron, snap to it! Another exit, come on!" I growled.

"Kitchen... There's a hole in the floor... It goes down to the next apartment," Cameron said, haltingly.

"Go! Both of you! I'll cover..."

Two men kicked in the front door to the apartment. I fired three rapid shots, dropping both men. I turned to Cameron and Natasha, who had both frozen.

"Go!" I yelled.

Both kids dropped through the gaping hole, into the kitchen of the apartment below. I followed and ran towards the main door for that apartment.

"Stay behind me, always behind me!" I ordered and got nods in return. I ran out of the door and checked up and down the stairs. I could hear footsteps coming down. I gestured to Natasha and Cameron to get down and back into the apartment. I readied my bō-staff and waited.

Safehouse A

"What the hell are you doing here?"

"Chloe's in trouble and I'm here to help! Just try and fucking stop me Hit Girl!"

I laughed. "That's my Jackal!"

"Besides I want to kick her fucking arse!"

"You'll have to take a ticket on that one, Josh! Once I'm through with her, if she has any arse left, then you can have a go!"

Josh vanished into the armoury, to get his combat suit on.

"You ready!" Kick-Ass growled, in a deeper than usual voice.

"Do you have to use that thing in here?" I asked; Kick-Ass was now using a voice modulator, to hide his true voice.

Western Chicago Third Floor

The first man came down the stairs quickly and just as he got level with me I swung my bō-staff and severed both his lower legs, just below the knees. Blood shot out and covered the floor, closely followed by the screaming man and his lower legs.

I ran forwards and down the next set of stairs, beckoning Natasha and Cameron to follow.

I heard a yell from upstairs, his voice again: "You incompetent bastards! Get them!"

I hesitated as I heard footsteps, below us; they were coming up.

Damn, we were trapped!

Outside

We arrived at the position provided by Shadow's cell. It was an abandoned apartment block, less than three miles from the safehouse.

My head whipped around as I heard the sharp crack of a pistol.

My brain automatically told me it was an FN Five-seveN. It was coming from above us.

"In there!" I called to Kick-Ass and he smashed through a boarded up doorway and into the building. Hawk and Jackal were to stay outside and watch out for any reinforcements for D'Amico.

"Shadow, which floor?" I called.

"Third floor!" Shadow replied. "Help!"

"We're coming, Shadow!"

I took the stairs two at a time. Kick-Ass managed three or four at a time.

Second Floor

As we came up the stairs, we encountered men, several of them. They obviously weren't expecting us, as their full attention was on the stairs that went up to the third floor and we were just in time to see a bloodied body come flying down the stairs.

It wasn't Shadow, but she seemed to be kicking ass up there!

Now was no time for finesse, so Kick-Ass and I blasted away with our pistols.

Third Floor

I could hear shooting from the floor below us.

The men trying to come up the stairs seemed to stop and go back down. The men coming down the stairs from above took advantage of the lull and laid down heavy fire from automatic weapons, several rounds of which impacted my armour and the girl, Natasha, screamed. Not the brazen vigilantes that they had made themselves out to be!

I returned fire, with my FN and wished that I had my P90 or my compound bow. The slide of my pistol locked back on an empty magazine and I rapidly dumped the empty magazine and loaded a full one, then released the slide.

Gunfire was now coming up the stairs from the floor below, but it was aimed at the men coming down from the floor above. Then men on the stairs opted to dive towards me for safety, so I pushed the two kids into the empty apartment, behind us and ran after them, firing several shots at the pursuing men and dropped at least one, maybe two.

Kick-Ass and I surged up the stairs to the third floor.

I now faced a crap decision.

Did I go up and get D'Amico, or stay on this floor to save Shadow.

By rights, Shadow had made the decision and she would now have to live with it, but I was not that Hit Girl any more! I started shooting at the men, who were attacking the apartment on the third floor and Kick-Ass followed.

I pushed Cameron and Natasha back, towards the rear of the apartment.

A fire escape! It ran down outside the window; I never fucking noticed and obviously neither had these two halfwits!

"Go! Use the fire escape!"

Natasha pushed herself out of the window and started to climb down, then she screamed as an arm wrapped around her waist and pulled her down the fire escape. Someone else had seen the fire escape and was now using it. I saw the grinning face and felt the anger surge up inside of me.

D'Amico!

At that moment Kick-Ass and Hit Girl burst through into the apartment, gunning down the final opposition.

"He has my sister, please, you've got to help!" Cameron begged.

"Jackal, Hawk! D'Amico is on his way down the fire escape with a hostage!" Hit Girl called.

I went over to Shadow and pulled her into a hug.

"Thank God, you're safe!" I said and smiled. Then I let Shadow go and glared at her. "When we get back to the safehouse, you're gonna wish you were never fucking born!"

I ran over to the window and looked down. I saw two SUVs heading for the base of the apartment block, not far from where we had parked Beast.

"Let's go! Bring the boy!" I growled.

We rapidly descended the stairs and found Hawk and Jackal engaging armed men, from the two SUVs that I had seen arriving. I could see that D'Amico was behind one of the vehicles and he had the girl.

Outside

Shadow grabbed a P90 from Beast and I grabbed a G36C and extra magazines, before moving towards the SUVs. Kick-Ass ran in the opposite direction, in an attempt to out flank D'Amico and rescue the girl.

Jackal's P90 rounds seemed to have incapacitated at least one SUV, but we prevented them from getting into the other SUV. The SUVs that D'Amico and his men had arrived in previously were over the other side of the apartment block and we were able to prevent D'Amico from moving towards them.

D'Amico looked up in anger and ordered his men to cease fire. We did the same.

"You!" D'Amico yelled.

"Yeah and you have something of mine, you bastard!" Shadow spat and looked at the pistol that D'Amico held in his right hand.

"Come and fucking get it!" D'Amico yelled.

"You D'Amicos are fucking scum and you are the last of that line of evil villainy!" I yelled back.

D'Amico broke clear and ran for the apartment block, while his men provided covering fire.

Three of his men followed him.

I came around the back of the SUVs and heard Hit Girl yelling at D'Amico.

Then, "Kick-Ass, D'Amico has run back towards the apartment block, with three of his men!"

While D'Amico's men were distracted shooting at Fusion, I grabbed the girl, who shrank back in fright at the sight of me.

"Come with me, if you want to live!" I snarled.

The girl nodded and I led her away and around the SUVs back towards Beast. I pushed her inside and told her to keep down. I saw Hit Girl and Shadow run towards the apartment block while Hawk and Jackal mopped up the men near the SUVs.

I grabbed a G36C and ran after Shadow and Hit Girl.

"Shadow stop!" I called.

"No, I'm gonna get that bastard!" Shadow replied angrily, but didn't stop.

"Wait for me, you can't take him alone!"

"Fuck you, Hit Girl! He shot me and almost killed him... I want the bastard!"

"Shadow..." I called again, only this time she didn't respond. "Shadow..."

Shadow was passing the third floor, I was on the second. There were four men waiting for her, up there, she couldn't fight them all! I heard gunshots above us, not Shadow's FN or P90.

I heard a scream; Shadow!

I rushed up the last of the stairs and kicked open the door to the roof. Shadow was pinned down, her P90 was beside her and the magazine was empty. D'Amico's men were using large calibre pistols. I brought up my G36C and started to shoot. I winged one man, drawing fire in my direction. Shadow came up with her pistol and dropped another man. I aimed and shot the man that I had winged, killing him. D'Amico was now down to one man.

Oh crap!

I could hear a helicopter approaching; it was now or never. D'Amico had come up here to escape!

..._...

Shadow suddenly bolted forwards and ran towards D'Amico; she was shot twice by his bodyguard, but Shadow's momentum pushed her through the rounds. I provided covering fire, but then I came under fire from the helicopter. I returned fire and scored some hits on the fuselage of the helicopter. The helicopter dipped down and out of sight, so I ran towards Shadow and watched her, as she brought the bō-staff around and down, in a swift sweeping movement, which resulted in a spray of blood, as Ralph D'Amico's right arm was severed just below the elbow. The limb fell to the floor and D'Amico screamed out, in agony.

At that point the helicopter returned and heavy fire poured down onto the roof. I grabbed Shadow and pulled her back behind cover. Shadow struggled against my hold, but I refused to let her go. I watched as D'Amico was dragged bodily towards the helicopter, but I could do nothing.

"You run, you gutless bastard!" I yelled after D'Amico. "I'll finish you, piece by piece, if I fucking have to!"

The helicopter took off and headed south-east, a small trail of smoke marking it's flight path. I released Shadow and she ran forwards.

"That's mine!" Shadow growled and yanked her FN Five-seveN pistol, from the severed limb of Ralph D'Amico.

Western Chicago
On the ground

I turned to Kick-Ass.

"What the fuck do we do with these two? They've seen that little bitch's face!"

"You can't kill them, they're just kids!" Kick-Ass cautioned.

"Fuck! That little bitch really knows how to screw with me!"

I was really pissed off; Chloe had fucked things up badly. By rights, I should kill those two kids and according to my Daddy's book, I should kill Chloe, too! But, as I had said before, I was not that Hit Girl, not any more! At the very least, Chloe's out of Fusion, that's for damn sure! She's really put me on the fucking spot! Dave's right though, I can't kill them, but they've seen Chloe's face... I can't let them go... Can I?

I went over to the girl; she was crying! She looked up at me, with fear in her eyes and I made my decision.

"Kick-Ass! Bind them and blindfold them; they'll be coming with us!" I growled, then looked directly at the girl. "Make a sound, you die!"

Chapter 105*: Big Trouble

That evening
Friday
Safehouse A

The boy and his sister were now being guarded by Hawk, Jackal and Kick-Ass. Hawk and Jackal had cleared out their apartment and were now holding them in one of D'Amicos SUVs, until I was ready for them. I had driven Beast back to the safehouse, with the soon to be ex-Shadow.

"Chloe, get into the armoury and strip out of that armour, then come back here," I said quietly.

I think I was unnerving Chloe, as I hadn't said a single word to her on the way back to the safehouse in Beast. I had completely ignored everything that she had tried to say to me, including her attempts at excuses. I had noticed the scared look on her face as she disappeared into the armoury. While she got out of the combat suit, I called Dr Bennett.

"Chloe is safe," I said calmly. "I have her at Safehouse A."

"Thank God! Thank you Mindy! Is she okay?"

"She's okay... For the moment," I replied darkly. "She went out on her own; that I cannot forgive!"

"Oh! I see," Dr Bennett said, as she caught on.

"Her days as a vigilante may be well and truly over," I said.

..._...

Chloe reappeared from the armoury; she wore just t-shirt and shorts.

"You let me down, Chloe! You let us all down!" I said quietly. "I have no tolerance for somebody who puts their entire team at risk and doesn't think, before going into action. I no longer want you here; it's a shame because you had a lot of potential!"

Chloe didn't reply or even cry, as I had expected her to. I was expecting her to beg for forgiveness, but she just looked at me, with eyes that begged for forgiveness.

"It's over Chloe... However, those two have seen your face! I may have need of you, later. Go get some proper clothes on and wait upstairs," I said coldly and felt very sad.

I was still really pissed off!

Something in the back of my mind told me that I had been too hard on Chloe, but my Hit Girl side said that I hadn't been hard enough! Dave was, understandably, annoyed when he got back and found out that I had kicked Chloe out, but he had decided not to argue about it, at least not right now. That just meant I would get an ear full tonight!

Hawk, Jackal and Kick-Ass deposited the two kids on the mat. They sat cross-legged and neither offered any resistance; I could sense their fear.

"Can you two hear me?" I growled, ominously.

"Yes!" Both replied.

"Names!"

"Cameron King."

"Natasha King."

"Okay! Why did you take Shadow hostage?"

"We didn't know it was her; she scared us. She was black as the night, we thought... We were scared. My sister smacked her with a large piece of metal," Cameron explained fearfully. The British accent. These two were so out of their depth!

"We're really sorry..." Natasha started.

"I don't give a fucking crap about how sorry you are!" I growled loudly and both kids screamed.

I looked at Kick-Ass and he shook his head slowly. We've already got one British nut; why not two more! I went behind Natasha and untied her blindfold, then released her hands and helped her to her feet. I nodded at Kick-Ass to do the same for the boy. Natasha looked up at me, gratefully and smiled. Fuck! I'm starting to feel fucking guilty now!

"I won't hurt you, I promise," I said. "Unless, of course, you tell anybody anything about Shadow or us!"

The boy blinked in the bright lights and nodded acceptance, as did the girl.

"You two hungry?" I asked and smiled. I had noticed the meagre attempts at food, the two had had at their apartment.

"Yeah! We had money, but our ATM cards stopped working some weeks ago. We ran out of cash," Cameron explained dejectedly, as I led them both upstairs to the kitchen. I microwaved a couple of crappy frozen meals, but the two kids wolfed them down.

"Tell us about yourselves," I suggested. "You're obviously British!"

Natasha explained that they were brother and sister, which we had kinda worked out, but also fraternal twins and that they had grown up in London, England. They were now orphans and had remained in the United States, as wards of the state. Their father had died of natural causes while they were in the US. There were no remaining relatives in the UK, so they had been allowed to remain until something was arranged for them at home. That had been almost five months ago, they seemed to have been almost forgotten. They had absconded from foster care, while in Seattle and made their way east, towards home in the UK. Their father had left them plenty of money, unfortunately their funds had been frozen, after they had been on the run for less than a week. They were both only sixteen.

I had a feeling that there was more to the story, but didn't push.

"So you want to get back to the UK?" Kick-Ass asked.

"We did, but ultimately we can't now; we have no money and our passports will be blocked! If we hand ourselves in, we get ourselves stuck back into foster care!" Cameron replied.

"You two trustworthy?" I asked.

"We try!" Natasha replied, with a guilty smile. A genuinely honest answer and the same that I would have given!

"You know the drill; you speak to anyone, we kill you! But I want to trust you. Can I?" I asked seriously.

"Yes you can, Hit Girl!" Cameron replied and Natasha nodded.

"Look, I can put you both up in an apartment, for now. But you must stay there and not go out, you understand? I need time to think about what to do with you," I said. "Plus you both really need a shower!"

The two kids looked excited and a little embarrassed.

That evening South Cottage Grove

We waited till well after dark and then I took the two kids, with Kick-Ass, to the safehouse at South Cottage Grove and stuck them in apartment 301.

"Now, behave! No wild parties! No trashing the place! I'll send somebody around later with some food and your kit, okay! Don't open the door to anybody. Our guy will have a key and will say he's from Fusion," I said and left the two kids to settle in.

..._...

An hour later I returned to apartment 301, but this time with Chloe.

When I had gone upstairs, at the safehouse, I had found Chloe sitting on her bed and it was obvious that she had been crying. Dave had warned me to be hard, but not too hard, on her. We all owed her our lives, in one way or another and especially me. But for now, I needed Chloe to drop some items off, to Cameron and Natasha.

Apartment 301

I used a key to enter the apartment and was met by two scared faces.

"It's okay!" I said and smiled. The two kids promptly relaxed, as soon as they recognised me and I dumped their packs and some bags onto the kitchen table.

"Food in those two bags, plus your own stuff from that shit apartment!" I explained.

Both kids had taken showers and were now wrapped in towels. Cameron looked quite muscular; I looked away quickly!

"Get something to eat and get some sleep and we'll probably see you both in a day or two. Anything else you need?" I asked.

"No. Thank you very much and thank Hit Girl and Kick-Ass for us," Natasha said and she looked very grateful. "We're really sorry we hurt you!"

"Don't sweat it!" I replied. "Night!"

Chapter 106*: Forgiveness

The following evening
Saturday
Morton Grove

I was grounded till I was at least seventy-five!

But that was not all that sucked!

Josh wasn't talking to me and neither was Mindy, which really fucking hurt! Mom is pretending that I don't exist, except at meal times! I had spent the past day feeling really small and very, very guilty!

Why did I do it?

I loved the way that I felt when I was out as Shadow. The surge of adrenalin, the surge of excitement when hunting criminals and yes, I enjoyed making use of my weapons, especially my compound bow, but that was now gone!

Mindy was arguably my best friend in the entire world. I would do anything for her... But I had thrown it all away in a selfish attempt at experiencing the thrill of being Shadow! The one thing that really scared me? Mindy didn't shout or kick me about, as I had fully expected her to. No, she spoke calmly, which just made it worse. I suppose in hindsight, I should be pleased! It was the cold, collected Hit Girl that was telling me to get out, not Mindy Macready.

I suppose my little problem had given me time to look at me life.

Who was I? Or should that have been: What was I?

I was a girl.

I was fourteen years-old.

I killed people!

So, what did that make me?

A murderess?

A vigilante?

Was there a difference?

I suppose that would depend on your point of view.

I took law enforcement into my own hands and I acted as a judge, jury and executioner, where required. Did that make me a bad person?

It should have done! But why did I sleep at night? I'd killed... Now I thought about it, how many people had I killed? I didn't really know; I honestly didn't know! Was that bad? Everybody I had killed, to that point, had deserved it and in most cases it was while defending myself or others from harm.

My life officially sucked!

That evening
West Ridge

Mindy was one hell of a grumpy bitch!

I knew that she was pissed with Chloe, but Mindy needed Chloe. I could tell that she was distraught over her decision. She had ignored all of Chloe's texts and phone calls. I hated seeing Mindy like this; she was even yelling at me now!

I'd had enough!

While Mindy was ranting and raging on the mat downstairs, I got on my cell.

..._...

Fifty minutes later, there was a knock on the door.

I opened it to find Dr Bennett and a very unhappy looking Chloe.

"Hi!" I said to Dr Bennett and then grabbed hold of Chloe and physically dragged her downstairs.

"Mindy!" I yelled.

Mindy stopped kicking the bag and turned towards me. She stared at Chloe and then she glared at me.

"What the fuck is she doing here?"

Chloe was looking down at the mat and not at Mindy.

"Look, I know you're pissed with the little bitch; we all fucking are, but get off your fucking high horse and have make up sex, or whatever, but fucking sort things out between yourselves!" I yelled and headed back upstairs to where Dr Bennett smirked at me.

"You enjoyed that!" She stated.

"I did, too!"

That fucking asshole!

That was exactly why I'd been avoiding Chloe! Dave knew full well that I would forgive her, if I spoke to her!

We both avoided each other's eyes for a few minutes.

"Okay! I hate to disappoint you, but I am not having make up sex with you! I know you're sorry and I know you won't do it again! Friends?" I asked.

"Always!" Chloe replied and hugged me tight.

"You might need make up sex for Josh, though! I gather he's really pissed at you!" I quipped then got serious. "This won't be the end of it, either!"

Chloe blushed and said nothing!

We both went upstairs to find Dr Bennett and Dave waiting. They both smirked at us.

"Quickest sex ever!" Dave commented.

I felt my cheeks warming up and Chloe blushed too!

"Shadow's still grounded, though!" Dr Bennett warned and Chloe groaned.

"Being a teenager sucks!"

"Tell me about it!" I agreed.

South Cottage Grove
Apartment 301

"Okay! Your idea would have probably worked! We should have just asked for their help," Cameron admitted.

"They really are the good guys! Look at what they've done for us; first good night's sleep we've had in days!" Natasha agreed.

"We owe these guys; you know that don't you!"

"What do we do then?"

"We ask to stay; we can't get at our money, we can't leave the country, so what else can we do?"

Apartment 202

I knocked on the apartment door.

The door was opened by Mrs Wilson.

"Hi, I'm Mindy; your Landlord. May I come in?" I asked.

"Of course!" Mrs Wilson replied waving me in.

"You settling in okay, Mrs Wilson?" I asked and saw Megan, coming through from the living room. Megan was looking at me strangely; her eyes were narrowed and she looked deep in thought.

"We're wonderful, thank you Mindy and please call me Paige."

Megan was still staring at me strangely, but I ignored her as I went on.

"I'm starting a new business, over on South Morgan Street and I need an Office Manager. I thought I'd offer you the job; you have any experience in that?" I asked.

I knew full well that she did, as Marty had pulled up a lot of information about the Wilson family.

Up until about six months ago, the family had been doing well; Mr Wilson was a successful IT Manager and Mrs Wilson worked as an Office Manager. Between them both, they earned a decent wage and were doing okay, but then Mr Wilson was killed by a hit and run driver. Paige Wilson was left to raise Megan, alone; but her job fell through and she was then forced to move to that crappy apartment that I had found them in and Paige was finding things really difficult financially.

Now, this was kinda getting too close to home, so I decided that I wanted to help out as much as possible.

"This isn't charity; it will be hard work! You would be running the place, doing the books and other administration type stuff. What do ya think?" I asked.

"I'd love to!" Paige replied, with a broad smile. "Anything to get back to work and get our lives back on track!"

"I'll come by and pick you up on Monday?"

"That would be fine! Little madam will be at school," Paige replied.

I looked down at Megan, whose expression had finally changed from intense thought, to intense surprise. Her eyes then went wide as saucers and her mouth dropped open! I knew exactly what she had worked out; damn that kid was intelligent! I raised a finger to my lips and bent down to her ear.

"Our - little - secret!" I whispered.

When I stood up, Megan's expression was one of extreme happiness!

West Ridge

Even though Chloe was well and truly grounded, I had asked that she be allowed to check in on the two Brits.

I was still very unsure what to do about them. Okay, Hit Girl seemed to gone a bit soft when dealing with innocent British kids, who were way out of their depth! I knew nothing about these two kids, but I couldn't just kick them out onto the streets. That was where we had found them and they hadn't been doing too well!

For now they could stay in that apartment and Chloe would check in on them, periodically. I sent over a cell phone today, so at the very least I would be able to speak with them, when required.

I did not want them seeing any more faces, at least not yet!

Chapter 107*: D-JAK

The following weekend

Saturday

D-JAK Dojang

Without the help of Paige Wilson, I could never have got things sorted out so quickly; she was a genuine expert at her job!

She had arranged adverts, insurance, signage and the dozens of other things that were required to get the ball rolling. Most of these things I did not have a clue about! I had even given her a large advance on her salary, to help her and Megan out. Paige had full authority for the security and finances of 'D-JAK', as we had called the place. After a lot of thought, we had named the place after our parents: Damon, James, Alice and Kathleen!

Megan had appeared during some of the late evenings that Paige had spent getting things setup and, with Paige's permission, I had used her for some of our publicity material.

Marty was a genius with a camera, so I had asked him to take some staged photos of Megan in a white v-neck gi, in a number of different stances. Megan actually seemed to enjoy herself greatly! Turned out that the kid loved to have her photo taken and wanted to learn some martial arts skills!

I had ensured that either Dave or myself were with Paige and Megan for security each evening, as the nights were dark and cold. It occurred to me that maybe she should have a car that would help improve her security for getting to and from work; I would need to look into that!

I was getting a little concerned about D-JAK, as I would be getting a lot more exposure to what Dave called 'normal people'! He would constantly remind me that I would need to be courteous and also that I would need to tone down my language, quite a bit! The fucker actually threatened me with that damn swear jar!

What was it going to be like dealing with 'normal' people? I had tried that, over a year ago and look what happened! I had also started to gather together everything that I would need to teach the different levels of students. There was no reason for me to be nervous, but I was. Dave assured me that he would be there with me, every step of the way.

I was so damn lucky to have Dave!

On another note, I had Chloe and the British twins to sort out!

Chloe was grounded, till the middle of December and was not enjoying it so far; she was suffering through four weeks of no Fusion and no Josh, except at school! This was not as good as it sounded, because Josh had refused to talk to her for the first week, unless absolutely necessary. Chloe was still in the bad books with Josh and so far I could not get him to budge, but I didn't exactly put that much effort into it; Chloe would have to suffer the consequences of her actions; but I suppose I'll have to fix that, too! Yes, I was pleased that Dave had manipulated me into forgiving Chloe, but I was also kinda mad with Dave for doing that. But, ultimately, I knew that Dave had done the right thing, as usual!

The British twins... A conundrum!

Should I trust them and maybe bring them into Fusion?

Unlike Justice Forever, we didn't wander around the safehouse with our masks on and I was still uncertain about letting the twins see anymore faces!

That night

West Ridge

While laying in bed, with Dave, he asked me a question.

"Are you gonna go overboard with Christmas, this year?"

I laughed and cuddled into him.

"Maybe!" I replied; I loved Christmas!

"I assume you want a tree?"

"Of course!" You couldn't have Christmas without a tree!

"Can I dress you up as an elf?"

I thought about that one.

"Not me! I might look for some sexy Christmas underwear, though!"

"I could live with that, I suppose! Mistletoe?"

"Definitely!"

"Party?"

"Could do... I need to find out if the old man will be with us for Christmas."

"Marcus is not old!"

"To a seventeen year-old, anybody over thirty is old!"

"You really have led a sheltered life!"

The next day
Sunday
West Ridge

I had a visitor: Josh.

Josh was bored and needed somebody to talk to, about 'Fusion stuff'. He still wasn't talking to Chloe, so he had decided to come and see me, instead.

"You really need to start talking to Chloe; I've forgiven the little bitch!" I said.

"I know I should, but I can't... She obviously thought only of herself; I thought she cared about me!"

"What? Of course she cares about you, Josh!"

"She risked her life and could have been killed... Chloe is all that I have left, from my past life. She almost fucking threw that away!" Josh responded, almost shouting the last sentence. He was getting really worked up over this and I could see the emotion spreading across his face; he meant every word.

"It wasn't entirely her fault. She got herself all wrapped up in the whole 'Shadow' thing. It happens, believe me, I know! There are times when I feel that I just have to be Hit Girl; I need that release. Josh, don't let this come between you both; I promise you, you will regret it! You need Chloe and she needs you. She became a damn vigilante after what happened to you, last year and she almost lost you a second time, back in New York. I know you love her and she really loves you. Go talk to her. Go make up with her... Make out if that's what it'll take!"

Josh actually blushed.

"I'm being really stupid, aren't I?" Josh asked finally.

"Not really. Chloe hurt you, doing what she did. We all make mistakes Josh; I have made many whoppers in my short life and so has Dave. Chloe is young and so are you. You will make some big mistakes, too, before you're much older that will really piss her off! You've made one or two already that have pissed me off! A certain safehouse in New York comes to mind!"

"That wasn't entirely my fault!" Josh argued.

"I forgave you though, didn't I? I also forgave you for the motorbike incident!"

"You're not gonna let those things lie, are you? Point taken; I'll go see Chloe! Thanks Mindy," Josh said and got up to leave.

"Enjoy yourselves!" I said with a smirk.

Later that afternoon
Morton Grove

I got out of the cab and walked up to the front door; I was a bag of nerves.

The door opened, before I could knock. Dr Bennett was standing there, looking down at me. That woman always scared me for some reason!

"Hello Joshua, come in."

I felt a little confused.

"Mindy called and explained the situation. Chloe is still grounded, but I don't want her stupid mistake to come between you two; as far as friendship is concerned, anyway!" Dr Bennett announced. "Chloe is sulking upstairs... Just try not to wake the neighbours!"

I felt my face warming up, rapidly, so I bolted for the stairs, leaving Dr Bennett smirking.

..._...

I barged straight into Chloe's room and shut the door behind me.

"What the..." Chloe started, but I didn't let her finish.

I dived onto the bed, pushed her down and kissed her, full on the lips. I saw her eyes almost double in size and she moaned... I felt something else that was doubling in size, too!

..._...

"Damn it to hell!" I announced, pulling my clothes back on.

"You yanks really have a way with words!" Josh replied, as he pulled up his trousers, but was still staring at my bare chest.

"You Brits have a hell of a way of forgiving somebody, without using any words at all!" I responded.

We had had one hell of a time, together. My legs were still tingling and thanks to Josh, I also needed a shower! I was really pleased that Josh had come over and more than a little surprised that Mom had let him in! It also concerned me that I hadn't all that quiet, during the... Er... Activities!

"Mindy suggested that making out might help to break the ice between us!" Josh responded, with a smug grin.

"I really am sorry, Josh. I didn't mean to put other people in danger," I started.

"Chloe! Let's just leave things as they are, okay?" Josh said and gave me a kiss.

..._...

Josh flew past my Mom and out the door as fast as possible.

I just stood there, at the bottom of the stairs, feeling intensely embarrassed.

"You two sounded like you were having fun!" Mom commented, with a knowing smile. "So he forgave you?"

"Yeah! Things got a bit messy, but he eventually forgave me!" I replied, blushed and then bolted back up to my bedroom and started giggling uncontrollably!

West Ridge

My cell rang.

It was Dr Bennett.

"Hi, Doc!"

"Mission accomplished!" Dr Bennett said and I could hear the laughter in her voice.

"Did they..." I prompted.

"I heard noises that I definitely never expected, or wanted, to ever hear from my daughter!"

"They do get a bit noisy!" I admitted.

"Tell me about it!"

Morton Grove

A text arrived.

It was from Mindy: 'I could HEAR you two from here!'

My mouth dropped open!

Then another text came in; Mindy again: 'Semen comes off easier when it's FRESH!'

I felt mortified!

The Farm

A text arrived.

It was from Mindy: 'By the SOUNDS of it, you hit the spot!'

My mouth dropped open!

Then another text came in; Mindy again: 'I heard forgiveness EXPLODED everywhere!'

I felt mortified!

West Ridge

When I got home, Mindy was giggling on the couch.

"What's up!" I asked.

Mindy passed me her cell and I looked through her recently sent texts.

"You have a dirty mind, Mindy Macready!" I said, laughing. "So they made up or should I say 'made out'?"

"From what Dr Bennett says, they were loud!" Mindy said and started laughing.

The following morning

Monday

West Ridge

The weather was getting colder and we had a tiny bit of snow!

I know it's only November 25th, but I'm still starting to get excited about Christmas. Dave says I'm just a big kid! Even better news; Marcus will be with us for Christmas. He said that he needed to be in Chicago anyway, so would look forward to Christmas with us and maybe even the New Year!

I told Dave the good news.

"God, he's being brave!" Dave commented.

"And what's that supposed to mean?" I asked, indignantly, knowing exactly what he meant.

"Well, he'll have to put up with Little Miss Christmas and her giddy behaviour!"

"It's not my fault I enjoy Christmas and get a little overexcited!" I retorted.

"You do excite easily, I'll agree to that!"

"Asshole!" I growled, then laughed.

That afternoon

I was in a good mood and apparently an evil one, too!

My cell rang, soon after lunch.

"Hello Chloe!" I said cheerfully!

"You - are - an - evil - bitch!"

"What?" I asked innocently.

"Don't play innocent, with me, Mindy Macready!"

Oops!

"I will not have people sending texts about what people may, or may not, be spraying over my naked body!" Chloe stormed.

I then heard a voice, from Chloe's end of the call.

"Who is spraying what over your naked body?" A boys voice asked.

"Fuck dammit!" Chloe yelled and the connection was cut.

Oops!

Lake View High School

I was going to fucking kill Mindy!

I span around to find Josh's best pal: Mike Taylor.

"As to who, that is my business. As to what, well you'll find out once you reach puberty!" I retorted angrily. It had to be a damn boy, who overheard my outburst! Mind you, Mike was okay, it could have been much worse!

"If you dare..." I started, pushing Mike up against the wall.

"Chloe, leave Mike alone!" Josh said, running up, followed by my best friend, Avery.

"Oh, I might have known! It was you who was..." Mike started, grinning.

"Shut up, if you know what's good for you!" I interrupted.

"What is going on?" Josh asked.

"Mike overheard a conversation I was having with that evil bitch, about you and me, last night!"

"Oh!" Josh said, blushing.

"If either of you two breath a damn word, I'll cut your fucking testicles off!"

Avery gasped at my language.

"Avery, get a grip!"

"You need defusing!" Josh stated and before I could reply he had grabbed me and then kissed me. I went all limp, before he stood me back up.

I started to shout at him, but couldn't.

"Damn you, Joshua!" I said and felt slightly damp in places that I wasn't about to mention! "I need the bathroom!"

"Wow Josh, please kiss me like that!" Avery said, hopefully.

"He does, he'll die a hideous death!" I called back down the corridor.

West Ridge

A text appeared: 'I hate you SO much right now!'

Lake View High School

Mindy replied to my text: 'You're the one with a BIG mouth!'

She was a real bitch!

Mindy sent another text almost immediately: 'Maybe you should stick SOMEBODY in it!'

I wanted to throw the damn phone down the corridor. Damn, my face was getting hot! Take a deep breath Chloe, she's just trying to wind you up... She's succeeding too!

West Ridge

"Oh, you are so evil!" Dave commented, looking over my shoulder at my cell.

Chapter 108*: Curtis

One week later
Saturday
Chicago

Chloe's life had been turned upside down. Not just her life, though, but also Commander and Dr Bennett's lives, too!

Why?

Curtis.

But not for the reasons that you would normally associate with Curtis!

This was most definitely not Curtis' fault; Chloe had actually broken down when she tried to tell me what had happened and Dr Bennett had had to take the phone off of her. Dr Bennett had explained that Curtis' parents had both been killed that morning; it had been a car accident, nothing more. The worst thing though was that Curtis didn't know yet; he was staying with friends and wasn't due home till tomorrow.

To say that I was speechless was an understatement! I offered, or rather stammered, my condolences, as Curtis's Dad was Commander Bennett's brother. I understood that Commander Bennett had been granted emergency leave and he was on his way home from Norfolk Naval Base, Virginia.

Dr Bennett said that she intended to drive to Washington DC and break the news to Curtis and then bring him back to Chicago. I suggested that I could go with her, to help with the driving; it was a seven hundred mile drive that would take around twelve hours. Dr Bennett said that she could manage, but I refused to back down. Finally I won the argument and I picked up Dr Bennett and Chloe in the SUV and we started the long drive to Washington DC around one that afternoon.

Five hours later
Cleveland

We stopped just south of Cleveland, for a short break and to let Dr Bennett take over the driving.

The drive had not been fun; Dr Bennett was still beside herself with worry and Chloe had cried for a solid hour, before she finally fell asleep. The family had been hit very hard by this double loss.

Dave and I had intended to do everything that we could possibly do to help.

After many long, boring and very depressing hours, we finally arrived in Washington DC.

It was after midnight, so we stopped at a pre-booked hotel and grabbed some much needed sleep.

Early the following morning
Sunday
Washington DC

We awoke around eight and grabbed showers and breakfast.

I did not envy Dr Bennett one bit; she had to break the news to Curtis!

After breakfast I drove the SUV to where Curtis had been staying with his friend; Jimmy. I went to the door with Dr Bennett while Chloe stayed in the SUV, by her own choice.

Naturally, Curtis was very confused and more than a little worried to find Dr Bennett, looking for him. Indeed, he was very surprised to see me! I took Jimmy's mother off to one side and explained the situation; she was shocked, to say the least, just like I had been. While I was with the parent, I heard Curtis, in the other room: "No!" he screamed.

With Jimmy's help I had gathered Curtis' gear and helped Curtis into the SUV, where he promptly cuddled into Chloe and cried his eyes out. The next destination was Curtis' home to pack some essential items. Despite my usual detached emotions that I used when I killed people, I felt that I was close to losing it. Dr Bennett was family to me, as was her daughter. I had never met Curtis' parents, but I was feeling their loss and I knew how Curtis' was feeling; I had been there, although my experience was not quite the same!

..._...

We loaded several bags and cases into the back of the SUV, that were loaded with Curtis' clothes and personal possessions. Dr Bennett also gathered up important paperwork and documentation that Curtis would require, such as his passport and birth certificate. I did what I could, to help Curtis gather together his possessions. He had moved on to a state of auto-pilot. The tears had stopped and he went around his room, picking things up and packing them. He talked to me, as he went around and explained what he was doing and why; I let him talk and made suggestions of things that he might need. I had already packed all the clothes that I could find. I also grabbed his duvet and pillow, from his bed, so he would at least have something of home.

I had also found his Taekwondo gi and his white belt, with yellow tag. He was doing well! I packed these carefully, as I was sure that he'd want to use them.

By the time we were ready to head back to Chicago, it was mid-afternoon. I drove the first stretch and we stopped around six and checked into a hotel. Dr Bennett had a room to herself, while I shared a room with Chloe and Curtis.

Curtis had barely said a word, since we left Washington DC and this was worrying, as normally he wouldn't stop talking! Chloe tucked him up on the couch, in the room, while we had a bed each.

It wasn't easy trying to get to sleep, with both Curtis and Chloe crying.

The next morning Monday

I awoke the following morning, with a body in bed with me.

I thought it might have been Chloe, but it turned out to be Curtis! He felt me move and turned to look up at me and he tried a rather forced half smile.

"Hi kid," I said.

"Hi Mindy. I'm sorry, I couldn't sleep on my own and Chloe pushed me out of her bed!"

"Don't worry, I've been stuck with Chloe in my bed more than once!"

"Thanks for helping me, Mindy. You and Chloe are some of the closest people I have left..."

Curtis then started sobbing. I couldn't think of anything else to do but hug him. The poor kid; yes, I'd lost both of my parents, but they were almost twelve years apart and I had never even known my mother.

Curtis stopped sobbing several minutes later and I suggested that he go get a shower, which he did. Chloe then awoke and moaned about having to wait for Curtis to get out of the bathroom. Chloe always moaned about Curtis, but I knew that she loved him dearly and they had both got a lot closer over the summer.

Early afternoon Chicago West Ridge

We finally arrived back in Chicago and I dropped Dr Bennett, Chloe and Curtis off, before heading back home.

"That fucking sucked!" I exclaimed, as I sank onto the couch beside Dave.

"I won't ask how it went; I can see that you struggled!" Dave responded.

"I tried every trick I knew to suppress my emotions, but dammit, I'm not a fucking Cyberman; I need you Dave!" I said, as I grabbed Dave and hugged him tight.

Later that week
Saturday
D-JAK Dojang

Curtis had been coming down to the dojang for the past couple of days.

He had got fed up with sitting around at his new home. Commander Bennett was home and was understandably upset. This Curtis did not want to see, so he started coming down to the dojang.

The kid had apparently been attending Taekwondo classes, while in Washington DC and was reasonably proficient; he had acquired his 9th Kup white belt with yellow tag. He had also changed a little, physically and had built up some muscle and lost some excess body fat. He seemed to be very serious about his training and spent hours pounding a bag, or practicing his Taekwondo form. I was there to keep an eye on him, as most of us were worried about his emotional state. He had not really talked to anybody, since moving in with the Bennetts, a week ago.

I called Megan over and pointed out Curtis to her, then suggested that she go over to make friends. I also advised her that Curtis had just lost both his parents and to go easy on him!

..._...

"Hi, I'm Megan!"

"And I'm busy!" Curtis replied, curtly.

"Hey! I'm trying to be nice here, ass!" Megan retorted, with a little of her usual attitude.

Curtis paused, looked at me and then turned to Megan.

"Sorry, that was unfair; I'm Curtis!"

"I lost my Dad a few months ago; I'll listen if you want to talk," Megan said.

Curtis looked at Megan, then looked over at me and I was sure that I saw a little of the normal cheeky Curtis, as he smiled, just a little, but still he smiled. I nodded encouragingly and Curtis went over to a corner and sat down, Megan followed and sat down across from him and they both started to talk.

"That was a good idea, Mindy," Paige said, coming over.

"The poor kid hasn't any friends here, just us, until he starts school on Monday. I just hope he can make a friend and he is the same age as Megan and they do, unfortunately have a few things in common!" I replied.

Actually more than Paige really knew!

Megan knew that I was Hit Girl and so did Curtis, but so far Megan didn't know that Curtis knew and Curtis didn't know that Megan knew! Also Curtis knew who everybody in Fusion was and about Safehouse A, whereas Megan only knew about me so far, but probably had ideas about the others, as she had met Dave, Chloe and Josh. There was absolutely no way that she would match Josh with Jackal and she had not really met Shadow yet, nor had she properly met Kick-Ass, either. For now that's how I was keeping it.

Talking of Paige, she was a godsend! I had gone ahead and bought her a Jeep Grand Cherokee SUV, to use for transport, which also served as a mobile advertisement for the dojang, too! D-JAK was building up a steady list of users for both the gym side and the martial arts training. I was intending to start classes in the new year, two to three times a week. I was also giving discounts to members of the CPD.

..._...

After Curtis and Megan had chatted for about forty minutes, I saw them both laughing together, which was a very good start. It was the first time that I had seen Curtis laugh, since he had arrived in Chicago.

"You two okay?" I asked, walking over.

"Yeah, Curtis is a bit strange, but I can work with that!" Megan replied.

"Megan is totally nuts, but I've been around worse!" Curtis added and threw me a smug grin.

"Curtis, why don't you show Megan some of what you have learned to get your yellow tab," I suggested. "Megan, that yellow tab will be your first target!"

"Okay! Come on Megan; let's see what you're made of!"

That afternoon
D-JAK dojang

The question that I had been dreading finally came.

"Mindy, can we talk... Privately!" Curtis asked.

"Okay!"

We went upstairs and sat down in the part of the building that I was intending on converting into a safehouse.

"I know what you're gonna ask, Curtis!" I said. "We've been here before and the answer is still no!"

Curtis looked angry.

"Why not?" He asked angrily.

"You're three months past your tenth birthday; that's why!" I replied.

"That isn't fair. I have nothing else left in my life; I need something and Fusion is it!" Curtis retorted.

"Curtis... I... You're putting me into a really difficult position and I don't like it!" I replied and was starting to get angry myself. Curtis saw my anger building, but refused to back down.

"I don't care, you're gonna...," Curtis started to shout, but then calmed down. "Look... Please... I need your help Mindy... I know Aunt Cathy would say no and Chloe would probably slap me for asking, but I know you won't. Would you at least help me train, show me how to fight, how to use weapons? I need something to focus my mind on, something that isn't my dead parents!"

I just stared at Curtis for a while, sorting out my thoughts.

"I'm not saying yes, but I'm not saying no, either. Please let me think about it and I will, I promise you."

"Thank you Mindy," Curtis said and gave me a hug!

That evening
West Ridge

"Dave, why do people gravitate towards me to talk or to cry on my shoulder?"

"Good question! Normally, I would not see you as the type!" Dave replied with a smirk.

"I'm serious, Dave!"

"Well, when you aren't chopping people into tiny little pieces, you can be a very kind and loving young woman. That is one of the many, many, many reasons why I want to spend the rest of my life with you!" Dave replied, honestly, before continuing. "You've helped Josh, you've helped Chloe and you've helped Curtis. They all respect you and know that you won't lie to them, not to mention that you also tend to speak your mind! You may be, the hard as nails, Hit Girl, but you are also a woman and a big sister to them all and that's what they see you as."

I honestly had no response to that.

Chapter 109*: Training

The following weekend
Saturday morning
Safehouse A

"Come on! Fight! I'm a girl dammit; I should be a push over! Bet Megan fights better, too!"

"I am fighting, bitch!"

"A bit of attitude! Now that's a distinct improvement; not sure about the language though!"

"Eat dick, cunt!"

I laughed and couldn't stop!

"You're winding me up; that's not fucking fair!" Curtis whined as I fell down onto the mat, still laughing.

"You've developed quite the vocabulary, there!" I commented.

"Just 'cause I don't use it, doesn't mean that I can't!" Curtis replied. "Anyway, Chloe can be very foul-mouthed when her Mom isn't around and she thinks I'm not listening!"

"It's just not what you'd normally hear coming out of a ten year-old's mouth!" I responded.

"And you only started swearing last year, huh?"

"Okay, I've been swearing like a trooper, since I was six and a half!" I admitted. "Doesn't mean it's right, though!"

I had spent an hour putting the kid through his paces and I was impressed! In the three months since I had last seen him, he had learnt a lot and he could flip a balisong, almost as well as I could; I warned him not to let his Aunt Cathy see!

"Okay, clever dick!" I said and sat him down in the armoury, then passed him a Glock 17 pistol. "Take it down!"

I watched as Curtis ejected the magazine, a little clumsily as the Glock 17 was a full sized pistol and Curtis' hands were small; I was being a bitch on purpose, but what's new! He placed the magazine onto the table and then locked back the slide and visually checked that there was no round in the chamber, then released the slide and pulled the trigger after having pointed the gun, safely, at the floor. So far, so good!

Next he struggled a bit, again due to his small hands, but managed to remove the slide and take out the recoil spring and barrel, which he placed on the table, beside the magazine. He placed the frame of the pistol down on the table, too, then he smiled up at me smugly!

"Okay, smart ass! I'm impressed!"

"Thank you!" Curtis replied, again smugly.

Morton Grove

I took Curtis home and followed him in.

"Hi, Chloe!" I said.

"Hi, Mindy! Curtis! You need a shower, brat!" Chloe commented, wrinkling her nose.

"I'm going!" Curtis moaned and ran upstairs.

"Dr Bennett, could I have a word, please," I asked politely, then looked towards Chloe. "In private."

Dr Bennett raised her eyebrows at my unusually polite tone.

"Okay!"

I followed Dr Bennett out to the garden and she turned to face me.

"Curtis wants you to train him. Am I right?" Dr Bennett asked, straight out.

This was not a surprise; not much got past Dr Bennett!

"Yes... He asked me last weekend. I said no, but he kept pushing and eventually I said that I would think about it. I ran him through some stuff today and I have to admit that he is very good, for a ten year-old!"

"Firstly, please start calling me Cathy, Mindy; we've known each other long enough! Secondly, my nephew, my godson; it's difficult, my only daughter already risks her life with you and also out on her own, as past events have shown! He's only ten, but I am also aware that he is as strong willed as Chloe and he might go and try to be a vigilante on his own, like Chloe has done twice and completely fucked things up twice and almost died twice! I trust you Mindy and I know you will do absolutely everything possible to keep my daughter safe. I suppose that I'm going to have to entrust my nephew to you, too. Please look after him, just like you do with Chloe."

"I will, er, Cathy, but he won't be going anywhere for a long time; he has a long way to go before that!" I replied. "Can I tell him?"

"Yes!"

..._...

We went back inside and Curtis was just coming down the stairs, in clean clothes and having had a shower.

"Curtis!" I called.

"That's me!" A grinning Curtis replied.

"All right you little shit, I'm gonna train you, but you 'aint going anywhere till you're done and I say that you're done, even if that takes ten fucking years!" I told him.

"What?" Chloe asked, incredulously.

Curtis' face broke into a huge grin and he ran over and hugged me, then let go and hugged Dr Bennett, who tried to smile but couldn't.

The following morning
Sunday
Safehouse A

"Let's have some fun!"

"Cool!" Chloe said.

"You won't be!"

I think sudden realisation must have dawned.

"No... Please!"

I ignored her pleas and continued.

"It is time to tear Shadow apart, piece by shadowy piece! Lessons need to be learnt and what a great real-life example!"

..._...

We were all sitting in the briefing room.

I was on one couch, with Dave. On the other couch were Chloe, Josh and Curtis. Abby was over at the other end of the room, pounding on the computer.

"Awesome!" Curtis said.

"I'm gonna kill you, boy!" Chloe growled.

"Remember Curtis, Chloe is perfectly capable of carrying through with that threat!" I cautioned.

"Sorry!" Curtis mumbled.

"Now, Chloe... You sitting comfortably?" I asked, in an evil tone. "Then I shall begin!"

..._...

"Rule number one! The inviolable rule number one and the first catastrophic mistake that Shadow made!" I began. "Why should we never go out alone... Curtis?"

"Something really bad might happen that is beyond your control," Curtis said.

"Bullseye!" I said and Curtis blushed with happiness. "Now, who is good enough to go out on their own?"

"You?" Curtis asked.

Little creep!

"No!"

"Dave?" Curtis tried again.

"Dave! You saying Dave is better than me, fuckwit?"

"Probably not!" Curtis replied quietly.

"I should damn well think so! Dave better than me; I fucking ask you!"

"Thanks for the compliment kid!" Dave said to Curtis, who smiled happily.

"Okay, we never go out alone! Even I am not good enough. I am good, I am very good; but we all need to know our limitations. I learnt by bitter experience..."

"The hard way as usual!" Dave interrupted, to general laughter.

"Yes, the hard way! But I want to use my hard won experience to allow you guys to learn the easy way, okay?"

"Yes," Curtis, Abby and Josh said.

"Yes, Mindy," Chloe said and started to look very miserable..

"You sure you got that, Miss Bennett?" I asked again, very seriously.

"Yes, I've got it!" Chloe responded firmly and I think I had got the message through.

"Shall we take a short break, before we continue?" I suggested, seeing how miserable Chloe was getting.

..._...

After a hot drink, we all sat back down again.

"Next comes what I saw as the most unforgivable of Shadow's mistakes. She ignored me completely, she ran headlong into a situation that she had no awareness of and she ignored my advice! I've been doing this shit for over ten years; Little Miss Shadow, here, has not even been doing this for ten fucking months! When I say 'no', it's for a damn good reason and I don't give a fucking shit if you disagree with my decision and the same applies to advice from Kick-Ass. He's been around the block, on and off for nearly six years. I am fucking serious about this, okay?"

"Yes," Curtis, Abby and Josh answered.

"Yes, Mindy, it won't happen again!" Chloe said and sounded somewhat subdued.

"The last of Shadow's mistakes and one which I will hold my hand up to and admit to having made myself... Before that green asshole reminds me of it! She ran out of ammunition; it never occurred to her to take extra! Last time that happened to me, I almost died, but my backup saved me!" I said and leaned across to Dave and kissed him on the cheek.

"Yuck!" Curtis commented.

"Ammunition is heavy, so we can't carry unlimited amounts; unless you're muscle bound like Dave!" I said and smirked up at Dave, while Curtis rolled his eyes. "I recommend at least ninety to one hundred rounds as a minimum, if you are using an assault rifle or personal defence weapon. Luckily Shadow had her pistol and extra magazines, but it all could have ended very badly for her!" I finished.

There was silence.

"Now, I hope that you have all learned something from this!" I said.

"Yes, Mindy," Curtis, Abby, Chloe and Josh said.

"Lunchtime!" Dave said and Curtis, Abby and Josh ran out and upstairs.

Dave and I sat down either side of a very subdued and miserable Chloe.

"Do you understand why I put you through all of that?" I asked.

"I deserved it, I know that," Chloe admitted and she looked really gutted.

"I had to make sure that you really understood your mistakes. I was impressed though, that day, at least in the middle! You had the presence of mind to protect your identity and call for help and above all and most importantly, you admitted to me that you knew you had made a mistake," I said and gave Chloe a hug.

"You did okay, girl," Dave commented.

"You have to admit though that your humiliation was a lot less than mine! When I ran out of ammunition, I had to be rescued by Kick-Ass! Not once, but twice! Now that was humiliating!" I admitted.

"Not funny!" Dave retorted.

..._...

I had a nasty feeling that Marty and Kim were getting closer.

It had been Kim's birthday on Monday, although she had refused to admit how old she was!

"How old are you, now?" I had asked.

"A lady never gives out her age," Kim had replied.

"I give out my age," I had responded. "Kinda!"

"Well, we all know that Hit Girl isn't exactly a lady!" Kim had said.

I was annoyed at that! I could be a lady, just not all the time!

I also had a feeling that Marty and Kim would be the next couple within Fusion! Dave agreed and was expecting Marty to propose by Christmas.

Chapter 110*: The Russians Strike Back

One week later
Friday
Safehouse A

I geared up, along with the rest of the team.

The two kids and I would be out, together, ensuring that the last weekend before Christmas, was a peaceful one for the City of Chicago!

For the first time, Medic would be joining Kick-Ass, Battle Guy and Hawk for a patrol. They would be acting as backup for us, but would not be patrolling with us. This was also the first time that Josh, Chloe and myself had seen Medic ready for action. Chloe thought she looked kinda cool! I had obtained some new combat gear for her, very similar to that worn by Battle Guy. This new gear would protect her much better than the kit she had worn previously. Personally, I thought it was kinda weird seeing Cathy packing a Beretta!

Shadow, Jackal and I, took off on our motorcycles. Battle Guy, Hawk and Medic took Beast, while Kick-Ass was on his Fat Boy. The control centre was manned by Hal, Eisenhower and Trojan...

Now, you may ask: who the hell was Trojan?

Well the little shit needed a codename. Not a Super Hero name, mind you; not yet. Just a codename for use over the comms and when in we were in costume. Cathy didn't like leaving him all alone at home, so had to bring him with her! He would at least be able to keep Hal busy and if he misbehaved then Eisenhower could eat him; at least that's what I had told him! Chloe had, of course, suggested a few codenames of her own; none of which were even remotely suitable!

Hit Girl, Shadow and Jackal

I couldn't believe that I was out on patrol with my Mom!

That thought was kinda awesome and actually gave me a warm feeling inside. I also had to remember to think about what I said over the comms, as Medic would be listening. I had got into a little bit of trouble about some of the things that I had said on Halloween and had no desire to repeat that experience!

I thought that Mom wanting to come out with us, was a bit of a distraction from the shock of two weeks ago. Dad had gone back to his ship, last week and was now at sea, in the Atlantic somewhere on a six month deployment that included NATO exercises in the United Kingdom. I missed my Dad, a lot, especially as we were now a lot closer.

It also felt good having Jackal beside me too and we had two whole weeks, together, before we had to be back at school.

Kick-Ass, Battle Guy, Hawk and Medic

I followed Beast, as we cruised around Chicago, in a very high visibility manner.

We received a lot of happy waves, from both the public and Cops! We stopped for something to eat, after the first hour and listened to some of Battle Guy's dirty jokes, which ended up with Hawk, Medic and Shadow giggling, fit to burst! I was certain that I also caught a brief giggle from Hit Girl, too!

Chicago's criminal population seemed to be behaving, this evening. While this was good, it also made for a rather boring patrol!

This rapidly changed, when I received a rather disturbing call from Voight.

One of his informants had told him about the current Russian Mafia situation and that they were building themselves up again and most disturbingly, they wanted revenge! In this case Voight was convinced that it would be revenge against Fusion and more specifically, Hit Girl. I had thanked Voight and told him that we owed him one.

I checked my heads-up-display, which was constantly updated with Hit Girl's current position, by Hal. Hit Girl, Shadow and Jackal were currently stationary.

"Hit Girl, Kick-Ass!"

"Hi! What's up?"

"Voight called. The Russians are on the move and want revenge; most probably on a certain purple vigilante!"

"Crap!"

"We're heading towards you now. You'd better keep put of sight, till we get there."

"I'm on it!"

I explained the phone call in more detail to Battle Guy, Hawk and Medic. They were all rather shocked. Battle Guy immediately turned Beast towards Hit Girl's current position and put his foot down.

I followed, on the Fat Boy.

Hit Girl, Shadow and Jackal

I was very worried about what Kick-Ass had told me.

The Russians would be mad, very mad. Normally, when I pissed people off, I killed them, which stopped them coming after me! Things were gonna get very bad, very quickly. I had immediately told Jackal and Shadow to close up on me and be vigilant, as the Russians could attack any time and any where. I was just thankful that we had some advance warning.

If the Russians attacked tonight, we three would need to hold out until Kick-Ass arrived with the heavy weaponry, in Beast. We were currently on foot a distance away from our motorcycles. I could sense the fear that emanated from Shadow and Jackal. I was doing my best to be calm, but I knew the danger, as well as, if not better than the others.

I was very keen to get back to our motorcycles and get back to the safety of the safehouse.

We turned the last corner, literally a few dozen feet from the motorcycles, then a voice called out...

"Посмотрите, что мы здесь!" [Look what we have here!]

I span around and saw a group of armed men behind us. We had no choice but to continue around the corner.

"Ready yourselves!" I growled to Jackal and Shadow. "This is not good!"

"I have a bad feeling about this!" Jackal said.

"Kick-Ass you had better get here right the fuck now!" I called over the comms. "They're here!"

"Four minutes, Hit Girl!"

I seriously didn't think that we had two minutes, let alone four. Time to stall.

"Перейти на хуй!" I growled. [Go Fuck yourselves!]

The man who had called out, stepped forwards. He was obviously a senior Russian and had an enormous Krysha on each side of him.

"Это время для вас , чтобы умереть, Хит Девушка! Детишки тоже!" [It is time for you to die, Hit Girl! The kiddies too!]

"Перед тем, как встать на путь мести , копать две могилы!" I growled back. [Before you embark on a journey of revenge, dig two graves!]

"Действует настроения. Я возьму на себя риск," The man responded. [A valid sentiment. I will take the risk.]

Time was running out and fast!

I drew a Katana and waited while Shadow prepared her bō-staff and Jackal prepared his ninja-to. We would have to fight, we had no other choice.

I started to run forward, followed by Jackal and Shadow.

Kick-Ass, Battle Guy, Hawk and Medic

We were still a block or two away, from Hit Girl and approaching at speed.

Suddenly there was a monstrous noise and a cloud of dust and debris could be seen billowing from a street, ahead and to our right.

Inside me, I knew that that was the street where Hit Girl, Shadow and Jackal were.

Hit Girl, Shadow and Jackal

I started to come around and found myself lying face-down on the street.

My body ached. I raised my head and I could see Jackal lying on his side, a few feet away; he was not moving. Shadow was just beyond him, face-down and again, not moving. My ears were ringing and everything was eerily silent, which was strange considering a building had just blown up beside us!

As the seconds passed, I started to hear some of the surrounding noise. In front of me I could see the Russians, who had been standing, conveniently, outside the blast radius, heading towards us. From behind me I heard the throaty roar of a large motorcycle, then almost immediately a much louder noise started to assault my ears. The banging noise continued and got closer, from behind me. I tried to move but couldn't. A large pair of black and green boots stepped over me and crunched through the glass and rubble. Used shotgun shell-casings rained down around me, as the shape that I quickly recognised to be Kick-Ass, fired his new toy; the AA-12 fully-automatic shotgun. I saw the Russians being literally blasted back by Kick-Ass' onslaught.

I felt hands grabbing me and hauling me to my feet. I turned to find Medic smiling at me.

"Come on Hit Girl! Let's get you out of here," Medic shouted cheerfully, over all the noise.

"What about Jackal and Shadow?" I yelled back.

"They're fine!" Medic replied and I turned to see Hawk and Battle Guy running towards Jackal and Shadow, as Kick-Ass covered them with his monster shotgun. Damn, my own personal terminator!

Medic helped me over to Beast, as I couldn't walk straight on my own and pushed me into the passenger seat. Then she helped Hawk push Shadow into the seat behind me. Battle Guy had pushed Jackal in the other side. Both Jackal and Shadow looked concussed and uncoordinated. I was having trouble focussing and I think that I must have passed out, as they next thing I knew, we were speeding away from the scene, with Battle Guy at the wheel.

Kick-Ass, Hawk and Medic

"Beast is clear!" I heard Hawk yell.

The last of the Russians were falling to my onslaught. I turned as Murphy and Fellowes pulled up at the scene and looked in horror at the literal pile of dead and mutilated bodies, in front of them.

"That weapon really suits you Kick-Ass!" Murphy commented. "We could hear the damn thing, blocks away!"

"Can you take custody of the motorcycles?" I asked, looking at the two Honda motorcycles that belonged to Shadow and Jackal.

"No problem! They'll be safe!" Fellowes responded.

"Let's go Hawk!" I said, then turned to Medic. "You think you can handle that?"

"No problem... I think!" Medic replied, mounting Hit Girl's Ducati.

"You scratch it, she'll fucking kill you!" I warned.

Medic just laughed and started the motorcycle, before roaring off!

I just shook my head, as I braced the Fat Boy for Hawk to climb on behind me.

Safehouse A

By the time I pulled into the safehouse, Hit Girl, Shadow and Jackal had been removed from Beast and we're currently lying on the mat, while Marty, Abby and Curtis helped to remove their masks and comms. I parked the Fat Boy and Hawk climbed off. She pulled off her own mask and comms quickly and then ran over to help with the injured teenagers.

It looked like the combat suits had taken the brunt of the impacts from flying debris, but the three of them must still be badly bruised and I think concussed too. The combat suits looked a real mess, but they seemed to have done their job as all three of them were all still alive.

At that moment Medic rode in and parked the Ducati beside me. She was grinning from ear to ear.

"You enjoyed that, did you?" I asked.

"Hell yes!" Cathy replied, pulling off her mask and comms, then climbed off the motorcycle. She ran over to the mat and started checking out Mindy, first.

I pulled off my own mask and comms, then walked over and checked on Chloe. Kim and Battle Guy were helping Josh out of his combat suit. I helped Abby and Curtis with Chloe's combat suit, before going over to check on Mindy.

Mindy was coughing steadily; she must have breathed in a lot of the dust. I helped Cathy pull off Mindy's combat suit and found a lot of bruises, but I was pleased to see that nothing seemed to be broken.

Once Cathy had finished her checks of Mindy, Chloe and Josh, she tallied up the injuries.

Mindy had a badly bruised right shoulder and a concussion, plus many smaller bruises but nothing worse.

Chloe had a concussion, multiple bruises over her body and a nasty bruise on her left thigh, but again, nothing worse.

Josh, naturally had acquired the worst injury; along with a lot of bruises, he had also sprained his right wrist rather badly and Cathy had strapped it up for him.

Between us, we had got the three teenagers into bed and the rest of us got out of our combat suits and sat down with some coffee.

..._...

"Thanks, team!" I said.

"No problem Dave, we just did what we do!" Marty said.

"That was a fun first patrol!" Cathy admitted, with a smile. "I enjoyed the Ducati, though!"

"Never a dull day around here!" Kim quipped.

The following morning Saturday Safehouse A

I awoke to a lot of pain.

"Ow!" I whispered.

"It'll hurt, Mindy, but you're gonna be fine," Dave said.

Dave was sitting on the bed, beside me.

"Chloe, Josh?" I asked, concerned.

"They're banged up a bit, just like you, but otherwise they both survived. They're still asleep."

"How did we get back here?" I asked.

"Marty brought the three of you back in Beast. I rode back with Hawk and... Er... Medic brought your Ducati back!"

"Dr Bennett rode my bike?" I responded angrily, sitting up and ignoring the pain.

"Calm the fuck down! She got back safely!" Dave replied. "Didn't know she could ride though!"

"That woman keeps surprising the fuck out of me! Now I know where Chloe gets her damned brazenness from!"

"You're so cute when you're mad!" Dave said, smirking.

"Asshole!"

..._...

I inspected my body, in the shower. It was a fucking mess; bruises everywhere and my right shoulder hurt like hell. The hot water helped soothe things just a bit, enough to take the edge off at least! I got dressed and went to check on the kids.

I checked on Josh first; he was just getting out of bed and he looked a fucking mess, with bruises everywhere. He smiled at me weakly.

"It looks worse than it really is, I think!" Josh said. "I'm gonna get a shower, ease my aching bones!"

I laughed and it hurt!

Next, I checked on Chloe. She had just got back from the shower and again, I hoped that she actually looked a lot worse than she actually was!

"You okay, Chloe?"

"I've been better; everything hurts!" Chloe replied and I could see tears in her eyes, from the pain. "Could you help me get dressed?"

..._...

Once Chloe was dressed, I went to get Josh and then we headed for the kitchen, which sounded quite noisy!

Once we got there we found that the kitchen was very full. Dave, Marty, Kim, Abby, Curtis and of course, Cathy were there, drinking coffee and finishing off some bacon and eggs. We were all ushered into seats and had food placed down in front of us. Curtis insisted on helping Chloe!

"Once you've eaten I'll check each of you over, okay!" Cathy advised. "Make sure that you all drink and eat."

While I was stuffing bacon and eggs into my mouth, I suddenly had a thought.

"Cathy! When did you learn to ride a motorcycle?" I asked, accusingly.

"Ah!" Cathy scowled at Dave. "Dave told you, did he?"

"What? Mom can't ride a bike!" Chloe stated.

"Oh yes she can!" Dave corrected Chloe. "She rode back on Hit Girl's Ducati, last night!"

"She did what?" Chloe exclaimed.

"There was no room in Beast and Kim rode back with Dave, so I brought the Ducati back. I used to ride dirt bikes; started when I was fifteen. Your father had a motorcycle, years ago and I often rode on the back, not to mention borrowing it from time to time. I know more about riding motorcycles than Mindy does!" Cathy elaborated.

"Yeah, right!" I responded.

"Maybe I'll get a motorcycle; I'd forgotten how much fun it was!" Cathy said, smirking.

"Thanks for bringing my motorcycle back. What about the other two motorcycles?" I asked.

"Fellows took them; I'll pick them up later," Dave replied and I saw relieved looks on Josh's and Chloe's faces.

Chapter 111*: Gravity

Saturday Safehouse A

Dr Bennett had finally proclaimed us all well enough, to go home.

I still felt very sore and so did Josh and Chloe, but that was an unfortunate side effect of being a vigilante. The explosion had been on all the news networks and was in most of the newspapers. For now the explosion was down to a 'gas main issue', as the City didn't want to cause any undue alarm for the general public. But of course, we knew better!

Josh and Chloe had come back home with us, while Cathy had taken Curtis back home.

Early afternoon West Ridge

Dave had been behaving very strangely, since we had got back home.

The reason for this strange behaviour knocked on the door, soon after lunch. Dave had gone to answer the door.

"G! Come on in my man!" Dave said and brought a strangely familiar man into the living room. Even stranger was the fact that Sophia jumped up, with her tail wagging madly!

"Damn! You are a lot hotter now, than the last time I saw you!" The man said to me and I felt myself blushing. Who was this man?

"Dave!" I said, in worried confusion.

"You probably wouldn't recognise him out of costume and the last time that you saw him without his costume... Well things kinda got a little busy... It was at the funeral!" Dave explained.

"Oh, right; sorry, things were a bit busy that day!" I replied, still confused.

"This is Isaac Swanson," Dave announced. "Otherwise known as Dr Gravity!"

Wow! This was one of the founding members of Justice Forever; he was in the picture, at the safehouse. He had fought alongside me.

"It is really good to see you again; I owe you a debt!" I said, happily, shaking his hand.

"No problem! Always knew that you two would get together!" Isaac replied. "Congratulations on the engagement, Hit Girl!"

"Thanks! You knew who I was, at the funeral?" I asked.

"I had a faint idea when I saw you at the funeral, yes."

"How come you're here?" I asked.

Just as Isaac was about to respond Josh appeared from upstairs, where he had been with Chloe since we had got back.

..._...

"What is Mr Swanson doing here? Whatever it was, I didn't do it!" Josh announced, looking and sounding guilty.

Now, I was confused and so, apparently, was Dave.

"You know Mr Swanson?" Dave asked.

"Of course! He teaches me and Chloe Physics, at school," Josh explained.

Isaac laughed.

"Oh, this explains so much!" He said.

"Please explain?" I asked, curiously.

"Well, young Mr Williams here, has a habit of making things go bang! No matter what it is, he somehow manages to make it explode; I have to follow him around with a damn fire extinguisher!" Isaac explained, dryly.

"Isaac, meet Jackal!" I said with a laugh.

"So, my British Physics pupil, who likes to blow things up, is a vigilante that runs with Hit Girl!"

..._...

"What's going on?" Chloe asked, appearing in the living room and looking worried.

"Ah! The redoubtable and intrepid Miss Bennett; Mr Williams' partner in crime!" Isaac announced. "More questions answered!"

Chloe looked even more confused and looked more worried.

"Isaac, this is Shadow! Josh, Chloe; please say hello to Dr Gravity!" Dave said.

"Our Physics teacher was a vigilante!" Josh and Chloe exclaimed together.

"You'd better believe it!" I announced, grinning. "Dr Gravity fought against Chris D'Amico, side by side with Hit Girl and Kick-Ass!"

"And I thought you were just a normal, boring teacher!" Josh said.

"My teaching bores you?" Isaac asked, with a smirk.

"That was not what I meant!" Josh said, quickly.

"I'm really pleased to see Sophia, too!" Isaac said, stroking the big dog.

We all sat down, on the couches and got back to the original conversation.

"I've managed to stay in touch with the other original members of Justice Forever. Admittedly, though, some are no longer around. The Colonel, obviously. Night Bitch was murdered last year," Isaac said and looked at Dave.

"I know. I read about it, in a paper."

"Insect-man; he was murdered around Easter, but I don't know the details."

"What! That's horrible!" Dave responded, sounding really hurt.

"At one stage I thought somebody was hunting us again!" Isaac said. "Well, Shannon called me and let me know about that wonderful thing you all did!"

I saw Dave and the kids, start to look uncomfortable and I felt it too.

"You did good, finding Tommy... that was awesome!"

"Shannon gave me Dave's number and that's how I got in contact. I moved to Chicago over the summer and started teaching these delightful children, Physics!"

"Well, by 'delightful', you're obviously excluding these two!" I said, with a smug grin.

Chloe scowled, while Josh just ignored me.

"Chloe and Josh are among my better students...", Isaac said and I got smug looks from both kids.

"... When they can both keep their hands and eyes off of each other!" Isaac added, dryly and both kids hid their faces behind their hands!

Dave and I laughed.

"How are Tony and Shannon?" I asked.

"Not good. They blew everything they had on finding their son; their business has collapsed and... I don't know."

I looked at Dave and he nodded.

"We need to help them. I owe them; they both stood beside me at that warehouse and fought alongside us," I said, firmly.

"I agree!" Dave added.

"Let's get them up to Chicago. I can put them up, for now, in one of my apartments; we still have a couple empty," I decided.

..._...

We chatted for a bit longer and then it was time for Isaac to leave.

"Remember, anything you need, I'll help. But, for now, I'd like to keep out of harm's way!" Isaac said, as he got up to leave.

Dave looked at Josh and Chloe.

"Remember you two: Mr Swanson is your teacher and for now, neither of you know him personally. Understand!" Dave said.

"Yes Dave!" Both kids acknowledged.

"Does this mean that we'll automatically get an 'A' in Physics!" Chloe asked, hopefully.

"It certainly does not, young lady!" Isaac replied, with a chuckle. "Look after yourselves, guys!"

"That was a bit surreal!" Josh said.

"Yeah, never thought teachers actually had a life, outside of school!" Chloe admitted. "But, we have the coolest Physics teacher ever!"

"You two can go back to your fucking now!" I said, with an evil smirk.

Chloe glared and Dave laughed.

"We were not fucking... We're not there yet!" Chloe responded and both kids blushed, then bolted for the stairs.

I looked at Dave.

"Well that answers one question; cherry not yet popped!" I quipped.

Chapter 112*: Fulfilling a Debt

Two days later
Monday

Firstly, Kick-Ass had picked up Shadow's and Jackal's motorcycles, then returned them, safely, to Safehouse A.

Chloe and Josh had been very worried about their motorcycles, which was quite amusing. But apparently they saw nothing amusing about potentially losing their Fusion motorcycles!

Yeah! I was a bitch; get over it!

West Ridge

Winter vacation had begun and I could spend time all my time with Josh!

We were both naked and together; nothing exactly new there! Only this time, I was gonna do it! To be completely honest, I didn't know what to expect! I had heard all sorts of things being talked about it at school, but I had absolutely no idea what was real and what was just total bullshit. This was going to be Joshua's Christmas present, well part of it at least!

I hesitated for a minute and just stared at it.

Just get on with it Chloe! You might enjoy it... But then you might not! Well, you'll never know until you try! All sorts of shit was going through my mind, but damn if I wasn't turned on; Josh's foreplay was very good!

I took him into my mouth... Josh tasted okay and I suppose normal. What the hell was I expecting; a special flavour? It felt good, though, warm and smooth and very hard! As I ran my tongue over the tip of his dick, Josh started to catch his breath and I quickly identified certain tongue movements that had extra effect on Josh and his breathing; it felt good being in control and I was enjoying myself immensely! I'd heard some girls say that this act was subservient and demeaning to the opposite sex and should not be tolerated. But Josh wasn't forcing me to do anything; I was in full control of my actions and was never, ever, going to be forced to do anything against my will!

I continued to excite Josh and was really enjoying myself, but then in all the excitement I had forgotten something else; I had forgotten what this act would lead to, but Josh reminded me when he called out my name.

"Chloe, I'm..."

I missed the rest as my mouth was suddenly filled with a hot, silky liquid. I pulled back quickly, swallowed what was in my mouth and then promptly received a blast directly in my face; luckily none went in my eyes, as I had been told that semen stings! As it was, I now had a gooey substance sliding down my face and then down over my tits and chest. My right hand which was still holding Josh was covered. This wasn't the first time that I had been covered in semen, but the first time that I had tasted it or had it all over my face!

Josh was looking at me and he laughed!

"It's not funny, cunt!" I growled, but I still laughed and grabbed a towel. Once I had wiped my face off, I lay down on top of Josh, squishing the semen on my chest between us. I kissed him again and again.

"I love you Joshua!"

"I love you Chloe!"

My wrist was still very sore, but Chloe had taken care of things for me!

She still looked beautiful, despite all the bruises that were still visible on her slim frame. I wasn't a great deal better, but Chloe didn't seem to notice and in our excitement we had ignored any pain, from our injuries of the weekend.

I was actually quite surprised that she went ahead with that! She had always seemed a bit squeamish about that sexual act, but... Wow... What an experience!

Central Chicago

I had gone to do some final Christmas shopping, in the SUV.

The trip back seemed quite uneventful, until a smart new, iceberg white, Ducati motorcycle pulled up beside me, at a stop light. The rider, clad all in black, but with a red stripe on the helmet, looked towards me and nodded, before revving up the motorcycle and rocketing off the very moment that the lights turned green. To be honest, I turned green too - with envy! I wasn't ready to ride any of my motorcycles yet, thanks to my still healing injuries.

I paid no further attention to it, but then I started to get concerned, when a few miles down the road, I had pulled up at a stop light and the same Ducati Multistrada motorcycle pulled up beside me. Again, the black-clad rider revved the twelve-hundred cubic-centimetre, one hundred and sixty horse-power engine.

Okay, I know the specification of every Ducati - call me a fucking geek, I don't care! But the motorcycle sounded so cool and I was damn jealous. I felt pangs for my purple Ducat. I could tell that it was a woman riding the motorcycle, too!

The lights went green and the motorcycle accelerated away, smoothly working up the six-speed gearbox, as it went. It was not a superbike, like mine, but still awesome nonetheless. It also looked really cool, with the twin side panniers. The back of my mind reminded me that seeing the motorcycle twice, like this, was more than a coincidence; this was danger!

I didn't see the motorcycle again, until I was turning into West Columbia Avenue, just yards from home. I pulled up beside the house, by the side door and watched as the white motorcycle pulled up behind me.

Now I was very worried!

The motorcyclist had not shown any hint of hostility, nor was there any sign of them being armed. I casually climbed out of the SUV and turned towards the unknown rider. Just as I was advancing and starting to show hostile intent myself, the motorcycle rider reached up and removed her helmet.

To say that I was shocked, would have been a fucking understatement!

"Fucking hell, Cathy!" I exclaimed and glared at her.

"Sorry Mindy... Hope I didn't scare you!" Cathy said, with an evil smirk.

"What's this then? Mid-life crisis?" I asked, indicating the brand-new 2015 Ducati Multistrada 1200 S motorcycle.

"Well, after riding your Panigale, I decided that I wanted a piece of the action! This machine beats that Jeep, any day! Just picked it up this morning - saw you and thought I'd have a bit of fun!" Cathy explained, with absolutely no hint of shame, whatsoever!

"I am actually very jealous!" I responded with laugh. "You know Cathy, you can be such an evil bitch!"

"Takes one to know one!" Cathy replied with a laugh.

The following day

Tuesday

Safehouse A

Dave and Marty were bringing in some very special guests, directly to the safehouse, in Lucille.

Right on time, Lucille pulled in and stopped beside Beast. A smirking Marty climbed out of the driver's seat and slide open the rear door. Out climbed Kick-Ass and three people; one of whom was a young boy.

Dave and Marty walked the three people over to the mat, where Kim, Chloe, Josh and I waited. None of us were in costume for this.

"Tony, Shannon, Tommy please meet the other Fusion operators: Hit Girl, Hawk, Shadow and Jackal. Otherwise known as Mindy, Kim, Chloe and Josh," Dave said, pointing out each person as he said their name.

"It is so good to meet you all," The lady, Shannon Morgan said. "Thanks to you, Tommy came back to us."

"Thank you, all of you," The man, Tony Morgan said smiling at us all.

The boy, who was several inches shorter than Josh, stepped forward. He looked a hell of a lot better than when we had last seen him, two months ago. Then he had been very thin and covered in bruises. Now, though, he looked like a healthy young boy, close to his eleventh birthday.

"Hi, it's great to see you guys again. I never really got the chance to say thank you, for rescuing me," Tommy Morgan said, with a cheeky smile.

"It was our pleasure Tommy! I'm sure that I speak for the whole of Fusion, by saying that I'm glad that you are back together, as a family," I said and got affirmative comments all round.

"Fancy a tour, Tommy?" Dave asked.

"Cool!" Tommy replied excitedly.

We showed Tommy and his parents the armoury; which Tommy thought was really cool and he recognised our combat suits. Next we went into the briefing room, where he immediately saw the pictures, on the wall.

"That's Mom and Dad?" He asked.

"That's them," Dave confirmed and named each of the other members of Justice Forever.

Later that afternoon
West Ridge

After the tour, we went out to get something to eat and then found our way back home.

While Dave kept Tommy occupied, I took Shannon and Tony into the kitchen.

"Come to Chicago, permanently... I understand that New York is not going too well for you, right now. Tommy needs a fresh start; he was only in Chicago for a couple of months, before we found him. I will find you work and a place to live, if you want."

Shannon looked at her husband for a minute, before turning back to me.

"But, why?" Shannon asked.

"We are fulfilling a debt that Kick-Ass and I owe you guys..."

"You did that by finding our boy..."

"You don't want to fight me on this one, Shannon!" I laughed, meaningfully.

..._...

The Morgan family went back to New York that evening, for Christmas. Shannon promised that they would contact us after Christmas, with a decision.

I could tell by her eyes that she was going to seriously think about my offer.

Two days later
Wednesday

I had a surprise for my little pal!

Megan was sitting beside me in the SUV and she was wearing a blindfold. I had told Paige that I was picking up some stock, which I was, but I was actually giving Megan an early Christmas present.

I parked the SUV and removed her blindfold. Megan blinked in the bright lights. I climbed out and met her around the front of the SUV.

"Welcome to Safehouse A!"

Megan was speechless and just kept looking around, absorbing everything. She stared at the four motorcycles, neatly lined up and then at Beast. Eventually she took in the mat and the main building.

"Thought you'd appreciate an early Christmas present, Megan!" I said.

"Wow!" Megan exclaimed. I think she was completely overloaded! I couldn't help laughing at her.

"Come on!" I said and showed her the armoury, with the combat suits.

"Awesome, I love it!" Megan said, examining each and every blade and firearm.

Next came the briefing room.

Megan ran over to examine the pictures.

"Fucking awesome!" Megan exclaimed, staring at the picture of Big Daddy and Hit Girl. "How old were you?"

"I was almost eleven, when that photo was taken. That was my Daddy," I replied.

Megan looked up at me.

"I'm sorry."

"Thanks."

"You look really cool in that costume, Mindy!"

"I loved that costume, especially the pink utility belt!" I said, reminiscing.

I showed Megan around upstairs and then returned to the mat.

"Thank you Mindy, for showing me this," Megan said.

"I trust you Megan and know that you'll keep my secret," I said, giving her a big hug. "Merry Christmas!"

We got back into the SUV and I blindfolded her again and we headed towards Megan's home.

"Megan, we've given you a codename: Wildcat! Remember it, in case you ever need it, okay? We never use our real names, when we're in costume. Nor do we use our Hero or codenames, when we are not in costume."

"Wildcat... Cool! Thanks, Mindy!"

Later that evening

It was hard to believe that we had been in this house one whole year!

I had been settled and happy for an entire year and the best bit... I had been settled with Dave!

..._...

We were not to be alone this Christmas Day.

Along with Dave and I, we would be joined by Marcus, Cathy, Chloe, Josh and Curtis. Marty had gone to spend Christmas with his family and taken Kim with him! Josh would be with us, as Jack and Natalie had gone to see family and Josh wanted to stay in Chicago. Cathy, Chloe and Curtis didn't want to be alone for Christmas. We would have a very full house!

..._...

"I can't sleep!"

"Here we go again! You're gonna get me up at six again tomorrow, aren't you?" Dave groaned.

"No... I'm gonna let you have a lie in!"

"Yeah, right!"

I felt Dave's hands start to move across my body and couldn't help smirking!

Chapter 113*: Festive Fusion

Author's Note: A Merry Christmas to everybody!

The following morning

Thursday

West Ridge

It was very cold outside, but it wasn't snowing.

Of course, it was toasty warm inside, though.

I felt happy, really happy; I loved Christmas!

I turned from the window and looked at Dave; he was still sleeping soundly.

Now, we couldn't have that, could we? But hold on: I did promise him a lie in, though and Hit Girl never lies!

I fucking knew it!

I opened my eyes and found the expected girl with soft amber hair, jumping up and down on the bed shouting, "It's Christmas!"

I looked at the clock... For fucks sake, Mindy!

"It may be Christmas Day, Hit Girl, but you promised me a fucking lie in!" I growled.

"I did and you got one!" Mindy responded, with a laugh.

I looked at the clock again.

"Eight minutes! I suppose that's better than fucking nothing!" I growled back.

"Come on, Dave!" Mindy begged.

I heard an annoyed growl from Sophia, across the room.

"See, even Sophia doesn't like being woken up this early!" I offered.

She's seventeen years-old and can kill a grown man, any one of a hundred ways and without the tiniest of hesitation. But when it comes to Christmas, she's like a normal fucking teenager. Well, I should be used to it by now!

God, Mindy.

I threw back the duvet and sat up. Mindy was wearing nothing... absolutely nothing! I grabbed her around the waist and pulled her down onto the bed. She screamed and then giggled.

"Happy Christmas, my gorgeous fiancée," I said, then kissed her deeply, running my hands over her perfect body.

I loved my Dave.

He put up with me being a big kid, every birthday and every Christmas. I knew that he complained about being woken up early, but I also knew he loved me and always would! What the fuck, it was only two days a fucking year!

After a little bit of Christmas fun, it was time to get up. It was also time to wake Joshua... He had confided in me that he was dreading today; his first Christmas without his father.

..._...

"Morning, Joshua!" I called, as I looked into his bedroom.

He was awake and was finishing off getting dressed, pulling on a t-shirt.

"Merry Christmas, Mindy!" Josh said, with his usual cheeky grin.

"Merry Christmas to you too, Josh," I replied and gave him a Christmas kiss, on the cheek. He blushed!

"How sweet!" I teased, then more seriously. "You sleep okay?"

"I think so, I just feel a little bit sad that's all," Josh replied.

"Come on!" I said and headed downstairs, closely followed by Sophia.

..._...

Dave was just putting on the coffee, when I got to the kitchen.

"Merry Christmas, trouble!" Dave said.

"Me?" Josh asked.

"Both of you, actually! Mindy and Christmas are trouble!"

"Am not!" I growled indignantly, but laughed anyway.

"Merry Christmas, Dave," Josh said.

I knew the peace wouldn't last!

"Dave, I love you!" Mindy said, behaving like a fire-cracker that was about to explode. She was holding a very large present that she had 'found' in the dining room.

"Tell me you love me, after you've opened it!" I said, laughing. Mindy ran back through to the dining room and I heard the ripping of paper, in a very violent fashion.

Josh appeared and he looked a little overwhelmed. In each hand was an FN Five-seveN pistol, each one brand new. The pistol was black, with a silver-coloured inlay on the grip and mottled-tan slide. The barrel was also threaded, to allow a suppressor to be attached. The boy was genuinely lost for words!

"You okay, Josh?" I asked, knowing that he wasn't.

"I don't know what to say..."

"Chloe has a custom pistol, so we thought it was time for you to have the same!" I said. I could see tears in Josh's eyes.

"Thanks, Dave... I'll thank Mindy when she's calmed down!"

Right on cue we could both hear squealing coming from the dining room.

Mindy then appeared with a dangerous looking blade, in each hand and with the most enormous smile imaginable!

"I think she likes them Dave!" Josh quipped, heading back into the dining room to put his pistols away.

"Dave, they are fucking perfect!" Mindy blurted out, while I kept my distance.

Mindy was holding two battle-ready swords. One was a Katana and the other a Wakizashi. They were both identical in design, except for their length. These were intended to be displayed on a black sword stand, which I had also bought. The fact that they were battle-ready meant that they could also be used for defence or attack. The set together formed a Daisho.

Mindy vanished back into the dining room.

..._...

When Mindy returned, she gave me an enormous and rather painful hug and kiss. Then she took a large, green-wrapped present that Josh had been holding and gave it to me. It was rather heavy!

I placed the present down on the kitchen side and started to unwrap the green paper, with yellow ribbon. I decided to use more decorum than Mindy, when she had unwrapped her present! Unfortunately my slow pace seemed to annoy Mindy, who was hopping from one foot to another and she looked like she needed the bathroom rather badly!

Once I had removed the wrapping, I found a large black, canvas bag that was approximately three feet in length. I unzipped the bag and opened it out, flat. Inside was a custom Heckler & Koch G36K assault rifle in black and dark green. The 'K', I knew, stood for 'kurz' or 'short'; as in the G36K was the short version of the G36 assault rifle. The G36K was almost five and a half inches shorter than its larger cousin and just over five and a half inches longer than the G36C that we usually carried, as well as being half a kilo heavier, too! The weapon was generally similar, except for the longer barrel.

This was not a standard G36K rifle. It was fitted with a combination laser designator and light, which was mounted above the barrel. Below the barrel was a mean looking AG36 40-millimetre grenade launcher. On top of the weapon was a combination iron and telescopic sight. The stock was foldable and on the end of the barrel was a Rotex-III compact silencer.

Mindy was looking at me expectantly and she looked like she was about to explode, with anxiety!

"It's fucking awesome, Mindy; I love it!"

Mindy must have been holding her breath, because she let it out all in one go.

We had a lot of work to do, this morning.

Christmas dinner would not cook itself!

At about eight, there was a surprise knock on the door, just as I was staring at the enormous turkey and trying to figure out what to do with it! Dave answered the door and I heard a chorus of 'Happy Christmas' welcomes. I recognised Chloe's voice as well as Curtis' and Cathy's.

"You guys are kinda early!" I called from the kitchen.

Cathy came over.

"Considering your cooking skills don't go beyond the microwave... I thought that maybe I should take over!" Cathy said, with an evil smirk.

I scowled and Josh started laughing.

"As I have said before: you are evil, Cathy!" I responded, stabbing the turkey and leaving the kitchen!

Dinner was left in the hands of Cathy and Dave, with Chloe's assistance!

..._...

Marcus arrived, mid-morning.

He looked into the kitchen and found Cathy.

"Thank God!" Marcus said, sounding very relieved. "I was worried that Mindy might be cooking!"

"I heard that!" I yelled and everybody laughed; assholes!

..._...

"Chloe!"

"Yeah, Mindy!"

"Can Josh spare you for a few minutes, or is he like your life support?"

I blushed and nodded that I was coming.

"Now I wasn't sure what to get you... Maybe a Lo-Jack for the next time you wander off alone?"

"Funny!" I replied, with a scowl.

"I then considered a big box of condoms..."

"You are so not funny today, Mindy!"

"Then I considered this..."

Mindy handed me a large, long package that was quite heavy and my hands started to shake. I pulled off the dark blue wrapping paper and found a black, plastic case. It could only be one thing... I opened the case very slowly.

Inside was just what I was expecting to find... Almost! It was an FN P90 Personal Defence Weapon, similar to the normal weapon that I had down at Safehouse A. The difference was that the weapon I now held in my hands, was slate grey, with a navy-blue horizontal stripe down each side of the weapon. On the end of the barrel there was the normal attachment for a suppressor, which I noticed was also in the black case. On the front right of the weapon was a combined flashlight and laser sight. Mounted on top of the weapon was a wicked looking optical sight. I inspected the weapon from end to end. It was totally awesome.

Finally, I placed the weapon back in the case and then turned around and grabbed Mindy tightly. After a minute I heard Dave talking.

"You think they're gonna make out next?" He asked.

I looked up to see a rather bemused Mindy, then let her go.

"Sorry! I love it Mindy, thank you!" I said, then felt my face get very warm, very quickly.

"Thought you'd like it!" Mindy laughed.

"Cool!" Josh said. "You can see mine, if I can see yours!"

..._...

The rest of the morning and early afternoon was spent enjoying ourselves, while dinner was cooking.

Finally, we all sat down to dinner and almost immediately, I embarrassed myself!

It was a tight squeeze, around our table, for seven people, but we managed it and then for some reason or other, I started crying! Tears were pouring down my face; I felt intense emotions within me, but at that moment I couldn't explain them!

"Mindy, what's wrong?" Dave asked first, which directed everybody else's attention towards me.

I saw concern on everybody's face, especially Marcus' and Dave's.

"I'm sorry, I don't know what's wrong with me!" I tried and I was getting a little worried now.

It was Cathy that finally figured it out.

"Are you feeling happy or sad?" She asked.

"Happy... I think," I replied, still crying and starting to feel a little panicky.

Cathy looked at Marcus.

"Would this be the first time that Mindy has had a big Christmas, like this?"

"Yes, it would!" Marcus admitted, after a moment's thought.

I looked at Cathy, hopefully.

"Mindy, you're feeling an emotion that you obviously haven't felt very often before, at least not in public, like this. You're feeling overwhelmed, but in a good way; you feel happy about being in such a close setting as this, where you are surrounded by your friends and family. I also know that you have an acute love for Christmas, which you always see as a special time. It's all perfectly normal, what you are feeling!" Cathy explained, with a kind smile.

"Thank you, Cathy... I'm sorry everybody... I guess most of you aren't used to seeing me cry."

"It's not your fault that you are starting to feel real emotions that are not usually related to Hit Girl's normal activities!" Cathy continued. "It just shows that you're human and nobody here is gonna hold that against you, girl."

"Hit Girl is human?" Dave asked. "I suppose anything's possible!"

"Ass!" I replied and laughed.

..._...

We enjoyed a very good meal; Cathy's cooking was good, very good!

At the end of the meal Marcus stood to make a speech.

"It has definitely been an interesting year! My, increasingly wayward, daughter is now engaged to the boy that I once warned her to stay away from... Since when did Mindy ever follow my advice? But the swear jar did pay off my mortgage!" Everybody had a laugh at my expense; what's new! "I am actually very, very pleased that Mindy chose to completely ignore me and continued to see Dave; I owe Dave for finding my daughter and keeping her safe. Over the past year, Mindy has acquired several new vigilantes for her 'Fucked Up Super Hero Club!' Conveniently, both Chloe and Joshua are complete nut-cases, which it seems is an important criteria for joining Fusion!" This got some more laughter and Chloe and Josh sank down in their chairs. "Now, let's raise our glasses to family and friends; especially those family and friends who are absent today and for ever. They stay in our hearts and our minds, we see them in our memories and they will always be remembered..."

Everybody took a couple of minutes to think about those they had lost. I noticed Curtis with tears running down his face, being hugged by Cathy. Josh was being hugged by Chloe as tears ran across his cheeks.

..._...

After dinner we all sat down in the living room, together.

"Mom, can I ask you a very personal question?" Chloe asked.

"You can, but you might not get an answer!" Cathy replied, with a smile.

Chloe hesitated.

"You mentioned... Several months ago, when you found out about me becoming Shadow and once or twice since... You, alluded to something that happened to you and Dad, when you were young..." Chloe said, before tailing off into an awkward silence, when she saw Cathy's pained expression.

"Alluded'... That's an interesting word, Chloe. Well we have found out new things about Mindy, so I suppose it's time for this story to be told. You sure that you want to hear it, Chloe. It is not a happy story and I'm a bit wary about Curtis hearing it, but..."

Chloe hesitated, then nodded.

Cathy started to talk:

He was the first person that I had ever killed, or for that matter, seen killed.

Since then, excluding Fusion activities, I've killed several people in my life, but all with a pistol, or a rifle and in each of those cases I was in combat. Also they had all been at a distance.

This man, he had died by my own hand, but with his own knife. I had rammed it upwards and into his ribcage and twisted it, until he had died. He had fought me, but I had discovered superhuman strength that allowed me to continue killing that man. He had tried to lift himself up off of the knife; he was almost standing on his toes, but every time that he tried, I had pushed the knife ever deeper into his abdomen. Blood was everywhere; I must have severed several major organs.

It had been self-defence, one hundred percent.

He, along with his brother, had tried to rape me; Ryan killed him, with that man's gun. Ryan and I were only a little older than Mindy is now, but those two bastards were twenty-three. They had coaxed me away from my friends, that night. Lucky for me, Ryan had seen them pushing me into their truck and he had come after me, on his dirt bike. His dirt bike had no lights, so they never knew that he was following us.

The man who tried to rape me, his eyes had seemed black and there had been no emotion in his eyes or face. There was no sign that he was enjoying what he was doing, he never actually said a word to me. He just pulled me out of the truck and threw me to the ground. I was almost paralysed with fear and the knowledge of what he was about to do. I was no virgin, but so far Ryan had been my first and only partner, but by consent.

The man had started to pull down my pants, ignoring my attempts at punching him. I didn't seem to hurt him, no matter what I did, which started to infuriate me. Then I saw it... The knife. It was on the man's belt, I reached for it and grabbed the hilt, reversed it, then drove it upwards into the man's stomach. He screamed and screamed, but I didn't, I couldn't ease the pressure that I had on the knife. I felt the thick, hot blood run over my hands and my body. I stood up, still pushing the blade in, then put both hands on the knife's hilt and drove it deeper into the bastard.

I was momentarily out of control and never heard the yell, from the man's brother, as he ran at me. These two brothers were not the sharpest tools in the woodshed. In this case, the second brother had left his rifle beside the truck, when he had started to run towards me after seeing his brother stabbed. I was finally brought back to reality by a rifle shot and the second brother fell to the ground and I saw Ryan standing there, with the hunting rifle to his right shoulder.

Finally, I let go of the knife and my attacker dropped soundlessly to the ground, dead. I collapsed beside him and the last thing I remembered, was Ryan grabbing me and carrying me to the truck.

..._...

I awoke the following morning, in hospital. I was clean and there was no sign of any blood, but the attack was still there in my memory.

Ryan was beside me, as were my parents. The Police had been and they had got a statement from Ryan, who had witnessed everything. The brothers' bodies had been found and had been taken to the morgue. My attacker had been found with his pants around his ankles, which backed up my story, not to mention the fact that the brothers had been bragging about wanting to rape somebody!

I was quite desirable back then, believe it or not!

Despite my being the victim and Ryan my saviour, we lived in a small community, with some that would not forgive or forget. It was politely, but forcefully, suggested that we both should be sent away, for our own good and preferably separately.

I hate to say it, but I enjoyed killing that man; he deserved it and Ryan said he was fine with killing the other brother, as he knew that the brother was probably gonna kill me! I'm not especially proud of the fact that I killed the man, nor that I seemed to enjoy it, but it had to be done. They were both bullies and enjoyed hurting people. If they hadn't died there, then they'd have probably been shot by Police or ended up in a gas chamber or electric chair!

We all just stared at Cathy, when she finished talking.

Chloe was in tears and even I was shocked.

"Well there you are; that is Catherine Bennett!" Cathy said.

"I'm sorry, Mom," Chloe said. "I should never have asked."

"Don't be silly Chloe. I think my story is very tame, compared to some others. If I hadn't wanted to tell the story, then I wouldn't have," Cathy said, giving her daughter a hug.

..._...

Something had just occurred to me.

"Marcus!" I said accusingly.

"What?" Marcus replied, with a smooth tone and an evil grin. "Took you long enough!"

"You never gave me a present!" I growled.

"I really only expected to be in the door thirty seconds, before I was strip searched!" Marcus commented, then got up and vanished.

Marcus reappeared a few minutes later carrying something very long!

"An extreme gift, for an extreme girl!" Marcus said, handing it to me.

It took me only seconds to remove the wrapping from the object and then I almost dropped it; I was shocked. It was a sword, but no ordinary sword - this fucker was longer than I was tall! It was well over five and a half feet long and quite heavy.

"It's taller than me!" I exclaimed.

"So is your Tanto!" Dave quipped.

I ignored Dave, completely!

"I've heard of these, but never seen one. It's called an Odachi, I think," I said.

"Yes, it is!" Marcus confirmed. "I was shocked when I saw that thing, but thought it was just so Mindy!"

Everybody laughed, but everybody was also very impressed and in awe of the massive sword.

"I cannot believe that somebody actually went into battle with one of these damn things!" I commented.

Chapter 114*: Goodbye 2014

A week later
Wednesday
West Ridge

It was New Year's Eve and 2015 was just around the corner!

We were all at the house, for the New Year; Marcus, Cathy, Chloe, Josh, Curtis and us two.

Things were not going well, at least not for Chloe; she had just had her ass handed to her... By Curtis!

That morning

Chloe had goaded Curtis into showing her what he could do!

Curtis had risen to Chloe's goad and had agreed to a fight, though we all knew the obvious outcome; or we thought that we did!

The pair of them had stripped down to t-shirt and jogging pants. Chloe eyed Curtis, like a crocodile would its prey. Curtis did not seem to be worried at all; in fact he had asked me for a favour and as somebody who liked to cause shit, I had been a little surprised at his request, but I had agreed!

Everybody was downstairs to watch, including Cathy, who was backing Curtis, and Josh who, naturally, was backing Chloe!

The fight started with Chloe throwing a punch at Curtis, followed by a kick, neither of which connected, surprisingly. Curtis seemed to be very quick with his movements and had obviously learnt to use his agility and mobility, to overcome his lack of stature and strength. Don't get me wrong, the kid was strong and very fit, but then so was Chloe. She had built up a lot of muscle, in her arms and legs, since we had first found her, almost a year ago and she had started some proper training, and Josh would periodically comment on her firm stomach!

Chloe was a bit slow in the recovery, from her attack, because Curtis flew in with a side thrusting kick and caught Chloe in the back, low on her right hand side and she screamed in pain and shock.

"You little rat!" She yelled and span around, catching Curtis with a roundhouse kick to his left shoulder.

Curtis absorbed the energy of the kick and caught himself before he hit the mat. I was a little worried that Chloe would forget that she was fighting a ten year-old boy and not a Russian Krysha! A few minutes later Chloe seemed to be getting the upper hand, using her experience and increased size and strength over Curtis; so I decided that it was time to even the odds... Curtis had asked me to throw in a Jō-staff, if things were going bad for him. I had no reason to say no, so I had agreed... So now I threw the staff towards Curtis and he swept it up and took up the correct stance, facing a rather shocked Chloe.

"Hey, not fucking fair!" Chloe complained.

"Who ever said fighting was fair! Vigilantes must learn to adapt; you never know when things might go to crap, eh, Shadow!" I retorted with an evil smirk in her direction. Chloe mouthed a rather foul obscenity at me, along with a scowl and went back to the fight. Curtis seemed to know how to use the Jō-staff, too! Where the hell had he learnt to do that?

Chloe needed all her wits about her now, as that staff would hurt, if it contacted her. To add insult to any injury, the Jō-staff was actually Shadow's own; yeah, I had a vicious streak! Curtis was looking for an opening, but Chloe was fast and kept on the move, while doing her best to keep an eye on the staff, as Curtis wielded it, very competently. Then Curtis managed to strike home and Chloe fell to the mat, rather hard and I saw Cathy wince, as Chloe screamed in pain; however the pain seemed to just make her madder and she jumped up and threw herself towards Curtis, who managed to sweep Chloe's right leg from under her and then strike her in the centre of her chest with the other end of the staff, before following through and landing on top of Chloe, as she fell onto her front.

Curtis had Chloe pinned to the mat, with a knee in her lower back and the Jō-staff across the back of her neck.

"Do you yield, Shadow?" Curtis growled.

Chloe tried to move and push Curtis off, but she was pinned and there was nothing that she could do. I approached and could hear a stream of whispered obscenities coming from the fallen Shadow! I was doing my best not to laugh at her humiliation, but Dave and Cathy added to her discomfort by applauding Curtis!

"Oh dear, Shadow... That did not go well..." I commented.

"Do yer think?" Chloe growled angrily and got up off the mat, as soon as Curtis had released her.

I turned to Curtis, as soon as I was back on my feet.

I felt mad, I really did. As I glared at Curtis he looked worried, not scared just worried. Curtis had surprised the hell out of me; he was really good! If I hadn't have been pissing about, then I could have put him down earlier, but I was giving him a chance - big mistake!

I smiled at my cousin.

"You did really well, Curtis... Well done! Normally the only person that puts Shadow down, is Shadow... Or Hit Girl!" I said, smirking at Mindy.

Curtis was actually blushing!

"Where the hell did you learn to use a Jō-staff, anyway?" I asked Curtis and then turned to the smirking Mindy. "And... Where the hell do you get off, giving my Jō to other people to use against me?"

Curtis answered first.

"I wanted to be you, Chloe; that's why I started to learn Taekwondo and Aiki-Jō. But then I saw sense and decided to just be myself!" Curtis explained, with a smug grin.

Cheeky little shit!

"Funny!" I replied and then I then growled at Curtis. "This isn't over!"

"Any time, bitch!" Curtis growled back, which got a laugh from everybody, as I felt my face getting hot.

Late that night West Ridge

"Are you absolutely sure that you want to do this?" I asked.

Chloe just looked back up at me and smiled. Her smile was intoxicating and it made me love her even more. She was looking lovelier, now that she had let her hair grow and it was spread across the pillow, framing her face.

"Yes damn it! I'm not lying here, stark naked and with my legs apart, just for my fucking health, Jackal!"

"Damn, you get tetchy at times, but it just makes me love you even more!" I replied, kneeling beside her. I was completely naked, just like Chloe and holding a small, square package in my hand.

"Just open the damn thing and do whatever you need to do with it!" Chloe growled.

I ripped open the package and pulled out the blue condom; it felt weird and it was my first condom. I worked out which way up it went and put it on; it felt strange! I moved over and knelt between Chloe's legs; I was very, very nervous, this was one hell of a step to take, for both of us! I was also worried, as I had done my homework and knew that this could hurt Chloe a lot more than it could hurt me.

Chloe was still smiling as I gently lay down on top of her and eased myself inside of her, slowly. I watched Chloe's face, searching for any sign of discomfort or pain. We had spent the past half an hour 'making out' and Chloe was very wet down below. I hoped that I wasn't going to make a mess of this, but everybody had to try things for the first time, at one stage or another!

Dave and Mindy's Bedroom
West Ridge

"Fucking Hell! God Dammit! That was fucking amazing!"

Chloe had yelled so loudly that we had heard her through several walls!

I looked at Mindy, who had blushed at the outburst!

"Josh must be good!" I commented with a straight face.

"Oh yeah! Pop goes the fucking cherry!" Mindy replied, before she buried her face in the pillow and started a fit of the giggles.

Author's Note: My last chapter for 2014! A Happy New Year to you all and Good Luck for 2015!

Chapter 115*: A Happy New Year

Author's Note: A Happy New Year to everybody and welcome to 2015! I must say a big thank you to all who have supported me throughout the last six months, or so, of 2014!

Forsaken will be continuing and so far the story does not have much of a planned anything, let alone an ending! As long as people continue to read, I will continue to write! If people have ideas or suggestions, please do not hesitate to drop a PM or a review. On the other hand, if my ideas start to drift and get weird and/or stupid; please let me know!

Over the coming months you should expect to see: new characters, new adversaries, new weapons and new equipment. There will also be excessive and gratuitous violence, worthy of Hit Girl, with a lot of blood being spilled. I also intend that there will be some decent levels of smut, too! Hopefully, something for everybody!

This will be the very first of, hopefully, many chapters for 2015.

The following morning

Thursday

West Ridge

Dave and I awoke that morning, feeling very refreshed and after a surprisingly good night's sleep, despite the night's loud interruptions!

By the time we had showered after our activities last night, Marcus and Cathy were up and in the kitchen. Dave and I grabbed a coffee each and also a plate of bacon and eggs that Cathy had cooked.

"This bacon is much better than yours, Dave!" I teased.

"You're a creep Mindy!" Cathy commented, but smiled at the compliment anyway.

"Much better than Mindy's!" Marcus said. "I'd actually rather eat the bacon raw!"

"That isn't fair!" I growled.

Curtis appeared next, looking a little bit tired. He was closely followed by a shy looking Chloe and a smirking Josh.

"Morning, kids! Happy New Year!" I announced and got muted responses from each of them. They both seemed a little bit tired!

"What do you guys want for breakfast? Bacon and eggs?" Cathy asked innocently, then she smirked and looked directly at Chloe and Josh, who seemed to shrink away. "Fruit juice? No cherry anymore, though!"

Chloe just stood completely still, with her mouth open and she went very, very red! Josh just grinned, sheepishly. I started to laugh and so did Dave and Marcus. Curtis, did not seem to have a clue about what was going on!

"You are so evil, Cathy!" I commented. "Well done!"

Chloe glared at me.

"Yeah! What was all that shouting about last night, Chloe?" Curtis asked. "What was so amazing?"

Chloe ignored Curtis.

"Well?" I asked Chloe. "Curtis needs an explanation!"

Chloe was still unable to move and her mouth was flapping like a grounded fish! Finally she got her voice back.

"Well he's not getting an explanation from me and not before he's thirteen!" Chloe said, trying desperately to avoid everybody's eyes and grinning faces, before turning on Josh. "Joshua, help me!"

"I got nothing!" Josh admitted after a short pause.

"Boys are so fucking useless!" Chloe growled and then blushed a bit more. "Sorry!"

"Josh didn't seem so useless, last night!" Cathy said and she seemed to be enjoying her daughter's intense discomfort.

"I think Curtis still wants an answer!" I pushed.

"Well the little shit can stick his answer... Dammit! Okay Curtis... Sex... That's was what was so amazing! Happy now?"

Chloe looked very embarrassed.

"Okay!" Curtis said, simply. "It must have been good; the whole damn zip code heard you two!"

I was no longer a virgin.

Nobody was complaining about that fact, but instead they were all making outrageous jokes at my and Josh's expense! Okay, I admit that I may have been a little bit noisy, last night! But it was the best feeling ever; I had never felt anything like it! Should we have waited? Probably, but we would both be fifteen in another six or seven months, but... I thought it was worth it and apparently so did Josh.

Well, the main thing, was that Mindy wouldn't be able to tease me about having sex with Josh; or so I thought!

Mindy could be so fucking evil!

..._..._...

At dinner that night I was rather pleased that nobody had anything further to say about Josh and me! While that was a surprise, it was also a pleasant one. Although I had only just embarked on my sex life, I had absolutely no desire for it to be part of general conversation and discussion, neither did I want it to get out at school! The other big surprise was Mom; I didn't know how she would feel about me being 'de-flowered', but the fact that so far, she had only joked about it, seemed a good start and I didn't even want to contemplate what Dad would say!

It had been good to be together with Mindy and Dave, over Christmas and New Year. They were both more than friends and fellow vigilantes to me; they were family. Dave was a big brother and Mindy a big sister. This meant that I could talk to either of them about things that I couldn't talk to Mom or Dad about; like sex.

I must have been daydreaming, because Mindy's voice brought me back to reality.

"You actually going to eat? Or are you dreaming about that super-hot sex, last night!"

"Err... No... I was just... Never mind!" I stammered, feeling everybody's eyes on me.

"Or were you dreaming about your future kids?" Mindy added.

"You evil fucker..." I exclaimed, as Josh just burst out laughing.

"And fuck you too!" I finished.

"That's all it takes!" Mom said.

After dinner that evening I was standing outside, on the deck.

It was very cold, but I wanted to be alone; I was worried, very worried. I felt that something was brewing.

Just then I felt an arm wrap itself around my waist and it wasn't Dave; the arm was too small. I looked down to my left and found Curtis looking up at me; he wasn't smiling.

"You okay?" I asked. I knew that Curtis had had a rough couple of days, what with this being his first New Year without his parents.

"I'll be fine; life continues. I'm worried about you... You look unhappy."

I smiled down at Curtis, before answering.

"I can feel trouble approaching. There are storm clouds gathering over Chicago and I have a city to protect," I replied, taking Curtis into my confidence. "I have a feeling that two thousand and fifteen, is gonna be full of trouble!"

There was silence for a couple of minutes, before Curtis responded.

"You're not alone Mindy. We are all standing alongside you and we're all ready to fight with you. You'll guide us through the storm, like you normally do; I believe in you and I know the others do too."

Quite a speech from a ten year-old! I came down to his level and looked into his hazel eyes.

"You are wise beyond your years, Curtis. Thanks."

Curtis smiled back at me.

"Thanks Mindy, you're the greatest!"

Chapter 116*: And It Begins

The three dark forms stood, side by side, on the street.

It was after midnight, the area was dark and very white.

The dark forms were masked and hooded, with cloaks; their entire outfit was black and dark grey with a silver trim. The only visible skin was around the eyes. Each bore a sword on their backs that was angled with the grip to their left shoulder and two of them had quivers of arrows on their backs and a large, black and silver compound bow in their left hands.

The drug dealers just stared at the three apparitions, as they emerged from the swirling snow, and then looked at each other, before running for it. They didn't get far as the two apparitions with the bows, raised their weapons and then each notched and released an arrow. Seconds later, the two dealers fell face down into the snow. A single arrow shaft extended vertically from the back of each body.

Both men were very dead.

The dark forms proceeded to gather up all of the money and drugs, before vanishing back into the dark night and swirling snow.

Later that day

Friday

West Ridge

"Go!" I growled, into my cell.

"Hit Girl! It's Voight. Happy New Year! You guys been using your bows, recently?"

"No, just bullets!" I responded. "And a Happy New Year to you guys, too!"

"Well, we have two dead bodies from last night: two drug dealers, with arrows in their backs. Not overly bothered about the dealers, but I might need to do you for littering!"

"Funny! Not us, this time, Voight. Let us know if you find out anything; we may have some competition in town!" I replied.

"Will do!" Voight said and dropped the connection.

"What was that about?" Dave asked.

I passed on the gist of the call.

"Another archer?"

"I hope not!" I responded, unconsciously rubbing my left arm, where The Archer had hit me. "But, we take shields when we go out!"

"Better safe than sorry!" Dave agreed.

Two days later

Sunday

Safehouse A

"Okay, be safe! You both got your shields?"

"Yes, Hit Girl!" Shadow and Jackal replied.

"Then let's hit the road!" Kick-Ass said.

Due to the reports of these mysterious archers, I had decided to forgo the motorcycles for Jackal and Shadow, but I retained my Ducati and kept myself mobile by weaving around Beast and trying not to stay in one place too long. I vividly remembered what had happened the last time that we had met an archer while I was on a motorcycle!

This was to be a routine patrol to try and find some more information about these people. We had decided to err on the side of caution and walk away from any fight; at least until we knew what we were up against.

We headed towards the centre of Chicago and drove around the dark, but currently busy streets. After a couple of hours, we started to get a little restless, with no action. We had not even seen any criminal activity, which in its self, was a little strange for a start!

..._...

"Fucking hell!" Kick-Ass shouted, as he stood on the brakes.

I did the same, coming to a smoky halt on the Ducati.

Directly in front of us, about twenty yards away was... Well I didn't quite know what, exactly. For some reason, two words came to my mind: Skyrim and Nightingale! It was definitely a woman, though and she wore a sword on her back and held a compound bow in her left hand. She stared at us for a moment, then nodded and ran down an alleyway.

The alleyway was narrow and partially blocked so Beast could not follow.

"Battle Guy, where does that alley lead?" I asked. It was obviously a trap, so I wanted to be prepared.

"Checking... Okay, it leads behind the block and to a parking lot, which should be empty at this time of night," Battle Guy advised.

..._...

We drove around to the parking lot and found three similarly equipped Nightingale's waiting for us. The one that I had seen previously had taken up position to my left of the other two. The one in the centre had a sword, but no bow or quiver and seemed to be the leader. We left Beast and the Ducati and approached. Battle Guy was watching, using a camera mounted in Beast. We stopped when we were approximately fifty feet away; Kick-Ass was to my right, with Shadow to my left and Jackal to the right of Kick-Ass. Shadow had her compound bow in her hand and an arrow notched. Jackal was similarly prepared and so was I.

"We are the Sisters of Trinity," The three woman chanted, together.

"We are Dusk," The woman on the left started.

"We are Shade," The woman on the right continued.

"We are Night," The woman in the centre finished.

"Nice!" I growled sarcastically. "Why are you in Chicago? I protect this City!"

"I don't think so, Hit Girl!" The woman called Night said. "Your reign is over!"

All three women were using voice modulators, just like those that Jackal and Kick-Ass used. In unison, the outer pair of women raised their bows, while the other drew her sword.

..._...

"You are finished!" I growled in response, as I raised my bow and released an arrow, then rapidly seized another arrow and notched it to the string.

My first arrow, which was aimed at the woman in the centre, called Night, was deflected by the armour on her left arm!

"Damn!" I growled and released my next arrow and then another and another, in rapid succession, all at Night.

She moved fast flipping to the left behind Shade, who loosed off an arrow at Shadow, who in turn responded with her own arrow before raising a shield in front of her face and deflecting the arrow fired by Shade. Jackal released his arrow at Dusk, just as she released hers at him. He repeated Shadow's movement and raised his shield, deflecting the incoming arrow.

All of my arrows had missed Night, while one had hit Dusk, but failed to embed itself in her armour.

"They have body armour!" I called over the Comms. "Probably at least Type IIA."

We advanced on 'The Nightingales', as I had decided to call them, at least for now. The archers slung their bows and unsheathed their swords. The swords looked to be hefty, but fully functional and battle-ready. They were of a single handed design with a broad two-edged blade and a sharp point. These swords required a method of fighting, which was very different from my Katana swords. They also had a much longer reach than Jackal's ninja-to or Shadow's bō-staff.

"Shadow, Jackal, you will both need to keep moving and watch out for those swords, they have a longer reach than anything you have. Use your speed and agility!" I advised over the Comms. "You take care Kick-Ass!"

"Understood!" Jackal replied.

"I can do that!" Shadow responded.

..._...

I laid the compound bow down and unsheathed both of my Katana swords, before I advanced on Night, while Kick-Ass prepared his Ko-Wakizashi swords.

My twin blades clashed with her single blade. Night had strength and a couple of inches of height on me, plus more body mass. This could be an even fight; I wasn't complacent enough to assume that I could win every fight and definitely not against somebody completely new and unknown.

My first concern was that my Katana blades may not be able to stand up to the attacks, from the much heavier blade. So far, though, my blades were standing up very well. The main problem was that Night's sword was physically heavy, by design; unlike my twin swords. This extra weight could be used to help drive back an adversary, such as myself.

Beside me, Kick-Ass was using his own weight to overcome his light and short blades, he managed to drive his armoured fist and the hilt of the sword that it held, into the face of Shade.

Shade screamed and fell backwards. At that, Night yelled out in anger and Dusk struck out at Shadow, catching her across her mouth and Shadow fell backwards to the ground. Night called a single command, which I was unable to make out; they must have been using Comms. The three Nightingales jumped onto three, identical looking, black motorcycles that were fitted with dual purpose tyres. I instantly noticed that these were very powerful machines.

I ran for my Ducati, while Jackal helped Shadow up and then they and Kick-Ass ran for Beast.

"They're Yamaha Super Tenere World Crosser motorcycles. You guys don't have the acceleration, or the manoeuvrability. Hang back and track me!" I ordered.

"Hit Girl, I'll monitor traffic and send warnings to your visor!" Battle Guy reported.

The Nightingales accelerated away, out of the parking lot and headed south. I followed on the Ducati. We turned and crossed South Ashland Avenue and accelerated in an easterly direction, along West 71st Street. We weaved between the traffic, approaching sixty miles per hour. I had a vague idea where they might be heading.

My suspicions were confirmed as they slowed and made a hard left turn after crossing the Dan Ryan Expressway and took the on-ramp heading north. I followed, after negotiating the busy junction and accelerating down the on-ramp.

Dan Ryan Expressway

The three 'sisters' sped onto the Dan Ryan Expressway, northbound and rapidly accelerated to over eighty miles per hour, the three motorcycles weaved in and out of the, thankfully light, traffic. I kept my focus on the leader, whose motorcycle was more of a very dark grey, rather than black of the other two. None of the motorcycles bore a registration plate, or any obvious signs of external identification. I weaved in and out of the traffic about twenty yards behind. Battle Guy was constantly feeding me traffic information, concerning what was up ahead. So far there were no issues, so it was still relatively safe to ride at high speed. This was one of the main things, in life that I loved: speed! My machine and my skills were perfectly matched for this chase, which was, admittedly, my first. The adrenalin was pumping through my veins, just as the gas was pumping through the engine of my Ducati.

All four motorcycles were receiving angry horn blasts from concerned motorists; it wouldn't be long before CPD joined the pursuit.

"Pass me a doughnut."

"What type...? Damn! Damn! Damn! Damn!" Fellowes exclaimed. "Four motorcycles going hell for leather and guess who was trailing in fourth?"

"Evil Knievel?" Murphy replied facetiously.

"Better: Hit Girl!"

"Cool; we saw nothing... Pass those doughnuts and quit pinching the best ones!"

Within minutes things started to get more dangerous, as motorists had a nasty habit of changing lanes without any form of signalling or other warning and this required split second responses and decision making. I had to make use of all the available lanes, including the shoulder, to avoid other vehicles and still keep the escaping Sisters of Trinity in sight. We touched one hundred and twelve miles per hour, but only for a minute, before we dropped back below the hundred.

I had no idea where the sisters were heading. They knew I was there, chasing them and I had plenty of gas, so I could chase them for a while. Kick-Ass and the others would be following me at a much safer pace, but what would I do if I did catch up to them? I was alone against three very formidable opponents. Yes they were running, but not because they were scared, but because they were calculating and knew when to call it a day!

For a short moment I lost sight of the three motorcycles and just when I had expected to regain contact... They were gone! I searched every lane ahead of me, but saw no motorcycles – not one!

"Fusion! I've lost them!" I called, dejectedly, decelerating to a much safer and much less conspicuous speed.

"How?" Kick-Ass replied.

"I lost sight of them for a few seconds and they never reappeared!" I replied angrily.

Later that evening Safehouse A

I almost threw my helmet across the Safehouse, but quickly reminded myself that it cost almost a thousand bucks!

I placed the helmet in the rack and went to check on Chloe who was removing her helmet and mask. She had a livid bruise on her left jaw.

"That looks sore!" I commented and received a weak grin from Chloe.

"Just hurts when I move my mouth," Chloe said, slowly.

"That should give our ears a rest!" Marty commented.

"Yeah, and Josh will only be able to rely on your hand rather than your mouth!" Kim quipped.

Josh and Dave burst out laughing. I tried to restrain myself, as the look on Chloe's face was priceless, but in the end I gave in and even Chloe laughed, despite the pain.

Chapter 117*: A Force To Be Reckoned With

The next day
Monday

Josh had some new competition at school, but then so did Chloe!

There were a pair of new kids at the high school and guess what? They were both British! Also, from what I had heard, Chloe and Josh's first day back on Monday, had not gone well!

Now, I was not one to gossip, but it was still a funny story.

Lake View High School

Chloe and I had been chatting at lunch.

Kyle was sitting next to Chloe, while Avery and Riley were either side of me. Mike was on the other side of Chloe and sitting next to Ethan. We had all been discussing our Christmas and New Year activities. Currently the subject was Hit Girl and the new vigilantes that had appeared just before the previous weekend. Chloe and I were doing our best to join in, but also to keep our faces straight and not leak any unnecessary information. Avery insisted on going on about her 'hero': Jackal! Mike seemed to fancy Shadow, which was kinda complicated, considering that he was unknowingly sitting right next to her!

Apparently, Kyle thought that Shadow was very hot, too and that she had some very nice curves to her body! I really couldn't work Kyle out... On the one hand I was certain that he knew about Chloe and me, but on the other hand he had never said anything... Or even hinted, for that matter. Then two new faces had halted the conversation, when they came and sat down at the table.

"Hi, I'm Dean!" A boy said, sitting down beside Kyle. The boy seemed to be a bit older than us, maybe in the year above.

He immediately got my attention, because he 'talked like me', as Chloe said to refer to anybody with a British accent.

"Hello!" I replied. "I'm Josh."

"Ah! So you're the other civilised person around here! Somebody mentioned that there was another Brit in the year. Good to meet you Josh! This is my sister, Juno," Dean said, pointing to the girl who had sat down beside him.

"Hello Josh," Juno said, checking me out. She was about Chloe's height and build, but with long, dark brown hair. She smiled at me and it was the sort of smile that would enrage Chloe, if she saw it...

Too late, Chloe had seen it and her eyes narrowed. Kyle saw this too and dived in quickly to defuse the potentially explosive situation.

"Dean, Juno; I'm Kyle. This is Avery, Riley, Mike, Ethan and Josh's girlfriend, Chloe," Kyle announced, pointing out each of us in turn.

Luckily, before things got any more awkward, lunch was over. As I was walking away, I overheard Kyle talking to Juno.

"Stay away from Josh... If you know what's good for you!"

North Park Elementary School

I was a little concerned, well, worried might have been a better word, about starting at a new school, but pleased to be with my best friend.

At lunchtime I sat with Curtis and was joined by his best friends. It wasn't so bad, because Curtis, himself, had only started at this school in the last weeks of last year.

"Guys, this is Megan!" Curtis said and introduced me to Zach, Jake and Nikki.

"Hi Megan, good to meet you. I assume you're just as nuts as Curtis!" Jake said, smiling.

"Not quite as bad!" I advised them.

"You'll do then!" Nikki admitted.

These guys seemed nice, but my mind kept drifting back to my visit to the Safehouse with Mindy. Her life seemed so exciting, but I was stuck here in school. But on the plus side, I knew about Hit Girl, which Curtis did not!

West Ridge

Back to my own troubles!

Those new nutcases, from last night. They were female, which was a change, I supposed. They were well protected, despite the appalling choice in costume. They also had a warped sense of humour for their characters, although I got the idea that they were not entirely serious. Maybe they were just nuts!

That was another potential problem! If they were nuts, then they would be particularly dangerous to everybody. What were they doing here? Why were they here? They were obviously challenging us, or more specifically me! But that just brings me back to the other questions.

I was also very mad about losing these so-called Nightingales last night – nobody outrides Hit Girl on a motorcycle!

I kept replaying the chase in my mind, trying to find how they could have literally vanished from almost directly in front of me. Marty was examining video, from the chase, which while quite cool and a little like a roller-coaster ride, yielded nothing.

That really pissed me off!

The next night Tuesday

The fight had been joined.

I wasn't exactly sure if we had found the three Nightingales, or if they had found us.

Dusk attacked me with some reasonably advanced martial-arts skills. She was about six to eight inches taller than me and was strong, as well as skilled. So far everything that I had come up with was being defeated. Don't get me wrong, I had landed some good hits, but she had also landed some good ones on me too and those hits had damn well hurt! I could see Kick-Ass fighting Shade, while Hawk fought Night.

Our fight seemed to be at a stalemate, so Dusk drew her sword and we pushed each other back, as we struck forward with our blades. I would definitely need to get hold of a broad-sword, if I was going to be fighting these nutcases.

I had also noticed that the pair of us were steadily moving away from the others, as we fought, which was not good. Dusk then fell backwards and dropped her sword, but I moved swiftly forward so that she had no time to pick the blade back up. Instead she drew a concealed pistol, which I had not seen before. It was a standard issue FN Five-seveN, which was capable of penetrating my body armour. I needed to be careful, very careful!

I stowed my blades and drew my pistols, as I threw myself behind a car to avoid the bullets fired at me by Dusk. I fired back and at least two of my shots hit Dusk, but had no effect, apart from throwing her off balance! I moved out from cover and dove across the street to better cover. But as I did, I felt a bullet impact my back, but low down. I put a hand behind me and found a hole in my utility belt, right where my Comms equipment was mounted. I also realised that my Comms had gone silent.

"Kick-Ass, Battle Guy! I've lost Hit Girl's Comms and GPS. I last had her heading west from your position!"

I took a chance and looked around me, while I was fighting Shade. There was no sign of Hit Girl, nor of the third

Nightingale. Shade took my momentary lapse in attention as a chance to push forward her attack. I returned the thought and drove Shade back. Hawk was still fighting Night and they seemed fairly evenly matched, from what I could make out.

I was worried about Hit Girl, but knew that she was more than capable of looking after herself.

I was in the worst possible situation.

I was alone and without any form of communications! I had lost sight of Kick-Ass and Hawk; I really could not believe that I had done something so stupid! Then the situation had just got worse...

I felt two bullets impact my left side, lower down and the pain was excruciating. I struggled to my feet and fired back almost a dozen rounds. I hit Dusk and she cried out in pain, before she turned and ran away from me.

I intended to pursue, but started to feel really strange. I went down on one knee, for a minute and then I realised that the chase was over and that I needed to get to safety as soon as possible, before I collapsed. I looked around me, to get my bearings. I was close to Safehouse C; less than a mile away, to the east. If I could climb a fire escape, then I could cut across the roofs to the Safehouse.

Night and Dusk had suddenly broken off the fight and run.

I had the impression that they had just received a message from their colleague, but I had no idea if it were good news or bad news, for them or us.

Hawk and I clambered into Beast, parked half a mile away and we started searching to the west for Hit Girl.

Chapter 118*: Wildcat and Lynx

Later that night
Tuesday
South Cottage Grove

I was bored.

School nights were kinda boring, so I tended to wander around our apartment building and generally be a nosy bitch!

Despite living on the second floor, I regularly wandered around the first and the fourth floors. Why? Because I was very curious about two apartments: 101 and 401. These two apartments had concealed keypads and the doors, although they looked almost normal, were not; they appeared much more solid than our apartment door and no lock or handle was actually visible on the outside of the doors.

Right now I was on the fourth floor, 'patrolling', when I heard a noise at the end of the corridor, a few yards beyond apartment 401. There was a door there that led to some stairs and then the roof of the apartment block.

I fell down the stairs that led from the hatch in the roof and hit the door at the bottom. I pushed it open and crawled along the floor.

The pain and the blood loss, from the bullet wounds were causing me to pass out, but I had to fight it; I had to get to safety. I managed to get to the Safehouse door and then I tried in vain to reach for the keypad. Damn, I should really install a keypad on the floor! I kept trying to reach the keypad, but then I sensed somebody standing close by.

"What's the code?"

I looked up and saw the shape of somebody looking down at me.

"What's the damn code?"

I looked closer; it was Megan! Thank God!

"Six – eight – four – seven – five – two – zero - nine." Just saying the numbers was exhausting.

Megan had punched the numbers into the keypad, as I had said them and the door to the Safehouse had clicked open. Megan pushed open the heavy, armoured door and then she had tried to drag me; but I was way too heavy for her. I used the last of my energy and dragged myself through the door, but then I must have passed out.

Safehouse C

I pushed the heavy door shut and stared down at Hit Girl.

Her eyes were still closed and she wasn't moving. I knelt down and shook her, hard, but she didn't respond. I stood up and flicked on the light switches that were beside the door. As the lights came on, I looked around the room and saw racks of weapons and sharp swords; the room was very much like the armoury at the other Safehouse that I had seen before Christmas. There were two computers and a large TV screen, on the far wall by a window that looked out onto a brick wall. I looked in vain for a phone, but only found what looked like a radio. It was large, heavy and green. I turned it on and pressed the talk button.

West of I-94

We were getting precisely nowhere!

There was no sign of Hit Girl anywhere, but we had found her Ducati by its encrypted LoJack system. I was more than a little concerned to find the Ducati seemingly abandoned! While Hawk continued her search, I took the Ducati back to Safehouse A.

I had just left the Safehouse, on the Fat Boy, when my headset burst into life.

"Fusion... This is... Wildcat... Hit Girl is hurt... I need help... Please!"

Safehouse C

I let go of the button.

Seconds passed, then...

"Wildcat, this is Kick-Ass! Where are you?"

I pressed the button again.

"I'm in a room full of weapons... In my block, on the top floor. Hit Girl is hurt bad and she needs help!" I let go of the button again. I felt tears running down my face; I was scared and worried, my hands were trembling. The radio came to life again...

"This is Battle Guy, VOX is now enabled for Wildcat... Wildcat you don't need to press the button to talk; we will be able to hear everything!"

"Wildcat, I'm on the way to you," Kick-Ass advised. "You are at Safehouse C, but I'm gonna need fifteen minutes or more... Help is on the way!"

The radio went silent, then two minutes later it jumped back to life...

"Wildcat, this is Medic! Can you move Hit Girl?"

"No, she's too heavy for me!"

Silence again...

"Wildcat," It was Kick-Ass again. "Get Lynx... You know who I mean, don't you?"

"Yes, I do!" I replied, jumping up.

I ran out of the Safehouse and down the two flights of stairs that took me from the fourth to the second floor.

..._...

Once on the second floor, I ran along the corridor and then I literally burst through my front door.

"Megan! What are you doing...? What is that on your hands...? Is that blood?" Paige Wilson asked aghast, getting worried.

"No time Mom, I need you to come with me!"

I dragged my Mom up to the fourth floor and punched in the code to the Safehouse again.

"You know the code to this apartment?" Mom queried.

"No time, Mom!" I replied and pushed the heavy door open.

"Oh - my God!" Paige Wilson almost screamed at the sight in front of her and she brought her hands up to her mouth. She looked around the room taking in all of the weapons and then the still form of Hit Girl... Plus the blood on the floor.

I pushed the door closed.

"Medic... I'm back with Lynx!" I called out.

"Huh!" Mom asked, confused.

"Mom, you're Lynx!" I whispered to Mom.

"Lynx, this is Medic! I need you to help me with Hit Girl... Help is on the way, but still about ten to fifteen minutes out.

Can you help us?"

..._...

Paige Wilson was shocked, but sorted herself out remarkably quickly.

"Yes! Tell me what to do!"

"Okay, we need to examine Hit Girl... Is she breathing?"

"Yes!"

"Now, take off her mask... You will recognise her, but do not say her name. Understood!"

"Yes, I understand!"

I watched as my Mom gently eased the mask off of the unconscious Hit Girl. Once Mindy's face was revealed, Mom took a sharp intake of breath, when she recognised her boss. I was expecting an outburst, but Mom just said one word...

"Figures!" She said, resignedly and rolled her eyes.

"Yeah... Tell me about it!" Medic replied. "Now, check her face and head; any marks, cuts, blood?"

"Just some bruising around her jaw."

"Now her neck."

"No visible injuries or bumps."

"Next, you need to remove the top of her combat suit; ease it off carefully, over her head."

I helped my Mom to remove the top of Mindy's combat suit. Underneath she wore a thin t-shirt and a sports bra. Mom pulled down the bottom half of Mindy's combat suit, so we could see Mindy's stomach.

"Done... Oh my God! There's blood, lots of blood... Mostly on her left side, but I'm not sure..."

"Look around the Safehouse; you should see a large black case..."

"Found it!" I said and dragged it over; it was heavy!

I watched as my Mom laid the case down and opened it; it was full of medical equipment.

"Okay, put on some rubber gloves and then check the top of the case. Pull out two of the large square packets and open them; you will find sterile gauze pads. Use one to clean around the wounds and another to cover them. Secure it in place with the tape that you will also find in the top of the case."

I passed over some rubber gloves and Mom put them on. She used some special scissors from the case, to cut away the blood-soaked t-shirt. Then I passed over the square packets, which Mom ripped open and she wiped away most of the blood, revealing two circular wounds. Mindy had been shot, twice! Mom then taped gauze over the two wounds.

"Check underneath her, see if the bullets went all the way through," Medic instructed, once Mom had reported the wounds dressed.

"There are no exit wounds, just the two on top."

"No problem... I should be with you in about five minutes."

The heavy door to the Safehouse suddenly flew open and Kick-Ass ran in, followed by Hawk, who closed the door behind her.

Both pulled off their masks, revealing Dave and Kim.

"You know, this answers so many questions!" Mom commented, looking at Dave and Kim.

"Sorry!" Dave said with an apologetic smile and knelt down beside Mindy.

"She's been shot twice and lost a lot of blood," Mom explained to Dave.

A few minutes later Dr Bennett appeared at the door and Dave let her in.

"I need to get those bullets out!" Dr Bennett said immediately.

Five minutes later, Dr Bennett had Mindy lying on a table in just her underwear and had started to operate on her wounds. Kim took me and my Mom into another room, while Dave stayed with Mindy. We sat down in the kitchen and tried not to listen to the sounds coming from the other room.

..._...

Twenty minutes later, Dr Bennett appeared in the kitchen, pulled off her blood-covered gloves and washed her hands.

"Is Mindy going to be okay?" I asked, unable to hide the concern in my voice.

"She'll be fine Megan; Mindy has had much worse. She's resting in bed now and Dave's with her."

"Thank God!" Mom said. "This is all a bit of a shock to me!"

"I can believe that! Thank you for your help, both of you," Dr Bennett said. "You did really well Megan and you too, Paige."

"Megan, you knew about Mindy before tonight, didn't you?" Kim enquired.

"Yes... I did. I figured it out some time ago. Dave, Chloe and Josh, too!"

"You did?" Mom asked, surprised.

"I promised to keep it a secret."

"Well done!" Dr Bennett commented, approvingly.

"Good on you, kid!" Kim said and I started to feel my cheeks getting very hot.

"I always thought that you were trustworthy!" Dave added, coming into the kitchen.

"How's Mindy?" I asked.

"She's sleeping for now. I've tucked her into bed; she'll stay here till some time tomorrow," Dave replied. "Thanks, all of you and especially you, Wildcat!"

I now felt myself blushing wildly!

"I'm really proud of you!" My Mom said to me.

The following morning
Wednesday
Safehouse C

I opened my eyes to find a face staring down at me.

"Morning Hit Girl!"

It was Megan and she looked really, really happy for some reason or another!

"Hello Megan... What are you doing here?" I asked, looking around the room. I recognised it immediately, as Safehouse C and had just realised that Megan should not have been in here and then it suddenly occurred to me that I shouldn't be in here either!

"You were shot, twice, last night. I helped you into the Safehouse," Megan explained, proudly, on seeing my confused expression.

I started to remember things. I looked under the duvet and found that I was wearing nothing but my underwear. I also saw a large dressing on my left side. I tried to move and pain shot up my side and I screamed. Megan looked horror struck.

"It's okay Megan! It just hurts a bit!" I said and I felt a little weak. "Where's err, Kick-Ass?"

"You mean Dave?" Megan asked. "I met the other side of Hawk, too, last night and I'd already worked out Chloe and Josh; not exactly hard!"

"You've figured it all out then?"

"You think I'm that stupid?"

"No, definitely not!" I replied with a laugh, which caused me more pain.

"Dave just popped out and left me to keep an eye on you. He said that you tend to misbehave when you've been injured... It's almost lunchtime and you've been asleep for over twelve hours!"

"That explains why I feel like shit!" I said resignedly. "Now you know about everybody; I suppose I can tell you that Curtis knows all about us all, too!"

"Curtis? He hid that well!" Megan commented sourly. "Asshole!"

"Don't blame him!" I laughed. "He's known about us all, since last summer. He also knows that if he told anybody, even you, then I would chop him up into tiny little pieces!"

Megan started to look a little worried.

"Does that apply to me, then?"

"I trust you Megan. Do I need to warn you?"

"No, you don't... Oh, by the way, my Mom knows, too!"

That was a concern; I hadn't planned on Paige finding out!

"How did she find out?" Mindy asked.

"You were far too heavy for me, so Dave told me to fetch my Mom. Dr Bennett talked my Mom through finding your wounds and treating you, until she arrived. We used our codenames all the time! Mom likes Lynx, by the way and she thinks Wildcat is cute, too!" I explained with a grimace. Wildcat was not supposed to be cute!

There was a knock on the Safehouse door.

"But I didn't give her the code, though!" I added, as I looked at the monitor that showed the passageway outside. It was my Mom. I pressed the button to release the door and my Mom pushed it open, then closed it behind her.

"She's awake!" I said, simply and followed Mom into the bedroom.

"Hi Boss!" Paige said cheerfully, as she came into the bedroom.

"Hi Paige. Thanks for helping me out last night; I owe you a big bonus! I fully expect you to be mad at me for hiding all this from you..."

"Mindy! Stop before you embarrass yourself!" Paige insisted. "I always thought there was something strange about you guys, but I also kinda knew that you guys were for good and not up to anything bad. Illegal maybe, but not bad!"

"Thanks Paige... You're still getting a bonus, though!" I insisted.

"How's the wound?" Paige asked.

"Hurts like hell!"

"Well that's what happens when you gallivant around Chicago fighting crime!" Paige said in a motherly way.

"You sound like Marcus!" I groaned.

Chapter 119*: Marcus Again

Three days later
Saturday evening
West Ridge

Everybody was over for a little Fusion 'get together'.

Unfortunately, some there that night had taken that description a little too literally! Kim and Marty were permanently glued together, on one couch, while Josh and Chloe were enthusiastically groping each other, on the other couch!

"Not very much different than when they're in class!" Isaac had commented, dryly, as he had walked past them.

But something else was much more disturbing than all that kissing and fondling... Marcus!

..._...

I had just come back from the dining room, where we had setup a small buffet, for people to help themselves from. Cathy was currently in there with Curtis and Abby. Megan had spent most of the evening following me around and in this case she had followed me into the kitchen and we had both stopped suddenly and shouted out in disgust, at the same time!

"Mom!"

"Marcus!"

"What!" Marcus responded, sounding annoyed, once he had removed his lips from Paige's.

"I'm in enough fucking pain!" I growled angrily and walked out of the kitchen, dragging an appalled Megan with me.

I thought that I was more embarrassed than angry!

..._...

I shoved Chloe, roughly, off of the couch, but she just sat herself back on Josh's knee and they continued with their kissing and fondling!

I ignored them both and sat down with the rather disgusted looking Megan.

"How long have they been at it?" I asked.

"I have no idea!" Megan replied. "I did see them together, once or twice, over Christmas."

"What the hell next? You and Curtis?"

"That would be disgusting!"

"I thought you had a thing for him!" I teased.

Megan blushed and mumbled something.

"She does?"

I looked behind me to find Curtis, with a sly grin on his face. I then looked at Megan, who looked like she wanted to die!

"Oh, you mean it was a secret?" I asked Megan facetiously, who gave me one of her glares.

"Sorry!" I said and made room for Curtis to sit down beside Megan.

..._...

Dave appeared.

"Everybody seems to be eating each other, instead of the food!"

"Tell me about it! I just found Paige and Marcus 'kissing and petting!'"

"Oh, I thought I saw something along those lines at Christmas," Dave remembered.

"So everybody knew about Marcus and Paige except for me?"

"Looks like it!" Cathy commented, as she came up behind me.

"Great! I'm not just in physical pain, but I'm now in mental pain... You know, this sort of thing could make somebody go completely fucking nuts and - and..."

"...Become a vigilante?" Dave offered and I glared at him.

"Cool! Can I become one then?" Megan asked excitedly.

"NO!" Dave, Cathy and I responded loudly.

Megan looked really put out!

"Don't worry! They said the same thing to me, too, when I asked!" Curtis admitted, putting his arm around Megan.

..._...

The asshole was now doing it quite openly!

He also very well knew that I was not happy about it; but what could I do? I wanted Marcus to be happy, but... I shuddered at the thought of what else might be happening!

Anyway, there was something more important about to happen. I called everybody together so that I could make a short speech.

"We have had a difficult week, ever since those damned nutcase Nightingales appeared and yes, I managed to get myself shot, again!" I announced and got a brief laugh in response.

"Now, I owe my life, again, to two people, both of whom are new to the world of Fusion. Err... Marcus, if you could let go of Paige for a few minutes... Megan..."

Megan and Paige came up and stood beside me.

"Firstly I have to thank a certain young lady, who was able to help me in my time of need. Megan... Or should I say Wildcat, showed immense courage, way beyond her years, in helping me to safety in Safehouse C and then she had the presence of mind to call for help, from the right people. She had not been trained on our equipment, but she still knew how to call for help. I have listened to the entire radio conversation of that night and I was amazed by how calm and collected Wildcat was and I am backed up by Dave, who was also very impressed."

Dave nodded his agreement.

"Yes, Megan had correctly worked out my biggest secret, some months ago, but Paige was still in the dark. Dave had no choice but to call on the help of an adult, as I was too heavy for Megan to move. I was also very impressed with the courage of Lynx, too and I wouldn't have blamed her, if she had taken one look at me, bleeding all over a room full of weapons and run for it!"

"Again, after listening to the recording and hearing how Paige skilfully followed the instructions of the dreaded Dr Bennett; I was incredibly impressed. Although what Paige meant by 'figures', when she first saw who was under Hit Girl's mask, I am not exactly sure! For now, I have to thank our newest members: Wildcat and Lynx!"

Everybody showed their appreciation for Paige and Megan, with applause. Megan looked like she was about to burst into tears! Paige, though, seemed to enjoy all the attention.

"Thank you, everybody!" Paige said, once the applause had died down. "I always thought something was a bit odd about some of the people at D-JAK. Mindy, though she seemed to be a bit of a nutcase, she was always a great boss. I guessed that you guys were up to something, but always believed that whatever it was, was for good, illegal, but good. I know that Marcus thinks Mindy is a bit of a nutcase, too and has never been happy with what she does, however, I believe in what Mindy has built."

"This evening I have heard a lot about Dave and Mindy, including how they came to be here today, doing what they do. I will always be thankful for that day, when Hit Girl turned up at my front door with Megan and then later, when she offered us a new start in life. Thank you Mindy... Thank you Fusion!"

Paige turned and gave me a hug. Damn! I'm fucking crying in front of everyone, again!

"Damn! There is a human side to the girl, after all!" Marcus said, coming over.

"It's good to have you on the team, Wildcat!" Curtis said to Megan.

"Thanks, Trojan!" Megan responded.

..._...

"I've been meaning to ask: how did the first classes go, at D-JAK, just before New Year?" Marcus asked.

On the Tuesday, just before New Year, I had had the first introductory classes at D-JAK, just to meet my new students and give them a small taster of what was to be on offer.

"The younger kids, the under tens, well they think Mindy is awesome and are all looking forward to starting properly next week. She will have a class of about eight to twelve younger kids to start with," Paige explained. "The under thirteens were a mixed lot, but they seemed to listen to Mindy and I think we should have up to a dozen of them, including Curtis and Megan."

"I almost had a damn heart attack when I recognised Sam Fellowes come into D-JAK! He was out of uniform, but he had his son with him; he was bringing his son, Cameron, to the class," I explained. "Sam gave me some strange looks and I'm certain that he knows, or at least suspects, who I am!"

"That could prove interesting!" Marcus commented.

"The next group; the teenagers... Well they seemed to enjoy seeing how flexible Mindy was!" Paige continued, with a grin that soon changed to an evil smirk. "Plus, I think Mindy seemed to enjoy showing off exactly how flexible she was!"

I felt myself blushing.

"I ... I do not... I did not!" I stammered unconvincingly.

Marcus looked at me with an evil grin.

"Does Dave know?" He asked, facetiously.

"You two are so fucking evil!"

"And the most important thing, of course, is that Mindy hasn't killed or maimed anybody yet!" Paige finished. "The insurance is high enough as it is!"

The next day
Sunday
West Ridge

I had a problem, well, more of a dilemma really.

Paige was easy; I just gave her a huge cash bonus. Megan though... I didn't know what to get a ten year-old girl – period, let alone something that would truly show how thankful I was for her actions! I had already decided that Megan could join Curtis and be trained, defensively only – as long as Paige agreed. Neither of them would handle firearms, apart from basic target practice and knowing how to clean them. They wouldn't use anything bigger than a .22-calibre, either. They were far too young and too small for a proper combat suit, but I would see about getting them some custom body armour for their upper bodies. I might be able to use the two of them for reconnaissance and even providing diversionary tactics. But neither of them would ever be put in harm's way, not a damn chance!

Well, last night had gone well, I suppose; ignoring Marcus and his new relationship! I had disturbing images in the back of my mind, every time that I thought of what Marcus and Paige might be getting up to! Then it occurred to me that I wouldn't need to worry, as long distance relationships rarely worked out.

That was when Marcus decided to knock me for six!

"Hey, kid! Could I have a word?" Marcus had asked.

That had somehow sounded ominous! I followed Marcus through to the living room and sat down on a couch, while Marcus sat down across from me.

"You telling me Paige is pregnant now?" I asked and got a nasty glare in response!

"Just kidding, jeez!"

"Let's be serious for a minute, can we?" Marcus asked.

"Should I be worried?"

"Not really... We don't get to see very much of each other, do we?"

"Not as much as I'd like, no."

I meant it too, I really did miss Marcus!

"How would you like to be able to see me as often as you'd like?"

"I'm not moving back to New York, if that's what you're asking," I replied, without thinking.

"You've got the wrong end of the stick, there, Hit Girl!"

I thought about that and came to one conclusion...

"You mean... Chicago... You're moving to Chicago?"

"You don't want me here, just say so..."

"You complete ass, Marcus! I would never, ever, say that!" I responded angrily, then I realised, belatedly, that he was joking. "Sorry!"

"You can be very predictable, Mindy. Remember, I've known you a long, long time."

"You move to Chicago; would you still be a cop?" I asked.

"Yeah. I've been talking with Jack and he'd take me under his wing for a while, at District Twelve, so that I could get used to Chicago, learn the ropes, then maybe move to a team like Voight's."

"That would be cool!" I admitted, grinning.

It really would be great to have Marcus around! Then I had another thought and scowled at Marcus.

"I assume this is just about me and not about Paige?" I asked.

"Of course it is; I want to be with you. I've been thinking about this for months, long before I met Paige. I was getting a bit lonely in New York; now you're not there it's kinda quiet and peaceful. I think I missed the severed limbs and dead bodies everywhere!" Marcus dead-panned.

I had to laugh.

"Are you jealous, Mindy?"

"What? You mean about you and Paige?"

"Yeah."

"No... I just reacted... It was a bit of a shock; kids don't like to see their parents... Well, you know!" I tried to explain, but failed miserably and felt myself blushing.

"You know, you are a lot softer than people give you credit for!" Marcus laughed.

"Just don't go spreading it around, or I might just have to kill ya!"

Marcus laughed again.

"Okay, I'll dial back the romance a bit – at least in public! Happy?"

"Yeah, I think so. Just... There are some things I'd rather not know about... If you know what I mean..."

"Now you know how I used to feel about you and that boy!" Marcus responded, with a chuckle.

"Okay! But remember, 'that boy', is now my fiancée!"

"Anyway, I thought you liked Paige and as for Wildcat, well she's just a..."

"Don't you dare say it Marcus!" I interrupted.

"... Mini-Mindy!"

Chapter 120*: Safehouse D

The next morning

Monday

West Ridge

The problem of what to do with the British twins had suddenly got a little bit easier.

Not quite in the way that I had anticipated though...

I was relaxing and recuperating at home, trying to get over the incredibly embarrassing stories about my younger years that had come out the night before! I was on the couch having a one-sided conversation with Sophia; I've done stranger things!

There was a knock on the front door. We never had many visitors and right know I was kinda anxious about visitors, as I was still healing and currently Dave was out, so I was alone. Since the Russians had come back on the scene, I had uprated some of my ready use weaponry. In this case, I grabbed a hidden Micro-UZI and headed over to the door and stood on my toes to look through the spy hole.

I immediately jumped back! Oh fuck! I was shocked!

I had seen two people, outside. Cameron and Natasha King! How the fuck had they turned up here?

Okay Mindy, get a fucking grip!

"We know you're in there! Open up, we're not leaving!" Cameron called, then more quietly. "We know what you are!"

I checked the Micro-UZI was ready and that the suppressor was secure, then pulled open the door.

"Come in, please!" I said, cheerfully.

Once the kids were in the door I slammed it shut and kicked Cameron's legs out from under him. He went down hard and while Natasha was reaching for him, I pushed her down to the floor.

"Neither of you fuckers move, or I'll cut you both in half!" I growled, aiming the Micro-UZI.

I saw the same fear that I had seen before. The confident, cocky expressions that I had just seen were gone.

"Please... Don't shoot... I told you this was a stupid idea, Nats!" Cameron said.

"Get the fuck up off the floor and sit on the damn couch! You're making the place look messy!" I growled, lowering the Micro-UZI. "Sophia, stay!"

I sat down and faced the twins.

"So you found me!"

I saw Cameron looking around.

"Where did the gun go?" he asked.

"I must keep some secrets!" I growled.

"Look, we saw the commotion at the apartment block, the other night. I saw you climbing the fire escape and crossing the rooftop. You looked wounded. Then we kept watch and saw more of your team arriving. We then saw you leave the other morning, we followed you... Here," Natasha explained.

"We only got the nerve up to come here, this morning," Cameron admitted.

"You guys are clever and resourceful!" I growled. "Why are you British teenagers so damn smug?"

Two days later
Wednesday
Safehouse A

While Megan was at school, Mindy and I took Paige to see Safehouse A.

Paige took one look at the armoury and then turned to me with a smile.

"It's like the Bat Cave meets Vigilantes R Us!" She said. "You guys got a bat signal?"

I saw Mindy smirk and open her mouth...

"No!" I yelled.

Paige looked a little shocked.

"Believe me, you don't want to hear that story!" I said.

That afternoon we got the bad news.

Intelligence arrived, via Voight. The, so called, Sisters of Trinity, had attacked the Russian Mafia! Of all the stupid fucking things to do! What the fuck possessed them to embark on war with the Russian Mafia? Yeah, I know, I did the same, but it was just us and them; now we had a three way war!

It was Fusion v Russians v Trinity, which would only end badly!

We also had some good news, for a change!

Marcus was now a Detective Lieutenant with the Chicago PD!

He was staying in an apartment at South Cottage Grove. He had thought it better to give me my space! I rather thought it was more because he was only feet away from Paige! He hoped to be able to move all his stuff from New York towards the end of January. Marcus had found a house and was just waiting for the sale to go through. I wasn't exactly over the moon about where Marcus had bought a house, but there wasn't exactly anything that I could do about it, either!

The following evening
Thursday
Fusion Warehouse

"What are we doing back here?" Josh asked.

Chloe's expression mirrored the same question.

"Even you two should have noticed that it's been snowing a bit!" Dave commented.

There was a few inches outside and it was still snowing.

"For some stupid reason, I seem to think that you two should have the best equipment! Sometimes, though, I'm not convinced that you deserve any of it!" I said.

"Something's different!" Josh said, looking around.

On the previous visit to the warehouse, the place had been completely open plan. This time though there was now a building towards the rear. It was built of brick and had a steel sliding door.

"Oh, mister observant has noticed the new building! Very good, Josh! That is a secure building for storing weapons and equipment. It is brick, with steel reinforced walls! Welcome to Safehouse D, kids!"

I led Josh and Chloe over to the new building. It had only been finished, just before Christmas and I was very pleased with it. I entered the code into the hidden keypad and the steel door slid open, with barely a sound. The lights inside clicked on. There were no windows anywhere on the building, which was set six feet from the nearest exterior walls of the warehouse. Inside the building was an open space that had weapons, in locked racks, on three sides. To the right was a small kitchen, with a table and four chairs. Against the wall were two steel bunk beds. The floor was bare concrete, except for some thin carpet near the beds. The place screamed functionality over comfort.

"Home from home!" Josh commented.

"It is not intended for comfort, Josh!" I laughed.

"Hope not!" Chloe said.

"What's under the tarpaulin?" Josh asked curiously.

In the middle of the room, beside the racks of weapons, was a large tarpaulin covering something.

"Show them Dave!" I said.

Dave pulled off the tarpaulin and both kids gasped in shock.

"Bloody hell!" Josh finally exclaimed.

"Fuck me!" Chloe added.

Under the tarpaulin were three motorcycles, all three were Ducati Multistrada 1200 S multibike. One was in navy blue, with the registration 'SHADOW', the next was purple with the registration 'HIT N RUN' and the final motorcycle was tan, with the registration 'JACKAL'.

"After my hair raising pursuit down the Dan Ryan, I decided that I would need a motorcycle that could cope with the winter weather. The Panigale is nice, but not designed for snow and ice. Yes, Cathy's motorcycle was cool and gave me the idea! I ordered these and they have been equipped with proper multi-purpose tyres, the same as Dave and I have on our BMW motorcycles."

On closer inspection the three motorcycles had non-standard chunky tyres fitted, front and rear. They were Continental TKC-80 Twinduro tyres and were designed to cope with extreme road conditions, including mud and snow.

"Okay, kiddies. Time to learn your new motorcycles, read the manual and then you can ride around the warehouse to get used to them. Remember these are more than four times the capacity of your Hondas, not to mention the extra weight and size... Chloe: Calm the fuck down before you piss yourself!"

"What about our..." Josh started, then stopped as Dave came in with a helmet under each arm, plus two sets of motorcycle leathers.

After twenty minutes reading the manuals and examining the controls, Chloe and Josh pulled on their leathers and helmets and then wheeled their motorcycles out to the warehouse. I followed and watched as they mounted the large machines and started the one hundred and sixty horsepower engines.

I followed suit and the warehouse throbbed with the roar of three motorcycle engines revving. I then led the other two around the warehouse, with Dave monitoring and advising me of any problems.

All three motorcycles were fitted with side panniers and a tank bag. The motorcycles were an extra fifty kilogrammes or so heavier and were about twenty centimetres wider and longer. The gear ratios were also very different and it was better to learn these inside, on concrete, than out there on the snow!

They coped pretty well with the new machines and I was kinda surprised that the two of them were so quick to get used to what were very different motorcycles! Maybe it was because I was such a good teacher - yeah, it was all me - you know, my ego worries me sometimes!

"You guys have impressed me!" I said, once Josh and Chloe had pulled up and removed their helmets.

Both of them seemed a little embarrassed, but also proud and I was proud of them in return.

Chapter 121*: The Nightingale

Two days later
Saturday morning
Safehouse A

"A handgun bullet travels at more than seven hundred miles per hour," I said, as I inserted a magazine into the butt of the SIG Sauer pistol, then racked back the slide to chamber a round.

"Is it gonna hurt bad?" Megan asked, from the other end of the mat.

"Only for a second, kid," I laughed. "It's gonna take you off your feet for sure, but it's really no more painful than a punch in the chest."

"I hate getting punched in the chest!" Megan responded with a scowl.

This was so surreal; I could remember this moment like it was yesterday and not around five and half years ago! Another ten year-old girl, in another City... Megan just reminded me of a mini-... Oh fuck! The bastards have me doing it now!

"Now cut the whining and get ready, Wildcat!" I cautioned, getting back to the present.

Megan winced.

"And no wincing!"

Megan rolled her eyes and I fired. Megan flew backwards and onto the mat, with a loud 'fuuuck', as the air was forced from her lungs!

"How was that? Not so bad. Kinda fun, huh?" Curtis said, reaching down to help Megan back to her feet.

Dave and I just laughed!

"Now you won't be scared when some junkie asshole pulls a Glock!" I said, once I had stopped laughing.

"Welcome to the club, Megan!" Dave said, helping Megan remove the armour. "Think yourself lucky that it was just a .38 and not something bigger!"

I noticed Dave glaring at me, when he mentioned 'something bigger' and I blushed a little.

..._...

"Mindy?" Megan asked me later.

"Yeah."

"Dave said you used to rig your attendance at school; could you do that for me?"

I glared at Dave.

"No I cannot! Dave, stop telling people about things that I did when I was younger!"

"Younger? You mean just over a year or so ago!" Dave reminded me.

"You know, I think I need a hot fudge sundae. Anybody else?"

"Hi Megan, had a good day?" Mom asked, once I had got back home.

"It was cool; Mindy shot me in the chest!" I said smugly and watched as the appalled look formed on Mom's face.

That night

Safehouse D

It was dark, cold and snowy.

The time had come to road test our new motorcycles. Kick-Ass, Battle Guy and Hawk, were in Beast, while Hal and Trojan were at Safehouse A monitoring our activities.

Jackal, Shadow and I would be on our new Ducati Multistrada motorcycles. Just as we had started our motorcycles, Shadow turned and threw a black, plastic box at me. I caught it and examined the item; it was a Ducati Multistrada Engine Control Unit or ECU.

"You didn't think that you could get away with that, did you?" Shadow enquired.

I glared at Kick-Ass.

"Did you tell her that I'd de-rated the Multistrada?" I accused.

"She asked me; so I told her!"

"Why?"

"She threatened to hurt me!" Kick-Ass responded.

"She's a fourteen year-old girl for fuck's sake!"

"She's scary!" Kick-Ass replied, with a chuckle.

I didn't respond. All I had wanted to do was prevent her from breaking her little neck and obviously she had found the original, unrestricted ECU! Jackal said nothing, but just shook his head, so I assumed that he was still using the restricted ECU: clever kid!

"Let's roll!" Kick-Ass ordered.

Kick-Ass led the way, with Beast and we followed one after the other, with Shadow at the rear and myself leading. It was very dark and cold out, but the conditions were perfect for the night's ride. I had advised Shadow and Jackal, but especially Shadow, to take it gently, at least until they were experienced at riding on snow.

"Remember, no stupid manoeuvres, or you'll end up ass over tit!" I cautioned.

"Bet these'll go faster than that old Panigale!" Shadow teased.

"In your fucking dreams, Shadow!" I retorted, furious with myself for rising to her bait.

"In snow, I'm way faster!" Shadow continued.

"Look, these are a different class of motorcycle – you can't compare them, but I can still do one eighty, while you could never do much more than just over one forty!"

"Children!" Hawk cautioned.

It had been a little under two weeks since I had been shot, but I was healing well and I had promised Dave, Cathy and myself that I would behave and take things gently! I was still sore, but I would survive.

We kept the speed down and stayed in formation, with Beast on point. The snow was light and the streets clear of traffic, so the ride was pleasant and I defied any criminal cunt to disturb our enjoyment!

We had our usual meeting with Murphy and Fellowes; they thought the new motorcycles were particularly hot, but missed the Panigale!

As did I! The beefed up tyres were extremely good on the snow and allowed for brilliant control, considering the conditions. The new tyres also helped Jackal and Shadow to stay vertical and I was impressed that they hadn't had a spill yet! I missed the Panigale, though, but it was no good in this weather.

I knew that it would happen eventually.

The way was blocked by three large motorcycles and their riders.

"The bitches are back!" Kick-Ass announced.

"We have visual here!" Hal announced, monitoring our progress using the cameras in Beast.

We had a plan rehearsed for this and we all put the plan smoothly into action.

Beast blocked the road.

Then we stopped the motorcycles behind Beast, for cover. Then Shadow and Jackal reached for their compound bows and arrows.

Shadow and Jackal both released their first pair of arrows, together, before scooping up another pair of arrows and releasing them into the air.

The first pair of arrows impacted at the feet of Night and both exploded instantly and Night fell back with the concussion of the flashbangs. The next pair of arrows landed at the feet of Shade and Dusk and both exploded into a cloud of purple smoke, obscuring Night from them. Kick-Ass and Hawk ran forward and seized Night, before they bundled the unconscious, and now bound, Night into Beast and then jumped in themselves, before Battle Guy accelerated away.

I waited until Shadow and Jackal had remounted their motorcycles and were on their way back to Safehouse A, before following Beast.

CPD Warehouse

We dragged the Nightingale, known as 'Night', out of Beast.

Hawk and Battle Guy secured her to a steel pillar. She had regained consciousness on the ride over. Strangely she did not seem very concerned by her predicament; her eyes were smiling, even if we couldn't see her mouth.

I pulled back her hood and then removed her mask; all of a sudden people were talking at once.

Kick-Ass: "Damn!"

Battle Guy: "Double damn!"

Night: "Hi Dave! Been a while!"

Chapter 122: Rescue

Saturday Night CPD Warehouse

"I've missed you Dave," she continued, calmly before turning to look directly at Hit Girl.

"You are one lucky bitch, Hit Girl! I remember like it was yesterday - having Dave inside of me - fuck it felt like nothing on this earth..."

Hit Girl lashed out with her left gauntlet and Night/Miranda Swedlow/Night Bitch slid to the floor, unconscious.

"Sorry to cut off her commentary on your sexual skills, Kick-Ass!"

"Err, right!" I replied, still in shock.

"Isn't she supposed to be dead?" Hawk enquired.

"Yeah! Kick-Ass...?" Hit Girl asked and turned to glare at me.

"You saw the damn newspaper! She died over a year ago... Or at least I thought so!" I responded.

Talk about conflicting emotions!

I couldn't believe that Miranda was alive! I was overjoyed!

I also couldn't believe that she was fighting against us! This – well I couldn't describe the emotion that this thought generated.

"Green is more for Kick-Ass, Hit Girl; it doesn't suit you at all!" Battle Guy cautioned, in a concerned tone.

"I am not jealous or envious!" I growled angrily. But I was, both of 'em!

Kick-Ass removed the part of his mask that covered his mouth and took a large step towards me.

I was expecting to be yelled at, but no... Kick-Ass grabbed me and leant me backwards and covered my lips with his own and... Oh - my - God! His tongue... My legs were starting to go weak and I positively melted into his arms. The damp feeling that I felt between my legs was not sweat! Finally Kick-Ass let me go and helped me back to my feet; I still felt weak though, dammit!

"That was positively awesome!" Battle Guy commented. "I could have made millions if I'd recorded that! Hit Girl and Kick-Ass kissing, damn hot!"

I felt my face burning, like I'd stuck it into a fire!

"What was that for?" I asked, rather stupidly.

"I thought that you needed a reminder of who I love and who is my fiancée!" Kick-Ass said, with a smirk.

"I hadn't forgotten... I'm sorry and thanks... That was awesome!" I replied... then I giggled.

"Did Hit Girl just giggle?" Hawk asked, looking a little horrified.

"Unfortunately!" I admitted, feeling both embarrassed and furious with myself.

My mind was still reeling.

Miranda was alive! But she had apparently gone over to the 'dark side'!

"You're literally half the man that you used to be... Batman!"

I span around to find that Miranda was back with us and looking at a glaring Battle Guy.

"Kinda hot, too!"

Miranda passed out again, as Hawk clipped her chin with a boot.

"She really cannot be getting any!" Hawk commented.

An hour later
Sunday

Jackal and Shadow were safely back at Safehouse A.

I didn't want them present during our interrogation, especially not now that we knew who she really was under the mask! This would be complicated, especially as Dave was personally involved. But the big question on my mind was: why was she fighting against us? She fought beside us, against Chris D'Amico, for fuck's sake!

It was soon after midnight, so we all had a coffee and discussed the events so far.

Much later
Sunday
Safehouse A

I was feeling hungry, so I headed for the kitchen.

"Morning!" Josh said, as he fried some bacon.

"Hi! Where's Curtis?"

"Downstairs... Training!"

"Oh!"

I headed downstairs to see what Curtis was up to. Abby had gone home, as soon as we had returned, last night.

..._...

When I got downstairs, I found Curtis attacking a Tatami Mat target, with a sword that I recognised as coming from the armoury. It was a two-foot long Saracen sword, with a wickedly curved blade.

"What the hell are you doing with that?" I demanded.

I could tell that Curtis had been at it for a while; he was dripping with sweat. The kid had been much focussed on his personal development, both physically and mentally, ever since his parents had been killed. I was impressed by his perseverance, but from a personal stand point, I thought that he was going too far, too soon! Yeah, I knew that I probably wasn't the best person to be lecturing him about taking things slowly, but I cared for him enough to at least try.

"I'm training!"

"Does Mindy know that you're using that sword?"

"No, and you're not gonna tell her, either!"

"I don't keep secrets from Mindy!"

"No, you don't... You just run off on your own and almost get yourself killed!"

"That was a mistake! I've learnt from my mistakes!" I growled. "Now, you are making a big mistake and Mindy will go bananas!"

"Remember, Shadow, it is kinda your fault that I am here today, training to become a vigilante."

"Don't I know it? Look Curtis you're moving way too fast... You're getting really good, kid, but - you're pushing yourself, way too much."

"What, you care about me now?"

"That's not fucking fair... I've always cared about you! Okay, I know that I never used to show it, but I've always cared about you – deep down."

"I'm sorry, Chloe. That was uncalled for," Curtis apologised.

"Don't worry; you've been through a lot, but there's no need to pile more on yourself... I've been there, with Josh... You're still only ten, please take it slower."

"Okay, I'll try... But - will you keep my secret? I don't think Mindy would approve of me training with this sword, although I will admit that it is really cool!"

"That it is!"

CPD Warehouse

"Why are you doing this?" I asked. "You – we, were for good!"

"I changed, Dave! This is the real fucking world, good people get nothing and the rest get everything!" Miranda replied.

"What the fuck is that supposed to mean?"

"Whatever you want it to mean, I suppose."

"You're talking in fucking riddles!"

"Did Chris D'Amico ever tell you about who betrayed your father?" Miranda asked, changing the subject.

"Should be have done?" I responded.

"So you don't know?"

"Know what, you sick bitch?" I was getting mad.

"You never knew that your father was betrayed by your best friend?"

"What?"

"I believe you knew him as 'Ass-Kicker', back then!"

"You..."

The back wall of the warehouse suddenly exploded inwards.

We all dived for cover behind Beast as masonry crashed down all around us and our combat suits were pelted by small brick projectiles. Once the dust had started to clear, we emerged and examined the scene.

"She's gone!" Hit Girl growled, angrily.

Chapter 123*: Todd

Two days later
Tuesday
Safehouse A

"Is it working?" I asked Marty.

"It just came online a few minutes ago!" Marty replied.

The tracker that we had inserted into Miranda's suit, while she had been unconscious, had just activated itself after the required delay.

I hadn't anticipated that we would be attacked at the CPD warehouse and I had had to apologise to Voight, for destroying part of his warehouse. He had just laughed and told me not to worry, a wall could be rebuilt, whereas people could not.

Four days later
Thursday
West Ridge

"She's gonna have to die, Dave."

"I know."

"Could you do it...? Considering..."

"Yes, I could! She is not my Miranda... My Miranda died, a year ago..."

"Dave, I'm really sorry that you've been put in this position, it really fucking sucks!"

That afternoon
West Ridge

"Hi!"

This was gonna be awkward; especially considering recent revelations! I could see that Dave was in an emotionless state, but I knew that Dave could snap his friend in half, in an instant! Personally, I felt like doing that, but it wasn't my fight; it had been Dave's Dad and he was Dave's friend. Yes, I felt kinda responsible for his Dad's death, but right now, I knew better than to rekindle that argument!

Marty was standing beside Todd, who understandably looked a little apprehensive. Marty had met him at the train station and on the way back had told Todd that Dave and he had recently found out about his past duplicity.

"Hi Todd, I..." Dave started.

"Look Dave, I've been wanting to say that I'm sorry for so damn long. That's why I've been avoiding you guys, since that night at the warehouse. I know that I was responsible for your Dad's death, Dave. I never realised how fucking whacked out Chris D'Amico really was, until that night..." Todd tried to explain.

"Don't Todd, you – you were taken in, just like many others - by that bastard: Chris D'Amico – we didn't exactly help either – we kinda pushed you away and we're sorry for that!" Dave said. "But you came through and helped us in the end and that's what matters. Over the past year, I've learnt that allies are few, but enemies are many and we all make mistakes. If I had never put on that damn wetsuit, Dad would never have got involved – I can't blame anybody else. Just as I feel responsible for the death of Mindy's father, but she doesn't hold me responsible; we've moved past that."

"Thanks, Dave."

"I had a chance to save Dave's Dad, but I refused to help Dave, in his time of need. This was despite the fact that he had selflessly helped me, in my time of need, years ago. We make decisions and have to live with them. Chris D'Amico was evil, just like his father and he was skilled at spreading his evil. We all need to look forward, never backward and learn from our mistakes." Mindy said, looking at Dave sadly.

"I'm moving on Todd; you comin' with me?" I asked with a grin.

"Hell yeah!"

That evening

D-JAK

I had finally found the place.

I was still getting used to driving around Chicago and learning the streets. My parents had persuaded me to learn some self-defence, as part of the deal for allowing me to go to university in Chicago. I should have started university way back in August, but things happened and I was now starting in January. It also kinda sucked that I knew nobody in Chicago.

I looked up at the sign, above the door. This place seemed to have a good rep, despite only having been open a few weeks, but more importantly they offered discounts to University of Chicago students. I pushed open the door and walked in, it was quite busy inside. I could see a class with young kids, most with white belts, underway to one side. They were currently watching a pair of older kids, a boy and a girl, demonstrate some Taekwondo movements – both kids had blue belts. I noticed that the lady at the reception desk was busy with somebody else, so I watched the class while I waited.

"Megan, leave Curtis alone! I won't tell you again, pay attention!" A female voice called and it was a voice that I vaguely recognised.

There was something familiar about the two instructors too, but just then a boy came up to me.

"Can I help, I'm Kyle!"

He was dressed in a white Taekwondo-gi, with a yellow belt.

"You normally help walk-ins?" I asked.

"When they are as hot as you, yeah!"

I tried not to react to the compliment, but felt myself blushing anyway!

"What are you, fourteen?"

"Nearly fifteen!"

"Bit young for me!" I said.

"Worth a try! Anyway here's Paige; she'll help you!" Kyle said, then walked off with a smile.

The lady from the reception desk had appeared while I had been 'chatting' with Kyle.

"Hi, I'm Paige, how can I help?"

"I'm looking to join, I think," I replied.

"No problem... Hold on! Curtis, hands off my daughter! Cameron, Tommy – pay attention to the class! Sorry... Those four can be trouble! Come over to the desk and I'll get you enrolled."

"Thanks!" I replied.

"Mindy, over there, is our senior instructor and usually takes the self-protection classes for the women," Paige explained.

Something clicked in my mind.

"Mindy Macready?" I asked.

"Yeah, you know her?" Paige asked and I saw a guarded look in her eyes.

"We were at the same high school, in New York. That must mean that the other guy is Dave Lizewski! Damn; I always knew those two were right for each other!" I said. "My name's..."

"Erika? Erika Cho?" I turned to find myself face to face, with Dave.

"Yeah - wow Dave, you look really good – put on a bit of muscle, too!" I said without thinking – he did look kind of hot.

"You look very good, too, Erika!"

"And I'm his fiancée! And yes, we are fucking!" Mindy said, appearing behind Dave and scowling at Erika.

"Tension, people, let's ease that tension!" Paige advised.

"Sorry, just staking my claim!" Mindy said and held out her hand to me and I shook it.

"Erika. We never really met, but I know I said some things that I now regret!" I said.

"I did get to hear what happened in the corridor that day and in Dave's defence, he wasn't fucking a ninth-grader - at least not then!" Mindy said, with a smirk.

"So, you all know each other?" Paige asked.

"I've known Erika, since before I met Mindy. She used to be Marty's chew toy!" Dave explained with a grin.

"Oh, that should prove interesting!" Mindy commented.

"Why?" I asked.

"Marty lives in Chicago, too! He attends the University of Chicago," Dave explained.

"Oh, cool! Me, too. I thought that I wouldn't know anybody in Chicago!"

"He's all but engaged to an ex-Chicago Cop!" Mindy added.

"Oh, I see! We were only together for just over a year. You guys seemed to all but vanish around the time that Motherfucker shit blew up in New York!" I said and saw a few exchanged glances and smirks, between Dave and Mindy.

"It'll be good having you here, Erika. We'll have to get you over one evening, for a meal. I'll get Marty over, would be a nice surprise for him – and Kim!" Mindy said, with an evil smirk.

Chapter 124*: Regina

Two days later
Saturday

Did you know that Chicago had its own assassin?

Well it did and it wasn't me!

There had been a string of deaths in the past few months that had been baffling the Chicago PD. Again, those deaths, had nothing to do with me! Normally I would be happy to accept credit for dead bodies; but these weren't mine. So, why was I now involved? 'Cause two Chicago PD officers had been shot, when they had stumbled onto an assassination.

I had my hands full with Miranda and her damn Nightingales, but I would not stand by while Chicago Police Officers were shot in the course of their duties. That was one of things that would really get me riled up and it made me so fucking pissed off!

All we knew about this mysterious assassin, was that it was a she and that she had over twenty-seven kills to her name that could be tracked back over the past three years. There had never been any living witnesses to the assassinations and, as far as we knew, no mistakes had been made... Apart from now; the two officers in question were alive, except that they were in comas and under Police protection in Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Marcus had been assigned the case; something to 'prove his metal' - at least that's what Jack had said!

The assassin had a name: Regina. The name meant 'the reigning queen', which I kind of took personally; as far as female assassins went, I was 'the reigning queen'!

I also had another problem and that involved Chloe, again!

Safehouse A

"Typical, she's only had the damn thing a week and then she fucks it!" I growled angrily.

"It was an accident! The post kinda jumped out in front of me!" Chloe moaned, trying to look innocent.

"My fucking ass!"

"Well you're lucky that Fusion now has a full time mechanic - and here he is now!" Dave announced, as a pick-up truck pulled into the Safehouse.

Chloe appeared to be a little shocked to see who climbed out of the cab.

..._...

"You know Tony and Tommy!" I said with a grin.

"Of course! Hi guys! What...?" Chloe said, looking at me and sounded confused.

"Tony is our full time Fusion mechanic, which will be kinda useful considering how much equipment we have now that needs servicing, and repairing," Mindy said and looked at Chloe with a glare that made her flinch. "Not to mention a few items that you don't know about, yet!"

"Like what?" Chloe demanded.

"Need to know, Chloe!"

"You can't just dangle something like that in front of me and then pull it away!" Chloe whined.

"I can and I did! Don't crash my damn motorcycles, in future, young lady!"

"Let's have a look at the damage!" Tony suggested. "Lead the way, wrecker!"

Chloe scowled, but led Tony over to her Multistrada. The right hand headlight was smashed and the front end dented and scratched. The right hand, front suspension mount was also badly scratched, with at least one gouge.

"Have it good as new, in a day or two!" Tony advised, with a grin.

"Chloe, if Tony reports any abuse to my machines, you won't be using them – be warned! One more post jumps out on you and you'll be riding the Honda one hundred!"

"That is really low; you wouldn't!"

"Fucking, try me!"

"It's not road legal!" Chloe said smugly.

"That'll take less than an hour to correct," Tony advised. Chloe scowled and threw her hands up in defeat.

..._...

"I spent over twenty years in the U.S. Navy, if it has a piston, I can fix it! For that matter, if it fires a bullet, I can fix it, too!" Tony explained to Chloe, over a coffee.

"I'd better not break my P90 then!" Chloe quipped and received a steady stare from Tony in return. "Just kidding!"

"I'll be watching you!" Tony said, with a chuckle. "Mindy's told me all about you and Joshua... Every sordid detail!"

"How have things been, since you moved up here?" Chloe asked quickly, blushing and changing the subject away from her and Josh.

"Very good, thanks! We have a nice house over towards the south of Chicago and Mindy has got Shannon setup with running a small shop. Tommy thinks it's great and is enjoying the time he spends at D-JAK with Curtis, Megan and that other boy, err, Cameron Fellowes."

"He's doing well with his Taekwondo. He should have his yellow tag in no time," Chloe confirmed.

That Evening West Ridge

"Hi Marty, Kim! Come on in!" I said, with a smirk.

"What are you up to, Dave?" Marty asked.

"Nothing!"

"Bullshit!" Marty responded. "I know you!"

I led them both through to the living room, where Marty's eyes almost popped out from behind his glasses!

"Erika!" Marty exclaimed, then he looked at Dave. "You and me are gonna talk, pal!"

"How are Marty? This wasn't my idea... See Mindy!" Erika said, getting up from the couch and giving Marty a polite kiss on the cheek.

I watched as Kim scowled at Erika, Marty saw this and turned to Kim.

"We dated for eighteen months, when I was fifteen!"

"Hello, Erika! Marty seems to pick some beautiful women!" Kim said, with a smile.

"He definitely does; looks like he's hit the jackpot with you, Kim."

"We need to exchange notes!" Kim suggested and Marty looked horror struck.

"I'm gonna kill you, Hit Girl!" Marty whispered to a grinning, and apparently unrepentant, Mindy.

..._...

We sat down and enjoyed a good meal together.

Dave and Erika had fun bringing up some of Marty's more embarrassing moments which Kim enjoyed hugely. However at one point Erika raised an interesting question.

"Katie and I ceased to be friends, fairly soon after she split up from Dave, but after that little skirmish in the corridor, well Katie had some weird things to say about Dave, which at the time I thought were obviously not true! However, since then and since seeing you guys at D-JAK... Well, Katie had this notion that Dave was Kick-Ass!" Erika said.

The entire room went silent as a tomb and everybody froze with food partway to their mouths, all except Erika!

"So it's true!" Erika said, looking amazed.

Everybody finished off their current mouthfuls and then looked at Mindy.

"What are you all looking at me for?" Mindy demanded, then she smiled at Erika.

"Can you be trusted, Erika?" Mindy asked.

"Absolutely!" Erika replied, looking excited.

"Then please meet: Battle Guy, Hawk and Kick-Ass!" Mindy said, pointing at each person, in turn. "I am, of course, the one and only Hit Girl and that, fast asleep over there, is Eisenhower!"

"That is totally awesome – you know, if it wasn't for Dave and Kick-Ass, I would never have got together with Marty. Dave spent so much time fuc-, sorry, with Katie, I had no choice but to hang around with this geek, reading comics!"

"He's a special kind of geek, though!" Kim said, with a smile at Erika.

"That means, you were that little girl that rescued Dave!" Erika said, looking at Mindy who nodded.

"Yes, that was the much younger me and a pretty useless Kick-Ass!"

"I wasn't totally useless! I saved your sorry ass, twice!" Dave retorted, indignantly.

"Okay, I'll admit that!" Mindy acquiesced.

"Wow! Kick-Ass rescued the amazing Hit Girl!" Erika exclaimed.

Chapter 125*: G

The next morning Sunday Safehouse A

"Thought that you two would like to see it: The G-Suit!"

"Fucking wow!" Josh exclaimed and received a frown from Isaac.

Beside the other combat suits, in the armoury, there was now another suit. This one was red, with white stripes and the symbol for an atom on the chest. Beside it was what, at first glance, looked to be a metal base-ball bat, but on closer inspection was modified and had three rings of vicious looking metal spikes around the circumference of the bat.

"That is totally awesome!" Chloe added.

"It was a good time, back then – I have a huge respect for what you guys do; I've been there!" Isaac said.

"Thanks Mr Swanson!" Chloe and Josh said together.

"You gonna wear it again?" Chloe asked.

"Not expecting to," Isaac said.

That afternoon West Ridge

"Ah! Joshua, Chloe!"

I was instantly on guard! When Mindy used my full name it usually meant that I was in trouble. Actually I had not done anything wrong recently; it was Chloe that had got into Mindy's bad books! Crashing her Ducati; rather her than me! I did warn her not to be stupid, but Chloe doesn't always listen to advice: a post jumped out, I ask you!

We went into the living room and found Dave, Mindy, Marty, Kim and another woman. I had seen her at D-JAK the other day, talking with Dave, Mindy and Paige. Kyle had also commented on a certain hot chick, which must have been this woman.

"Hi!" I said, waving a hand. Chloe said nothing, just smiled.

"This is Erika!" Marty said, introducing the very nice looking young woman. "Erika, these are Josh and Chloe!"

"Hi, guys, good to meet you," Erika said.

"Hi!" Chloe said.

"Normally you can't shut them up!" Dave commented dryly.

"Well Chloe is in my bad books for crashing her Multistrada!" Mindy said, surprising both me and I could see, Chloe too.

Mindy just talked about a Fusion motorcycle, in front of a stranger! I looked questioningly at Mindy, who just smirked at us.

"Erika, standing in front of you are Shadow and Jackal!" Mindy said, pointing at us in turn. I was really shocked now and it seemed, so was Erika.

"These two kids are vigilantes?" Erika asked incredulously.

"They are. Chloe's been with us for almost a year and Josh since late, last summer," Mindy explained.

"But they're only about thirteen, or twelve!" Erika said, looking at Chloe and then me.

"Believe it or not, they are both fourteen," Marty said.

"They are a bit like you and Marty were!" Dave said with a smirk and Kim glared at him.

From Chloe's expression she didn't seem to like the newcomer. Yes, she was stunning to look at but I didn't like the way she reacted to Chloe and I being vigilantes. Obviously she knew the others, apparently from way back, but this was still a hell of a surprise!

"We're going upstairs!" Chloe said and she dragged me out of the room and towards the stairs.

"I don't think that they're my biggest fans!" Erika said.

"Ignore them. They can be a bit wary of newcomers. They don't mean anything by it. They're both good kids, when you get to know them and they can fight. They have done, too! Saved my life at least once!" I said.

"People seem to save you quite regularly, it seems!" Erika commented.

"It does happen!" I admitted.

"I don't like her!" Chloe stated.

"I did! She looks, err, nice," I said.

"Boys! A pretty girl comes along and they all drool like dogs!"

"I've seen you drooling over boys before!"

"Would you rather I drooled over girls?" Chloe asked facetiously.

"Didn't know you were into that kind of action, Chloe!"

Chloe just grinned in response.

Two days later
Tuesday
Lake View High School

"I am warning you, just this once: Joshua - is - mine; so stay away from him, you fucking bitch!" I growled angrily.

Juno just smirked at me, from less than six inches away where I had her pinned against the wall of the corridor.

"Or what, Bennett?"

"You touch him, I'll break your fucking fingers, or worse!"

I was about to give Juno a physical reminder of what might happen to her, when I heard a shout.

"Bennett! What the hell do you think you're doing?"

It was Mr Swanson.

"Both of you, get to class!"

"I'm sorry, Mr Swanson." And I genuinely was; I respected Mr Swanson and felt ashamed that he had caught me.

"So you should be, young lady!"

Well I wasn't going to let that bitch upset me, so I put the incident behind me and forgot about it.

Two days later
Thursday evening

West Ridge

I had obtained armour, masks and equipment for Wildcat and Trojan.

This was primarily to protect their most guarded possession; their identity. They would be working with Fusion, but only behind the scenes. However there may be occasions that required them to be out in a public area.

Each kid had a basic under suit in a Type IIA composite material and lightweight desert boots. The masks were of the same material and covered all but their noses and mouths. They each also had a pair of lightly armoured gauntlets. I had had to keep the suit light, as they were both still small and would not be able to carry a large load. Both had a basic utility belt to carry communications and self-defence equipment. They also each had a strap-on armoured jacket, which would protect their torsos from bullet and penetration injuries.

These were not combat suits and were only intended as passive protection.

Wildcat's suit used three different browns to create a mottled effect that worked quite well and her mask had 'ears', similar to those of a real wildcat. Paige actually thought that she looked really cute, before the armour was added! Wildcat was not amused and glared viciously!

Trojan's suit, though, was a combination of navy blue, with a Dartmouth and olive green trim. Again Paige thought that he looked cute before the armour was added! This just made Wildcat laugh, until Trojan punched her, rather hard!

For now the suits would be kept here, at the house. They would grow rapidly over the next few years, so I had kept the suits basic and cheap!

..._...

Lynx also had a combat suit, of sorts.

We used armoured combat suits that could not be used without the armour, Lynx's combat suit could however shed parts of the armour.

The under suit was a mottled collection of browns and was made of the same Type IIA composite material that the other combat suits used. There was a black utility belt that clipped to the under suit and had attachments for the usual Fusion communications and other accessories. So far Lynx was refusing to carry a weapon, but was allowing me to train her in the use of a Glock handgun. The mask was of the same composite material and covered her entire head, except for her nose and mouth. The top of the mask was formed into cat like ears that came to a point, similar to the ears of a lynx and the mask was the same colour as the under suit. On her feet, Lynx would wear lightweight desert combat boots, in a fallow brown colour. Armoured gauntlets were also included and were of the same fallow brown colour, too.

The additional armour was in the form of grieves, thigh guards and upper-arm armour. There were also contoured Type III panels for her chest and back, plus a lightly armoured cover for her head.

I was not expecting the armour to be needed, but it was better to be safe than sorry. We expected that Paige would be acting as chaperone, if we ever used the two kids in action. Again, her identity would be protected, but so would her body. I did manage to persuade her to carry a Taser, so I said that I would obtain a similar one to that which Kick-Ass carried.

"Mom, you look awesome!" Wildcat said, once she had stopped attacking Trojan.

Paige could be seen blushing under her mask.

"Thank you Megan! It actually feels really good. Better without the armour, but..."

"Glad you like it!" I said.

The final problem was getting the two kids to get out of their new suits, which was not easy!

Chapter 126*: Kyle

The next night Friday

I said goodbye to Avery and Riley, and went to find a cab.

The three of us had been to see a very girly movie, with a lot of giggling and some crying; Joshua had refused to come, as he didn't want to put up with giggling, crying, little girls! Altogether it had been a good evening, but then the evening went to crap as I sensed somebody behind me, but my mind had been elsewhere and I didn't react as fast as I should have done. I was turning around, when my arms were seized and I was pulled down the side of the building and into a darker area, near some dumpsters.

I was pushed, none too gently, against a wall where my head banged against the concrete and it hurt. In front of me was that bitch, Juno! Either side of me were two other girls that seemed to regularly hang about with Juno; they had my arms pinned securely either side of me and they also had control of my legs, too, so that I couldn't kick out. It was fairly common knowledge at school that I was skilled at the Martial Arts, which was also why most people didn't pick a fight with me or any of my friends!

"Nobody threatens me!" Juno breathed into my face.

"Well you'd better get used to it, bitch!" I replied, glaring at Juno.

"You need to learn some manners, Yank!"

"Go fuck yourself; nobody else will ever want to!" I replied, rather lamely, I thought.

Juno then landed a punch, in my stomach and I instinctively tried to double over, but was held up, by her minions. That punch hurt and I could feel tears of pain, in my eyes. Next Juno punched me across the jaw from my left and I yelled out in pain; Juno was very strong!

Next I received a punch into my left side. The pain surging through my body was almost unbearable, but I had suffered worse! Just as I was wondering how long this was going to go on for and if I would last the course, through my blurred vision I saw a sneaker fly through the air and catch Juno in the side of the head. Juno span off to my left and fell to the ground. Next her two Minions were attacked and found themselves sprawled on the ground, beside their leader.

Now that I was no longer supported, I fell forward to the ground myself. I felt strong hands seize my upper arms and haul me to my feet and I found myself looking into the grim face of Kyle.

"Come on Chloe, let's get you out of here, before they get up!" Kyle advised and I could see Juno starting to get up.

"This isn't finished, you worthless piece of shit!" Juno called after us.

"Thanks, Kyle...", I breathed and stumbled out of the alley, supported by my friend.

Kyle helped me get a good distance away from Juno and not in too much public view. Then he flagged down a cab.

"Where should I take you?" Kyle asked.

"Thirty-one twenty-nine, West Columbia Avenue..." I said, before I passed out.

West Ridge

There was a knock at the side door.

I looked at the clock on the wall in the living room. It was after ten o'clock. Who could be calling at this time of night?

Dave stood up and walked to the door while I stayed with Sophia, but grabbed my hidden mini-UZI, just in case. I heard an exclamation from Dave, as he peered through the spy hole.

"Mindy, clear the couch!" Dave called and I heard voices and the door closing, then Dave dumped an unconscious

Chloe onto the couch. Behind him stood Kyle.

"What the fuck?" I asked, checking Chloe over and seeing the bruises on her face.

"She got beaten up," Kyle said angrily and he looked mad. "That British bitch from school, Juno."

I knelt down beside Chloe and started to check her over. Dave took Kyle into the kitchen and he started to explain about what he had seen and done. I found some vicious bruises on her abdomen, which matched those on her jaw. I felt the anger boil up inside of me, seeing Chloe hurt. I grabbed my cell and called Cathy.

..._...

Forty minutes later Cathy and Curtis walked in the door.

Chloe was awake, but in a lot of pain. Kyle was sitting next to Chloe and holding her hand, as she grimaced with the pain. Tears of pain were running down her face. We left Cathy to check Chloe over in private and we all sat in the kitchen, where Kyle explained to Curtis what had happened.

"That fucking bitch!" Curtis exclaimed.

"My sentiments exactly!" Dave commented.

Ten minutes later Cathy appeared in the kitchen.

"Will Chloe be okay?" Kyle asked.

"Yes, Kyle. She'll be fine, but she'll be in a lot of pain for a day or two!" Cathy said, with a smile. "And thank you for rescuing my daughter and bringing her to where she could get help."

"No problem, Dr Bennett!" A slightly embarrassed Kyle replied.

..._...

I looked over at Kyle, sitting on the other couch.

I smiled weakly.

"Thanks, Kyle."

"No problem! I'd do anything to help Shadow!" Kyle said.

"What are you talking about?" I asked, or rather spluttered; that had been the last thing that I had expected Kyle to say!

"Tell him!" Mindy advised, rolling her eyes. "He's not stupid, so don't treat him like he is."

"How long have you known?" I asked.

"Ever since Josh appeared. It was confirmed when Jackal started appearing on the streets," Kyle said.

"Are you mad at me?" I asked tentatively.

"Why would I be?" Kyle asked, a little taken aback. "I got to be Shadow's boyfriend; now you can't beat that!"

I felt my face warming up!

"Can Shadow reward you with a kiss?" I teased.

"You can, but I've moved on from Shadow - I've traded up. I'd rather receive a kiss from Hit Girl!" Kyle announced, looking directly at Mindy, who blushed and averted her eyes behind her hand.

I laughed, or tried to; it hurt!

"Only if Kick-Ass will allow it!" Kyle said, looking at Dave.

"Just don't get in the habit of it, Kyle!" Dave cautioned, with a smirk.

Mindy got up and walked over to Kyle, then planted her lips on his right cheek! Kyle blushed bright red and Mindy giggled!

"So, you wanting to join our vigilante fraternity, then?" Mindy asked.

"Not really. However, if you need anything, then I'll help. Just not combat," Kyle said.

"Thanks!" I said.

Chapter 127*: Goodbye New York, Hello Chicago

Author's Note: 'West Columbia' refers to the new home of Marcus Williams, in Chicago.

The following morning

Saturday

West Ridge

When Josh found out, he flipped.

I was with Mindy downstairs, watching her do her morning exercises. I would have normally joined in, but I was still very sore from the attack last night. I had not told Josh about the attack, as I knew that he might do something stupid.

As it turned out, I was right!

"Morning, girls! How..." Josh broke off when he saw my face. "Did Mindy...?"

"No she fucking well did not!" I said quickly, then more slowly. "It was that Juno!"

Josh just seemed to freeze, then I saw anger building in his face.

"I'm gonna fucking kill her!"

"Don't be stupid, Josh," I cautioned and saw Mindy pause to watch the proceedings.

"I mean it, it's not just an idle threat – she's going to die!"

"Shut the fuck up Joshua; you're talking shit!" Mindy cut in.

"She is going to pay for what she did to Chloe, nobody does that to my girl and survives; not when I have the power to do something about it!" Josh retorted, glaring at Mindy.

I didn't mind being referred to as 'his girl', but the rest was just bullshit, although I liked the sentiment!

"Josh!" I warned, seeing Mindy's expression change.

"I'm going to do it and nobody is going to stop me!"

It was too late; I saw Mindy's eyes flash and then seconds later Josh was on his front and pinned to the mat. Mindy held his head down with her left arm.

"Now you listen to me, you little fuck, and you'd better listen good!" Mindy hissed. "Marcus gave you a second chance, he sees you as a son; how do you think he'd feel having to arrest your sorry ass?"

Josh never said a word.

"I gave you a second chance! Don't fuck things up, Joshua; 'cause if you do, you're back out on the streets again and last time I saw, you weren't doing so good!" Mindy finished.

Mindy released Josh and headed towards the stairs, passing me as she went.

"Sort your fucking boyfriend out!"

..._...

I was fuming.

Josh was gonna throw everything away and I knew that Chloe would not thank him for it! I was sitting in the living room when Josh edged into the room, cautiously and sat on the opposite couch.

I almost grinned at his attempts to give me a wide berth, but instead I glared at him.

"Mindy... I'm sorry, I was being really stupid and I didn't think..." Josh started.

"It's okay Joshua; we all make mistakes from time to time; I've made quite a few! I didn't mean to hurt you, or yell at you, but I wasn't about to let you throw your life away and Chloe wouldn't have thanked you for doing that, either!" I said.

"I know, I was just mad - when I saw the bruises..."

"That was why Chloe never told you about the attack last night."

"She's a very shrewd girl!" Josh commented.

"You killed Joshua yet?" Chloe asked, sitting down next to Josh and putting her arm around him.

"Thought about it, but the floor's clean and blood is such a cunt to get out of stuff!"

A week later Saturday

Marcus moved into his new house today.

It was just down the street from our house and was also very similar to our property, but slightly smaller. Marcus had packed up his house, in New York and had had everything shipped to Chicago. It had all arrived on Thursday and we had all helped him to get things sorted out.

More disturbingly, I think Paige and Megan are moving in with him! Now, I don't have a problem with that and the house would be a much better environment for Megan, than the apartment; the house actually had a garden, kind of.

West Columbia

"What is that for?" I growled, casting a wary eye over the jar on the kitchen side.

"It's for me!" Megan said, scowling.

"Well, you do kinda need it!" I admitted, with an evil smirk. "I like the pink, too!"

"You can fucking talk, bitch!" Megan exclaimed, angrily.

"For fuck's sake, Megan!" I admonished her.

"Mindy, it's a dollar each time... For Megan... But five bucks for you!" Marcus said, with a grin.

"What!" I exclaimed.

"You are old enough to know better, my girl!" Marcus admonished.

I just glared at Marcus.

"I had to install a swear jar at D-JAK; it got full rather quickly! One afternoon, Mindy was so annoyed that she just stuck a twenty dollar bill in the jar and went through to the back and turned the air blue!" Paige admitted with a chuckle.

"You know, I can actually believe that!" Marcus said laughing.

Megan and I both scowled.

That evening

Mindy and I were sitting down with Marcus and Paige, at Marcus' new house. Megan was 'busy' upstairs.

"Marcus, err, with Mindy's permission, could you tell me about Damon... I mean, before Mindy came along and also before Frank D'Amico came along..." I asked.

Marcus looked and Mindy, looked apprehensive, but curious, and she nodded.

"I'd like to hear this too," Mindy admitted.

"No problem. I also know that Mindy would never ask about what life was like before things went to shit..." Marcus said.

I was surprised. Apparently Mindy had never asked about her Dad's life before everything fell apart.

"Damon was kind and caring... You look surprised Dave!"

"Sorry! Three words that I normally don't hear in the same sentence: Damon, kind and caring!" I commented dryly.

Mindy glared, but then her expression softened.

"He always cared for me and was always kind, but I wish I could have known him before..." Mindy said and I could see tears in her eyes and she cuddled into me.

Marcus continued.

"Damon was the best partner that a man could have. He taught me everything that I needed to know to stay safe on the streets of New York. Damon had the respect of Cops, civilians and criminals alike. In return, he treated everybody with respect. He was one hell of a ladies man, too! Everybody was jealous of him and if he was at the same bar or party as you, you always knew that he would get the hottest woman there!"

Mindy was starting to look a little uncomfortable and Marcus had noticed.

"Okay, Mindy! I'll keep your Dad's sexual exploits to a minimum!" Marcus grinned.

"At one party, as usual, he attracted the attention of the hottest woman there, in fact it was me that introduced them! They got on like a house on fire and started going out a couple of weeks later. Once or twice I had to pick Damon up from her apartment on the way to a morning shift! Damon loved Kathleen like none other and the feeling was mutual. We all knew that Kathleen was off limits to the rest of us!"

At that point I realised that we were talking about Mindy's mother.

"Their wedding was fabulous and Damon was the happiest man alive. The only time that I ever saw him happier, was the day that he walked into the squad room and declared to everybody that Kathleen was pregnant - with you Mindy..."

Mindy was gripping me tightly now and staring at Marcus, absorbing everything that he said.

"... It was only a few months later that Frank D'Amico started his shit and then came the bullshit arrest and show trial. There was almost a fucking riot at the station, when the result was known. Not a single Cop believed the charge, not a one! Unfortunately D'Amico's pockets were deep and he had blackmailed or paid off anybody and everybody to get the conviction to stick and then he recruited that other bastard, Gigante!"

"The respect that the criminals and Damon had had between them, helped keep him alive for those five long years in prison. Many of the criminals actually supported Damon and some must have helped train him and give him the extra skills that he needed for when he was released. When he came out, he was a changed man; he was the Damon that you knew, Dave. I never saw Mindy again, after handing her over to Damon. The two of them just vanished, completely. I missed both of you, Mindy, so badly it hurt. I missed the little girl that I had brought up and I missed my partner, the best man that I had ever known..."

Chapter 128*: Safehouse Down

The following day
Sunday
Safehouse A

I was awoken by the alarm sounding, in our bedroom.

"Who set the fucking alarm?" I growled. "It's a goddamn Sunday morning!"

Then I realised, with a sharp jolt, what the alarm was. It was not the alarm clock: it was the perimeter alarm; somebody was trying to break into the Safehouse. I was instantly awake and punched Dave, who was about to complain, when he himself registered the alarm and shot out of bed and grabbed his clothes and boots, before punching a code into the gun cabinet beside the bed. I grabbed some clothes and my shoes, then ran along to ensure that Chloe was awake. It had just been the three of us in the Safehouse that night. I dragged her out of bed and clamped a hand over her mouth.

"Get dressed fast! We're under attack!" I growled and a confused Chloe pulled herself away from me and started getting dressed.

I returned to the bedroom to find that Dave was dressed and strapping on body armour. He threw me a set and I strapped it on, once I had finished getting dressed. I was inserting a magazine into a G36C, when Chloe appeared and grabbed another set of body armour and a P90. Dave already had a G36C ready to go.

"What's going on?" Chloe asked, strapping on her armour.

"I don't know! The perimeter alarm went off and that's all I fucking know!" I replied.

..._...

It had only been about five minutes since the alarm had been triggered.

What was happening downstairs? We were secure up here, but we needed to escape and preferably with our combat suits and weapons. Hopefully it was just some idiot trying to force an exterior door downstairs! This was the first time that the Safehouse had even been threatened.

Dave went first and I followed, while Chloe stayed upstairs. We all had basic comms headsets and NVGs. All lights were off, both upstairs and down. Dave and I emerged into the main Safehouse; nothing was visible on the NVGs. Beast and the two motorcycles were as they had been, when we had gone to bed the night before.

We checked that the briefing room and the armoury were still secure. I then punched up the CCTV footage and found that there were men outside the side door, one of whom was fiddling with the lock on the door. I hoped that he was having fun; it was not a conventional lock! We should have almost ten minutes, unless they moved to unconventional means, such as explosives.

Who were they and why were they here? Did they know they were attacking a Fusion Safehouse? By the heavy weapons that were in evidence, the answer seemed to be: yes! How could they have found out the location of the Safehouse? That, and many other questions, would be for later...

Right now, I needed to work out a plan. Should we gear up, leave and avoid a fight, or stay and risk injury, or worse? If they attacked and captured us, then our identities would be forfeit.

"Let's get Beast loaded; we have only minutes!" I had opted for the safe option; the Safehouse was expendable, we were not!

Chloe thundered down the stairs and we grabbed the combat suits and costumes from the armoury, while Dave reversed Beast up to the armoury door. We each pulled on our masks, to protect our identities from the attackers. The outer door to the Safehouse flew open and the men entered the small area between the inner and outer doors. This inner door was stronger and had multiple locking mechanisms, but was not infallible.

"Chloe, you drive Beast and we'll take the motorcycles," I said and Chloe nodded.

Thankfully, the three new Multistrada motorcycles were still at Safehouse D.

We loaded as many weapons and as much ammunition as possible, into Beast, before I armed the various Thermate demolition charges that were scattered throughout the Safehouse and slaved them to a remote trigger that I then clipped to my vest. The entire Safehouse would be destroyed, actually annihilated would be a better word, to protect our secrets. Nothing would remain that could betray us.

..._...

The final door exploded inwards and the attackers poured through.

Dave was ready and opened fire with his newest toy, the AA-12 automatic shotgun, dropping the attackers. Chloe and I were behind Beast and fired from cover. Dave's vest was hit by several rounds, but he continued firing, before backing towards us.

I saw no evidence of any identification on the men's equipment, so they were not Cops, but they were definitely professional and highly organised. I pushed Chloe into Beast and she climbed over to the driver's seat and started the engine. I covered Dave, while he started the Fat Boy and edged forward. Dave then covered me, while I mounted and started the Ducati. I hit the remote for the main door and accelerated out, followed by Dave. Chloe went last, covering our exposed backs with Beast's bulk.

Once clear of the main mesh gate, I pressed the remote detonator...

..._...

Safehouse A came apart... In a carefully planned sequence.

The armoury and all of its remaining equipment was destroyed, as the room imploded and everything inside was incinerated. Marty's computer systems were melted by a dedicated Thermate demolition charge, safeguarding all of our computer data; a copy of which was held elsewhere, so nothing would be permanently lost.

I had attached additional demolition charges to anything that I deemed a security risk and these went next, before the upper floor collapsed into the briefing room and armoury, adding to the conflagration. Several of the attackers were enveloped in searing flames from the Thermate charges that burned at over two thousand degrees.

..._...

As I accelerated away, I took a final look behind me and was just in time to see the roof of Safehouse A collapse inwards and the flames roaring into the sky. I felt intense emotions at losing yet another Safehouse; not just another Safehouse, but another Safehouse A, burnt to the fucking ground!

"You doing okay, Chloe!" I called.

"Never better!" Chloe replied nervously; this was her first time driving Beast and she was doing quite well.

Now another question: where were we going? And another: were the other Safehouses still safe?

I checked the time: three-forty in the morning.

I called Marty.

Lawndale

My cell rang.

It was Mindy and it was three-forty in the morning; this had better be something major!

"Mindy, this had better be good!" I said in greeting.

"No time, Marty! I need to know if the other Safehouses are secure... Safehouse A is fucking gone!" Mindy replied.

"When? By whom?" I asked.

"Just fucking now, by fucking me... We were attacked... Dave and I escaped, with Chloe and Beast, we're both on two wheels and we need a secure location and fast!"

"Okay, I'm checking... Call you back in five minutes!"

I jumped out of bed and dived for my computers.

Western Chicago

We all stopped in a dark alley, several miles west of Safehouse A and awaited Marty's call. I wanted to head for Safehouse D; at least that was off the grid and we could hide Beast and the motorcycles. Marty came back as promised.

"Mindy, all the other Safehouses are okay and there is no evidence of surveillance or watchers."

"We're heading for D and then home," I advised. "Call Josh and let him know what's happened."

Safehouse D

We pulled up inside the Safehouse and checked the perimeter for any problems.

We found none.

"Damn it to fuck!" Mindy shouted, as she pulled off her mask and comms.

I saw Chloe climb down from Beast, remove her mask and start to say something.

"Don't bother, Chloe... Just let her blow off a little steam. I've seen her pissed like this before and we may have a few nuclear explosions before she's done, but it's safest to stay well away!" I cautioned.

We left Mindy turning the air blue and generally ranting and raving.

"How did you like driving Beast?" I asked, as I was putting the coffee on.

"It's a big... Beast!" Chloe replied. "It was fun, but under the circumstances..."

"Yeah, I know!"

Two hours later Safehouse D

Mindy had calmed down, slightly, and was resting in a bunk, muttering foul obscenities under her breath.

That was when Marcus called.

"Hi Dave!"

"Hi Marcus! How are you doing this fine Sunday morning?" I asked.

"I'm roasting marshmallows down at a certain Safehouse! What the fuck happened?" Marcus asked with a very concerned tone.

"We were attacked... Professionals... We escaped with our lives, just!" I explained. "Anything left?"

"Not a thing! Mindy likes her Thermate, doesn't she?" Marcus commented dryly. "Is she pissed?"

"Oh we've had a tantrum, or two!" I replied, with a chuckle.

A steaming Mindy appeared at my shoulder.

"Give me the fucking phone, cunt!"

"Morning Marcus!" Mindy said, without any warmth.

"You seem a little bit grumpy this morning!" Marcus chuckled.

"So would you be, if you just blew up your own fucking Safehouse, asshole!" I growled and then instantly regretted it. "Sorry."

"Just winding you up, girl! Look, I'm sorry about the Safehouse; I know what they mean to you. Okay, we have bodies: some blown apart, some shot and some, well, melted! Now melted is a first, for me, but then you are kinda creative sometimes!"

I felt myself blushing.

"Thermate was going cheap a few months ago; vigilantes just love a sale!" I quipped in a poor attempt at humour.

"I can only imagine!" Marcus replied dryly. "We're trying to identify this stir fry and once we have, I'll let you know. You destroyed things so well that nobody but me knows that this place is linked to you guys."

"Thanks Marcus. We'll be home in an hour or two."

..._...

"You've calmed down a bit," Chloe commented, coming over.

"Sorry about that guys - I was just pissed."

"We had kinda noticed!" Chloe laughed.

"Come on, let's get Beast unloaded and then we can go home."

Dave went to reverse Beast nearer the armoury.

"Hey, short-ass!" He called, as he opened the driver's door.

Chloe and I both turned to Dave.

"Shadow! When you drive Beast, could you move the goddamn seat back, once you've finished! We're not all four foot tall!" Dave said.

"I am not four fucking feet tall, asshole!" Chloe retorted.

Later that morning West Ridge

We caught a cab home, but got out a couple of blocks short and walked the rest of the way.

When I opened the door, I was first met by Sophia and then I was very surprised to see Cathy, Curtis and Josh.

"You all okay?" Cathy asked, concern in her face, as Josh went to hug Chloe.

"We're all fine," I replied. "I'm just pissed off about yet another destroyed Safehouse.

"Hey! This one was not my fault!" Josh said defensively. "I was nowhere near the damn place!"

"I know!" I laughed weakly.

"Marty is keeping a close eye on the other Safehouses, with Abby's help," Cathy said.

"Do you know who was behind the attack?" Josh asked.

"No, but when I do..." I replied dangerously and let it hang.

..._...

"You guys okay? Marcus just told us what happened," Paige exclaimed, as she came into the kitchen.

"We're okay, Paige!" I said. "We just had a couple of problems!"

"That's not quite how Marcus put it!" Paige replied. "Thermate!"

"Mom! I told you they'd be okay; she's Hit Girl for fuck's sake!" Megan exclaimed. "Jeez!"

I had to laugh at Megan; she always had the ultimate faith in my abilities!

Chapter 129: Safehouse F

One week later
Saturday

We entered the seemingly dilapidated commercial structure and walked towards the rear of the building, stepping around discarded crap, some of which looked to be of military origin. The place was obviously abandoned and hadn't been occupied for quite some time!

At the rear of the dilapidated building, Mindy pressed the down button, on an equally dilapidated looking elevator, but nothing happened except that a small keypad had appeared beside the button. Mindy punched in an eight-digit code and the elevator doors slid open surprisingly noiselessly. In contrast to the exterior of the elevator, the inside was spotless and looked very modern. Dave pushed us both forwards and into the elevator, following Mindy. Then Dave, smirking, hit the 'F' button.

That in itself was strange, as the elevator only had two buttons; both letters: 'X' at the top, with 'F' at the bottom! The elevator dropped and I mean dropped! It went down fast, but stopped smoothly after about twenty seconds. Nothing happened until Mindy had placed her hand on a flat, glass panel that was only revealed when the elevator had stopped. The panel appeared beside the elevator door opposite to that which we had entered by.

Beyond the elevator doors was darkness. As we stepped out of the elevator, lights started to snap on, illuminating a short 'L' shaped corridor that angled to the left and led to another door, which was obviously heavily armoured. Mindy placed her hand onto another panel, beside the door and we entered a small room. More lights clicked on and we found ourselves in a box of steel and armoured glass; it was a kill zone. Mindy pressed a button and the armoured door behind us closed and Dave placed his hand on the biometric palm scanner which was located by another armoured door which then slid open.

We could hear a humming noise that sounded like it was coming from computers and air-conditioning. Suddenly, the lights came on, in banks, starting above us and continuing almost one hundred and forty feet. The ceiling was twenty feet or so above our heads. We entered the enormous room; although cavern might have been a better word!

..._...

"Cool, it's a Hit..." Josh started.

"I know what you're about to say and if you say it, I'll slap you stupid!" Mindy interrupted, grinning.

"Don't slap me... You know I can't help myself... It's a Hit-Cave!" Josh said quickly, then laughed and ducked away from Mindy, as she swung for him.

"It is not, will not and won't ever be, called a Hit-Cave!" Mindy growled, as Josh laughed, still avoiding her fist.

I gazed around us.

At the far end of the cavern, by a large vehicle-sized steel door were Beast, the Fat Boy and the Ducati Panigale. They were parked behind an eight-foot tall armoured glass shield that ran across the available width of the forty-foot wide cavern and had a large six-foot tall figure '1' on it. The top of the shield was angled over at forty-five degrees, to prevent anybody climbing the structure from the far side. The floor of the 'cavern' was ribbed steel and concrete.

Immediately to the right was a glass enclosed room that housed computer equipment and large flat screens. It was obviously Marty's new Command Centre and had a biometric palm scanner, similar to those that we had already seen Dave and Mindy use, beside the door. Immediately beside the Command Centre was an external steel staircase.

The staircase provided access to a walkway which ran around the central section of the cavern and provided access to a number of rooms on the second level. There was another steel staircase that came down on the left from the same walkway, at the far end of the facility. The walkway was about ten feet off the ground and ringed with a steel and glass barrier that rose to a level of three and a half feet and the walkway itself was made of steel, but had a foam rubber covering. There were various doors, visible, that led off the walkway into rooms, with unknown purposes. The ceiling and some of the walls had foam rubber sections that reduced the echo in the cavernous room.

..._...

To the left was a passageway that led to what looked like bathrooms. Further along from the passageway was an armoured door, with another biometric palm scanner that led into...

"Damn, a fucking firing range!" I exclaimed.

"Four sound-proofed, lanes, with electronic target retrieval!" Mindy announced happily.

Opposite the range was another door, this one was lightly armoured, but still secure. I looked at the biometric palm scanner and then at Mindy, who nodded. I placed my hand on the scanner and the door slid open and bright lights snapped on. It was the armoury, which Mindy had obviously already filled! There were obvious reserved spaces for our combat suits and other equipment that was still at the other Safehouse.

..._...

Next, Mindy took us past an enormous training mat and up the steel staircase on the left side of the cavern at the top of which was a large six-foot tall figure '2' on the wall and showed us a small, but well-equipped, restaurant quality kitchen with a seating area for about twelve people. Next to the kitchen was a large store room and then came a large open area with comfortable couches and a large screen television which would double as a briefing room. The ceiling of this room was the bare stone, which was actually quite cool! We followed the walkway around and found two bedrooms either side of a shared bathroom. The bedrooms each had a pair of sturdy bunk beds, to sleep four people in each room. The third bedroom seemed to have lost its bunk beds and instead had a large king-size bed and was obviously for Mindy and Dave, as the room had been painted purple! That room also had an en-suite bathroom that had a large bath and a shower big enough for two!

"How come you get a bed to share? What about me and Josh?" I asked indignantly.

"Fusion is about protecting Chicago, not getting vigilantes pregnant!" Mindy replied, with an evil smirk.

Back downstairs and after walking across the mat that was beside Marty's Command Centre we found a couple more store rooms, one of which was only accessible from the vehicle area. The vehicle area was accessed via a secure armoured glass door.

"What's down there?" Josh asked tentatively.

There was another steel staircase going down, near the staircase that went up beside the kitchen. Mindy waved Josh towards the staircase and we followed. It was another level, in this case level zero according to the large six-foot tall '0' on the wall. To the left of the staircase seemed to be just empty store rooms, although one store room seemed to hold enough dried food, water and other survival equipment to allow us to stay self-contained for years! A large store room, near the back of the level contained an enormous electrical generator and electrics panel.

"Currently we are connected to the City for electricity, but can be self-contained if necessary," Mindy explained.

Opposite the store rooms was a large, glass fronted, exercise room that was equipped with weights and running machines plus a lot of other training equipment.

Finally there was accommodation for another four people and a rather forbidding room that had a simple sign on the door: 'Holding'. Inside was a jail cell, with two bunks and a segregated area that would be used for interrogation.

Finally, we all went back upstairs to the briefing room and sat down and I looked questioningly at Mindy.

Mindy laughed.

"This place used to belong to the government. It was originally built as a Command Post for the Navy in case of a nuclear war. It was maintained and upgraded till about 2010 and then abandoned. It would have originally housed about twenty personnel. Your Dad, Chloe, arranged it for us. He came across the facility in some paperwork and found that it was available for purchase at a rock-bottom price. So, Commander Bennett pulled quite a few strings and I kinda got the keys last September. I had it updated a bit, but the elevator and biometric security are original, but upgraded and changed the locks, so to speak and Marty did his bit, too," Mindy explained.

"There are four different personnel entrances, one of which you have just seen. Another comes out in the Fusion warehouse, Safehouse D, which was why Mindy leased it in the first place. It had been covered up, but we uncovered it, hence the new building at the warehouse! There are two vehicle entrances which meet beyond that large steel door. We'll show you that later, when we get the motorcycles. This place is totally secure; it does not appear on any maps, as the Navy kept it black," Dave finished.

"It was only finished a couple of weeks ago. I was gonna unveil it in another week or two, but we need it now. This is a Safehouse in every sense of the word. Daddy once dreamed about having a place like this and often fantasised about it having a hidden entrance that was accessed using a bust of Shakespeare and poles down to a cave! Anyway, Daddy was a little nuts, but the cave idea seemed like a good idea," Mindy finished.

"Fucking awesome!" A very excited Josh, exclaimed.

"How far down are we?" I asked.

"You mean: will anybody hear you two fucking?" Mindy growled, with an evil smirk. "Our nearest neighbours are over sixty feet away, through solid rock! Not to mention that most of the Safehouse is under the railway."

Chapter 130*: Fort Fusion

The following night
Sunday
Safehouse D

We were geared up and on our Multistrada motorcycles.

It was just before midnight. Kick-Ass was driving Beast and would be acting as escort, with Hawk beside him. Battle Guy was covering our movements from his new Command Centre at Safehouse F. We left the warehouse and travelled in convoy, with Hit Girl out in front on her Multistrada and Beast behind Jackal and myself. We had to follow Hit Girl, as we had absolutely no idea where the vehicle entrance to Safehouse F was!

We had only travelled a mile or so, when I realised that we were travelling in a circle! I wasn't concerned, as Hit Girl had warned us that she would weave us about a bit to remove any tails or surveillance. Finally, we made a left turn off the road and drove through a wire mesh gate and onto some wasteland, just off of South Albany Avenue, before driving into a dilapidated looking warehouse, via a steel shutter that closed automatically behind Beast and we weaved around piles of 'stuff'; I had absolutely no idea what was in the piles. What concerned me more was that we headed towards the far wall and kept going!

A ramp suddenly appeared in front of Hit Girl and we headed downwards before curving around to the right and we started going down and still turned to the right. The ramp closed automatically, behind Beast. It was very dark, but our headlights illuminated enough of the ramp that I could see that we were descending in a tight circle. The walls were concrete and I could make out light fittings, but they were all off.

After what seemed like ages, the ramp levelled off and bright lights came on that illuminated a large steel door. Hit Girl stopped and waved at the door. I heard what I assumed to be latches being released and the door descended, quite quickly and smoothly, into the ground and we rode into the Safehouse and pulled up beside the Fat Boy and the Ducati Panigale. Beast stopped on the other side of the Fat Boy and we all cut our engines and removed our helmets and masks. Behind us the enormous door was rising up, again quite quickly and quietly, before I heard the latches re-engaging. Amber lights that had illuminated, on either side of the door, went out.

Safehouse F

"Welcome to Fort Fusion!" Marty announced, walking over followed by an excited Sophia.

"Fort Fusion?" Josh asked.

"Thought it would be a good name," Mindy said.

"Not bad, Hit Girl!" I agreed.

"This place is definitely awesome!" Josh added.

Mindy placed her hand on a biometric scanner, near Beast and a part of the glass shield opened and we walked to the armoury and removed our combat suits, stowing them away along with our weapons. Just as we were heading upstairs for a coffee, before heading home, an alarm sounded.

..._...

"Come and watch this," Mindy said, with a mischievous grin and led Josh and I into the Command Centre.

Marty brought up a CCTV image of the area in front of the elevator, in the building on the surface. A man was standing there and we recognised the man as Marcus. We could also hear him, too!

"If that girl is gonna jerk me about at this time of night, I'll damn well..."

Marty pressed a button and the elevator door slid open and Marcus looked at the elevator suspiciously.

"I know I'm gonna regret this!" Marcus said and stepped into the elevator.

Twenty seconds later the elevator stopped and the doors opened. Marcus had not had to do anything.

"We can control the elevator from here and lock it down if necessary. When the elevator leaves the surface a steel cover drops over the doors preventing access to the lift shaft," Marty explained.

We watched as Marcus left the elevator and moved down the short corridor and into the 'Kill Zone' and Marty then opened the inner door, once the outer door had closed. We went out to meet Marcus.

"Well I'll be damned! That girl has really gone over the top now!" Marcus said, gazing around the cavern.

..._...

"Well?" Mindy asked, looking a little over excited.

"It's just – err, so you Mindy..." Marcus said, seemingly speechless and Mindy jumped forward and gave him a hug.

"I'm glad that you approve!" Mindy said, smiling enormously.

"I really thought that I was gonna be mugged up there!" Marcus said dryly.

We all headed upstairs for a coffee.

..._...

"This place really is awesome!" Marcus said for about the fourth time.

"It is that!" Dave admitted, with a sideways smirk at Mindy.

"Well, I'm glad to see that you guys are gonna be safe and I really mean that!" Marcus said. "I was really worried when I saw Mindy's melted Safehouse!"

Two days later
Tuesday night
Somewhere in Chicago

"You know who I am?"

"Oh, yeah!" The man looked and sounded scared.

"Do you fear me?"

"Fuck, yeah!"

"Good! Now, you are going to work for me!"

"Anything!"

"You will obtain information for me... I may give you tasks... You will obey, without question..."

"No problem!" The man responded, but his face said it was anything but!

"You give me bad information, you die! You fail me, you die! You inform on me, you die... You get my drift?"

"Yes ma'am!"

"That applies to any member of my team, even the fucking dog!"

"Not a problem!"

"I am not totally heartless!" The man's expression screamed that he thought otherwise. "You will be under my protection! Anybody fucks with you; they fuck with me!"

"Thank you, thank you!"

But the man was talking to the darkness.

The following morning
Wednesday
Safehouse F

Mindy was pounding the bag on the lower level of the Safehouse.

She seemed to have a lot of rage to get out of her system. It was surprising how much rage Mindy managed to pack into quite a compact package! I came up behind her and wrapped my hands around her waist. Mindy stopped punching the bag and lent into me. Her head bent backwards and she grinned up at me.

"Hi, lover!"

"Hi, babe!" I replied and bent down to give her a kiss and span her around.

Mindy was so incredibly sexy when she was dripping with sweat; it turned me on like almost nothing else! We had the Safehouse to ourselves today; nobody else was here.

"I need you Dave!" Mindy said, between kisses. "Let's christen this Safehouse properly!"

Okay, I should have been at school, but I needed some time alone.

I placed my hand on the biometric sensor and the final door slid open. I entered Mindy's latest toy - Safehouse F. It was kinda weird being here on my own, but I knew that I would be able to put my angry energies to better use. I headed straight downstairs to the exercise room, not really looking at anything.

I entered the glass-enclosed room and immediately saw a white t-shirt on the floor, plus some punching gloves. This could not be good! I wandered back towards the stairs and pulled something off of the handrail and looked at it – then dropped it quickly – it was a sports bra, a damp sports bra! I continued upstairs to the main level and found a sports shoe and then a few feet further on another shoe.

I was getting a really bad feeling about this!

I headed towards the stairs that led up to the next level and listened. My eyes went wide at what I was hearing! Oh – my – God! I really wished that what I had just heard could be unheard, as I could now see images that my mind had formed to match the sounds! Mindy was a screamer and she had a damned good set of lungs! I ran...

Maybe school would be better after all!

Lake View High School

"What's up Josh?"

"Nothing, Chloe, I – err..." Josh replied, looking very uncomfortable.

"I couldn't find you earlier, where were you?"

"I, err – I was late."

Josh was actually blushing and getting redder.

"What has happened? Did you see something?" I persisted.

"No thank God; I saw nothing!"

Josh moved off, in a bit of a confused state. He could be so strange sometimes!

Author's Note: Hey 250,000 words!

Chapter 131*: The Wrath of Hit Girl - Part I

Three days later

Saturday

'The Farm'

4:30 A.M.

They came at dawn...

I awoke with a jolt as Jack shook me awake. He explained that the perimeter alarm had been triggered and that he could see trouble advancing on the house, via the CCTV cameras. I noticed that he had his Glock 17, in his right hand. I rapidly jumped out of the bed and pulled on some warm clothes and boots, then I reached under the bed and pulled out a hidden FN Five-seveN Mk 2 pistol and a spare magazine.

"How long has that been there?" Jack asked, with a concerned tone.

"Since we started fighting the Russians, last year; I asked Mindy for it," I replied. "Sorry!"

"Don't be! That was an astute decision; I always saw you as smart!" Jack said with a smile.

I checked the magazine in the pistol and then racked back the slide to chamber a round. Jack led the way out and down the stairs. Natalie was already half way down the stairs and, I was rather surprised to see, armed with an over and under shotgun! As we got to the ground floor (I had issues with calling it the 'first floor'), I could make out the shadows of armed men through the glass on the front door. We headed for the kitchen and the back door, but when we got there, we found shadows beyond that door, too.

..._...

"The basement... We can get out that way... Tunnel to the barn," Jack announced.

"What tunnel?" I asked.

"Did I never tell you?" Jack replied with a chuckle. "I need to keep some secrets, Joshua!"

Just then the men outside assaulted the house. Both doors were smashed open and the men poured in. Natalie opened fire with the shotgun, emptying both barrels, before pushing her way through the door to the basement. Jack and I emptied our pistol magazines at the men, dropping three or four. The men obviously weren't expecting to find us all up and armed; this threw them a bit and they were suddenly disorganised, which gave us time to dive for the basement.

At the bottom of the stairs, we passed Marty's backup command centre installation, which was secured behind a locked, but unarmoured door. I wanted to go and get a Fusion radio, but there was no time. I inserted my only spare magazine, as did Jack. Natalie swiftly reloaded the shotgun with another pair of shells. Jack opened a small door that was easily missed, but which actually led to a tunnel, about five feet high and three feet wide. I urged Jack and Natalie to move, while I opened up a hidden Fusion gun cabinet and pulled out a set of upper-body armour, preloaded with P90 and FN Five-seveN magazines, plus a pair of Fairbairn-Sykes fighting knives. I quickly strapped this on and heard men coming down the stairs into the basement. I only had time to shove my pistol into my trousers and grab a P90, before I slammed the gun-safe door closed, thus locking it and pulled back on the P90's cocking lever. The first man appeared at the bottom of the stairs and I fired off a dozen rounds, dropping that man and the man behind, and giving the rest cause to slow their advance; there was no way that they could have expected automatic weapons! I had to give Jack and Natalie time to reach the barn.

"Come on, Josh!" I heard Jack shout.

I fired off a couple more short bursts and then dove for the tunnel, pulling the door shut behind me. I hoped that they might not find it, in the dark. Minutes later, I found a wooden ladder and climbed up to and through a trapdoor that came out in one corner of the dark barn. Jack and Natalie helped me out of the trapdoor, before Jack dropped it closed and we pushed a heavy box on top of it.

I moved towards the locked barn doors and peered out. I could see a pair of SUVs out by the road and several armed men, all equipped with body armour, moving around the exterior of the house. They seemed very organised and competent.

"What now?" I asked Jack. It had suddenly occurred to me that I hadn't picked up my fucking mobile!

"It won't take them long to come and search in here," Jack replied. "We have only seconds."

"I only have two more shells left," Natalie announced. "We need to get you out of here, Joshua!"

"I need to stay to protect you!" I growled back.

"No Josh, we're not all getting out of this. Take your motorcycle and head south..." Jack started, but he was cut off as bullets started to pierce the wood of the barn and Natalie went down with a scream, followed by Jack. I felt two rounds hit my chest armour and I dove for the ground.

"Go, Joshua, go..." Jack said, then his eyes closed and he lay still.

West Ridge

5:00 A.M.

I awoke with a jolt, as my cell rang.

The screen told me that it was Murphy and I also saw the time!

"This had better be fucking good Murphy; it's five o'clock in the fucking morning!"

"CPD's being hit and hit bad... Jack Bay was attacked half an hour ago..." Murphy explained, in a subdued tone.

I sat bolt upright in bed and came fully awake.

"What! When?" I blurted out.

Oh my God, Josh!

"Black clad men attacked four CPD Commanders, at their homes. Commanders of District 8 and District 4 are both dead. Commander District 10 was away, but his family was hit hard. Jack and his wife were taken to hospital with serious injuries. I'm at the scene now; there was a major fire fight and we have almost a dozen dead attackers. I know the Commander had a boy living with him, but there's no sign of the kid..."

I felt like shit inside...

"... Lieutenant Williams will be here in minutes to take over the scene. I'm sorry Hit Girl, I know that you and the Commander were close. We have men out searching the area for the boy. As soon as I know more, I'll contact you." Murphy finished.

"Thanks, Murphy!"

..._...

Several minutes later my cell rang, just as I was getting dressed and so was Dave. It was Marcus.

"Have you heard?" Marcus asked, without any preamble.

"Yes, Murphy called. Where are you?" I asked.

"I've just arrived at the Farm; it's a damn mess. I can see six dead bodies from here... There are more bodies in the house. I've checked the barn; Josh's motorcycle is gone and there are tracks heading south. Mindy, the tracks are not just motorcycle tracks; he was pursued by what look to be a set of SUV tyres, too..." Marcus explained, before trailing off.

I knew how much Marcus cared for Josh; it was almost as much as he cared for me.

"Marcus, check the gun-safe, in the basement - you know the code..."

I heard Marcus heading into the house and down some stairs. Then the electronic beep of a code being entered and the buzz of the lock.

"Is there a P90 on the left hand side?" I asked, tentatively.

"No."

"Then he's armed. He'll have taken his armour, too!"

"That would account for the dead men in the basement!" Marcus commented, dryly.

"Oh God!" I said.

"Mindy, you trained him well. He's a bright kid, we'll find him!" Marcus said. "I... Hold on..."

I heard chatter in the back ground, then Marcus came back on the phone. He sounded like he was running.

"Neighbours have reported gun fire a couple miles from here, about ten minutes ago. I'm on my there now."

Two miles south of The Farm

4:50 A.M.

I was in a lot of pain.

When Jack and Natalie had been shot, I had unlocked the motorcycles with my keys, which were in my trouser pockets, thank goodness! I grabbed my helmet from a rack and pulled it on, then I climbed on to the motorcycle, started the engine and waited a few seconds as I heard the barn doors rattling and then the doors being opened. I loosed a burst of rounds, then clipped the P90 to my armour and accelerated out the door. My burst of gunfire had caused the armed men to dive for cover. I saw a total of about six men on the ground as I roared off, heading south towards the track where Mindy had taken us for off-road training. I couldn't see very much and had no lights, so I took extra care and tried to avoid being too reckless. I was scared, very scared and I wished Mindy was with me, to guide me. I hadn't a clue what to do, except to run. But where was I going to run to? I had no communications, but at least I could protect myself. I took a quick glance behind me and saw an SUV, headlights blazing, coming after me.

Oh, shit!

I just needed to hold out until help arrived.

I first headed south-east for about five hundred yards, then turned south for another five hundred yards, before I came to a fence. To the east was an open, ploughed field which was no good as it would then leave me exposed to the pursuing SUV and the men inside, instead I stopped the motorcycle behind some dense bushes and I turned off the engine.

I saw the lights of not one, but two SUVs, heading towards me. I checked the P90 and ensured that I had a fully loaded magazine fitted. I had one more magazine left, plus three spare magazines for the Five-seven.

Unfortunately for me these guys were also well equipped. The first SUV stopped twenty yards away, with the second moving about twenty yards to my left of the first SUV, before stopping. Two men climbed out of the first SUV and started to scan the area. There was something not right about the silhouettes and then it hit me, the men were equipped with Night Vision Goggles!

I wondered if they were image intensifying or infra-red...

I got my answer, as automatic gunfire ripped through the bushes near the motorbike with the hot engine. I had to move and fast... I jumped back on the motorcycle and fired off a dozen rounds as I kick started the motorcycle. Thankfully it started on the first kick and I accelerated away from the bushes, heading west for about a hundred yards, where I found the river then turned south again.

I kept going for another three hundred and sixty yards before I came off the bike and fell into a ditch; I must have skidded on a muddy patch of ground. The SUVs had closed and instead of getting back on the bike, I dumped my helmet and crawled deeper into the ditch, which was where I was now. I had a big bruise on my right hip, where I had landed on a rock and I also noticed a stinging sensation in my lower left back. When I reached behind me, my hand came back wet, with blood.

Chapter 132*: The Wrath of Hit Girl - Part II

The same morning
Saturday
I-90, heading north

We were driving towards The Farm, as fast as was reasonable.

Dave and I were in the SUV and I was driving. I had scrambled Cathy, in case Josh was wounded; Chloe and Cathy were a few miles ahead of us, also heading for The Farm. Unfortunately it would take us a good twenty minutes or so to get there, by which time it could all be over!

Marcus, though, was less than two minutes away...

County Forest Preserve
5:15 A.M.

I skidded to a halt in the parking lot.

Two hundred yards to the west, I could hear gunfire and saw muzzle flashes, plus the headlights of a pair of vehicles. Two CPD vehicles came to a halt, as I grabbed an AR-15 from the truck. Sergeants Murphy and Fellowes appeared beside me, both armed with AR-15s, too.

Other Officers secured the exit to the main road.

West of County Forest Preserve
5:00 A.M.

I set the P90 to single shot and aimed using the laser sight.

I controlled my breathing and squeezed the trigger. A man fell, as his head almost exploded. The body fell back against one of the SUVs. That was one of the two men with the NVGs, the other man turned towards me, started shooting, and I dived down and crawled along the ditch for about five yards, then popped back up and aimed. I shot out three of the four headlights and killed another man. I poured rounds into the engine bay of one SUV before I heard a bang and smoke and steam poured from the engine compartment.

I inserted my last P90 magazine and popped up again. I could not see the last two men, at all. I took a chance and crawled back to the motorcycle and hauled it out of the ditch. I had no time to find my helmet, so I kicked the motorcycle to life and headed south west, away from the river. My thigh and lower back were hurting me badly, the pain was bad, but I had no choice, I had to keep moving. I could hear shouts over the motorcycle engine as the remaining men, shot at me before getting into the remaining, one eyed, SUV, which then started to follow me.

I must have gone about two-thirds of a mile. I couldn't go any further, I was beside a small lake. I dropped the motorcycle and hid down beside the water. I could hear the SUV and it was approaching fast, down the trail that I had just followed. I aimed the P90 and the moment that the SUV had appeared, I emptied the entire magazine into it. The SUV skidded to a halt with steam pouring from its engine compartment. Two men fell out of the SUV and scurried into cover. I dropped the now useless P90 and pulled out my pistol and started to fire off rounds at the men, keeping their heads down and buying myself time. I could hear Police sirens in the distance and I hoped that they were coming towards me.

Minutes later, I was inserting my last magazine, when I heard vehicles skidding to a halt somewhere across the water and I heard shouts. I kept firing rounds at the two men, who seemed to have an inexhaustible supply of ammunition. A voice barked out over the gunfire, just as the slide of my pistol locked back on an empty magazine.

"Chicago PD! Put the weapons down and your hands up!"

The most wonderful emotions swept over me, as I recognised Marcus' voice; I was safe. The Police started to engage the two men with what had to be AR-15s.

County Forest Preserve
5:20 A.M.

The armed men were returning fire, with automatic weapons.

Fellowes, Murphy and I kept firing. As we came around the lake I thought I could see where Josh could be, down by the water. It was then that I heard one of the men shouting.

"He's run out of ammunition, get him, then we can get the fuck outta here!"

Silhouetted by the remaining headlight, I saw a man move towards the water and just as I aimed my rifle, two slim objects seemed to grow out of the man's chest. I instantly recognised them as the hilts of two knives. The man dropped at almost the same time as the other man was killed by Murphy and Fellowes.

"Josh!" I yelled. "Joshua!"

There was no response.

I ran down to the water's edge and could see a dark form partially in the water. I rolled the dark form onto its back; it was Josh. I checked for a pulse; he was alive but unconscious and I could see blood on the side of his head. He must have been grazed by a bullet, at some stage during his escape. Beside the boy was a discarded P90 and a Five-seveN pistol with the slide locked back. Scattered around him were three empty pistol magazines and hundreds of empty bullet cases.

Just then Murphy and Fellowes appeared.

"The SUV is clear, Lieutenant!" Fellowes reported.

"Damn!" Murphy exclaimed, taking in the scene before him. "This must be Jackal!"

"What!" I said.

"Come off it, Lieutenant!" Murphy said. "We've known about Fusion for a long time; I owe them my life, twice! We know what Shadow looks like, without her mask; we saw her after that bank thing, last year and we have a fair idea who she really is, too - the same with Hit Girl! Have no fear Lieutenant; Fusion's secrets are safe with us."

"That's one brave kid!" Fellowes exclaimed.

I picked Josh up and carried him back to my truck. Fellowes and Murphy followed with my AR-15 and Josh's weapons.

I-90, heading north

My cell rang and Dave answered it.

All I heard was Dave's side of the conversation.

"Hi Marcus... Yeah... Thank God... We'll be there soon!"

Dave turned to me and I felt tears in my eyes and then on my cheeks. Dave was smiling.

"That was Marcus, he has Josh. He's wounded, but alive..."

I didn't hear the rest; the tears of relief just spilled down my cheeks.

Dave immediately rang Chloe and Cathy, and told them the good news. They were just behind us, as we raced up I-90 and we were less than ten minutes away from Marcus and Josh.

County Forest Preserve

I laid Josh in the back of my truck and unclipped his body armour, which I noticed had received several hits! As I removed the armour, my hand came away from his back wet and when I checked it under the light, my hand was red. Oh shit! I pulled up his top and checked his back. There was a small wound, which looked to be a through and through, but the wound was bleeding quite a bit. I grabbed my first aid kit and cleaned the wound as best I could and covered it with a dressing. Josh had started to regain consciousness and had screamed out when I had touched the wound.

"It is okay, Josh... It's me, Marcus! I'm just checking your wound," I said, as calmly as possible.

"It hurts!" Josh said, through clenched teeth and tears were streaming down his face.

"It will! I know; I've been shot before!" I said, trying to sound encouraging, but failing.

Josh suddenly stopped grimacing and stared directly at me.

"Jack and Natasha..." He said.

"They are both alive and currently in surgery."

"Oh God!" Josh said then passed out.

..._...

Minutes later two SUVs pulled up and Murphy went to wave them through the Police road block. I saw Mindy, Dave, Chloe and most importantly Cathy, running towards me. Chloe was crying and Mindy looked as though she had been too.

"How..." Mindy and Chloe said together.

"Hold on, girls! Josh is okay; I've dressed his wounds, but he needs proper medical care!" I said, waving Cathy towards Josh and holding Mindy and Chloe back.

"Let me go!" Chloe almost screamed. "Let me see Josh!"

"Give Josh some space, Chloe!" I said forcefully. "Dave!"

Dave grabbed Chloe and took her off to one side, to give her time to calm down. I explained to Mindy what had happened, while Cathy started to check Josh out. Murphy came over with Fellowes to find out how Josh was.

"He'll be okay," Cathy called over. "I just need to make sure that he's fit to travel and then we can get him out of here."

"That would be a good idea - before anybody arrives who isn't friendly to Fusion!" Murphy pointed out. "I think it would be best to keep the boy out of the news."

"Thanks, Murphy!" Mindy said, with understanding and a nod from Marcus.

"We owe you guys a lot; I hope he recovers," Fellowes said, genuinely concerned.

"Marcus, I assume you're staying here?" Cathy asked.

"Yes, I need to stay," Marcus confirmed.

"I've given Josh something for the pain. Dave, get Josh into your SUV and get him home, then into bed. I'll stitch him up there," Cathy ordered. "Curtis picked a good night to stay with friends!"

"Take it carefully, Miss Speedy!" Murphy said to Mindy.

"I don't speed; it was just that one time!"

"Yeah, right! You fairly tore up the Dan Ryan, the other week! What did you hit, one-ten, one-twenty?" Fellowes asked.

I watched Mindy and saw her smirk.

"One-twelve!"

Later that morning
West Ridge

Cathy came out of the bedroom.

Chloe had been pacing backwards and forwards, almost enough to wear a strip in the carpet!

"How is he?"

"For God's sake, Chloe, calm down! Your boy is going to be fine; nothing important was damaged!"

Chloe glared at her mother.

"Go on - just don't overexcite him, he needs rest!" Cathy said, then smirked as Chloe ran into the bedroom and started fawning over Josh.

"She's been really worried – can't really blame her really, considering that she has been through this before with Josh!" I said.

"As before, you'll be there to help her, Mindy," Cathy said with a smile. "I need a coffee."

"I'll join you. Josh seems to be in good hands!"

That afternoon
Northwestern Memorial Hospital

Marcus and I stood beside Jack.

He was in a bad way, but was conscious; at least for now.

"Did he get away?" Jack asked.

"Yes, he did – he killed almost every last one of them! He's hurt, but nothing serious," Marcus replied.

"Thank God!"

"I am going to do everything possible to find who did this, Jack! Vengeance will be swift, but or so violent!" I said, felling the anger coursing through me. "No one has yet seen exactly what I am capable of!"

"You're scaring me now!" Marcus said, half seriously, wrapping his arm around my shoulders.

"I know you will, Mindy. Please stay safe; I would not want anything to happen to you, or any member of your team, for my sake," Jack said. "It was your training that helped Josh today, without it – we would all be dead, right now."

I felt myself blushing.

Natalie was still unconscious, in the bed next to Jack. I felt so helpless, but I felt pride in what Josh had been able to pull off - alone.

Later that afternoon
West Ridge

"The gloves are off! Hit Girl has gone soft and that is going to change. Criminals will learn what the consequences are for hurting people dear to me. They will fear me, they will fear my name and they will be too damned scared to venture out..."

"Mindy, calm the fuck down!" I said. "I know you're mad; we all are. But you know what happens when you rush into things..."

"I know, dammit!" Mindy yelled back. "I almost lost three very important people today, Dave. I don't have that many people in my damned life and I almost lost three, all at once..."

Mindy fell down onto the couch beside me and started sobbing. I pulled her into me and held her tight.

That evening
West Ridge

"Hi guys, come on in!" I said. "Mindy, we have visitors!"

"Murphy, Fellowes!" Mindy said. "Good to see you!"

"Please, Paul and Sam, at least when we're out of uniform!" Paul Murphy said and pulled a large bouquet of purple tulips from a bag.

"For the lady!" Paul said, with a smile.

Mindy seemed to wilt at the sight of the flowers.

"They're lovely!" Mindy said, with an enormous smile.

"The florist said that purple flowers send a message of pride, dignity and admiration," Sam Fellowes said.

"Thank you," Mindy said, almost at a loss for words!

"You guys hitting on my fiancée?" I asked, with some pretend menace.

"Nah! But if we were; we're more scared of her, than you!" Murphy laughed.

"You guys having fun?" Marcus asked, coming in the door.

"Lieutenant," Sam and Paul said.

"Just letting the lady know that we admire her."

"She is no lady!"

"Thanks!" Mindy said sarcastically, but grinned.

"How's the kid?" Sam asked.

"Believe it or not, he's been through a lot worse!" Marcus said with a grimace.

"You can say hello, if you want. First on the left, at the top of the stairs. Better knock, Chloe's in there and well..." Mindy said mischievously.

"Hi, kid!"

I looked up from Chloe, who was laid on the bed beside me, to see two men that I instantly recognised. It was Murphy and Fellowes, but out of uniform.

"Almost didn't recognise you guys without your stripes!" I said.

"You look better than twelve hours ago!" Fellowes said.

"I feel better than twelve hours ago!" I replied and I really did.

"What you did, it took real guts, Josh. We're both extremely impressed and we both know what you're going through; we've both been there. But I understand that you've been through worse, so this should be a walk in the park for a veteran like you!" Murphy said.

"I've had more peaceful walks in the park!"

"You okay, Chloe? You seem to look after Josh very well; every good man, needs a good woman!" Fellowes said with a smile.

"That's sexist!" Chloe retorted, with a scowl.

"Okay, I know better than to piss you off; I saw what happened to the last guy!" Fellowes quipped.

"Funny!"

"I wish I could have done more, then Jack and Natalie wouldn't be in hospital. I should have stayed and..." Josh started.

"Joshua," Murphy said sternly and Josh looked up at him. "You did the only thing that you could have done; which just happened to be the right thing. We've spent all day up there, at The Farm; you did everything right. You used your training that Mindy gave you and used it to lethal effect. Nobody at The Farm today can think of anything else that you could have done. So cut that crap out right now! I want to see you better and out on those streets, doing what you do best. Even if it is winding up poor defenceless Police Officers!"

Josh laughed.

"Doughnuts are on you guys then!" Josh said with a laugh before turning serious. "Thanks that meant a lot."

Chapter 133*: The Wrath of Hit Girl - Part III

The following morning
Soon after midnight
Sunday

The man was slammed against the wall.

He was shaking from head to toe, with fear. This fear was probably very understandable, considering who was standing in front of him.

"Hit Girl! I know what you're after, but I don't know anything; believe me I'm not that brave!"

"You know the consequences of lying to me, worm!" She growled, inches from the man's face.

"I'll do what I can - I have contacts..."

"You do that... When I return you had better have something for me... Or...."

The man closed his eyes and then fell to the floor of the dark alley.

When he opened his eyes again, he was alone.

The following night
Western Chicago Bratva

"Boss, we have a problem and by problem, I mean problem!"

"He's not kidding, Boss; Hit Girl is on the fucking warpath! She is determined to get to those who killed the cops and I don't think she cares if she treads on us all to get to them. She is totally inhuman, that girl – none of us stands a fucking chance!"

"Kick-Ass holds her leash, he controls her."

"Nah! Kick-Ass is pissed, too! He's like a fucking battle tank; nothing gets through his armour!"

"Their little pal, Shadow; she's just as inhuman as Hit Girl and just as pissed. She attacked one of Georgi's men and shot him, in both fucking knee caps!"

"The only solution is to find who killed the Cops... What the fuck!"

An arrow had just embedded itself into the conference table. The men looked upwards, but not before the arrow had exploded in a dazzling white light and an enormously loud bang. Once the men around the table, had picked themselves up they looked at where the arrow had been, but instead found their worst nightmares.

"Oh fuck!"

"You don't mind if we drop in?" Hit Girl growled.

Behind Hit Girl was the large armoured form of Kick-Ass. Beside Hit Girl was her protégé: Shadow. You could see the vicious snarl on Hit Girl's face, but what was somewhat more unnerving, was not being able to see the faces of Kick-Ass or Shadow at all.

"That skylight was new!"

"Bill me!" Hit Girl growled.

"Yeah, send it to: hitgirl !" Shadow added.

I ignored the cocky vigilante!

"I know why you are here, Hit Girl; but we cannot help you. I wish we could..."

"I need to be sure..."

"We do not kill Cops; well, not like that – we have rules and you know that."

"Yes, I do," Hit Girl replied, somewhat reluctantly.

"We pledge our assistance to you and your team, during this time," I said.

"Я уважаю Братва, пока они не неуважение меня!" Hit Girl replied. [I respect the Bratva, until they disrespect me!]

"Ваше здоровье!" [Your health!]

"Sorry about the mess!" Kick-Ass growled as the three of them left, the same way that they had come.

..._...

"You just allied us with Hit Girl and Fusion!"

"Better than being her enemy!" I replied and received several enthusiastic nods.

Two days later
Wednesday night
Safehouse F

I had noticed earlier in the evening that Shadow had been struggling.

She was very tired, as were all of us. We had been operating for over eight hours every night for the past three nights, but Shadow was tired to the point of being dangerous to herself and others. I had tried to get this across to her earlier that afternoon, but had failed miserably, so I tried again.

"Chloe, you are tired and need a rest..."

"Like fuck I do!" Chloe responded, just as I had expected her to.

"Right now, Chloe, you are knackered. You would be a danger to others and yourself if you went out..."

"Try and fucking stop me, bitch!"

Suddenly, I saw Chloe grabbed by the scruff of her neck and hauled backwards, then dropped rather unceremoniously onto the mat.

"I'm calling a fucking end to this!" Dave announced, anger in his eyes. "Don't you dare speak to Mindy like that, EVER, and definitely not when it's you that is in the wrong!"

Chloe looked mad and her eyes flared.

"I need to find the people who attacked Josh and Jack and Natalie!" Chloe yelled back.

"Chloe, calm down, please..." I tried.

"I will not calm down!"

"Calm down, or I will put you down and get Mommy to sedate you!"

Chloe just sat there breathing heavily and then after a minute she started to sob. I sat down beside her and wrapped my arm around her shoulders.

"We'll get the people who did this – but not at the expense of anybody and definitely not you. You all mean a hell of a lot to me and I don't want to lose a single one – not when it can be avoided," I said quietly.

"Come on, let's get outta here. Marty and Abby are fine on their own – let's go home," Dave said and helped Chloe up off the mat.

"Thanks Dave!" Chloe said and gave him a tight hug.

"Not a problem, Chloe – we stick by each other, it's the only way we all get through tough times like this."

"Don't tell Josh or Mom – they'll just yell at me!" Chloe pleaded.

"Our secret, kid!" I said.

The following morning
Thursday
West Ridge

We all awoke late that morning, not far short of lunchtime! We must all have been very tired.

I found Megan and Paige in the kitchen, when I got downstairs.

"Hi guys!"

"Hi Chloe, you look a little worse for wear this morning!" Paige observed.

"You look like shit!" Megan added and received a disapproving frown from Paige.

"That will cost you a dollar, you foul-mouthed little varmint!" Mindy said as she came into the kitchen, still in her pyjamas.

"Does the word 'hypocrite' mean anything to you?" Megan retorted.

"It's too early for word games, Megan!" Mindy growled. "What are you guys doing here, anyways?"

"Marcus asked us to check on you lot, as you did get back late," Paige explained.

"The old man does worry!" Mindy replied.

"He cares, that's all!" Dave said, giving Mindy a cuddle and a kiss.

"I think you guys should take a day off and get some rest – please!" Paige insisted.

"A good idea, my love!" Dave said.

"Yeah, we won't accomplish anything tired and yeah, I feel like shit!" I said, smirking at Megan who scowled back.

"Would you both take Sophia for a walk?" Dave asked Paige.

"No problem!"

"Cool!" Megan added.

After lunch we just lazed around the house. Dave was busy upstairs chatting with Josh, while Chloe and I lay on the couch together and watched TV.

At about two, there came a knock on the side door. I pushed Chloe out of the way and headed over to the door to see who it was. It was Erika and...

"Did you arrive on that?" I demanded, as I threw open the door.

"Yeah, why?" Erika asked, somewhat confused.

"It's a fucking Ducati 1299 Panigale S!" I growled.

"Bang on! I wanted a Multistrada, but Daddy helped me get this – long story, but I bet it would look better in purple!" Erika said, whispering the last part.

"Get in here!" I growled, pulling her in and closing the door.

..._...

"Why do you look like somebody just stole your Ducati?" Chloe asked.

"This bitch, here, has a goddamn Ducati 1299 Panigale S!"

"Oh that would explain everything!" Chloe chuckled.

"Okay, joke over! I want to help – I know that you guys are in the middle of something big, something to do with those Cops getting killed!" Erika said, sitting down.

"We are short on people, right now. Josh is upstairs recovering from a bullet wound!" I said.

"What? When? Oh my God!"

"Saturday morning!" Chloe said.

"How is he?"

"Sore from a bullet just above his backside, but he managed to fight off a lot of men and save himself. He's a really brave kid," I explained and saw Chloe smiling at my praise.

"You must really love him, Chloe," Erika said quietly.

"What! Yes, I do! Thanks, Erika."

"I'm sorry if I insulted you and Josh before - I just saw you both as young kids who couldn't do very much. I just wanted to say that..."

"Not necessary Erika, but thanks anyway," Chloe said with a smile. "Let's go see the little shit!"

"Oh good - girls!" Josh said with a stupid grin.

"Don't get any ideas, idiot – you're supposed to be resting!" Chloe said.

"You did all the work last time!" Josh teased with a dirty smirk.

Chloe blushed slightly.

"How are you Josh?" Erika asked.

"I suppose it could have been worse!" Josh grimaced in response.

"True!"

"I'll leave you three together," Dave said, getting up off the bed. "Now, girls, Josh isn't up to a threesome, so go easy!"

Erika and Josh both glared at Dave as we both went downstairs.

"He seems in good spirits!" Mindy commented.

"He is in pain, though, and he tries to hide it – hence all the bravado and attempted flirting!" I replied. "I'm gonna speak with Cathy, as I'm a little worried about him."

"Good idea! Erika wants to help and I think we should let her – we are a bit short handed!"

"I'll leave that up to you, beautiful!" I replied.

My cell beeped with a text message. I checked it and looked back at Dave.

"So much for a restful day!"

"A snout?"

"Yeah – a slimy one!"

"Just us?"

"Yeah – Chloe needs her rest; I'm not kidding about that."

That evening
Safehouse F

"You guys ready?" Marty called over the comms.

"As ever!" I responded.

"Let's roll!" Kick-Ass replied and we both accelerated up the ramp.

Once out in the open we headed towards my snout, cruising through the dark streets.

..._...

"You have information for me?" I growled, inches from the man's face.

"Yes, yes, I do, Hit Girl!"

"Well!"

"I know who killed those Cops – now, what is that worth to you – what will you do for me?"

"I'll let you live!" I growled back, menacingly.

The man thought fast: "That sounds fair!"

"I'm getting bored!"

"Montfort – Richard Montfort, he stays in Milwaukee – he's working with some gangster – that's all I know, Hit Girl – I promise!"

"You've done well – assuming the information is correct! Now, where did you get this information?"

..._...

Fifteen minutes later, I was satisfied the information that the little worm had provided, was genuine and had come from an acceptable source, meaning this probably wasn't a trap!

Kick-Ass was keeping an eye on the surrounding area, in case of any nasty surprises. Which proved to have been a very shrewd move.

I was just climbing onto my motorcycle, when I heard a gunshot and saw my snout being gunned down, which in itself seemed to tell me that the information he had provided was pure gold! I pulled a pistol and fired half a dozen rounds down the alley, dropping one man while another ran off.

"Hit Girl, Kick-Ass – I'm under attack!"

I holstered the pistol and started the Multistrada before accelerating towards Kick-Ass who was a block over.

"Battle Guy, we need backup!" I called.

"Battle Guy and Hawk are scrambling!" Hal called. "ETA four minutes!"

The display in my visor changed to show my location, Kick-Ass' location close by and another dot over to my left, with an arrow and some numbers showing it heading towards me at sixty-two miles per hour – Battle Guy was not holding back with Beast! I was only fifty yards from the end of the block when the world came apart.

"Oh fuck!" I heard Kick-Ass shout and then I heard a thud over the comms.

Ahead of me I saw a burst of orange flame and then heard the explosion and saw sections of what had once been a Harley Davidson Fat Boy, fly across the street.

"Oh my God!"

Chapter 134*: The Wrath of Hit Girl - Part IV

Thursday evening
Chicago

I skidded to a halt and jumped off the Multistrada.

I feared the worst and felt immense emotions charging through me, as the worst possible outcomes swept through my mind. I could hear gunfire and then my headset came to life.

"Stay in cover Hit Girl!" Kick-Ass called.

"Thank God! Are you okay?"

"Still in one piece. I have heavy incoming fire..."

I could hear a siren approaching and span around. A Chicago Police car was coming down the street perpendicular to mine and just as it got to the junction, I saw an orange streak appear from the direction of Kick-Ass and the Police Car exploded in front of me.

"Holy fuck! A damn Cop Car just got zapped by a fucking rocket!" I announced. "Kick-Ass report!"

"I'm fine, Hit Girl! Just a little busy!"

I grabbed a G36C from my Ducati and edged to the corner of the block where I peered around the corner and I could see Kick-Ass about thirty yards down the street on one knee and shooting with a Glock pistol in each hand. I could see incoming bullets hitting his torso, but Kick-Ass barely moved. I took aim and started sending short bursts down the street.

"Beast is ninety seconds out!" Hal announced in my ear.

I continued firing.

"Sixty seconds!"

"Hit Girl, I have you in sight, coming in on your six!" Battle Guy called.

I still had my helmet on, so I had been able to follow Beast's progress as it closed on my position. Hawk jumped out and provided additional support while Battle Guy kept Beast ready for a quick departure.

"Kick-Ass move it! Move now!" I called and watched as Kick-Ass moved backwards seeking cover, as Hawk and I kept sending bursts down the street.

..._...

"Oh God! Are you injured?" Hit Girl demanded, once Battle Guy had floored the accelerator.

"It was like sex with you!" I replied.

"What!?"

"Sex with you gives me the same feeling – like I've just been in an explosion!"

Hit Girl just looked at me and then she hit me!

"You fucking bastard! I was fucking worried about you and you just want to joke about me fucking you!" Hit Girl exploded.

"Just defusing the situation, beautiful!" I tried.

"That was not fucking funny! But... I loved your description of me when we do fuck! Don't scare me like that again, green asshole!"

"Ah guys! You're both on VOX!" Hal announced. "Ewww!"

Safehouse F

"What the fuck happened out there?" I demanded.

It had taken us forty minutes to get back. I had insisted on various anti-surveillance manoeuvres before we reached the Safehouse.

"There are some serious people at work here!" Marty said.

"I almost fucking lost Dave tonight! This needs to fucking end and soon! Who is this fucking Richard Montfort?"

"We're still looking into that. He's a big shot, that's all we know so far!" Marty said.

"We also need to investigate Milwaukee, of all places!" I said. "Thanks Marty – I need to see how Dave is."

I left the command centre, dumping my mask on a table and headed up to the briefing room where I found Dave, Cathy and Curtis. Dave's combat suit had absorbed a lot of the impact, when he had jumped from his motorcycle, but there were some major bruises and he had a bang on the head and a bruised shoulder.

"He'll live!" Cathy announced, as she checked the last of Dave's bruises.

"Thanks, Doc!" Dave said, grimacing with the pain.

I knew that if Dave was grimacing, it must have been bad – considering he only felt about twenty percent of the pain!

The following evening

Friday

South Cottage Grove

"Hey! Stop changing the damn channel, brat!"

"It's my turn tonight, Nats!"

"I want..."

A phone started ringing.

"Cool! It's the Hit Phone!"

"She'll kill you if she hears you call it that, Cam!"

"Nah! Hello..." Cam said, as he answered the phone.

"Time to earn your keep, arseholes!"

Forty minutes later

36th Place and Albany

It was very dark and the whole place looked dodgy!

She had told us to 'catch a cab' to this location and await further instructions. The mobile rang again – it was Mindy.

"Turn around and go to the door behind you..."

Was she watching us? As we approached the door, it clicked and Natasha pushed it open. We went inside and the door closed and locked behind us. The room was dark and smelt of damp and neglect.

"You know, Cam, this is exactly where she would bring us to kill us!" Natasha commented.

"I can still hear you, you know!" Mindy said.

"She heard you!" I advised Natasha.

"Big ears!" Natasha breathed.

"Go to the elevator at the back of the building room and get in," Mindy said.

I was starting to feel really worried and a little bit scared! Natasha too seemed worried too. We stepped into the lift and the doors closed behind us, then I felt myself rise as the lift dropped, fast! Then it stopped smoothly and the door in front of us slide open with barely a sound.

"Follow the passageway. See you in a minute!" The call was dropped.

I shoved the mobile into my pocket and we followed the corridor, which turned ninety-degrees to the left and ended at a door, which clicked open and we passed through a glass enclosure and into...

..._...

"Fuck me! It's the Hit Cave!"

"Told you!" A voice said and I was surprised to recognise another British accent.

"It is not called that, Joshua!" Mindy said as she approached us with a grimace. "Sorry about the cloak and dagger and him! I don't have big ears, either, Natasha!"

Natasha smiled a shy apology.

"Welcome to Fort Fusion, fellow Brits! I'm Josh!"

"Cameron; although I think you already know that!"

"Yes, we know who you are Cameron and you Natasha – I'm Dave!"

"I recognise a certain stunning, beautiful girl!" Cameron said, looking at Chloe who blushed and giggled!

"Hey – she's taken!" Josh growled.

"Come on upstairs," Mindy said, laughing.

..._...

I was amazed at what I saw – I couldn't take it all in, it was cool, just cool! Natasha and I followed Mindy up some steel stairs and then left towards a large sitting area and we all sat down. There were some more people here. Mindy began the introductions...

"Natasha, Cameron. Please meet: Cathy, Paige, Marcus, Curtis and little Megan..."

"Less of the goddamn 'little', Hit Pussy!" Megan growled.

"Err – right! Downstairs in the Command Centre are Marty and Abby. Making repairs to Beast is Tony and his son Tommy," Mindy finished.

"We've called you here because we need your help..."

Dave went on to explain all that had been happening over the past week, from the shooting of the Police Officers and Josh's injury to the activity the other night – we had heard all about the Police Car blowing up! When Dave had finished we both just sat there, in shock.

"Josh is out of action – he pretends he's fine, but he's full of crap – like most Brits!" Mindy said with a grin. "Dave is injured and the rest of us are tiring fast. We need to perform some intensive reconnaissance in Milwaukee and you two are new faces that nobody has seen, plus you will easily pass as tourists thanks to your accents!"

"We owe you – we'll help as best we can, Mindy."

"Thanks guys and I really mean that."

The next morning
Saturday
Safehouse F

Things were coming together.

The twins had gone back to their apartment and were ready and waiting for our call – on the Hit Phone, damn stupid name!

"Mindy, you got a moment?" It was Paige and Cathy.

"Should I be worried, guys?" I asked jokingly.

"Oh yeah!" Cathy replied with a smirk.

"Take Curtis and Megan with you to Milwaukee – you need feet on the ground and they could help," Paige said.

"They're too young and I won't risk them."

"They would be useful, besides they have armour – we trust you Mindy. Besides they want to go and both Cathy and I agree."

"Do I have a choice?" I asked, knowing the answer.

"No, you don't!"

"Does Hit Girl get no respect anymore?" I asked.

"We do respect you Mindy and that is why we trust you with our kids," Cathy said, with a friendly smile.

A week later
Friday
Safehouse T, Milwaukee

This would be our temporary Safehouse, while we operated in Milwaukee.

Marty had been able to rent a house on the outskirts of the City. Having two young kids with us did give us an anonymous and innocent outlook to anybody observing our activities. The team in Milwaukee consisted of myself, Marty, Chloe, Cameron, Natasha, Curtis and little Megan. The others remained in Chicago, in case anything happened there. Marty had driven up with Lucille, while I had driven up in our SUV. The drive had taken almost two hours for the eighty-five mile journey.

The Safehouse that Marty had obtained had four bedrooms. Marty and Cameron would share a bedroom, while Chloe, Natasha and I would share another and Curtis and Megan would share the third. The fourth bedroom would be used for equipment and planning. We had rented two vehicles for the stay – both Jeep SUVs, so our own SUV could remain hidden, in the garage. Lucille would be our mobile Command Post, operated by Marty.

Chloe, Marty and I had our combat suits with us, while Curtis and Megan had their protective suits and armour. I had provided SWAT type gear for Natasha and Cameron with masks. Talking of the Brits, they now had codenames: Cameron was Drift and Natasha was Crimson. We all had concealed comms, while Chloe, Marty and I would be armed at all times.

The following day
Milwaukee
Saturday

"Remember, last time I let you and Chloe go away she came back with holes in her shoulder and a weird boyfriend!" Dave said over the phone.

"I learnt a lot that time and many mistakes will not be repeated. This trip is purely for reconnaissance – what could happen?"

"Yeah, exactly!"

"We'll be fine, Dave – you just get yourself back to your normal, indestructible self. I love you!"

"Look after yourself, gorgeous!"

Marty had located the penthouse that Richard Montfort used as his home in Milwaukee.

It was a thirty minute drive from the Safehouse and was not far from the water. The building was on a leafy street and our target lived on the fifth floor. Marty had also identified a suitable observation position approximately six-hundred yards away that could also double as a sniper position – just in case!

Natasha and Cameron took Megan and wandered around the penthouse neighbourhood for a few hours taking photos, with each of them talking with a British accent, which it turned out Megan could pull off quite accurately – she had a tendency to mimic Josh and wind him up, especially at D-JAK! The three of them looked quite innocent wandering around and pretending to be tourists.

Marty and Curtis drove around the streets in Lucille recording high-definition video images of routes and anything else that might be useful. We also managed to get our first view of the target – Richard Montfort. It would have been nice to kill him now, but we needed him to lead us to his partner in crime first!

That evening Safehouse T

"My feet are fucking killing me!" Megan announced at dinner that evening.

"Oh, Marcus insisted that I bring this!" I said and placed a certain pink jar on the table.

"A goddamn interstate swear jar!" Megan moaned, giving everybody a laugh.

We all enjoyed sharing a few buckets from KFC, as none of us were much good at cooking! We discussed what we had seen today. Apparently the penthouse was secure, as most were and we hadn't been able to get anybody anywhere near it, which was a pain, but Marty had been able to obtain the original plans, so we had a floor layout, which would be useful. We knew exactly what the target looked like and also what its security arrangements were.

These security arrangements were, as expected, quite impressive. We never saw the man with less than six armed men and he always travelled with a lead and a chase car and favoured armoured SUVs. The first day had been successful – we had acquired some important information and nobody had been hurt!

It wasn't easy getting Curtis and Megan to bed, they had got hyper during the day with all the excitement, but they were both very tired.

"Thanks guys!" I said, once they were both in bed. "Megan, Curtis, you did really well on your first Fusion operation and I'm very proud of both of you. Get some sleep, so you're ready for tomorrow. Night guys!"

I was really proud of them and I had made sure that Curtis had called Cathy and Megan had called Paige, once we were back at the Safehouse for the night to let them know that their kids were safe.

Chapter 135*: The Wrath of Hit Girl - Part V

Two days later
Monday
Milwaukee
Safehouse T

"Come on, you two!" I called to Megan and Curtis.

"I'm tired!" Megan moaned.

"We all are; but that's part of the price of being a vigilante!"

"Fucking heartless bitch!" Curtis muttered.

"That's why you love me!" I laughed.

..._...

After breakfast, the kids had woken up and they were ready to get to work! The plan for the day was to continue surveillance, as we had been doing since Saturday. We had identified another property that seemed to be tied to Montfort; so we intended to go have a look.

The building had a large sign over the door: 'Montfort Industries'. The main section of the facility was a large warehouse, with smaller blocks for offices attached on one side. We drove past it a few times on all sides to get some good photos and video. Again, Natasha, Cameron, Curtis and Megan wandered around the area pretending to be tourists. They tried to gain access to the building, looking for a bathroom, but were turned away by men that seemed to be armed and definitely knew their business.

The building backed onto a residential area and seemed very innocent. However, we knew that Montfort had a darker side to his organisation and was linked to other shady characters. We were going to identify all of his dirty secrets and expose him and then most probably kill him!

..._...

"Well done guys!" I said when the 'tourists' finally returned to Safehouse T.

We spent the rest of the afternoon going through the information obtained, so that we could plan our in depth covert reconnaissance planned for tonight. I sent Megan and Curtis to get some sleep, ready for further work tonight. Megan and Curtis would be crucial – we would use them for distraction purposes, while Chloe and I checked the building out. The twins would be assisting Marty with the overwatch in Lucille.

That night
Safehouse T

I awoke the two kids and we all geared up.

Once Megan and Curtis were kitted out in their costumes and body armour, Chloe and I double checked each kid to ensure that they were correctly dressed and equipped.

"Look at me, both of you!" I said and sat down across from them. "We are going into harm's way – primarily Shadow and myself. Now: you – will – not – take – any – goddamn – risks; playtime is over, kids!"

"We understand, Hit Girl!" Trojan replied.

"We'll do our best!" Wildcat said.

"That's all I ask!"

Montfort Industries

We parked up the Jeep SUV behind a nearby commercial unit.

"You two stay here and chat, or do whatever you guys do when you're on your own!" I said.

"We do not get up to any of that disgusting crap Shadow and Jackal get up to!" Megan growled back.

I laughed and Shadow's posture showed she was annoyed!

"Battle Guy, Shadow and Hit Girl are checking out the area before moving in!" I called.

"Copy that!" Battle Guy answered.

..._...

Shadow and I kept to the shadows, which was relatively easy due to the relatively poor street lighting and a rail track that ran beside the street. The vehicle entrance to the building was a four-foot tall barrier that would slide open as required and was currently closed. I headed round the street corner and looked towards the office entrance – the street was clear.

Wildcat was stationed, with Trojan, in bushes and deep in shadow across from where the building's security team operated in the main office block. If required, they would provide distractions or other help as required. Battle Guy and the twins were in Lucille a couple of blocks over. We had various wireless cameras providing surveillance of the surrounding streets and alleyways. Hopefully, we wouldn't be surprised by anybody new arriving! Our entry would be stealthy and over the roof. Battle Guy had identified an AC vent on the roof, which would allow us access into the warehouse portion of the facility.

I dropped through the AC vent first and Hit Girl followed.

We slid down a support beam and then down a column. We were in a large open area with various computer-controlled metal-working machines and some curtained off sections. The lights were off, so we lowered our NVGs into place and started searching the warehouse, moving towards the office spaces and a raised office near the end of the warehouse.

..._...

We had been there fifteen minutes, without finding anything useful, but we had found the building's IT network and plugged in a special box that Battle Guy had provided, so while we were searching inside the building – Battle Guy would be reading their computer data!

..._...

Next came the raised office – Hit Girl went up the wooden stairs first, while I covered her with my silenced FN Five-seveN. At the top of the stairs was a locked wooden door, which Hit Girl proceeded to open with her lock picks – a skill that I had yet to learn!

Inside was a large desk with three very large computer monitors on it. We also had a very good view of the entire warehouse. This seemed to be the main security centre for the facility – but was obviously not used at night. The monitors showed images of cameras all over the facility, but strangely there were no cameras covering the interior of the warehouse. Something went on in this warehouse that required a visual security check, but was dodgy enough to not require a digital record of what went on.

It was time to move on.

"Battle Guy, Hit Girl and Shadow are moving into the main offices."

"Copy!"

"Trojan, report!" Hit Girl called.

"Trojan is go!"

"Wildcat, report!"

"Wildcat is go!"

At least the two kids were still safe and I was pleased that Hit Girl still had them on her mind. The next area would be more difficult, as that was where the security was.

..._...

Forty minutes later, the job was done and still no alarm had been raised. No 'smoking gun' had been found, but then we hadn't really expected anything, as these people were usually careful. We hoped that Marty may have found something in the computer data, though.

Now it was time to get out of here! Although, there was now a problem with that little idea. As we moved to go back into the warehouse, it seemed that four of the security men had wandered into the warehouse, cutting off our escape in that direction. There were also another four men at the main entrance, which stopped us exiting that way.

Hit Girl and I finally found ourselves in an inside office, with two security men in the corridor outside!

Shadow and I were stuck and we couldn't move until the damn security men moved on.

"Fusion, Shadow and Hit Girl are stuck!"

"Acknowledged!" Battle Guy reported.

There was a pause then a response from an unexpected source.

"Hit Girl – this is Trojan – we, err, we can run interference!"

I looked at Shadow and she nodded.

"Affirmative! Stay safe, guys – no risks!" I responded, feeling uneasy – but we had no choice. "Standby to move, Shadow."

Wildcat and I shot out of cover and ran over towards the building.

There were two large SUVs parked beside where the security men were located. As Wildcat kept watch, I pulled a knife, with a six-inch blade, off of my belt and then I started stabbing the tyres of the SUVs. Next I took a deep breath, before calling Hit Girl.

"Hit Girl, Trojan – standby to move!"

I reversed the knife and started smashing the SUV windows and car alarms started sounding. This caused a door to fly open and about half a dozen men appeared and I hid behind some bushes beside a mini electricity sub-station.

"Fucking kids – look: tyres and windows..." One of the men said.

"Hit Girl, Shadow – move your fucking asses, now!" Wildcat called.

"Are you guys fucking stupid?" Another man said, coming out of the building. "It's a fucking distraction, you idle idiots!"

"There!" A man called, as he aimed a pistol at Wildcat, who had just run back across the street and deeper into shadow.

"Hey!" I called and bolted out of cover and down the street. This attracted attention away from Wildcat and I felt bullets whizzing past me as I ran.

"After them!" The man in charge yelled.

I had heard the shooting and had heard Trojan over the open comms.

"Shadow, we need to move!"

"I'm on it!" Shadow responded, as we ran down the warehouse and climbed up to the roof. The shooting was louder, once we were out and I ran towards the end of the warehouse. I was just in time to see Wildcat running towards the rail tracks, when I saw a man appear and aim his pistol. Wildcat turned to check behind her, just as the man fired.

The bullet hit Wildcat and I saw the girl fly backwards, she twisted in the air and landed a few feet away, on her side. The bullet had impacted almost dead centre, but just a little towards Wildcat's left hand side. I fired three rounds from the Glock 30 that I had selected for this trip and the .45 calibre rounds lifted the man off of his feet and he flew backwards and onto the street and didn't get up. I jumped down from the roof and rolled on to the grass strip beside the warehouse, coming up and dropping the next two men coming down the street.

Shadow dropped and rolled just behind me and dropped the next two men, sending the rest scurrying back into the building. So much for covert! I saw Trojan run over to Wildcat and go down on his knees beside her. I ran towards them, while Shadow covered us.

"You all right?" I heard Trojan ask Wildcat, in a worried voice.

"Of course I fucking am; I'm not a fucking pussy like you!" Wildcat responded as Trojan pulled her back to her feet.

I had to laugh.

"Sorry – I just care about you is all!"

"Not the time for making out, you two!" I cautioned.

"Yuck!" Trojan commented.

"Hey! I am kissable, you know!" Wildcat retorted.

"Both of you, get to the damn SUV!" I ordered.

Safehouse T

Megan eased off her vest, with a little help from Curtis and she rubbed her chest with a grimace.

"You're lucky you don't have any tits!" Chloe announced. "Bullets and tits don't go together!"

Megan looked appalled at that comment and Curtis actually blushed slightly. Chloe and I checked Megan over for any other injuries, but thankfully there were nothing more than a few bruises.

"I can help rub it better if you want!" Curtis suggested hopefully, with a grin.

"You can keep your fucking hands to yourself, if you want to keep them intact!" Megan answered.

"You have a lot to learn about girls, kid!" Chloe commented with a laugh and patted Curtis on the back.

"Thanks Curtis! That was a damn good idea of yours to distract the security guards – otherwise we might have had to fight our way out of there!" I said – feeling guilty about Megan.

..._...

Milwaukee had been a success – just! But we were on borrowed time and the enemy knew we were in the City, so at eight o'clock the following morning we packed up and drove back to Chicago.

Later that morning

Chicago

Safehouse F

"I am so sorry Paige; I never meant for Megan to be in danger, I -"

"Mindy, shut up!" Paige said.

"I shouldn't have had them -"

The sound of a painful slap echoed around the Safehouse.

Damn - Paige had just slapped Mindy! Mindy just stood there with a hand against her rather pink cheek and she looked shocked. Then after a few seconds she finally spoke.

"What the fuck did you do that for?" Mindy asked angrily.

"To bring a silly girl to her senses!" Paige replied, with a smile.

"What? I'm confused..."

"Mindy - Megan is fine; I let her go out there – not you. It was thanks to you, though, that she survived, uninjured," Paige explained.

"I only got a sore tit!" Megan added.

"You haven't got any tits!" Curtis said and received a punch on his arm from Megan, which had him holding his arm tight and grimacing with the pain.

"That vest stopped the bullet, simple as that!" Paige continued, looking at Mindy. "Now shut up, Hit Girl, if you know what's good for you, or you'll get another slap!"

"Okay!" Mindy accepted. "I know when to quit!"

"Bullshit!" Dave quipped, with a chuckle.

"Oh, ha fucking ha!" Mindy growled, massaging her bruised cheek and ego.

The following day

Wednesday

West Ridge

Marty had spent all yesterday afternoon and into the evening going through the computer data that we had obtained. Abby had helped him as much as possible and between them they were making good progress towards finding 'the other guy'.

Megan had come over this morning and I still felt guilty for her getting shot. Yes, Cathy had checked every inch of Megan's body and not found anything more than a few bruises – no broken bones, nothing. But I still felt guilty, despite what Paige had said – I had allowed a ten year-old girl to get shot! Megan had given me a big hug and thanked me for protecting her and I was at a genuine loss for words as I had put her into danger in the first place!

"For fuck's sake Mindy – it was not your fucking fault – snap out of it! Or do I have to slap it outta ya?" Megan growled.

I couldn't stop myself laughing!

"Thanks Megan – I'm fine! Let's go see if Marty's found anything!"

Safehouse F

"Hi!"

"Hi Dave!" Megan called.

"You okay, Hit Girl?" Dave asked, with a grin.

"I am now, thanks to my little Megan!"

"I've told you before: less of the fucking 'little'!"

It was just then that I heard a shout from the Command Centre; so Dave, Megan and I went in to find a very excited pair of geeks!

..._...

"Found the other bastard!" Marty said.

"Montfort has a brother-in-law and he seems to be in the same criminal business!" Abby added.

"Well, do I have to wait for it?" I demanded.

"William Tait – he spends most of his time here, in Chicago and he's in the City now!" Marty finished.

"Well done!" I said.

"Worth getting shot for!" Megan added.

The asshole that we were after lived on a boat – when he was in Chicago.

In this case he had a multi-million dollar palace, which was currently moored at Burnham Harbor and she was called the 'Trinidad'.

I was going to end this – before anybody else was injured or killed.

..._...

That evening, Dave and I drove up to Burnham Harbor. We parked in the main car park and took an innocent walk along the waterfront. There in front of us was the target – I had to admit that she was beautiful.

The 'Trinidad' was over one-hundred and twenty feet in length and displaced two-hundred tonnes. Marty had obtained the specifications from Feretti, the Italian builder of the giant vessel. The vessel had over four decks and would be a nightmare to assault. But that was what Hit Girl did; she overcame and overpowered.

I had noticed that there was good armed security around the vessel. None of it was overt and only a skilled eye would notice the armed guards and automatic weapons. One problem, was the other vessels moored around the giant yacht. I could not allow collateral damage and I was certain that the men guarding the yacht would not give a toss about who else was in their line of fire. Also the vessel was moored down near the end of a long, narrow jetty, which would make a stealthy advance all but impossible; they would see us coming and cut us down!

..._...

"He thinks that he's fucking safe, but he's not... At least not from me!"

"You want to use the 'Vigilante'?" Dave asked, but he didn't mean it as a question.

"Why the hell not!"

Chapter 136*: The Wrath of Hit Girl - Part VI

*Two days later
Friday night
South Chicago*

8:00 P.M.

"What the hell are we doing here?" Shadow asked.

"Where exactly is here, anyway?" Jackal asked.

"Wait and see?" I replied, enjoying teasing them.

I punched in the access code and the steel door clicked open.

"Welcome to Safehouse W!" Kick-Ass announced.

"You knew about this place?" Jackal asked.

"Hit Girl and I have no secrets!" Kick-Ass replied seriously.

"You know Kick-Ass knows everything about me – especially all the embarrassing things!" I added.

"Why 'W'?" Shadow asked.

"The 'W' stands for 'water!'" I announced.

"Yeah, I suppose that would be logical, as we are beside the Calumet River," Shadow commented.

Hit Girl switched on the overhead lights.

"Now that is cool!" Jackal announced.

Safehouse W

The building had a large portion of space given over to a water-filled dock and floating alongside the dock was the 'Vigilante'.

The 'Vigilante' was a Sunseeker Predator 53, custom built in the United Kingdom. The performance motor-yacht was just over sixty feet in length overall, with a forty-four and a half foot waterline. The twenty-seven tonne craft had a top speed of around thirty-two knots. The hull was black, while the upper works were purple, which actually appeared almost black in the dark. Mounted on the top of the yacht were a radar antenna and twin domes that housed satellite communications and navigation equipment. There were also two large whip antennae for non-satellite communications.

"That is one of the most beautiful sights that I have ever seen!" Shadow exclaimed.

"She's nice, ain't she?" Hit Girl said, grinning from ear to ear.

..._...

"Right, first things first: safety!" Kick-Ass announced and handed a lifejacket to each of us, before taking one for himself.

"This is an assault troop lifejacket, as used by Royal Marines Commandos. It is designed to support extra weight, such as our armour and weapons, but still be compact enough to not get in the way during an assault. It also has a quick release, so it can be ditched quickly, if necessary. You put it on like this..."

Kick-Ass demonstrated on Jackal, showing how the lifejacket was secured, before checking it was fitted correctly on Hit Girl and Shadow, then Hit Girl checked Kick-Ass.

"The red toggle should be pulled if, and only if, you go in the water. Hopefully that won't happen as it will be cold!" Kick-Ass finished.

The 'Vigilante'

Twenty minutes later, after a brief tour of the 'Vigilante', we were cruising at 8 knots up the Calumet River, towards the sea with Hit Girl at the helm. One of the important features of this craft was that she could be controlled from a totally enclosed position behind tinted glazing. The roof above the control station could slide open, turning the control station into an open air control station! For now, though, this made things a little more comfortable than standing out in the driving rain and kept us anonymous. It would take about an hour to transit the river, before we would get to Lake Michigan. We would then have a stormy cruise up to Burnham Park Harbour – a distance of about nine nautical miles. That part of the cruise should take us about an hour, depending on the weather, which was not too good!

..._...

An hour later

The ride was somewhat lively and both Shadow and Jackal seemed to have iron stomachs! Jackal had been allowed to come on the operation as he was healing nicely and he was starting to get really restless and bored. Battle Guy, Hawk and our newest member: Mist, were currently parked up near the harbour, in Lucille and were waiting for us to get closer and begin our assault. They also had Eisenhower, who hadn't had the chance to munch on anything exciting for quite a while!

..._...

Eighty minutes later

Kick-Ass was looking ahead, using night-vision binoculars and he could see the 'Trinidad', which was lit up from stern to stern. She was moored with the bow pointing towards the land, so we would come alongside near the yacht's stern. The crew did not seem to be concerned about an attack. It was after ten at night and it was very dark and the rain was pounding down.

We would all be using Heckler & Koch MP5SD6, silenced, sub-machine guns with collapsible stocks. This would allow us to kill without alerting the entire crew and would be easier to handle within the confines of the 'Trinidad' than the G36C assault rifles. Another added benefit was that the low-velocity nine-millimetre rounds would not penetrate too much of the vessel or targets and potentially wound an innocent, or ourselves – which would have been kind of embarrassing!

We approached slowly and I hoped that the rain would cover the noise of the engines pounding beneath us.

Burnham Harbor

We had a problem – a problem that we really didn't need right now.

"Err, guys! It's the bitches on bikes!" Mist announced, pointing at a video screen.

"Fucking hell!" Battle Guy responded. "We can't afford this distraction!"

"Mist, let's go!" Hawk said, grabbing a G36C and passing over another.

"I'm on it!" Mist announced. As she did not currently have her own combat suit, she was wearing enhanced SWAT body armour and a mask.

Both girls dived out into the driving rain and moved to attack the Nightingales and prevent them from interfering in Hit Girl's activities.

"Hit Girl! Be advised that the Nightingales just turned up! Hawk and Mist are engaging!"

The 'Vigilante'

"Fucking brilliant!" I responded to Battle Guy's warning.

We were just a few dozen feet away from the 'Trinidad' and we had not yet been spotted. Jackal and Shadow were on the bow ready to engage, while Kick-Ass was at the stern. We would board from the stern of the 'Vigilante' and jump across to the low stern of the 'Trinidad'. As far as we could make out, the guard force were all watching the land and the pier. I cut the engines and we drifted alongside. Jackal had already kicked over several fenders to protect our hull and reduce the noise of the two vessels coming together.

I ran aft to join Kick-Ass and secured us alongside with a loop over a bollard on the 'Trinidad' – Jackal would be doing the same at our bow. I rechecked my MP5 and jumped across to the 'Trinidad'. At that moment I started to hear gunfire from the direction of the land and then shouts from people on the 'Trinidad'.

"Let's use the distraction, Fusion!" I called and as agreed we started our attack.

..._...

We had boarded via the stern on the port side, which was to the water. The opposite, starboard, side was against the jetty and that was where the armed guards were, guarding what was to them the obvious line of attack and now that there was gunfire on shore that would also attract their attention.

We had a decision to make; go inside and chase down our primary target, or remove the threat of the armed guards. I opted for the latter and while Jackal kept watch on the deck that ran up the port side, all the way to the bow, Shadow kept an eye on the sliding glass doors to the main salon. This left Kick-Ass and myself spare, to clear the upper decks on the starboard side.

Burnham Harbor

The damn Nightingales were not welcome right now!

"Mist, keep with me – we need to make sure that they stay away from Lucille and the water!"

"I'll do my best, Hawk!"

"If you can do it – kill the fucking bitches!"

We both opened fire at the Nightingales, who it seemed only had their pistols – tough luck!

The 'Trinidad'

I went first, with my MP5 raised while Kick-Ass followed behind, as he was taller and he could fire over my shoulder. As on the other side of the yacht, this deck ran all the way to the bow, but also had the gangway that angled down to the dock. The gangway was only a few yards along that deck and we could see four large men, all looking down the jetty towards the gunfire. Now, I have a thing about shooting people in the back (except of course for Dave) – not cool!

"Hey, motherfuckers..."

As each man turned, Kick-Ass and I dropped them before they could utter a sound by mouth or by the firearms that they carried. I noticed two more men on the jetty, who were dropped in the same way. Nobody further away than a few feet would have heard anything other than the bodies dropping to the deck or the jetty!

Next, Shadow kept watch over the starboard deck, while Kick-Ass and I headed for the exterior stairs, on the starboard side that took us up to the main sun deck. In front of us was a Jacuzzi, which understandably was empty and covered over. We moved forward, past an enormous wooden table and into the upper salon. Here we found a gigantic, 'U'-shaped, couch that could seat almost a dozen people! A head appeared at the top of the stairs to the lower deck – I saw a pistol and the man received a bullet in the brain for his trouble, without ever knowing where it had come from. Beyond the stairs was the control station – naturally unmanned, while alongside.

"Jackal, Shadow – we're coming down, amidships! Clear the main salon!" Kick-Ass said.

I waved Jackal forwards and he slid open the glass doors, while I provided cover as he moved. Once the doors were open, I followed Jackal through and entered a long room with comfortable right-angled couches, an enormous TV and a massive dining table, plus a bar. There was also a pistol pointing at us!

Several rounds came at us, shattering the glass behind us – Jackal shoved me to one side and fired several rounds into the man, through the far couch. The man jerked and a pool of blood appeared and spread across the deck.

"Thanks – Jackal!" I said, feeling both annoyed and turned on? Get your mind into the game, Shadow!

We saw no-one else until we approached the door at the end, where there was a dead body that had fallen down the stairs.

"Coming through!" Jackal called, to prevent getting himself shot by Hit Girl or Kick-Ass.

..._...

We found the pair of them in a well laid out galley. Three crew members were secured with plastic ties and seated on a corner bench around a table. Hit Girl led the way forward, while Jackal and I provided cover against attack from the rear.

I entered an office, with large cupboards of clothes off to the left, then came the master suite.

"Damn! It's bigger than our own fucking bedroom!" I complained.

The room was empty, but we could see that somebody had been in the bed recently. Further forward was a monster bathroom, which was empty. We re-joined Shadow and Jackal before heading down to the lower deck. Kick-Ass remained in the salon to watch out for trouble.

At the bottom of the stairs to the lower deck I paused and Shadow went aft to check one of the two large cabins on this deck, while Jackal checked the other large cabin. I kept watch on the other cabins further forward.

I pushed open the door of the cabin on the port side.

The first thing that I saw was a bed, then a flash as a bullet was fired in my direction; it had come from the bathroom, beyond the bed. The man was hiding to the right of the doorway. I pulled out my FN Five-seven and sent half a dozen rounds through the bathroom wall and the man fell down and through the doorway, very dead!

"Clear, I called!"

I turned and headed back out of the cabin – Jackal had come up empty with the starboard cabin.

..._...

Hit Girl went forward. To the left and to the right were two, smaller, twin cabins – just as Hit Girl looked into the starboard side cabin, a man dived out of the port side doorway – but nobody blindsides Hit Girl!

Hit Girl lashed out with her left hand, which held her Tanto and the man came to a sudden halt as the blade entered his chest and cut his heart in half. Hit Girl let the body slide off of her blade and sink to the deck, blood pooling around it.

We rapidly finished clearing the lower deck, which as well as the two larger cabins and two smaller twin cabins, also contained the crew spaces. We secured the crew with plastic ties before heading back up to the salon.

Kick-Ass went with Shadow to check the engine room and the boat garage; both were clear. We had searched the entire vessel, but we had not found the man that we had come for - I was seething! He must be hidden somewhere aboard. Then I suddenly had an idea – should have thought of it straight away!

"Battle Guy – I need Eisenhower!"

"I'll send her out – we're a little bit busy here!" Battle Guy responded.

Burnham Harbor

"Hawk, Mist – cover Eisenhower!" Battle Guy called.

"Will do!" I called.

I turned away from the Nightingales and saw the big dog jump out of Lucille and head towards the 'Trinidad'. Eisenhower looked kinda awesome and cool in her body armour! I watched her run – very fast and ensured that the remaining Nightingales' attention was on us and not on Eisenhower.

The 'Trinidad'

I waited at the gangway and watched as Eisenhower come racing down the jetty and then powered up the gangway. She looked immensely pleased with herself and had obviously enjoyed the run!

"Come on girl! I need you to find this bastard!"

Eisenhower barked once and I led her into the yacht.

I started in the main salon, then went up to the sun deck – nothing. I then moved back to the main salon and it wasn't until we got to the master suite that Eisenhower started to growl menacingly and she ran around the suite and over the bed before finally stopping outside a large walk-in cupboard that we had checked earlier – but Eisenhower obviously thought that we should check it again!

"Somebody in there, girl?" I asked and Eisenhower barked, then growled at the cupboard.

I pushed the clothes in the cupboard to one side and I pulled out my Tanto and stabbed the panel at the back of the cupboard. I heard a loud, verbal, exclamation!

"Oh my God!" A man's voice.

I withdrew my Tanto.

"You have five seconds to show yourself!" I ordered.

Nothing happened.

"Five – Four..."

I heard a noise, then a panel slid sideways and a man appeared - it was him – Richard Montfort.

"Eisenhower, Schwanz!" I growled.

The dog shot forward and grabbed the man, pushing him backwards and down onto the floor.

"Fucking Christ!" The man exclaimed.

"Yeah! There's a fucking dog on your balls – what about it?" I growled as Eisenhower got a better grip.

"You fucking, inhuman, bitch!" Montfort snarled.

"That's me – I thought we hadn't met!" I growled in response, with a smirk.

"Now – before Eisenhower has her dinner – where is the stash?" I asked, as Eisenhower tugged excitedly at her mouthful.

"It – oh my God – it's behind the panelling, on the right, in the large starboard cabin, beside the bed..."

That explained the armed man in that cabin that Shadow had shot.

"On it!" Shadow announced and vanished at a run.

I quickly reached the cabin that the cunt had suggested; the dead man was still there in the bathroom. I started attacking the panels, to the right of the doorway, beside the bed with my Balisong. The panel was thin, but thick enough not to be easily detected. The back of the panel had a thin aluminium sheet and I quickly found the hidden panel release and pulled the whole panel away.

"Damn! Hit Girl – I have hundreds of packets of drugs, not to mention cash!" I called. "A whole shitload of cash!"

"How much?" I asked the fallen capitalist.

"Three-hundred and eighty kilos of cocaine. There – is – oh my God – thirty-three million in Dollars US, eighteen million in Pounds Sterling, eight million in Euros – please..."

"Beg all you fucking want, asshole!"

"Please... I – "

"Jackal, Shadow – start packing – it's time to wind this up!" I ordered and readied my Tanto.

"You made mistakes – you killed Cops in your attempt to take control of Chicago, but even worse you hurt people that mean a lot to me and that is unforgiveable..."

"No – please – I can... I didn't know..."

I turned away from the remains of the dead man and headed aft, pausing in the office just long enough to seize the dead man's laptop. I made it to the main salon and could see Jackal and Shadow passing up packages of cash.

"Petty cash?" Kick-Ass asked.

"Hey, rounds are expensive and running that gas-guzzler out there ain't fucking cheap!" I growled.

"Just an observation!" Kick-Ass laughed.

"Battle Guy, 'Trinidad' is all clear and the target has been neutralised!" I called.

"Great news, Hit Girl – we have one dead Nightingale and the others are trying to escape!" Battle Guy reported.

"Let them go – we need to finish up and leave!" I responded.

..._...

Then, as if the night wasn't busy enough – she arrived!

The young woman was tall and well formed. She wore tight pants, a dark leather jacket and solid boots. Her hair was long and dark, with subtle curls. In her right hand was a silenced Heckler & Koch P30 pistol.

"Regina, I assume?" I growled at the woman standing on the jet-black speedboat, on the other side of the jetty.

"He was mine, Hit Girl! My mark!" Regina announced angrily.

"To the victor go the spoils!"

"So, you are my competition!" Regina announced with derision.

"There is no competition," I growled in response. "I am the number one assassin - period!"

"Oh for fuck's sake! They'll be seeing who can pee the furthest next!" Kick-Ass quipped and got a glare from both me and Regina.

"Hit Girl is a 'has been'; I can hit harder and with way more accuracy!"

"Okay, you've both got balls of steel... Let's move on!" Kick-Ass suggested.

He was rewarded by a hail of gunfire from Regina and a blast of engine exhaust, as she vanished into the darkness. I fired back at the receding muzzle flashes, but knew that I wasn't hitting anything.

..._...

"Hit Girl – Lucille is rolling, with Hawk and the sharp-shooting, Mist!" Battle Guy called.

"Copy that – we're just loading up the 'Vigilante'!" I replied, then shouted into the main salon. "Eisenhower, stop munching and get up here, we're leaving!"

The 'Vigilante'

"You get your gas money?" I asked Jackal, with a grin.

"A few Dollars..." Jackal said.

"...Plus a few Pounds and Euros!" Shadow finished, dropping into the seat to my left at the control station.

I pushed the twin throttles forward with my right hand and aimed the bow into the storm-lashed waves and set the auto-pilot.

Chapter 137*: The Wrath of Hit Girl - Part VII

Author's Note: I just watched the new 'Kingsman: The Secret Service' movie this morning. It was incredibly awesome – if you enjoyed the first Kick-Ass movie then this will be right up your street. You may, or may not, have read the graphic novel, but the movie is perfect and the best I've seen of Mark Millar's work, since that first Kick-Ass movie! Will not say anymore, as I know that the other side of the Atlantic has to wait another two weeks – it will be worth the wait! I hope that this may lead to a third Kick-Ass movie – you never know – from Matthew Vaughan and Mark Millar!

The next morning
Saturday

Safehouse W, the 'Vigilante'

I woke up feeling very sore.

We had got back to the Safehouse in the early hours of the morning, as it had been a rather rough, and therefore slow, trip back. We were all exhausted and neither Dave, nor I, wanted to drive anywhere last night.

Dave and I were cuddled up in the amidships cabin of the 'Vigilante' and Sophia was curled up on the couch. Josh and Chloe were as expected, cuddled up in the bow cabin. The twin cabin on the starboard side accommodated several million in US Dollars, Pounds Sterling and Euros. Now, how could I spend all that cash? It would come in useful; Safehouse F had bitten deeply into my cash reserves. Not to mention having to replace items of equipment that I was forced to destroy at Safehouse A! I nudged Dave.

"What?"

"Time to move – we need to get our petty cash to Safehouse F, plus I have to meet somebody later."

"Okay!"

That afternoon

Safehouse F

Having arrived in Beast the previous evening, we had to wait for Marty to arrive with the SUV, along with Kim in Speedy. We had loaded up the cash and our equipment before heading back to Safehouse F. Marcus had arranged for us to be shadowed by Fellowes and Murphy for most of the drive, just in case.

"Welcome back guys!" Kim announced.

"This place fucking rocks, Mindy!" Erika announced.

"Thanks Erika!" I replied.

The cash was unloaded and stashed away on the lower level of the Safehouse. Tony Morgan would head down to Safehouse W later today, to service 'Vigilante' for her next mission.

Erika and I were in the armory.

"You did really well, last night, from what Kim says – I'm very impressed!" I commented.

Erika was blushing a little from the praise.

"Thanks, Mindy – I grew up around guns; my Grandfather was a bit of a nutcase and he always had to have dozens of guns!" Erika replied.

"Nothing wrong with a few guns!" I commented. "Okay Erika - we need to get you kitted out. On the table here are some examples of weapons that I think may suit your capabilities."

"Cool!" Erika announced, examining the items that I had laid out.

There were pistols, martial arts weaponry, swords and various other equally lethal objects. I did not want to force Erika into anything and she had showed great promise, at both D-JAK and when she had helped us out at Burnham Harbor the night before. She appeared to be very familiar with firearms, especially rifles and pistols, with the occasional shotgun.

I had let Erika show me how well she could shoot on the range at the Safehouse and she had done remarkably well!

This place was kinda nuts!

The Safehouse was out of this world – but I had heard about what had happened to Safehouse A and what had happened with Red Mist, so I could see why Mindy stopped at nothing when it came to security.

In front of me was one hell of an array of equipment. It had been a little over two weeks since I had offered to help Mindy and she had even measured me up for a combat suit a few days after that! I really liked my hero name too – 'Mist' – it was awesome!

I selected a pistol that I had already fired on the range; it felt comfortable and I enjoyed shooting with it. I also selected a pair of vicious looking dagger like items and one other lethal looking weapon.

"Nice choices, Erika. You think you can handle a pair of those pistols?" I asked.

"I'll give it a try!"

"Okay – start practicing with the weapons that you have selected and I want you back here at ten on Monday morning!"

Two days later
Monday morning

Safehouse F

The place was deserted.

"Thought you'd like some privacy, Erika!" Mindy suggested.

"Should I be worried?" I asked feeling worried.

Mindy thought about it before responding.

"Nah! You'll be fine, Mist!"

I had ordered a combat suit for Erika.

This suit was an evolutionary extension of that which I had provided for Lynx. The basic under suit was a mix of light blue, azure blue and slate grey. On top of this was Type III-A composite armour protection that covered the chest in a contoured plate that had flexible panels, allowing the upper body to twist and bend with very limited restriction. This plate was azure blue and trimmed with slate grey. The upper and lower back were protected with another Type-III-A composite armour plate in three sections that again flexed like the front and was contoured to the users back. The two plates joined under the arm with almost no gap. The back plate was coloured the same as the front plate.

Armoured pads around the shoulder, which extended with thinner plates down the upper arm to the elbow where another armoured pad protected the joint, protected the arms. Armoured gauntlets extended up to the elbow pads and there was additional armour on the rear of the gauntlets. The gauntlets themselves had lightly armoured palms that were stab proof and could grasp double-edged blades without injury.

The thighs were protected with wrap-around flexible armour up to Type III-A. These thigh plates connected to the utility belt, which in turn connected to the front and back armour. Composite armour pads provided protection around the knees and connected with the lower leg armour and shin guards. Both the thigh and leg armour was azure blue with slate grey highlights. The lightly armoured boots were dark blue.

The mask was of the same colour scheme as the under suit and provided composite armour protection around the back, top and sides of the head. These sections were azure blue with slate grey highlights. The mask covered Mist's face down to and including the nose and cheekbones.

The dark blue utility belt held the communications, spare magazines and other equipment that a vigilante would require, including a pair of Walther P99C pistols in cross-draw holsters that were chambered for nine-millimetre Parabellum and each pistol was fitted with twelve-round extended magazines. Mist also carried a pair of black steel Sais, one on each thigh. Each Sai was a little over nineteen inches in length, thirteen inches of which was a sharp pointed blade. The leather wrapped handles were octagonal in shape. Mounted on the right side of her utility belt was a pouch that held a four-foot long, seven-section chain whip with switchable tips, like the trick arrows employed by the others.

"Wow!" I commented.

"Fucking Wow!" Erika added examining herself carefully in a full-length mirror. "Hit Girl – I love it!"

"Wow!" Marty exclaimed.

"Damn Wow!" I added.

"Fucking hell, Dave – she has some damn nice curves!"

"Marty! If Kim heard you say that, she'd gut you alive!" I cautioned.

We had just come down the elevator and walked into the Safehouse. In front of us was an interesting scene. Two armoured individuals, in strange combat suits that I did not recognize, were fighting it out on the mat. I recognized one of them as being my fiancée – the purple one! I assumed that the blue suited one was Mist and therefore Erika. Both girls were in similar combat suits of a somewhat different design than usual. Mindy had wanted to replace her own combat suit, as it had accumulated a lot of damage, recently.

The girls were also using unusual weapons. They were fighting using what I recognized to be Sais – it rather reminded me of the fight in The Mummy Returns between Nefertiri and Anck-Su-Namun. Both girls were spinning around the mat and you could hear the noise of the Sais coming together as they fought.

"God, watching two girls fight is such a turn on!" Marty commented.

Hit Girl managed to flip her Sai backwards and rammed the handle or Tsuka into the side of Mists armoured mask. The impact sent Mist flying backwards and onto the mat. Mist screamed as she landed and I ran forward.

"Hi Dave!" Mist said as she looked up at me.

"You okay?" I asked, glaring at Hit Girl who shrugged innocence.

"Not too bad! It was fun – thanks Hit Girl!" Mist announced as she got back to her feet.

"Love the new combat suits!" I said, examining Hit Girl's new curves.

"I'm up here, Dave!" Hit Girl hinted, pointing to her face.

"The view down here looks quite good, too!" I replied and Hit Girl chuckled.

"Not bad!" Marty agreed.

"Eyes off my backside or I'll tell Kim!" Mindy warned, pulling off her mask.

"You can stare at mine all you want, boys!" Erika said, with a laugh and pulled off her own mask.

That afternoon

Safehouse F

Okay – Richard Montfort had found his way onto that yacht – it should have been his brother-in-law, William Tait.

From what we had been able to ascertain from Montfort's laptop, he had come to Chicago to meet with his brother-in-law. Now, William Tait had been away during our attack – we had had no idea that they were both there – shit happens! Once the attack had commenced, Tait had run to Milwaukee, thinking that he would be safe from attack!

"He's locked himself in that Penthouse, in Milwaukee!" Marty advised.

"Shouldn't be a problem!" I replied.

"Dave, it's a damned penthouse!"

"Oh, did nobody tell you...?" Mindy said with a smirk, before she looked at Dave.

"... Penthouses are our speciality!" Dave finished, with an insane grin on his face.

"No - I don't think they are gonna fly again!" Mindy said to Dave, cryptically.

"But they were fun!" Dave replied, looking a little forlorn.

"Maybe I'll just have to do my elevator thing!"

"What are you two talking about?" Marty asked.

"Dave wants to use his Gatling guns again!" Mindy explained.

"And Mindy has a thing about elevators!"

Three days later
Thursday
Milwaukee

Safehouse T

7:10 P.M.

The pieces were finally in place and this had been quite a challenge, but we had managed it. William Tait had been positively confirmed as being still in the penthouse.

At that moment, Battle Guy, along with Drift and Crimson, were in our second and newest mobile Command Centre: Mia. Mia was an extended-wheelbase Mercedes Sprinter Van in Navy Blue. It was equipped in a similar way to Lucille, but with quite a few enhancements. Marty had been working on her for a few months and she was now ready for deployment. There was the possibility that Lucille had suffered compromise on our last visit to Milwaukee, not to mention that she had a few bullet holes from those damn Nightingales at Burnham Harbor! Mia was located at the junction of East Juneau Avenue and North Cass Street keeping an eye on the Penthouse.

Hawk was guarding a large rented panel van on North Marshall Street, on the other side of the block from Mia. Kick-Ass and Jackal were nowhere near the Penthouse, but they were still ready to engage and provide assistance as required.

I was located with Shadow and Mist on the adjacent building, which was higher than the building of our target. The three of us wore NVGs, as it was very dark. There were four men on the roof of the target building and they would have to be taken out first.

"Overwatch, Hit Girl! Fire when ready!"

Five hundred and twenty-five yards to the southeast

"Overwatch is engaging!" I replied and steadied myself.

"Kick-Ass you are clear!" Jackal said quietly from beside me.

Jackal and I were lying on the roof of a tall building four blocks to the west and one block south. In my hands was a Dragunov OTs-03 SVU sniper rifle. Yes, one of the pair that Hit Girl had seized from the Russian Mafia way back in September of last year. I had spent the past months learning how to use the thing and I enjoyed using it, too! Jackal was my spotter and he would tell me where I needed to shoot.

I looked through the scope and settled on my first target; he was closest to Hit Girl and was about to die. I controlled my breathing and steadied the weapon, then squeezed the trigger.

The roof of the Penthouse

I heard a sound, some ways off and then a clatter on the roof.

"What was that?" I called.

"I have no..." A shape started to reply before his head exploded.

I turned to the other man who was standing just a few feet away from me, just in time to see his head disintegrate.

The final man turned for the stairs, but he only made it a few feet before his own head mushroomed into a cloud and he dropped to the roof.

"Roof top clear!" Jackal called over the comms.

"Copy, overwatch!" I replied, and then looked at Shadow. "You ready to do this again?"

"Why the hell not!" Shadow replied.

"I'm not sure I can do this!" Mist groaned, looking down and across the gap, between the two buildings.

"I thought the same thing in New York – believe me it's over before you have a chance to be scared!" Shadow said.

We had already set up the equipment.

The distance for the line was thirty-eight metres, with a ten to twelve metre drop, though the actual slide would be a just over a quarter of that. Hit Girl had double-checked the faked ropes and the Plumett NS50 silent grapnel launcher.

"Overwatch confirms roof is clear!"

Hit Girl raised, aimed and fired the launcher.

..._...

The grapnel had flown straight and true. It had impacted the elevator shaft and the splines dug deep into the brick structure. Hit Girl tugged on the line, before securing it to the pre-fitted anchor points, fitted to that buildings lift shaft and hauled the line taught. She then fitted three zip line trolleys and double-checked our harnesses, before clipping us onto the trolleys, with both a primary and a secondary strop.

"Remember, one at a time!" Hit Girl cautioned and then looked directly at me. "And no fucking screaming Shadow!"

Five hundred and twenty-five yards to the southeast

I watched as the three girls slid safely across to the target building.

I was very pleased that they had all arrived safely. I was ready for more men appearing on the roof while the girls were at their most vulnerable. I returned to scanning the Penthouse windows while Jackal kept watch on the distant rooftop.

The girls vanished into the stairwell.

Distraction time.

The Penthouse

William Tait looked out of the armoured panoramic windows.

He did not feel safe – not one damn bit!

"Boss, we've lost contact with the men on the roof!" Carl, his bodyguard said.

William Tait felt himself shaking, involuntarily. The attack on the yacht at Chicago had been a nasty shock and he knew that his brother-in-law was most likely dead. He had thought this place safe – oh fuck!

It was supposed to have been an operation to take control of the criminal elements in Chicago, but no, somehow the wrong people had been angered and these people were very powerful and wide reaching. Nobody had much of an idea of who 'they' were, except that they may be vigilantes of some sort. Since when were vigilantes this fucking organized, he had thought!

Suddenly there was the sound of thud's and cracking noises as bullets started to strike the panoramic windows, leaving major cracks and deep impacts. After ten impacts, there was a short pause and then they started again. Finally, one pane gave way in an explosion of glass shards. Almost immediately, the front door was blasted open by an explosive charge, shredding one man.

Three forms burst in firing from short assault rifles, cutting down members of his security force. Anybody near the shattered pane of glass received a large caliber bullet for his trouble from the unseen sniper. Somebody then hit the lights and plunged the penthouse into darkness – whom this actually helped was unknown!

The lights went out, so I dropped the NVGs back into place over my eyes and focused on the different image before me.

I raised my suppressed Heckler & Koch G36C and dropped the first target that came into my vision. Mist was immediately behind me with the same weapon. Shadow was following behind and watching our backs with her suppressed FN P90. I could hear Kick-Ass in my ear.

"No target! No target!"

There was a lot of noise in the penthouse – screaming men, wounded and otherwise. There seemed to be a lot of panic, and then I found myself knocked down when a large person ploughed into me. I did not think it was on purpose, but I fell against what felt like a couch and then I was stampeded by some more feet and I heard some gunshots followed by a scream from Mist, then more gunshots, and a yell from Shadow.

I pushed myself up and yelled out an order.

"Fusion report!"

"Kick-Ass is go!"

"Jackal is go!"

"Hawk is go!"

"Battle Guy is go!"

"Drift is go!"

"Crimson is go!"

There was a pause then: "Shadow is go! Target has left the penthouse!"

Another pause: "Mist is go!"

Fuck! It was coming apart – but we were prepared.

"Fusion – Pursuit Plan! We're coming out!" I called and the team went into action.

Minutes later the three of us were on the ground and running to the other side of the block where we found Hawk ready and waiting.

"Hit Girl! Target is in a red Jeep Grand Cherokee and heading east – tracker is in place!" Battle Guy reported.

"Copy that!" I replied as we got our breath back.

"You guys ready!" Hawk asked.

Arrayed in front of Hawk were three motorcycles.

Hit Girl's purple Ducati Multistrada, Shadow's navy blue Ducati Multistrada and another black motorcycle with light blue highlights. That motorcycle belonged to Mist: her Ducati Streetfighter 848 motorcycle. The Streetfighter was fitted with the same chunky TKC-80 tyres as the other machines.

We seized our helmets and mounted our motorcycles. Once we had our helmets in place, we could see the heads-up display and our relative location compared to our target: William Tait. Battle Guy would feed us navigational information as we rode. We took off with myself leading and Shadow trailing after Mist. Hawk would head west to pick up Kick-Ass and Jackal.

Chapter 138*: Saying Goodbye

Thursday
Milwaukee

7:35 P.M.

The pursuit was on!

We hurtled down the darkened streets following Battle Guy's directions. I was very impressed with the way that Mist rode her Ducati – she definitely knew what she was doing!

"Kick-Ass! Tait is heading for your location!" Battle Guy called.

"Copy that – we're on the ground and watching for him – what direction?"

"He's heading west, along East State Street – Three SUVs!"

"Jackal, stand to – we have incoming!"

Seconds later, I could see three SUVs hurtling towards us. I raised the sniper rifle, aimed for the front SUVs engine, and fired five rounds. All five bullets hit the engine compartment and the engine tore itself apart as oil leaked out and coolant splashed onto the street. The SUV came to a rapid halt blocking part of the street and the SUV behind it rammed into the side. I shortly found the engine grill of the rear SUV in my sight and sent five bullets in that direction.

The exploding engine told me that I had been successful and I watched as the rear SUV smashed into the second one, pinning it in place. Jackal was attacking the armed men in the first SUV, so I dropped the sniper rifle and sized my G36K and started engaging the armed men in the rear SUV. There did not seem to be any fire coming from the second SUV.

We had raced down East State Street at speed before reaching North Broadway. We found a scene of carnage. We had seen explosions and gunfire flashing in the darkness as we had come down the street.

Tait's escape route had evidently taken him towards and past the building that Kick-Ass and Jackal had been using as a sniper nest. Battle Guy had been able to forewarn them and Tait's convoy had come under attack from Kick-Ass' sniper rifle and Jackal's P90. The heavy rounds from the sniper rifle had destroyed the engines of the lead and chase vehicles leaving the target vehicle trapped and the escort vehicles under sustained fire from Kick-Ass' G36K as well as the P90.

As we came to a halt the target Jeep Grand Cherokee was moving backwards and forwards, ramming the vehicles in front and behind. Finally, the driver made a big enough gap to escape and accelerated away down North Broadway. We manoeuvred past the wrecked vehicles and continued the pursuit waved on by Kick-Ass and Jackal.

After half a mile, we crossed under the I-794 and continued south. The first Police vehicles were now in evidence and we could see red and blue flashing lights as emergency vehicles raced towards the penthouse and the scene of the wrecked vehicles at North Broadway. Unfortunately, two Police cars did swift one-eighties and started pursuing us.

"Battle Guy, we've got the attention of the Milwaukee PD!" I called.

"Copy that!"

The Jeep Cherokee took a hard right at the end of North Broadway onto East Menomonee Street and then onto East Erie Street. One Police car took the turn too fast and crashed into a pair of parked cars, but the other Police car kept up the pursuit.

..._...

We crossed the river at South Water Street and then raced along South 1st Street. We lost the remaining Police car somewhere along the route – not sure how! Shadow and I went alongside the Jeep, Shadow to the right and myself on the left. Mist stayed behind us watching for problems. I pulled out a Glock 30 pistol and sent half a dozen .45-calibre rounds into the driver's window, which was armoured but could only take so much abuse at close range. Shadow used the distraction of my actions and fired her Five-seveN into the front passenger seat. Her armour piercing rounds made short work of the glass and she killed the man in that seat and also managed to wound the driver who lost control and the Jeep swerved to the left and skidded before flipping over onto waste ground and coming to a halt upside down amid the screech of tearing metal and screaming men.

We all skidded to a stop a few feet from the wrecked SUV. We had minutes only and maybe even seconds before Police descended on the area. We were on borrowed time, well and truly!

..._...

I pulled out my Wakizashi and headed for the SUV. I was followed by Mist, while Shadow kept overwatch.

"Fusion – evacuate the City now!" I ordered.

Everybody had instructions on how to leave the City and escape. On this order, they would follow these instructions to the letter. We would all meet up at Safehouse F.

A man crawled out of the wreckage. It was the man – William Tait, the final piece of the puzzle.

"Who are you?" He demanded, rolling onto his back.

"My name is inconsequential, but I am Hit Girl and you challenged me. I do not lose and I never pass up the opportunity to avenge those that I care for! You crossed the line, along with Montfort – so you must pay for your deeds. Chicago is under my protection – nobody who crosses me is safe. Wherever they hide, I will find them!"

"Please..."

William Tait got no further, as his head was severed from his body and it rolled in the gently settling dust.

"It is done!" I growled. "Time to go!"

The following afternoon Friday

Safehouse F, Chicago

It was finally over.

Everybody was gathered in the briefing room. Dave, Marty, Kim, Erika, Josh, Chloe, Cathy, Cameron, Natasha, Curtis, Megan, Marcus, Paige, Abby, Tony, Shannon, Tommy and Sophia.

We were all very tired, but there was one thing left to do.

"A big Thank you to everybody. We could not have done this without all of you – everybody played their part – even Sophia. Together, we accomplished what initially looked impossible and thankfully, nobody was killed or seriously hurt. Even our newest members, in action for the first time, showed great bravery – thank you."

I paused, doing my utmost to keep my emotions in check.

"It is with..." I could not go on; I felt tears running down my face.

Marcus stepped forward and put his arm around my shoulders and he continued for me.

"This morning we received the news that Natalie Bay died as a direct result of complications, due to her injuries sustained almost a month ago. Jack is okay and still recovering, but Natalie never regained consciousness after the attack," Marcus said and his words sent a ripple of shock and surprise through the assembled people.

Chloe was holding Josh very tightly and tears began streaming down their faces. This was replicated around the room in the pained expressions and tears.

The next day
Saturday

West Ridge

Cameron and Natasha were looking a little worried.

"Don't worry – you're gonna enjoy this!" I smirked and handed each of them a small burgundy coloured item. "You're goin' home!"

The two kids stared down at the brand new British Passports in surprise and then looked back up at me.

"Marcus contacted some friends, who had other friends. Basically, to cut a long story very short, you two are in the clear and can now go home," I said, throwing each twin an envelope. "First class tickets on British Airways, plus some spending money! You leave in the morning."

Natasha jumped up and gave me a big hug.

"Thank you, Mindy!"

"I owe you two for keeping my secret and helping me in Milwaukee. Now go home and don't get yourselves into any more trouble!"

Soon after we had returned from Milwaukee, I had sat down with Chloe and Erika to debrief them.

"So, what happened in the penthouse?" I asked gently.

"I'm sorry Mindy, I..."

"Erika stop – before you say anything, know this: I am not mad at you or anybody. We were all in a difficult situation and Chloe can tell you that no matter how well you plan, things still manage to go to shit! Now, I heard both of you scream and yell – you both get shot?"

"Yes, I did – in the chest – twice!" Erika admitted.

"Are you okay? Have you seen Cathy?" I asked with concern.

"Yes, I did – just some bruises. Chloe was right: bullets and tits don't go together well!" Erika said with a grimace, as she rubbed her chest.

I looked at Chloe.

"Yes, I got shot again and yes, my chest hurts and yes, I saw Mom!" Cathy admitted, rubbing her own chest.

"I hesitated, when I should have shot the guy!" Erika said. "I don't know why – I managed to shoot at those Nightingales!"

"It happens, don't worry. I heard you got that Nightingale in the forehead – damn good shot, girl!" I said encouragingly.

I was not looking forward to going to another funeral – the last one that I attended did not quite go according to plan and I had ended up fighting for both Dave's life, on top of a damn panel van and my own!

I had to go, to support Joshua. He was really broken up about Natalie dying. He was up in his room now and he was spending a lot of time there with Chloe. I was glad of Chloe; she had spent the night with Josh and was trying her best to help him. I still had no idea how to cope with grief in the normal way; my way of coping was killing!

I had avenged the dead Cops and Natalie, but that was not enough. I had lost a part of my life – somebody who had known both my Mom and my Dad.

That Evening

Dammit!

I went upstairs and pushed open the door to Josh's room. Josh was lying on his bed and Chloe was cuddling him.

"Joshua!" I called.

"Yes!" Josh said looking over toward me. His eyes were red.

"We're going out – just you and me!"

"Mindy, I can't..."

"Get up off your fucking arse, boy!" I yelled. "You're not the only person who's lost somebody!"

"Now hold on Mindy!" Chloe started.

"Stay out of this Chloe!" I responded and I saw that Chloe understood from my tone that she should back off.

"Fucking bitch!" Josh growled and climbed off the bed and pulled on his shoes.

Twenty minutes later, we were weaving in and out of traffic at fifty miles per hour on my BMW.

"What's this all about, Mindy?" Josh asked from behind me.

I said nothing and just kept on going.

Safehouse F

An hour later, it was dark and we were both in our combat suits and ready to depart the Safehouse.

Marty and Erika would be in the Command Centre and would monitor us.

"You sure about this?" Marty tried.

"We both have things to work out – just watch our backs!" I replied.

"We'll do that!" Marty replied with a smile.

I finished checking Jackal out to ensure that he had not missed anything and then Jackal checked me out for any missing equipment. I had him focussed, so that he could not think about anything else, at least not yet.

Ten minutes later, we both roared up the concrete ramp.

Two miles away, I finally answered Jackal's question.

"You and I have something in common – we don't cope well with grief. We both have things to work out of our systems. I go out alone, I'll do something stupid. I have a feeling that you've been contemplating going out on your own, too."

"Yes, I have – Shadow's been good but, I need to work things out for myself," Jackal replied.

"Well, why don't we go and have some fun – work off our grief..."

..._...

"Where...?"

"... Are we going?" I finished. "I had a chat with a certain Cop and there's some people who deserve to... Disappear!"

"Now that's what we need!" Jackal replied.

"It'll be tough – you up to it, Jackal!" I asked.

"I won't let you down, Hit Girl!"

We pulled into a street, in southeast Chicago.

Jackal and I were now in mortal danger. This area belonged to a well-known and vicious criminal gang that was usually able to evade arrest and prison thanks to blackmail and well paid lawyers. Voight was fed up with letting these bastards go and recently they had managed to get away with murder. They now deserved the ultimate sanction. We secured the motorcycles and moved towards the next street over and into the heart of the area.

"Well, well, well!" A voice yelled out of the darkness.

I drew my twin Katana swords and Jackal drew his Ninja-To as four men moved out of the shadows.

"We don't like vigilantes – they don't belong down 'ere!" Strangely, this guy had a British accent.

"Bring it on, motherfuckers!" I growled, sizing the men up.

A shadow moved to my left and I saw the glint of metal and then the shape of a pistol being raised.

A shot rang out as a body fell to the ground at my feet. I replaced my pistol and growled at the men.

"Let's keep it polite, gentlemen!"

"What the fuck is that voice?" A man asked.

"The last thing that you're ever gonna hear!" I growled.

Hit Girl hissed into her comms.

"Move!"

She then shot forward and attacked the men. I swung my Ninja-To, severed the left hand of the nearest man, and saw the blood spray over my combat suit. Hit Girl took off one man's head, followed by another man's arm. That flooded the street with blood and the fourth man fell to my blade in his chest.

I now understood why Hit Girl told me to move. We needed to remove these men fast, because almost immediately we were surrounded by eight more men, all armed with guns, knives and machetes. The adrenaline surge from the first group of men had allowed me to focus and I used my emotions, I used the loss of Natalie and I wanted more – I needed to channel my emotions into killing these men.

The men started to shoot, but our armour deflected the shots and Hit Girl and I waded into the men, our blades slashing from side to side. I seized a machete from one man and started wielding it in my left hand, while my Ninja-To was in my right. Limbs and weapons were scattered across the street, blood poured into the gutters and down the drains. I saw a man advancing on Hit Girl, but her attention was with the three men in front of her. I was too far away, so I dropped the machete, seized a fighting knife, and threw it hard at the attacker, who dropped to the street behind Hit Girl, just as she reduced her three men to one, who then turned and fled.

Hit Girl stowed her blades, drew a pistol and dropped the man with a single shot. I looked around. Thirteen men were dead – most of them in pieces. Hit Girl was covered in blood and I could see blood on my combat suit. I smiled to myself under my mask and I could see another smile on Hit Girl's lips.

"That felt good!" I growled.

"Hell yeah!" Hit Girl replied.

It really was time to leave!

We ran back to our motorcycles and left the area at high speed. Hoped that we had not just poked a hornet's nest, but I saw the night's activities as part of the healing process. I needed a distraction, a way of leaving Hit Girl behind for a time and enjoying being with my family and friends. I had just had a good idea: I enjoyed using the 'Vigilante', so why not get a boat that could be used as Mindy Macready! The 'Vigilante' would never see the light of day and only go out at night.

I liked the idea of that – buy a boat and we could all have fun out on the lake – maybe even go further afield! Yeah, I think I would definitely look into a boat, just a little one...

... On the other hand, maybe a slightly larger one!

Chapter 139*: A New Life

Four days later
Wednesday

Safehouse F

It was time to move on.

Okay, we had lost a life – a life that had touched a lot of people. Nevertheless, there was now a new life due to arrive. Somebody was pregnant! It was quite a surprise to find out that she was pregnant – yes, it is a she that is pregnant – obviously, for fuck's sake! I mean, they are very different people, but they are in love so I couldn't complain. Well, I went to speak with the mother to be... That was when Dave suddenly blundered into the bedroom and I lost my train of thought, completely!

"Mindy! Chloe just injured herself – bring the first aid kit!"

What has the damn girl done now? I grabbed the first aid kit and headed downstairs to find Chloe sitting on the mat with a large cut on her upper arm and another smaller one on her shoulder. Curtis was standing a couple of feet away holding a large curved sword in his right hand that had blood on the blade.

'What the fuck?' I thought.

"Okay, Curtis – I know that Chloe has been a real bitch to you for many years," I said. "But if you're gonna kill her, do it properly – a good thrust through the stomach, with a twist, would have worked!"

Chloe's mouth dropped open in shock. "You fucking bitch, Mindy!" Chloe growled. "Don't tell Curtis how to kill me!"

"If I wanted to you wouldn't be squawking right now!" Curtis said, but I could tell that he was a little shocked.

"What are you doing with that blade, Curtis?" I asked, seriously while Dave cleaned Chloe's wounds. "Your answer had better be good, or I'll run you through!"

"Chloe challenged me – she said I couldn't touch her!" Curtis explained, looking wretched.

I looked up at Chloe and saw that Curtis was telling the truth.

"Are you totally fucking stupid?" I exploded and made Chloe scream as I was none too gentle while I applied a dressing to her arm.

Chloe laughed, but I was not even smiling. I finished off the dressing and then stood up before turning to Chloe.

"You should know better! Stay out of my way today, or you'll need more serious medical treatment!" I growled and headed for the stairs heading down, but stopped and turned back to the mat. "Oh, Curtis – get the blade cleaned off and come downstairs – I'll show you how to use it properly."

Josh was laughing.

"Oh, Shadow's fucked things up again!" He chortled and received a nasty glare from Chloe.

You knew when Mindy was really pissed because she didn't use any swear words; she was so annoyed that she would forget to swear! I could see that Chloe had noticed this, so she chose to grab her gear and head home, which was a wise decision, as Mindy was most definitely not kidding about further bodily harm.

I watched as Curtis carefully cleaned the extremely lethal blade and inserted it into its cover and then he headed downstairs to see Mindy. It wasn't his fault as Chloe knew how to manipulate him, it was entirely Chloe's fault and could have ended in disaster. I wish that girl would use her brain a little more than she did. Chloe seemed to be getting more and more distracted recently – usually 'girly things', like boys – just a phase that she was going through!

"You angry with me Mindy?" I asked, carefully.

"Not really – sometimes the temptation to attack Chloe with a sharp blade gets too much!"

I laughed, but I still felt bad about hurting Chloe – what would Aunt Cathy say?

"So you like that sword, do you?" Mindy asked.

"It is pretty cool!" I replied.

"It's a fabulous blade – sharp and well balanced, but extremely lethal," Mindy said with a smile.

Mindy was always good at putting me at ease!

"It's the sword that I want to use, when I become a vigilante – like Kick-Ass!"

"You've still got a ways to go – like almost two feet up and a foot across!" Mindy laughed and I scowled.

"Good things come in small packages!" I challenged.

"Yes, they do – like me for instance," Mindy agreed.

Without thinking I blurted out my reply. "You are a perfect package, Mindy!" I felt myself blushing and wished I hadn't said it.

"Why thank you, Curtis! You're a bit young for me, though!" Mindy said with a mischievous grin.

"That wasn't what I meant!"

"Oh, you mean I'm not perfectly formed?" Mindy teased.

This was going a bit far! "Are you just gonna talk like a bitch, or are we gonna fight!" I challenged, unsheathing the curved blade in my hand.

"Oh – a hard man!" Mindy commented and seized a composite, carbon fibre Jo. "This Jō is impervious to that blade – come for me, Trojan!"

'Well this should be short lived!' I thought, as I moved towards Mindy.

"I'll make you a deal. You touch me with that blade and I'll take you out one night – just Trojan and Hit Girl!" Mindy said with a smile.

"Really?" I asked, incredulously.

"Really!"

Damn!

This kid had been practicing – when had he been able to practice? He knew how to wield that damn Spartan sword, so maybe my challenge was not so clever. He came at me fast and I found that I had forgotten how fast and lithe he had become. I actually laughed – he was like me, when I was young; he was using his speed and manoeuvrability to replace his lack of strength.

I really had to be careful now! I had expected the boy to be a novice and that I would be able to easily over-power him, but no. Well done Mindy, you opened your damn mouth once too often! Curtis was serious and he could easily chop my damned arm off, if I wasn't more careful.

I span around the mat and flicked the Jō to block Curtis' onslaught. He was good – I had to give him that and it was time to call an end to this before Hit Girl was cut to pieces!

"Time out!" I yelled and Curtis stopped.

Sweat was dripping off him and he was breathing heavily. The sword was heavy, despite the extra muscle that Curtis had put on over the past few months.

"Well done – you win!" I said and watched Curtis' face explode into happiness.

"I'm goin' out with Hit Girl!" Curtis yelled happily.

Three days later
Saturday night

Safehouse F

"You've got a bit mouth, Mindy!" Dave said, as he helped me gear up.

"I know! It needs to be to cope with what you put into it!" I teased – goddammit, Mindy.

"Not just big, but foul too!" Dave added.

"I didn't know that the kid had been practicing for fucking months! Chloe knew, but had been keeping it a secret!"

"Thanks Chloe!"

"Well, can't have you hurt on your first proper trip with Hit Girl!"

"It's gonna be scary, isn't it?" I asked.

"Knowing Mindy – yeah! She will try to scare you on purpose, but remember she will not put you in any danger. Stay alert and stay with Hit Girl, but follow every command without question or hesitation. I learnt that the fucking hard way!" Chloe grimaced.

Chloe was helping me gear up and she made sure that I was equipped correctly. I was a little scared, but this trip out should be nothing compared with Milwaukee!

"You know – you really aren't that bad a cousin!"

"Gee, thanks, runt!" Chloe laughed.

"You ready, Trojan?"

"Yes, Hit Girl!" I said.

I was on the back of Hit Girl's Multistrada, with my arms around her waist.

"Hit Girl and Trojan are rolling!"

"Copy that!" Battle Guy replied and we accelerated out of the Safehouse and up the curved concrete ramp.

At the top of the ramp, Hit Girl weaved around the piles of junk and shot out of the warehouse and over the rough waste ground. The ride was exhilarating and we had barely even started! We hurtled through the gate, Hit Girl turned left, and we raced up the street. This was my first time on a motorcycle and wow it was a rush of adrenalin!

"Am I going too fast for you, Trojan?" Hit Girl asked over the comms.

"Hell no – stop dawdling and put your damn foot down!"

I looked at the map on the large display and saw that they were already doing sixty miles per hour. The speed rapidly increased to eighty miles per hour, before dropping back to forty-five as they took a sweeping turn.

"She really scares me!"

"She knows what she's doing Cathy!" Marty said, but that was not putting my mind at rest.

Curtis didn't know that I would be watching everything. He thought that I was safely at home! However, I wanted to be here to watch on his special night out.

"We're out of here!" Kick-Ass called over the comms and I watched as Kick-Ass and my daughter both rode out of the Safehouse.

It was time to put my new wheels to the test!

I was riding my brand new motorcycle – the Ducati Diavel Carbon in black, but with green and yellow highlights. On each side at the rear were black panniers. I had replaced my helmet with a very similar design. My combat suit – well I was working on a replacement, but the damage wasn't too bad.

This would be my first night out on the new motorcycle – even Hit Girl didn't know that it was ready for use. This would be a surprise for both Trojan and Hit Girl! In my visor, I could see a purple arrow that indicated the direction to Hit Girl as well as a navigational pointer to show a recommended route. Shadow was cruising beside me as we headed northeast.

This was pleasant.

A nice evening ride with my little pal. The night was dark and cold, but pleasant. My first port of call was the donut-eating cops! As we approached them, I noticed that they were moving. I eased up behind them and then opened up the throttle and rocketed past with a blast on the horn.

"Bloody menace!" I said, grinning at Murphy.

"Who's the little guy on back?" Murphy asked.

"Beats me! These goddamn vigilantes keep getting younger!" I replied.

Damn! I could see two headlights coming up fast behind. I was about to react and then it suddenly occurred to me – where there is Hit Girl there is usually...

I was right – Kick-Ass and Shadow blew past at speed, with a wave from Kick-Ass.

"Cool wheels!"

What the fuck!

I had noticed a pair of arrows appear in my visor – a green one and a blue one.

Kick-Ass and Shadow!

They were not supposed to be out. Okay – evasion time!

"What's up?" Trojan asked as I accelerated and took a hard right and then a hard left.

"We're being followed – Kick-Ass and guess who?"

"Shadow!" Trojan replied. "Step on it!"

"I knew this would happen – I warned him, but who listens to Battle Guy?"

I watched as the purple symbol accelerated and started weaving through the streets. The blue and purple symbols increased speed as well and moved east, before turning north again.

"The chase is on!" Kim announced.

"You should be resting!" I warned.

"Plenty of time for that, doc!"

Chapter 140*: A Call For Help

Author's Note: Please be warned that this chapter includes smut and behaviour that could be seen as indecent and salacious, including words or insinuations of a dubious, unseemly or suggestive nature.

Chicago Saturday night

A place to hide and plan an ambush – that was what we needed – I wanted to surprise the fuck out of Kick-Ass and his bitchy sidekick!

I knew we could not kill the GPS signals for our communications equipment, but I could still make things difficult for them!

"Hit Girl! I've put you and Trojan on a discrete comms channel," Battle Guy announced.

That meant that Trojan and I could communicate without Kick-Ass and Shadow hearing us. The fact that I had not heard Kick-Ass or Shadow told me that they were on a discrete channel, too! So Battle Guy was keeping neutral, good for him.

"Trojan, we can talk freely without those two assholes hearing!" I advised.

"That sounds like a useful idea," Trojan replied.

"Now we have some planning to do," I started and checked where Kick-Ass and Shadow were in my visor. "We haven't got long..."

I noticed that Hit Girl had stopped.

We were less than a half mile away from her. I pulled over and stopped, with Shadow beside me. I had a bad feeling about this!

"I've got a bad feeling about this!" Shadow said and I laughed.

"Me, too! She knows we're after her and she's gone to ground – it's gonna be a fucking ambush!"

"Oh yeah!" Shadow replied. "At least we only need to worry about her and not Trojan!"

"Don't sell the kid short," I warned. "He'll surprise you one of these days!"

"Yeah, right!" Shadow scoffed.

..._...

We hid the motorcycles and approached the street where Hit Girl was located, on foot. I drew my batons and Shadow twisted the Jō in her hand. I sensed Shadow's apprehension – which mirrored my own. We both knew exactly what Hit Girl was capable of and she knew that we knew, so I had a feeling that she would arrange something devious – and I was right – sneaky bitch!

Kick-Ass headed into an alley, after we had heard some breaking glass.

I thought it was a distraction and so did Kick-Ass, but he had reasoned that Hit Girl would try a double bluff. I stayed at the entrance of the alley, watching Kick-Ass' back. That turned out to be a mistake!

I saw a blur out the corner of my eye and started to call out to Kick-Ass, but a pair of boots hit me in the right shoulder and I fell to the ground, dropping the Jō and I then rolled into the street. I looked up to find a boot coming down across my throat and a very sharp blade just an inch from my stomach – I didn't dare move!

The blade was attached to one-half of Hit Girl's bō-staff, except that it wasn't Hit Girl holding the handle – it was that fucking brat, Trojan!

"Game over, Shadow!" He growled, with a smug look on his face.

"Shadow, it's a fucking amb..." I heard Kick-Ass shout before he was cut off and I heard his breath rush from his lungs.

"You fucking little cunt!" I growled back, and then smiled. "Well done brat! You gonna let me up?"

"Not a fucking chance, bitch!"

I just laid back and waited for it all to be over.

I was wrestling with something vicious and purple that had appeared out of nowhere and kicked me down to the alley floor. Hit Girl had wrestled one baton out of my hand and she now held it to my throat, pushing down hard.

I pushed back with all my strength, managed to free my other baton, and cracked Hit Girl hard on her ass. She stopped and stared at me open mouthed – then I saw I eyes scowl and she drove the armour of her left fist into my abdomen. Thank God, I only felt a fifth of the pain – which was enough thank you very much!

Hit Girl flipped herself off to the side and waited for me to stand.

"You yield, Ass-Kick?" She growled, with an evil grin.

"Hell no!" I hissed back.

A purple blur then followed in which I was punched and kicked several times, and then she stopped and glared at me.

..._...

"Move a muscle and I sever your fucking head, Kick-Ass!" A young voice growled from a foot or so below me.

To me left, I saw the glint of light off a razor sharp bō-staff blade that was just a millimetre from my throat. I slowly looked down to find Trojan, with an enormous smile on his face.

"You yield, asshole?" Trojan added.

"Hell yeah!" I laughed. "Where's Shadow?"

"I had to shut her up!" Trojan said passing the bō-staff to Hit Girl.

We walked back down the alley and we found a wriggling and very pissed off Shadow. Her wrists and ankles were bound with duct tape and a piece of tape had been placed over her mouth.

"An improvement!" Kick-Ass laughed and received a vicious glare from Shadow, plus some muttered obscenities.

Kick-Ass ripped off the tape from her mouth, which made Shadow scream with the pain! He then cut the tape around her wrists and ankles.

"You are an evil little brat, Trojan!" Shadow growled.

"I warned you not to underestimate him!" Kick-Ass said then looked at Hit Girl. "You enjoyed yourself, didn't you?"

"Kicking Kick-Ass is the best thing ever!" Hit Girl replied with a big grin.

Later that night

Safehouse F

"That was totally awesome, Aunt Cathy!" Curtis blurted out as he pulled off his mask and ran over to his Aunt.

"It sounded like you had fun!" She replied with a big smile.

"I beat Shadow and taped her up!" He boasted.

"Only because I was being nice!" Chloe replied, looking annoyed.

"Maybe Josh can tape you up – might add some fun to the bedroom!" I suggested.

Chloe glared at me.

"You bitch, Mindy!"

"And proud of it!" I replied laughing at Chloe's blushes.

..._...

"So, was that fun?" I asked, once Curtis had stopped talking – which actually took quite a while.

"Thank you, thank you, and thank you! It was so awesome – I love you Mindy, you are the best!" Curtis blurted out. "It was unreal – can we do it again?"

"I don't think Shadow would stand for another night's humiliation!" Dave said with a smirk.

Chloe walked over to Curtis.

"I'm impressed Curtis, that was very well done. I am very pleased to know that my cousin is going to be a real vigilante, one day. Keep it up and try not to fuck up like I do – learn from my mistakes!" Chloe said magnanimously.

"That was well said Chloe!" Cathy said approvingly as Curtis gave Chloe a huge hug.

Five days later
Thursday

West Ridge

It was a call for help, from across the Atlantic Ocean.

"Mindy – we need your help, something is happening that is out of our control," Natasha said over the phone line.

"We'll be there!" I replied. "I'll let you know when and where – I have a few things to sort out first!"

"Thank you, Mindy. I really mean that."

"Stay safe, guys!"

..._...

I explained the short phone call to the others.

"Well, you've gotta go!" Marcus said.

"But..."

"We'll be fine without Hit Girl for a few days!" Marty said.

"But..."

"Mindy – take Dave, Chloe and Josh – I'm sure he'd love to go 'home!'" Marcus insisted.

"You trying to get rid of us – or just me!" I growled.

"Don't tempt me!" Marcus grinned.

Four days later
Monday

West Ridge

"Happy anniversary, Mindy!"

"Is it that time already?" Mindy asked.

"Fuck yeah!" I replied.

"So what is it now?"

"Would you believe that it's been six years since I first saw that scrawny little purple maniac at Rasul's apartment?"

"It's been that long?"

"And worth every minute!" I said. "Well, most of them!"

"Ass!" Mindy replied with a laugh and we sank down into the deepest kiss, which then led to something else...

"Dave! It's the middle of the afternoon!"

"I don't give a shit!" Dave murmured, as he ran his lips over my neck and I quivered.

Oh God! I kicked off my shoes, pushed myself back into Dave, and felt the heat from his body merge with my own. His hands started to wander down my back and then up my shirt. As his fingers gently caressed my backbone, I felt chills and started to giggle. Dave then lifted my shirt off and ran his lips over my left shoulder, while his right hand caressed my breast over the bra. Tremors started to shoot through my body and I felt certain feelings above my crotch and a moist feeling further down. I felt the clip of my bra release and I allowed the garment to fall to the bed.

I moaned, loudly and did not care who heard me – oh God I needed this!

Mindy was melting into me as I ran my hands over the soft skin of her shoulders and then down to her chest.

I could feel her quivering under my touch and the moans coming from her mouth – oh God!

My left hand ran over her nipple, Mindy squealed with delight, and her right hand moved down between her legs. Damn – if I didn't remove my trousers I was going to snap something! I let go of Mindy and she moaned, letting me know of her displeasure at my releasing her.

I ripped off my shirt and trousers and felt relief – those jeans were tight! I seized Mindy and started kissing her like never before, I felt her tongue running around inside my mouth, and I returned the favour. Her hands moved south and into my shorts and my breath caught – damn I was sensitive, but then so was Mindy.

"What's going on in there?" Megan asked, looking at the door to Dave and Mindy's room.

"You don't want to know – believe me!" I advised.

"They exercising or something, Josh? Mindy keeps moaning!"

"Yeah, they're exercising! Now get back downstairs!" I suggested and could feel myself blushing at the noise coming from the other side of the door.

I undid Mindy's jeans and carefully ran my hand down into her pubic hair, which by this stage was very moist and as soft as ever and the heat that was being generated was something else.

"Dave... Oh my God!" Mindy screamed as my fingers explored that area between her legs and I grabbed hold of a breast and massaged the hardened nipple. I felt the quivers shoot through her body and she moved her hips rhythmically against my hand and fingers.

She was really moaning now as I eased her jeans down, followed by a pair of, by now, very damp knickers. Mindy was really starting to move about the bed, as I massaged her down below and up top simultaneously, then she started to hold her breath and her eyes screwed up. Both hands clasped my back and nails dug into my skin sending pain shooting across my back. The pain just heightened my senses as I enjoyed my fiancée and treated her like the woman she was.

I knew what was about to happen, but it still caught me unawares as Mindy suddenly braced and then ripped herself from my hands and pulled her knees up to her chest and she stopped breathing for what seemed like hours, but was barely a minute. Then...

"Oh for fuck's sake!" Paige exclaimed, blushing furiously at the loud drawn out scream from above their heads.

"She has some lungs that girl!" Marcus commented, looking very uncomfortable.

"We need ear plugs!" I commented feeling very embarrassed.

"Good idea, Josh!" Paige commented.

"Some soundproofing wouldn't go amiss!" Marcus added dryly.

Mindy finally started breathing again.

I laid down beside her, she started to control her breathing, and I could see her legs twitching.

"Good orgasm!" I asked, grinning.

"It felt like a damn grenade going off inside my fucking cunt!" Mindy replied and then giggled. "Your turn!"

God, I loved this man!

He almost ripped me apart, but hell that feeling was to fucking die for! I pushed Dave to one side, so he fell onto the bed and I yanked down his shorts to reach my favourite part. I took him into my mouth and ran my tongue around and around and felt Dave's breath catching each time – I loved being in control!

I continued kissing and caressing, causing Dave to move around the bed and groan and groan. The moving turned to thrashing and I almost bit down as his fists landed on my back and started pulling at me. Damn he was strong!

Then just as the pounding on my back got too much, the pounding stopped and I knew that the best bit was about to come! Pun intended...

Dave exploded directly into my face and I savoured every hot, slippery, slimy drop. I licked what I could reach and then I giggled – I was one strange bitch! I gave Dave a minute to catch his breath, while I grabbed a towel and wiped the excess from my face, ignoring that which dripped down my chest. I jumped on top of Dave and kissed him, as if I was about to die and he kissed me back.

Electric shocks started surging through me again and I needed him – I needed him inside of me – and soon!

"Fuck me, dammit!"

I saw Marcus close his eyes and bury his face in his hands. Paige started to laugh uncontrollably, but trying in vain to restrain herself. I had to admit, Marcus and Paige had picked one hell of a day to get the interior of their house painted! Mindy had said that they could spend the day here, but never said that there would be entertainment!

I felt Dave slip inside me and the feeling of fulfilment was complete.

He had never felt so good - never! Every thrust of his bulging muscles sent electric shocks and quivers throughout my body, not to mention he feelings from his hands that massaged my nipples. This was almost unbearable – I had stamina – more than most, but fuck!

Then it came and so did Dave! We both yelled out together and Dave shook as he came, before he fell off me to the side and he tried in vain to control his breathing. I was being ripped apart from my crotch upwards – the pain, but the feeling... Oh, fuck, fuck!

I just lay there for what felt like an hour.

After a long shower, together of course, Dave and I got dressed and went downstairs.

We found Marcus, Paige and Josh in the living room.

"Hi guys, what's happening?" I asked not sensing the uncomfortable feeling in the room.

"Nothing – boring afternoon!" Marcus said staring straight ahead and avoiding my face.

"Peaceful!" Paige admitted, looking a bit pink in the face and biting her lip.

Josh kept his mouth shut and refused to look at me.

"You two finished your exercise then?" Megan asked, innocently, as she came into the living room and I felt myself blushing as Paige exploded and burst out laughing. "You two make one hell of a racket!"

Two days later

Wednesday

Safehouse F

I forget this goddamn day, every fucking year!

Unfortunately, for me, Dave does not!

Last year it was paint exploding in the bathroom, but this year he went easy on me!

He had painstakingly replaced two magazines of nine-millimetre rounds with rounds that contained no gunpowder. I had then spent half an hour stripping down my pistols and reassembling them, looking for what was causing the misfires, before I realised that Dave, Marty and Marcus were watching me and trying desperately not to laugh! Then I found that all the milk in the kitchen had been dyed purple – which kind of put me off getting a drink that I had actually been looking forward to; I like being purple, but I don't want to drink it!

I still hadn't worked out the date, until I then found my beautiful Panigale motorcycle shrink-wrapped in Day-Glo orange plastic - I hate orange! The three assholes were all watching me and then they just burst out laughing.

"April fool!"

I was speechless and wanted to be mad with them, but it was kinda funny and surprisingly harmless, considering!

Then I heard a loud shout from upstairs.

" A!"

"You called, err, bellowed!" I replied, innocently and braced myself for the imminent explosion, as Chloe emerged out of the bathroom, very naked and very, very – blue!

"I – am – going – to – break – every – bone – in – your – body!"

"April fool!" I tried.

"And that will just be for starters, you British prick!"

"You don't like blueberry?"

Chloe actually laughed!

"You are a grade A asshole, you know that don't you?"

"I learnt from the best!"

"Who, Mindy?"

"No, Shadow!"

"I'll give you that one – now give me a kiss!"

"Mmmm, you taste good!"

Authors Note: At this point, you are strongly advised to read the story: Hit Girl Hits Britain, for the next events in the Forsaken timeline. You can ignore the story, but events in Hit Girl Hits Britain will be referred to from time to time. Chapter 141 of Forsaken continues almost two weeks after the end of this chapter (Chapter 140). For those who have already read Hit Girl Hits Britain, changes and updates have been made to that story to bring it into line with Forsaken.

Chapter 141*: Home In The Windy City

Author's Note: This chapter (Chapter 141) of Forsaken picks up almost two weeks after Chapter 140. The events in between these two chapters are covered by another one of my stories: Hit Girl Hits Britain and you are advised to read this story before starting this chapter.

Sunday morning
United States of America
Chicago

West Ridge

We were glad to be back in our own country – this applied to all of us, except of course for Joshua!

"That was fun while it lasted!" Josh commented, sadly, as we got out of the cab at home.

"What could be better than the United States of America?" I commented.

"Where do you want me to start?" Josh replied sardonically.

"Hey! It's the UK's most wanted!" Marcus said, as he opened the door.

"Funny!" I growled and gave Marcus a big hug.

"Missed you, kid!" Marcus whispered into my ear.

"I missed you, too!" I whispered back and I meant it.

Next, I turned my attention to Curtis and Megan. Their faces had an interesting collection of bruises!

"Whoa! What doors did you two walk into?"

"The bitch has had us training and sparring, dawn till dusk for two fucking weeks!" Megan growled.

'The Bitch' came forward.

"Hi, Kim! How've they been?" I asked.

"We've worked them both very hard. Two hours, twice a week at D-JAK and then four hours each day at the weekend, including the range," Kim explained happily. "It was fun!"

"She's cruel!" Curtis moaned.

"I asked her to keep you two training, while I was gone," I admitted.

"You fucking bitch!" Megan exploded. "You mean it's your fault that Curtis has been smacking me about?"

"You seem to have got in a few good hits, too!" I commented, as Curtis showed me the bruises on his body.

"That's not the fucking point!"

"So, they any good now?" I asked Kim.

"Not bad, not bad at all!"

"You want to know the best bit?" Cathy interjected.

"They've been so tired after all the training that they've been falling asleep almost immediately, each night! It gave me and Marcus more quality time together!" Paige finished with a sly grin.

"No, no, no!" I groaned, hiding my face with my hands. "Nasty images... I do not want them in my mind!"

"Well, dear girl – we did have to suffer through your performance, didn't we!" Marcus said with a grin.

I felt myself blushing enormously.

"Assholes!"

The following evening
Monday

Today had been our first day back at school after spring vacation, so we had arranged to go see a movie that evening.

We had just stepped out of the cinema, when something started to feel wrong.

"Megan, we're in trouble... Something's happening..."

"What are you talking about? I don't... Oh I see what you mean – this is not good!" Megan replied, catching on.

"What are you guys talking about?" Cameron 'Cam' Fellowes asked.

"Something very bad is about to kick off, Cam," Megan replied with caution in her voice.

"You sure?" Brad Murphy asked dubiously.

"I am!" I replied seriously and looked at Brad and Cam. "Whatever you do, both of you, stay behind Megan and me – stay close to us."

Cam and Brad looked at us both a little strangely.

"I mean it guys – I'm not fucking about!"

Just then, the people that I had seen on the other side of the parking lot started heading towards us, and as they passed under the light poles, I could see that the people were masked and had weapons – baseball bats, machetes, knives.

We needed help!

"Megan, I'm hitting the panic button!"

Safehouse F

I was on my third magazine of the evening when a red light started flashing in the range.

The red light meant that an alarm had been triggered. I cleared the weapon, left it on the stand and ran out towards the Command Centre and I could hear an alarm sounding throughout the Safehouse. I entered the Command Centre and immediately saw that a panic alarm had been triggered from a Fusion cell phone. I silenced the alarm and punched some keys on the main computer terminal. Seconds later, a blue dot appeared on the screen, several miles south of me, along with some writing that told me whose cell it was. My heart sank as I saw the name beside the dot: Trojan.

I ran back to the armoury to grab my gear. Curtis would only hit the panic button if his life or anybody else near him were in danger. It was not possible to trigger the alarm by accident. I called Curtis' cell – there was no answer. I tried Megan's – knowing that she was with him that evening – but again, no answer.

Most of my combat suit was on and I had just turned on my comms, when I heard a voice.

"This is Battle Guy, Fusion check in!"

"Battle Guy, Hit Girl is on comms and gearing up at Safehouse F," I responded.

"I have you Hit Girl. It looks like Trojan is in trouble."

"I know; I can't get him or Wildcat to answer their cells."

"Hold on – I'll turn on the microphone for Trojan's cell."

I heard a click in my ear and then my heart sank even further. I could hear screaming, I could hear fighting and the occasional gunshot. Then my heart rose quite a bit.

"This is crap!" Trojan announced.

"Over to your left!" Wildcat called.

"I've got him!" Trojan again. "Cam stay behind me!"

I heard a scuffle and then a crashing noise. I could not listen to anymore.

"Battle Guy – keep listening, I'm taking Beast – send the route to the satnav." I said, as I pulled on my mask and ran for the armoured Range Rover.

With a squeal of tyres, I shot out of the Safehouse and up the ramp. I had a really bad feeling about all this. All sorts of nasty images flashed through my mind as I drove through darkened Chicago.

Would I get there in time?

This was out of control.

There were dozens of masked people about and they were attacking people, cars, and property, anything seemingly without any sort of purpose. They just seemed to be out to cause trouble and as much damage as possible. There was a lot of screaming. I was scared and I could tell that Megan was too. Nevertheless, we had a job to do and that was to protect Cam and Brad, as well as we could until help arrived.

Cam had already been hit by a flying bottle, but he was okay and staying surprisingly calm. Brad was a year older than the rest of us and was doing his best to help. So far Megan and I had put down a couple of the attackers, while Brad and Cam had tried to use their limited Taekwondo knowledge to keep themselves safe.

I arrived at the cinema parking lot after a frantic fifteen-minute drive.

There was a fucking riot underway. I could see fighting everywhere, including bodies on the ground being trampled. The screams were deafening. Police had arrived at the site, but they were pounced on almost immediately by masked hooligans. I left Beast and drew both of my Katana blades.

I immediately came under attack, by masked men with baseball bats and machetes. I fought back, severing limbs and driving my blades into chests. I was searching, looking for Curtis and Megan. I pushed towards the cinema, through the maelstrom of fighting. Dave and the others were heading for the Safehouse now; I just hoped that I would be returning with the living and not the dead.

"There!" Cam called excitedly, pointing into the crowd.

I followed Cam's gaze and was overjoyed to see flashes of purple.

"Megan – she's here!" I called and pointed.

"Of course, she's here – what did you expect?" Megan retorted.

To Megan, Hit Girl was a true Superhero and invincible, but I knew otherwise.

Suddenly a man, armed with a machete, lunged towards us and Megan screamed. However, the man froze as a sharp blade appeared out of his upper chest. The blade was pulled back and the man fell to the ground, revealing Hit Girl, a blood-soaked sword in each hand. She was smiling and the smile grew when she saw Megan and me. I grinned back.

Three men had seen Hit Girl and now lunged towards her and us. As Hit Girl turned to face the approaching attackers, another man came and threw himself at Hit Girl's back. Hit Girl was shoved to the ground, but before she could get up a gun was pointed at us all – it was an Ingram MAC-10 compact machine pistol and when fired, it would kill us all. I seized one of Hit Girl's Glock 19 pistols from its holster and fired three rapid shots into the man's face, which exploded and almost immediately I felt the wetness of the man's brains hit my face and slide down my front.

..._...

Hit Girl sprang up and drove the blade of one Katana into an attacker's chest, simultaneously flipping into the air and driving her other blade into the next attacker, from above and down into his heart. As she landed, she drew her Tanto and thrust the blade into the third attacker. Another man came at her and received a throwing knife in his forehead. Hit Girl then calmly retrieved her weapons, cleaned her Tanto and stowed it back into its sheath.

"Time to go home!" She growled and hauled the dead man off me and I handed back her pistol.

Hit Girl took the pistol and gave me a grave and saddened look, but then she smiled and started hacking her way through the dwindling fight to safety, pulling us with her.

..._...

By the time we reached Beast, we were all covered in blood and had many cuts and bruises. Once in the safety of the armoured Range Rover, Hit Girl stayed for the remaining minutes of the fight, before the majority of the masked men had gone, or been killed by the masses of Police that had descended on the area.

Finally, Hit Girl climbed into Beast and looked at the four of us.

"You guys okay?" She growled.

"Just cuts and bruises!" Megan announced.

"Let's get the fuck outta here!" I growled, floored the accelerator and headed back towards the Safehouse. "Battle Guy! I am en-route to the Safehouse with Trojan, Wildcat and the two boys."

"Trojan?" Cam asked, looking at Curtis.

"Wildcat?" Brad enquired, looking at Megan.

"Answers later – can you two be trusted?" I demanded.

"Definitely, Hit Girl!" Both boys answered eagerly.

Safehouse F

When I pulled into the Safehouse, I saw Dave, Chloe, Cathy and Paige waiting on the other side of the armoured glass.

The drive back had not been fun. My mind had been reeling with the evening's happenings. First, the masked fanatics, then Curtis killing for the first time and face to face. I also had two Cops kids that had now been exposed to Fusion. Well, their Dad's knew who we were and I trusted the two boys – they had both been running around at D-JAK for a while now.

I climbed out of Beast, along with the kids and ushered them through the gate. Both Cam and Brad were gazing around the place, amazed. You wouldn't think that less than half an hour ago they were within inches of being killed!

"Cool huh!" Megan commented.

"Way cool!" Brad admitted.

"This answers a few questions!" Cam commented, looking at Dave.

"Hi Cam!" he said.

"Kick-Ass, right?" Cam enquired.

"You're a smart kid, Cam!" I said, pulling off my mask.

"Mindy!" Brad exclaimed. "I knew it!"

"Q & A comes later – let's get you four checked out," Cathy said. Then she and Paige grabbed the four kids and took them upstairs.

..._...

"What the fuck was that, all over Curtis!" Chloe asked.

I looked at Dave, who in return looked concerned – he read me like a book!

"Curtis was forced to shoot a guy three times, in the face," I explained unhappily. "Curtis was covered in the man's brains."

"Oh fuck!" Chloe said simply.

Forty minutes later, the four kids had been cleaned up and had their cuts and bruises treated.

None of the kids' cuts was even remotely serious and they were now sitting down and having something to eat in the galley. I had explained to Cathy what had happened and she had taken it in her stride, as she did with everything.

"It had to happen one day," Cathy said matter-of-factly. "We went through it with Chloe, so we do it again with Curtis."

"I know; but Chloe was thirteen, not ten," I replied.

"I believe that you'll get him through it – just like you did with Chloe," Cathy said with a comforting smile.

I had also called Fellowes and Murphy to let them know that their kids were safe. They were very grateful – they had known that their kids had been at the scene of the riot, but they had been caught up in the chaos.

I promised to look after them and suggested that they call when they got off shift.

..._...

I went up to the galley to see how the kids were. Dave was in the Command Centre talking with Marty, who had arrived a few minutes ago. They were going to try to piece together this disaster. Paige and Chloe were with the kids.

"Hi, guys!"

"Hi Mindy," Curtis said, smiling broadly.

"This place is awesome, Mindy!" Brad exclaimed.

"That it is. Your Dad's know that you are here and yes, they both know who we are," I replied.

Cam looked put out by that comment.

"My Dad knows all about Fusion?" Cam asked.

"He worked out who we were a while ago and so did your Dad, Brad. For two doughnut munching Cops, they're quite clever!" I teased. "But they've never seen any of our Safehouses!"

"Cool!" Cam said. "Will they be coming to get us?"

"When they get off shift, yes – then we can have a little fun," I smirked.

Later that night

"I trust her, I do – but there are times when I feel she would just love to fuck us about!" Murphy moaned.

The two Cops were negotiating a steel staircase that vanished into the earth. I had given them both instructions on how to find the second pedestrian entrance to Safehouse F, which was a short distance away and started in the basement of a small commercial unit. We were monitoring their every move and I was enjoying both their caution and their anxiety. Cam and Brad were watching their fathers' progress and thought it great fun.

"It could be worse, I suppose," Fellowes added.

"How?"

"With that crazy bitch, anything's possible!"

..._...

"Be nice or the 'crazy bitch' may lead you into oblivion!" I called over a speaker mounted in the staircase.

"Oh great!" Fellowes moaned. "Told you she's winding us up!"

"Get a move on Dad!" Cam called into the microphone.

"Cam?"

"Could this get any worse?" Murphy groaned as they approached the bottom of the staircase.

"Go through that door and follow the passageway!" Brad directed.

"Great, my own son is sending me to oblivion!"

Murphy and Fellowes finally made in into the Safehouse.

"Bloody hell!" Murphy exclaimed.

"She's got her own damn bunker!" Fellowes added.

"Dad!" Both boys ran out to hug their fathers.

After a few minutes, I went to say hello.

"Boys, can I speak with your fathers for a few minutes – in private?"

Cam and Brad let go of their fathers and ran upstairs to find Megan and Curtis, who were in the briefing room.

..._...

I took Murphy and Fellowes up to the galley, so we could get a coffee. It was late – after ten, but we needed the caffeine.

"You both have brave boys there, guys!" I commented.

"Thanks, Mindy," Murphy replied.

"But, they both went through hell this evening. That mob of masked men that attacked that parking lot, they were just your average hooligans. I'm just thankful that Curtis and Megan were able to identify the threat early on and had the sense to call for help. I was here, so I was able to gear up and get there fast. It was nasty and I hate to say it, but your boys are gonna have nightmares."

"During the fighting, after I got there, I was attacked by four men and Curtis was forced to grab one of my pistols and he shot a man, in the face and blew his head apart. I have to deal with him making his first kill – at ten years-old. All four of them ended up with brains on them, but Curtis got most of the brains, plus the body on him!"

Fellowes and Murphy looked at each other.

"We've both been there and we don't envy the kid – we both made our first fatal shootings when we were rookies; it fucking sucked!" Murphy stated, looking grim.

"But thanks for telling us; we can keep an eye on the boys just in case. I'm just glad that Curtis and Megan were on the ball and were able to call you. You trained them well, Mindy. Dave and Marty saved our families lives, last year – now Curtis, Megan and you have saved our son's lives this evening. We owe Fusion a hell of a lot and we're damn glad that you're here in Chicago," Fellowes stated.

I felt myself blushing.

"Thanks, guys... I – I'm just glad I could help," I replied.

Fellowes and Murphy then thanked Cathy and Paige for looking after their sons, before taking them off home.

We all decided to spend the night here at the Safehouse, rather than driving all the way home, at this time of night. Cathy and Paige took one room, while Chloe, Megan and Curtis took the other one. Marty went to sleep in the room downstairs on Level Zero. Dave and I went to our own room, but I had trouble sleeping.

..._...

"You're worried about Curtis, aren't you?" Dave asked me.

"Hell yeah! He is much too damn young for this – it's gonna be hell for him and for Megan. Curtis fired the shot, but Megan saw the man's head explode too – mind you so did the boys!"

"We'll see how they both get through tonight."

I awoke to a scream.

Megan was sat bolt upright in bed and screaming. I jumped up to calm her down, just as Paige ran in.

"It begins!" I said and Paige nodded with a pained expression on her face.

Surprisingly Curtis had slept through Megan's screaming, but that did not last long. I was awoken about an hour later by a warm body wriggling in beside me.

It was Curtis and he was crying his heart out.

Chapter 142*: First Kill

The following morning
Tuesday

Safehouse F

When I got to the galley, I found Cathy, Paige, Marty and Dave all drinking coffee.

"I heard the screams," I said simply.

"Chloe is still asleep – she spent quite a while calming Curtis down last night. He's still asleep too," Paige explained. "Megan's on a couch in the briefing room, asleep."

"I wish I could have done more last night and prevented Curtis from shooting that man – but if he hadn't, then all four of them would have been dead. It was a MAC-10; my armour would have protected me – but it would have cut them all to ribbons."

"So, the two kids aren't the only ones who are suffering – Dave told us that you barely slept a wink last night," Cathy said.

I glared at Dave.

"Don't get mad at him!" Marty cautioned. "We don't hide shit in Fusion – remember, Mindy!"

"Fuck! I hate it when people use my own fucking words against me," I growled, but grinned at Dave. "Sorry."

I then went over and gave Dave an enormous kiss.

"Oh for fuck's sake; I always walk in when they're kissing!" Josh moaned, as he came into the galley with Erika.

"We came to help," Erika said. "How are the kids?"

"Could be better," Cathy, said dryly.

"Right Mindy – get a coffee and then get to the mat," Erika announced. "We have work to do!"

"But I only just got up!" Mindy whined.

"Then I have a chance of kicking your fucking ass!" Erika said with a chuckle.

"I get no fucking respect around this place!" Mindy growled and grabbed the coffee that a smirking Paige held out to her and followed Erika.

"What can I do?" Josh asked enthusiastically.

"Be ready to take over from Chloe when Curtis wakes up. We need to keep him distracted so he doesn't think about last night," Cathy suggested.

"I can do that," Josh confirmed.

Not long afterwards a tired Chloe appeared, with Curtis and Megan in tow.

"Ready for breakfast guys!" Josh chirped up.

"What are you so fucking cheerful about, Jack?" Megan growled.

"Smile or it won't be your mouth that sees the fucking pancakes!" Josh retorted with a grin.

Megan forced a smile and sat down next to her Mom.

"You can start smiling too asshole!" Josh added.

"Me?" Curtis asked.

"Both of you!"

"What!" Chloe demanded.

"Just think of something amusing!" Josh suggested.

"You naked?" Chloe replied and Josh chuckled.

"More like you naked and blue!" Josh countered.

Chloe blushed a little, but laughed and so did Curtis and Megan.

"Keep it going kid, you're doing well!" I said as I walked out of the galley with Marty.

"Thanks Dave," Josh replied. "You want more shit – then I'm full of it!"

After Erika had kicked the shit out of me, I got myself cleaned up and made some calls to see how Cam and Brad had been overnight.

It seemed they had been much the same as Curtis and Megan, unfortunately. I suggested that the boys come down to the Safehouse, to be with Curtis and Megan and I hoped that they could all get through this together. Both Sam and Paul thought this a good idea, so Sam agreed to bring the boys down later in the day.

I told Dave and Marty that we would be expecting visitors, so nobody would be worried when three people descended the stairs. The elevator entrance was kept secret for now, as was the vehicle entrance.

So far, Erika had stopped me from being morose about the previous night, and Josh was doing very well at keeping Curtis and Megan entertained. Chloe had managed a little more sleep and she was now her usual, happy self. Kim had appeared to take over from Cathy, as she had to go to work.

On the good side, we had received news that Jack Bay was out of hospital and now recuperating at The Farm, which had been repaired and cleaned up after the assault and subsequent crime scene investigation.

I knew what they were doing, but I went along with it.

Every time I had closed my eyes that night, I had seen that man's head exploding in ever-increasing detail. Part of me was shocked and appalled that I had killed a man, but another part of me knew that I had done it to save my friends. It had been kill, or be killed – simple as that.

I had not hesitated – I had picked up the pistol, aimed and fired – all in one swift movement, just as I had been trained. Mindy's training had saved us all. For both Megan and me, the training had taken over automatically and we had known instantly what to do, and most importantly, what not to do.

Chloe had explained all this to me, while she was trying to calm me down during the night. I did not want to be alone and subconsciously I stayed with somebody all day. I had talked with Megan for a few minutes and she felt the same way. Megan, being Megan, had her own way of getting through this and her response had been typically Megan, but I think it was mostly bravado.

"So I saw some fucker's head get blown apart and received his dumb ass brains all over me – who gives a fuck – he deserved every fucking round!"

Paige had laughed herself silly at that comment and so had I, now I came to think about it. Megan was special to me and I wanted to help her as much as I knew that she wanted to help me.

I was very pleased around lunchtime when Cam and Brad had arrived with Sergeant Fellowes. I immediately dragged them off to find Megan and we had only managed to get as far as the Briefing Room when we were intercepted by Mindy.

"You four – go get changed; time for some training!" She called.

"They'll be fine, Sam – we'll keep them busy," I said, as I headed for the mat.

"I know you will – thanks again, Mindy."

I watched as Sam headed out of the Safehouse. I was not a parent, so I had no idea of what Sam and Paul, with their wives, were going through – I could only guess and it could not have been fun. It made me stop and think about Marcus and what he went through every time that I went out as Hit Girl.

I had also put a lot of thought into what to do about Megan and Curtis. Should I stop them being involved with Fusion – at least until they were older? Now that they had witnessed something like that, should I make them full members and turn them into vigilantes? Fuck, they were not even eleven yet! I would look at Megan and think back to myself at that age. At that point, in my life, I had not even met Dave, but I had been a fully-fledged, and blooded, vigilante with a decent number of kills under my belt.

Did I want Curtis and Megan to go through all that shit, at their age? Curtis, well he was pushing himself and if I said no to him being a vigilante, then he might try to do it himself, much as Chloe tried when we had first met her. Megan – she was complex and not so easy to read, but she was catching up with Curtis when it came to skills and training.

I had asked Kim to have them sparring against each other, while we were in the UK. I did not want to fight them, in case I hurt them – as Daddy had with me a few times and I knew that he had felt terrible every time that he had caused me injury.

I faced off with the four kids.

Now was an opportunity to show them some alternative moves that I would not dare to demonstrate at D-JAK!

"Okay you, err, little shits – let's see you what you can do now!" I growled. "Hit me!"

Cam and Brad hesitated, but Curtis and Megan did not – they came at me from two different directions with everything that they had. Then, Cam and Brad dug in, too. I managed to out manoeuvre Megan and Curtis, but trying to avoid four fast little fuckers, without hurting them was not easy! Then that little shit, Brad, caught me with his foot on my cheek and I flipped over and landed very hard on my face!

"My God, I'm sorry!" Brad exclaimed in shock, as I turned over, rubbed my cheek, and glared at the kid, which I thought must have scared him.

"That was a good kick, Brad!" I said with a smile.

Megan was grinning fit to burst.

"Kick the shit outta the fucking bitch!" She said gleefully.

"Such elegant use of the English language as always, Megan!" I groaned, getting up.

"Foul mouthed, little cow!" Josh called down from the walkway with a laugh.

"Bite me, Jack!" Megan yelled back, raising her right hand and sticking up her middle finger.

"Megan!" Cam exclaimed, but he did not look as shocked as I thought he should have been at Megan's behaviour.

I was surprised to see Megan blush a little, though. Paige had agreed to give Megan a free pass with the swear jar for a few days as she worked things out of her system! I also thought that Megan was enjoying the company and attention of so many boys.

"Do that again and you'll be losing a finger, young lady!" Paige called down and I saw Megan scowl. "Anybody want something to eat?"

..._...

"Thanks Paige!" I said as I got to the galley. "I needed the break."

"Looks like you're gonna get a nice bruise," Paige advised.

"I took down Hit Girl in her own Hit Cave!" I heard Brad announce proudly.

"It is not the 'Hit Cave', never has been and never damn well will!" I growled at the kids, who just laughed.

"They seem to be having fun," Kim commented.

"At my expense!" I growled.

"Hit Girl getting thin skinned?" Kim teased.

"See, I get no goddamned respect!"

"Bite me, Hit Girl!" Kim quipped, with a grin.

After a bite of pizza, I headed down to the Command Centre.

"So what have you two got?" I asked Dave and Marty.

"It looks like those idiots last night were hired to cause trouble," Marty said.

"By whom?" I asked.

"That is the question we have yet to answer. The Police know as little as we do. I've spoken with Voight, and his team are working on this disturbing turn of events as a priority," Marty replied.

"What worries me is that we have absolutely no idea when, or if, those masked idiots are going to show up next," Dave added.

"My thoughts, exactly. What are the chances of us arranging regular evening patrols? At least in pairs, but I would be happier with threes as a minimum. Titan should be with us by the weekend, too."

"It'll come in handy, I think!" Dave commented then noticed my cheek. "By the way, who did that?"

"Brad kicked me!"

"Not bad – good kid!" Dave teased.

"No fucking respect!" I growled as I went back out to the mat.

I must have dozed off because I woke up to find Megan sitting on my stomach, as I lay on the mat.

"Hiya, Hit Girl!" She growled with an enormous grin.

Behind her was Curtis, with Brad and Cam either side of him.

"What do you lot want?"

"To kick your ass!" Megan replied.

"As if!" I growled and pushed Megan roughly off me and onto the mat.

I stood up and looked at the four smiling faces. This seemed to be going well so far, I stepped forward and grabbed hold of Megan's gi, lifting her off the mat.

"You need to learn some manners, young lady!" I growled at the smirking Megan, before I threw her across the mat. She screamed, but Dave caught her just before she landed.

"Awesome!" Curtis said, laughing, along with a snigger or two from Cam and Brad.

"Not funny!" Megan growled angrily, as Dave put her back on her feet. She then turned, angrily, to the boys. "Quit laughing assholes, if you want to keep your fucking balls intact!"

Somebody really needed to talk to Megan about her language! Even I thought that she was pushing it a little far – and that was me, Mindy Macready!

Chapter 143*: Decisions

That evening
Tuesday

Safehouse F

I was on our bedroom when there was a knock on the door.

"Yeah!"

I looked up to see Chloe come in, followed by Curtis and Megan.

"Should I be worried?" I asked with a grin.

"These two wanted to talk about first kills – I suggested that you would probably be the best person to talk to," Chloe explained. "After all, you helped me through mine."

"Come in and sit down, guys. Ask your questions."

I assumed my story-telling pose – which Chloe always saw as my 'gay pose' and it made her laugh! Curtis went first.

"When did you first see anybody killed, violently?" Curtis asked, tentatively.

"The night at Rasul's. When Little Miss Psycho, sliced and diced, showing off to me!" I replied, thinking back six years. "That really shook me the fuck up! I was ready to give up being Kick-Ass, right there and then. I was in waaaaay over my head and it didn't exactly help when I was visited by two fucking nut cases!"

"Huh?" Megan asked.

"Hit Girl and Big Daddy! They scared the shit outta me, I can tell you!"

"When did you first kill?" Megan's question, this time.

"That night when I rescued Hit Girl, with the Jet Pack and Gatling guns. I shot three of D'Amico's men, from a distance, but it still scared the fucking crap outta me! Then, of course, I blew Frank D'Amico himself out of the window, with a bazooka. There, I was closer and I was able to look into his eyes, as he saw his own end. I felt no emotion, at that point, but later on, it hit me full force. Admittedly, killing with Gatling guns or a bazooka, is not very personal, but both times I did it to save somebody, somebody I owed. At that stage, I felt one hundred percent responsible for Big Daddy's death. I felt that I had to act, to back her up and in the process of that, saved her life... Twice!" I elaborated.

"It took me a while to start to come to terms with what I had done. I never have got over it, really. I always hate having to kill. However, in this line of work, it is necessary. Kill or be killed! Some choices suck, big time. Killing eats away at you, but I have Mindy to talk to and she knows what I am going through. I do not even want to think about how many people have died, at Hit Girl's hands and I have never asked, but I do believe that Mindy remembers every single person that she has killed. However, after more than ten years of killing, she is able to bury those emotions. She can be a real hard bitch, as you know, but that is just her way of dealing with things."

"Now, Curtis. You and your cousin have something in common," I said, indicating Chloe. "Chloe's, or rather Shadow's, first kill was actually a double kill in defence of Hit Girl while they were both rescuing me. She was scared shitless, but she used her training and dispatched those two men with four rounds expended."

"You had no choice, your training took over – for both of you I assume?" I asked and both kids nodded. "That is why Mindy hammers all this shit into us, literally! The training kicks in, as it did for Shadow and now for you, Trojan and for you Wildcat. Between the two of you, you were both able to keep Bradley and Cameron alive until help arrived, which incidentally you had the good sense to call for. Never be scared to call for help – ever!"

Two days later
Thursday

Safehouse F

It had been another bad night, but not just for Curtis and Megan.

I had been having shocking nightmares that all revolved around Curtis, Megan or both of them being killed in ever more spectacular ways. I was a nervous fucking wreck by three in the morning and Dave was doing his best. I think I must have hurt him too; I was gripping him so tightly.

A lot of this was due to the decision that I had not made yet – should I let the two kids become full vigilantes?

I decided to talk to Cathy and Paige, who were both still staying here at night. That did not go well – I ended up in full flood! I felt so embarrassed, despite both of them saying there was nothing wrong with it. In the end, Cathy and Paige sat down with Curtis and Megan, both on their own and together. They asked them if they wanted to become full members of Fusion and therefore vigilantes, not to mention going through the potential downsides of being a vigilante!

I surprised myself by actually being nervous when I saw Curtis and Megan coming towards me while I was sitting in the Command Centre.

..._...

"Hi guys," I said quietly.

Megan glared at me.

"Will ya stop feeling fucking sorry for yourself?" Megan grumbled. "Jeez! Why do I always have to sort you out?"

I laughed. Megan just had this way of phrasing things.

"If you want us, Mindy – we're here to help. Aunt Cathy and Paige explained everything to us. We know the risks – we know what could happen to us, but we have both been part of the way there. Hell, mouthy bitch, here, has already been shot!" Curtis said.

"Hey! Watch who you are calling a bitch, ass!" Megan retorted.

"Anyway!" Curtis continued, ignoring Megan. "I've crossed the line – I've shot a guy – I might as well go the whole way."

I saw something that I did not like in Curtis's eyes. I could see darkness there – killing a man had taken something from him, something that he could never get back – part of his soul. I had also noticed that Curtis had used the word 'shot' instead of 'killed' – might seem a little like semantics, but one sounds much worse than the other.

"Sit – both of you."

..._...

Once they were both seated, I looked at both of them for a minute before responding.

"Now – I want both of you to promise me something. You will do exactly what I say. You will both follow all commands and directions that come from anybody in Fusion – even Chloe, Curtis – or Josh, Megan. Do not take unnecessary risks. Do not ever go out on your own, or as just the pair of you – for now, you will only go out when a senior operator is with you. Senior operator means, Dave, Chloe or myself – understood?"

"Yes," Megan said, nodding.

"Yes, Mindy," Curtis confirmed.

"You get hurt, when you're out – you tell someone, even if it's just a fucking scratch. You break the rules and I'll fucking break you!" I was starting to raise my voice now and I saw Dave and Marty looking at me; Dave looked a little concerned. "I am not fucking around – I am fucking serious. I do not want to lose, either one of you."

I stopped; I felt myself losing control. Megan and Curtis had actually started to flinch away from me and Dave looked even more concerned. It was Curtis, who spoke up first.

"I know that you feel responsible for me having to kill somebody. It was not your fault. You are Hit Girl, but you can't be everywhere and despite what some might think – you are only human."

"Thank you, Curtis," I said with a smile. "I didn't mean to scare you both."

"We really should be used to your strange behavior by now!" Megan added.

"Me, strange? Looked in the mirror lately!" I quipped, looking at Megan.

"I am strange – so fucking what?" Megan replied.

"Come with me," I said cryptically and led the two kids out and down to Level Zero.

An hour, or so later Trojan and Wildcat were ready.

I had ordered additional armour panels for their protective suits at the same time that I had obtained the suits, just in case. The additional panels converted the protective suits into full combat suits.

The additional armour was in the form of grieves, thigh guards and upper arm armour. There were also slim, and therefore light, Type III armour panels for their chests and backs. They both had new, different masks that were based on their original masks, but were both full face and incorporated voice-changing technology, as well as light armour protection for the head. The armour was in the same colourings as their suits.

As they would be going offensive, I decided that they should carry a firearm and both kids had trained with them, so that would not be a problem. I offered Wildcat one of my purple gripped SIG Sauer P232 .380 calibre pistols, which she happily accepted. Trojan, I gave a different pistol – a Walther PK380. Both weapons were small framed, light and had reduced recoil. Trojan also benefited from his pistol having a built in laser designator below the barrel.

..._...

"You will both look after these weapons. I spot a speck of gunpowder in the barrel and you will fucking know about it! I will also have you both cleaning guns for a week – ask Josh about that. You lose your pistols and well... Let's not go there, shall we..."

In addition to their pistols, I had provided other defensive weapons.

For Trojan, there were a pair of Fairbairn-Sykes fighting knives, as used by Jackal. He had shown an aptitude with the knives, so I would give him a chance with them. These knives went on his right thigh; the pistol holster was mounted on his left thigh, allowing the pistol to be drawn across his body.

For Wildcat, who seemed to enjoy close quarters work, I provided a pair of panther claws, which she would hold as if they were knuckle-dusters, but had three seven-inch blades extending out from her fist. These were more than lethal! When not in use they would be stowed in a pouch on Wildcat's right thigh. Wildcat's pistol holster was mounted on her left thigh, just like Trojan's, allowing the pistol to be drawn across her body.

Finally, I provided each of them with a custom bō-staff in blue for Trojan and in brown for Wildcat. These were short versions, very similar in size to the one that I used when I first met Dave, but just as lethal.

I took them both back upstairs and set them sparring together – without the bō-staffs, so that they could get used to the extra weight of equipment – armour is heavy!

Both kids drew quite a crowd as they twisted around the mat, fighting each other. The crowd included Dave, Marty, Kim, Cathy, Paige, Marcus, Chloe, Josh, Sam Fellowes, Cam and Brad. I was acting as a referee, to ensure that they did not injure themselves. The clash of carbon-fibre armour could be heard echoing around the Safehouse.

Then Wildcat performed an amazing, and advanced, move. She performed an almost perfect back flip and as she came back down, she kicked Trojan hard in his left side and he went down hard. Wildcat landed softly, before driving in for another attack, which Trojan responded to by catching the girl's left foot and twisting her over. She hit the mat face down, forcing the air out of her lungs.

Wildcat was having none of it; she immediately jumped up and performed a very good flying roundhouse kick that floored Trojan. I decided to call time and the crowd came over to congratulate the new vigilantes.

"That was way cool!" Brad said to Wildcat.

"Thanks Brad," Wildcat replied in a strange, but intimidating, electronic voice.

"That's, err, weird though!" Cam commented.

"Neat, huh!" Trojan said with his own electronic voice.

"Enough with the voices – masks off!" I called.

The kids needed to cool off after their energetic bout of fighting. Both of them were sweating heavily, as they removed their masks and Paige handed them both a cold energy drink each.

"Megan that was some advanced, err, stuff!" I said. "I'm very impressed."

"She's been saving that to show you – we spent many hours on those moves," Kim said, smiling. Megan looked immensely proud of herself.

"That was impressive – well done, girl!" I said, making Megan blush with pride.

"We start shift at six tonight," Sam Fellowes advised.

"Kick-Ass, Mist and I will be out on our motorcycles tonight. Battle Guy will be looking after the Command Centre with Hawk. Medic, along with Shadow and Jackal will be in reserve here, in case they are needed."

"Not bad, Hit Girl – you've built one hell of an organization!" Sam noted.

"That she has!" Marcus agreed. "SWAT is on alert. If those assholes show up, they're gonna be hit and hit hard!"

"Now that I am looking forward to!" I said with a smirk.

That evening

"Stay between us – okay?" Kick-Ass said to a nervous Mist.

"I'll be fine – thanks for worrying about me!" Mist replied as she started her Streetfighter.

"Battle Guy – we're rolling!" I announced and the three of us accelerated up the ramp.

..._...

Once in the open air, we concentrated our patrol to the west of the main part of the City, this had seemed the best place, with quick access to various parts of the City, if called upon. I sincerely hoped that nothing would happen!

Chapter 144*: The Next Attack

Thursday night

Southern Chicago

I had a lot on my mind, as the three of us rode through the dark City.

The attack, the other night. Who was behind it? It couldn't have been that bastard, D'Amico. I know that he was pissed when we saw each other last week, but this was way too soon for him to arrange. Could he have prepared this ages ago? Had he just been waiting for the right moment to unleash his terror on Chicago?

So many questions, but so few answers!

"You still brooding?" Kick-Ass asked.

"You know me too well!" I replied.

"You worry too much, girl – we've weathered worse. I know you are worried about that asshole; but we've defeated him before – twice!" Kick-Ass went on.

"I know – but..."

"Sometimes you over think things – you worry about shit that will never happen. I know that's how Hit Girl was trained to work; but the worrying is gonna tear you apart."

"He does have a point!" Mist chimed in.

"He usually does!" I groused, knowing that Mist was right.

..._...

We rode in silence for a while, watching out for anything untoward.

An hour later it happened.

"Fusion, we have an attack brewing. Masked people gathering at 47th Street and Hoyne! I'm sending the position to your helmets!" Battle Guy called.

"We have it! ETA six minutes!" I responded and increased speed.

"SWAT is rolling, ETA ten minutes!"

We were two minutes away when Battle Guy called again.

"Shadow, Jackal and Medic are heading your way with Beast! ETA nine minutes! Reports indicate crowd of masked cunts is swelling to forty plus!"

More good news! I seriously hoped that somebody had miscounted, but that hope was dashed as we arrived at the scene. Forty would have been a nice low number compared to what I saw in front of me. Mist summed it up.

"Oh shit! We're fucked!"

"That would be about right!" I commented and saw Kick-Ass nodding.

..._...

We were parked up beside a Pizza Hut. Across the illuminated parking lot of the small mall, I saw a crowd of people. I took a close look at the crowd.

These people were different to those I had fought, the other night. These seemed more prepared for violence. Some wore body armour of varying quality and coverage. I saw a huge array of weaponry: Machetes of varying sizes,

Katana swords, knives, baseball bats, chain whips and guns. Many guns.

The guns were interesting – they looked brand new. New pistols, new shotguns, new hunting rifles. Either these people had just turned over a gun store, or somebody was equipping them. Now this seemed like Ralph D'Amico!

The masked cunts were not aware of our arrival; we had been stealthy. I was pleased to see that SWAT were being stealthy too – no sirens, no flashing blue lights – as they pulled up.

I shook hands with the SWAT Team Leader, Matthews.

"Glad you're here, Hit Girl – these guys look serious!" He said.

"These are different from those of the other night. These cunts are better equipped – the weapons are all brand new!" I explained.

Matthews looked around at the masked cunts.

"They don't get much newer than that!" He agreed. "D'Amico?"

"As good a person to blame as any!" I replied.

SWAT had twelve men ready in body armour. We brought the number to fifteen. Shadow and Jackal would bring the figure to seventeen. Seventeen against what looked like fifty or so masked cunts.

Medic would stay with Beast and await friendly casualties, which at this point seemed inevitable.

The first shots of the night would be from SWAT.

They sent over a dozen teargas grenades into the crowd. There was very little wind that night, so the teargas would linger for a few minutes. We waited for the teargas to take effect. There was a lot of shouting and confusion. Nobody seemed to be in control of the masked cunts, which was good news. I noticed a few cunts leave the fight and head off, choking on the gas. They were seized by hidden Chicago PD Officers who had surrounded the area silently. Nobody was getting away from this, dead or alive!

..._...

At that point, Beast pulled up, driven by Medic.

Out jumped Shadow and Jackal. Kick-Ass went to the rear of Beast and drew out heavy weapons, including his AA-12. This time though the magazine was loaded with beanbag rounds. At this point we did not know who these cunts were, or if they deserved to die.

Of course, if they chose to fight us, then we would use lethal force. However, initially we would use non-lethal force wherever possible. On this line, Jackal was holding a Remington Model 870 pump-action shotgun that was loaded with seven rounds of XREP ammunition. The XREP looked like a high-tech shotgun shell. That was so it could be fired from a standard 12-gauge shotgun. But instead of firing pellets or a slug, these shells fired a small, self-contained Taser device that was capable of delivering the same debilitating effect as a handheld Taser gun – in this case for twenty seconds.

The advantage over a normal Taser was that several targets could be engaged by a single person and from a safe distance. Shadow would cover Jackal while he took down masked cunts. The more we put down with non-lethal force the less we would need to fight. The initial plan was for incapacitated cunts to be dragged out of the fight and passed to Officers who would secure them and send them for processing and interrogation.

Our good friend, Voight, would be undertaking the interrogations and I knew that he would get answers, one way or another!

Once the teargas had dissipated, we moved in with teams of two.

Naturally, I was with Kick-Ass. Mist would help a SWAT member with retrieving downed cunts.

Kick-Ass started firing his AA-12, sending beanbags into the crowd and the unsuspecting cunts were not amused.

They fell to the ground nursing their bruised bodies. Jackal was starting further over and he had already incapacitated four men, who were even now being dragged off by SWAT. I covered Kick-Ass with my bō-staff. I used the staff itself rather than the blades, but some cunts were not amused at being attacked. They wanted to move through the City and cause trouble, but we were not going to let that happen without the cunts suffering a lot of blood and pain.

The cunts started to move away from us, but the crowd also started to split into two. This revealed the real fighters. In front of Kick-Ass and I were six large men, who seemed impervious to the beanbag rounds. I flexed my muscles and my bō-staff, before running forwards.

..._...

These men were out to kill; I could read their eyes. Kick-Ass was running behind me having passed off his AA-12 to a SWAT member. He had drawn his Ko-Wakizashi blades. He was now ready to support me in my attack.

The first man received both blades of my bō-staff in his gut. He went down slower than I had expected, but down he went, screaming and clasp his stomach. This only seemed to enrage the next man who drove his fist into my chest, pushing me backwards and I rolled to the side before regaining my feet and swiped the bō-staff around, severing the man's feet at the ankles. He crashed to the ground with a scream, but he still tried to grab for me, until I drove a bō-staff blade into his brain.

I drove my blade into the chest of the attacker.

The man grunted with the pain, but smirked at me, before attempting a punch, which I was able to fend off with my gauntlet. I felt a fist strike my back armour and stumbled forwards, releasing my Ko-Wakizashi and turning around to drive my other blade into the stomach of the other attacker and slashing him open, so yards of intestine spilled out onto the ground. The man fell, crushing his own guts and sending blood in an ever-increasing pool.

I retrieved my other blade and turned towards Hit Girl, who was fighting the remaining two men. I ran over to her, drove a blade into one man's side, below the rib cage, brought the sword forward. I opened up his belly, again spilling intestines across the ground.

With my distraction, Hit Girl was able to sever both arms of the last attacker before killing him with a stab into his heart.

..._...

At the sight of the six men being taken down, many of the watching crowd decided that they preferred to be elsewhere and started to move away, but were intercepted by the waiting Police.

It was obvious that the remaining cunts, about a dozen, were the serious fighters. These men were now facing five armed vigilantes. The odds were better than even – from our point of view!

Mist let fly with her chain whip and pierced the neck of one cunt, while the rest of us charged in and let fly with our melee weapons.

I was fighting a man who wielded a Katana with some skill, which rather surprised me and the man gave me no chance to seize my own swords, so I was stuck fighting with the bō-staff. Kick-Ass was deflecting machete blows from two men with his own blades and bearing up well. Jackal was fighting a man armed with a Katana, too. His Ninja-To was a lot shorter, but Jackal moved faster than the man, which gave him an advantage.

Shadow was fighting a man more than twice her size. The man was armed with a vicious looking club thing. She was holding up, though, with her bō-staff and, like Jackal, was using her speed and manoeuvrability to outwit her adversary.

The man was fucking huge.

He was swinging what was probably a baseball bat, but also might have been a piece of scaffolding. Either way, it was large and lethal! I ducked from side to side as I avoided the powerful swings from the club thing. He was good, too. Each time I tried to get a blade into him, he was able to block my thrust.

Now, they say that size is not everything – look at Hit Girl!

However, his weapon was longer than mine was which gave him an obvious advantage. However, I had speed and I was able to outstep my adversary. My combat suit absorbed a pair of strikes, although I expected to find vicious bruises under the suit!

I finally managed to dive under one of the man's attacks and I drove my Ninja-To up, vertically into the man's groin. The man stopped dead and blood poured down my gauntlets and onto the parking lot. I pulled my blade out and allowed the man to fall to the ground.

I saw Jackal's man go down, as one of my attackers struck at me with his machete. I caught the blade with both of my own blades and pushed backwards just as my other attacker struck at me. I kicked out, but missed. The machete came down towards me, but just when I thought it was too late, a blade appeared and deflected the strike. It was Jackal, with his Ninja-To.

"Thanks!" I called and threw my weight onto the first attacker, pushing him back and driving a blade into his stomach and another into his chest.

I then swung around, removing my blades and driving one into the other man's chest at the same time as Jackal drove his blade into the man's stomach. Both men fell to the ground.

I adored this chain whip.

One flick and it flew straight and pierced the man's neck. As the man fell, I pulled the chain tight, the end left the man's neck, and I turned to face the next attacker. He was too close for the whip, so I replaced it into its pouch and drew my Sais.

This man sported a large Jō-like weapon. As he struck at me, I used the Sais to deflect the strike and used my mobility to avoid the heavy weapon. The attacker managed to get one good hit on me, but I was able to do worse in return.

I hooked away the end of the Jō with my left Sais and drove my right Sais into the man's left temple. Blood shot from the wound as the body fell to the ground. I span around seeking my next target and ran towards Hit Girl, who seemed to be attracting more than her fair share of cunts!

I was now fighting three men.

One had a Katana, another a baseball bat and the third, a whirling chain. Why they were all ganging up on me – I did not know! I was using all my skills to battle the three men. The man with the Katana was good while the other two were just thugs.

One of the thugs, though, suddenly froze with his chain dangling in the air. Then he sank to the ground and I saw a smiling Mist standing behind him, a blood soaked Sai in each hand. Not bad for the new girl!

I turned my attentions to the remaining pair, who had been distracted by the death of the other thug. I whirled around to stab the guy with the baseball bat in the chest, then span and drove the other blade into the neck of the Katana guy. They both crumpled to the ground.

I looked around and saw Jackal driving his Ninja-To into a cunt lying on the ground. He looked exhausted and I he seemed to be favouring his left arm. Kick-Ass was breathing heavily, but seemed unharmed. Mist was smiling and she seemed pleased with herself. Shadow though, was down on one knee. She was holding the right side of her face and I could see her mouth grimacing with pain.

Later that night Safehouse F

The evening had been a success.

The CPD had arrested almost twenty cunts. Many cunts had died. Nine cops were in hospital with only minor injuries.

We had all returned safely to the Safehouse.

Chloe and Josh were both being seen to by Cathy. Josh had hurt his left arm, nothing major but he had a large bruise, which made the arm sore. He also had a couple of major bruises on his chest from two Katana strikes. Chloe had a few cuts and a bruise on her jaw and a sore left shoulder.

"A sore jaw should give us all some peace and quiet!" Dave quipped and received a nasty glare from Chloe. Josh laughed, and received a punch in the arm for his trouble.

"Well done, Erika – I was really impressed," I said and Erika blushed at the praise.

Two days later
Saturday

Safehouse D

Dave and I were at the Safehouse, along with Curtis and Megan. Chloe was out with Josh and probably doing things that I really did not need to know about! Seriously, though, they had gone to see Jack Bay at The Farm.

In front of us were my latest, very expensive, acquisitions. I was pleased, very pleased!

"Mindy stop grinning – you'll hurt yourself!" Dave commented.

"Fuck me! They are fucking awesome!" Megan exclaimed walking around them.

"I love that one!" Curtis said, pointing at the larger of the two vehicles.

"So – you like Titan, eh?" I asked with a laugh.

"Hell, yeah!" Curtis replied.

..._...

Curtis had taken a liking to the monster vehicle parked beside Safehouse H. It had started life as a Ford F-550 truck, but had gone through a major transformation. The vehicle weighed in at seven and a half thousand kilogrammes and was armoured to A9/B6 standard – this meant that the vehicle could survive bullets from all assault rifles and anything up to 7.62x51 rounds from a Winchester .308 rifle. The vehicle was over six metres long and two and a half metres wide.

The enormous truck had enormous twenty-inch off-road tyres, with run-flat capability, and four-wheel drive. Power came from a six point seven-litre V8 Turbo Diesel engine that produced four hundred horsepower. Ten people could be carried in air-conditioned safety, if not comfort. There were also a pair of heavy-duty winches mounted front and rear.

We called this armoured mammoth, Titan!

The other vehicle that Megan was now examining was a lot more mundane than Titan was, but still huge.

This was intended as additional support for Beast. We had many people that required transportation now, as well as equipment and things were getting more dangerous for Fusion. The black, armoured pickup truck was based on the GMC Sierra 3500HD. It was fitted with a crew cab, which could seat five people in relative comfort, as well as armoured safety, as well as a long load bed. The four-tonne vehicle was powered by a six point six-litre V8 diesel engine that provided over four hundred horsepower to the front and dual rear wheels. The vehicle was armoured to the same level as Titan, but would suffer damage much more easily. On the streets, the GMC would attract relatively low attention, just like Beast. The added bonus of this truck was its ability to carry two motorcycles in its load bed.

We called this monster truck, Iron Hide!

Okay, yes - the truck was named after a Transformer!

We had allowed people to suggest names, anonymously, for the new truck. Turned out that there were many Transformer fans in Fusion – who knew. Although, I would love to know who suggested 'Bumble Bee' and 'Daisy'. I had a distinct feeling that the last name was suggested by Marcus. He did not seem to approve of my naming decisions for some reason – I could not think why!

Due to its immense size and weight, Titan would live here, at Safehouse D. Iron Hide would fit, just, down the ramp to Safehouse F, but due to lack of parking space the truck would spend most of its time at Safehouse D, too.

Megan and Curtis had been nagging me now to take them out. Megan especially, as I had already taken Curtis out. Nevertheless, I still had serious misgivings about those two becoming operators. I suggested that I would take them out, once things calmed down.

That suggestion did not go down so well, but I told them that I wasn't shifting.

Chapter 145*: Escalation

Three days later
Tuesday night

8:15 P.M.

As the bullet entered the head, it seemed to swell, before it started to come apart. The back of the head split, releasing brain matter, blood and bone. This brain matter, blood and bone formed a cloud where the head used to be and expanded outwards, in all directions.

Admittedly, it was dark, so it was not as spectacular as it would have been in daylight, but the sight of the cloud of body matter settling to the ground, followed by the headless corpse was still very impressive, in the illumination from the street lighting.

"Fuckin' A!" Jackal commented in his electronically disguised voice, as he lowered his pistol and turned towards the next target.

I threw the man over my back and onto the ground, followed by a single round from my Glock 19 into the man's head and moved onto the next target. I fired another single round, blowing another head apart as a man came towards me with a raised baseball bat. I threw myself to my right and past the bat, as it swung for my body. Another gunshot, this time the sharper report of a five-point-seven-millimetre round from Shadow's FN Five-seveN pistol. The man with the baseball bat fell with a single hole in his forehead.

A man, six feet away was about to be shot by a masked cunt. I raised my pistol again and put the cunt down with two rapid shots.

"Спасибо, Хит Girl!" The man said, looking over briefly, before returning to engaging the masked attackers with his AKS-74U. [Thank you, Hit Girl!]

Now, you may ask – why was I fighting alongside a Russian?

You would probably be a little more surprised to know that he was Russian Mafia, from the Bratva that I had upset some weeks before, when I had dropped into their conference room!

Well – two words – Ralph D'Amico! He was wreaking havoc in the City. He was targeting anybody who could stand against him, including the Russian Mafia. It seemed that he no longer wanted to collaborate with them, unlike the last time.

The Russians had contacted me, through one of my informants and I had met with Vladimir. He asked for my help, would you believe that! I agreed to join forces – but only until D'Amico was dead. The Russians had agreed, surprisingly, to my terms.

So there we were, fighting side by side at South Independence Boulevard and South Ridgeway Avenue.

..._...

We had been alternating the Fusion patrols to give people time to rest.

That night, Kick-Ass and I had been staying at the Safehouse on standby, while Jackal, Shadow, Mist and Medic had gone out, together. To give them extra protection, I had insisted on them taking Beast, instead of their motorcycles and Medic was driving. Shadow was not amused about not being allowed to drive Beast; she seemed to have enjoyed driving Beast, the last time!

They had just swung by Marty's neighbourhood in Lawndale when they had witnessed the masked cunts gathering. Unfortunately, the cunts had also seen Beast!

Beast had then come under sustained fire from multiple automatic weapons.

Earlier on Tuesday evening

7:35 P.M.

We turned left onto South Central Park Avenue and after a couple of minutes drove past Marty's apartment. I glanced at Josh and smirked – Marty and Kim were up there, right now!

"She's pregnant, they won't be having sex!" Jackal said, reading my mind.

"Why not!" Medic commented. "Being pregnant with little madam never stopped me!"

"Ewww!" I exclaimed and thrust my masked face into my gauntlets. Jackal, being a complete asshole, just laughed at my discomfort. Mist just blushed.

We made another left onto West Douglas Boulevard.

"Cunts!" Jackal blurted out and pointed through the windshield.

The cunts had seen us, too! The windshield was peppered with dozens of bullets from automatic weapons. Medic floored the five-litre supercharged V8 engine and Beast zigzagged left onto the grass median and then right into South Millard Avenue.

"Fusion, Beast is taking automatic fire. Support required!" I called over the comms as I seized my P90. I dove out of Beast as soon as we stopped, along with Jackal and Mist.

The three of us ran to the corner of the two streets and returned fire with our P90s. Medic stayed with Beast, an MP5K in her hands.

Iron Hide

As soon as the alert had come through, Kick-Ass and I had made our way, via the hidden tunnel, to Safehouse D.

We had left the warehouse in Iron Hide for the high-speed, two and a half mile drive, up South Kedzie Avenue and then left up West Douglas Boulevard.

"Fuck me!" I exclaimed at the sight before me.

It was a pitched firefight. I could see Jackal and Shadow engaging multiple cunts, all of whom seemed to have automatic weapons. I could not see Mist, but I knew she was there somewhere. Several bullets struck Iron Hide as we pulled up on the grass median.

I leapt out angrily and yelled at the cunts.

"Hey, bastards – this truck is fucking new and it was fucking expensive!"

I then followed this up with automatic fire from my G36C. Kick-Ass engaged with his G36K and sent several flashbang grenades, from his underslung AG36 grenade launcher, into the crowd. When these grenades landed, they exploded with a loud bang and bright flash; which was blinding in the darkness. This caused disorientation in the cunts and they started to move back, further up the Boulevard.

"Good to see you guys!" Shadow called over the comms.

"Just thought we'd come by to see how Medic was doing," Kick-Ass replied.

"I'm fine, Kick-Ass!" Medic called.

"Funny arse!" Jackal moaned.

"Time you two turned up!" Mist commented, from over on the grass. She was taking aimed shots at the cunts.

"Hit Girl, Hal – The Bratva is pulling up now!"

I turned to see a pair of black, armoured Cadillac Escalades pulling up. Out stepped Vladimir, followed by eight, very large Kryshas. Each Krysha was armed with an AKS-74U assault rifle and they did not hesitate to move into cover and start to engage the masked cunts. I nodded to Vladimir, who smiled back, but remained behind the armoured SUVs.

That was when my cell rang.

"Is that you starting world war three in Lawndale?" Marcus asked.

"I didn't start it – D'Amico did!" I retorted.

"Okay – SWAT is on their way," Marcus advised.

"Advise them that Fusion is engaged and we have back up from Vladimir," I said.

"You sure about involving the Mafia?"

"To be honest, no!"

"Just great!" Marcus commented dryly, hanging up.

Kick-Ass and Jackal moved up the grass median, while Shadow and I headed up the street, using vehicles as cover. The masked cunts were starting to sort themselves out – somebody was in command and issuing commands – that was different to the other night.

The cunts were now taking cover behind a large fountain on the grass median at the corner of South Independence Boulevard and West Douglas Boulevard. The random automatic gunfire was now better controlled and there was now short bursts and single shots.

The five of us moved up the grass median using trees for cover. So far, none of us was injured. A few shots had struck our armour, but we could still fight. Medic was currently treating a wounded Krysha, while another lay dead. Despite this, there were almost a dozen dead cunts on the street and median. As we got closer to the fountain, I could make out more detail about what was going on.

I could see mean with binoculars and radios. They were coordinated – that would be trouble. To my left I heard the deep roar of the CPD SWAT trucks, which pulled out of a side street at speed with blue lights strobing. I could see rifles engaging out of the left side gun ports. Then something bad occurred.

The cunts engaged the armoured vehicles with a pair of M60 machine guns. The chattering sound was unmistakable and the 7.62-millimetre bullets carved into the SWAT trucks. The Trucks served away from the gunfire and turned towards us and then the first truck smashed through a wooden fence between two buildings, one of which was abandoned. The other truck followed suit, reversing in. Kick-Ass ran back to Beast with Jackal. I ran over to SWAT.

"Anybody hurt?" I called over the noise. The M60 was still taking pot shots at the abandoned building, sending masonry flying around.

"No – just shocked and pissed off!" Matthews announced as he climbed out of the battered front truck. "Those rounds were borderline for our armour – we were lucky!"

..._...

Kick-Ass and Jackal returned minutes later.

"Fuck me – just what we need!" Matthews announced and other SWAT members agreed.

Kick-Ass was sporting his Heckler & Koch 121 machine gun and Jackal was lugging spare two-hundred-round packs of belted ammunition. He took up position with the 121 mounted on its bipod, on the bonnet of the second SWAT truck. The bulk of the truck would protect Kick-Ass. Mist and Shadow maintained short bursts of fire. Jackal vanished back to Beast to bring up more ammunition for the P90s and two SWAT team members set to reloading P90 magazines. Other members provided direct cover with AR-12s.

With a roar, Kick-Ass engaged the cunts, with a SWAT member acting as spotter with night glasses. It was critical that we silence the M60 machine guns. We had the advantage of a higher rate of fire and most probably better accuracy from a newer weapon with a less worn barrel.

The cunts were not amused! I saw the men, who seemed to be in command yelling into their radios.

"Shadow, take out the bastards in charge!" I commanded.

I watched as Shadow moved her weapon onto the men with binoculars. She pressed the button for her laser and squinted through the telescopic sight. I saw her control her breathing, before squeezing the trigger once, then moving the weapon slightly to the left and dropping the second man. Both targets eliminated – two rounds expended!

"On target, girl!" I praised.

"Always the tone of surprise!" Shadow chuckled in reply.

..._...

On losing their commanders, there seemed to be trouble within the remaining cunts. Kick-Ass had knocked out one of the M60s and was working on the other one. Many of them were dead – they should be getting the hint my now!

I could see arguing between some of the masked cunts, but then they seemed to sort themselves out and as Kick-Ass silenced the second M60 and ran out of ammunition himself, the masked cunts started to fan towards us, firing their weapons on automatic. We had between twenty and thirty attackers bearing down on us. As they emptied their magazines, they dropped their weapons, but came on with baseball bats and melee weapons.

I fired repeated shots from my G36C and saw my bullets hit home. Two men fell backwards, dead, and then the attackers came close enough for hand-to-hand fighting, which I excelled at, of course! I lost track of Mist and Shadow in the maelstrom of fighting.

SWAT, Mafia and vigilante were now fighting for their lives. Kick-Ass was laying into anybody within reach with his Ko-Wakizashi. SWAT were relying on riot batons and pistols. It was chaos. I saw a SWAT member attacked with a baseball bat, his left arm was smashed before I was able to blow apart the man's head.

We had been fighting for forty minutes, it was now quarter past eight in the evening and the fighting was still going on. Some of the masked attackers had hung back and some of the Kryshas were attacking these. Other Krysha were lending their literal weight to the fight, knocking down masked cunts with their fists and clubs.

I heard a scream in my headset, which I recognised as Shadow. I could not see her in the crowd of fighting bodies.

"Shadow, Hit Girl – status check!" I called. There was no response. "Anybody have a location on Shadow?"

"Negative!" Kick-Ass responded.

"Negative!" Medic responded.

"Negative!" Mist responded.

"Negative!" Jackal responded.

Fuck! Where was she?

I was in pain.

A lot of pain.

My mind was drifting in and out of consciousness as I lay on the grass. The fighting was just a distant sound around me. I felt myself being kicked and trodden on.

My mind started to drift and it drifted back to the previous weekend at Safehouse F.

..._...

Three days previously
Saturday

Safehouse F

"Hey, Sophia!"

The big dog came pounding along to the Briefing Room and stopped in front of Dave and Mindy. I was with Josh and we were sitting a few seats over and watching curiously.

"Sophia has been with us for a year now and she has had a very busy year, too!" Mindy commented.

"You're celebrating Sophia being here a year?" I demanded.

"Yes, why?" Dave answered.

"You never celebrated, or even remembered, me being with you guys for a year!" I felt slightly miffed.

Dave laughed before he replied.

"We only try to remember happy moments!"

"That hurts!" I growled.

"I didn't mean it like that – I just didn't want to remember the first meeting of a hormonal, foul mouthed young girl, who thought that she was a vigilante! Brought back way too many bad memories!"

"Hey, cunt! You mean that I'm a bad memory!" Mindy demanded, catching on.

"I still get nightmares about the younger Mindy!" Dave said with a grimace.

"That didn't stop you a few weeks back!" Mindy said seductively. "When we celebrated meeting at Rasul's!"

"I heard about that one – Josh still gets nightmares about the screaming!" I quipped with a laugh.

My mind drifted back to the present and the fighting.

..._...

Tuesday evening
South Lawndale Avenue

I could hear voices in my ear and Hit Girl calling out for me.

The grass felt comfortable beneath me, I was feeling tired. Something warm was trickling down my body, inside my combat suit.

I felt something hit my cheek and then everything went quiet and very black.

Chapter 146*: Another Death

The following morning Wednesday

I awoke.

I had no idea where I was.

I looked around me and was shocked to see a face that I recognised.

"Hi, Chloe!" Kyle said with a smile.

"What are you doing here – by the way, where is here?"

"You are in Josh's bed at Mindy's house."

"Oh yeah," I replied, looking around properly.

"You took quite a knock, last night, Shadow. I hate to say it but you don't look all that hot, right now!"

"Thanks!" I replied. "Back to my first question; why are you here?"

"Dave called me and asked if I could help while they are fighting D'Amico," Kyle replied.

I ran my hands over my body, feeling for wounds. I suddenly froze.

"I'm naked!"

"Yes, I know," Kyle, replied, blushing slightly.

"You peeked?" I accused.

"No, I didn't!"

"Sorry, Kyle. I trust you. What are my wounds?" I asked.

"You, young lady, have a bruised cheek; a large calibre gunshot wound to your left side and significant bruising to your stomach and left thigh – so no sex for a while!" Mom reeled off, with an evil smirk as she came into the room.

I felt myself blushing and saw Kyle smirking, too! It was no secret that Josh and I were having sex. Several people at school knew about it – including Kyle.

"So I'll survive, then?" I asked.

"Of course! Now, I need to get to work – do not annoy Kyle and stay in bed. Mindy said that she would visit this afternoon."

With that, Mom vanished out the door.

"Just you and me, Kyle!" I said with a smile.

"It was worth a day off school, just to look after my favourite girl!" Kyle quipped making me blush again.

Safehouse F

Chloe getting hurt had me moping about the Safehouse that morning.

I knew that she was okay and that she was at home being watched over by Kyle. Good kid, Kyle – he had jumped at the chance to help. Josh had volunteered but he was far too tired and was currently asleep upstairs.

Finding Shadow, prone and with blood spilling from her armour had really scared me. She had been hit by what looked like a bullet from an AKS-74U. I had seen a masked cunt seize one from a fallen Krysha. Shadow's armour stood no chance at that range, from such a large round. She had also been trampled. Somebody had kicked her in the face and had left a large footprint on her cheek.

Dave had picked her up and rushed her to her mother. The fight was over, so we had all driven back to Safehouse F. Cathy and Erika had seen to Chloe and been able to get her cleaned up. They then took her to West Ridge.

Cathy had just called to let me know that Chloe was awake and in Kyle's gentle hands! Dave was with Tony, checking out the damage to Beast. The windshield was a mess and there were also holes in the bodywork, but the armour had done its job, which was all, that mattered. Iron Hide was currently here too and had four holes in the bodywork, which annoyed me somewhat!

Erika had gone to see Marty and Kim. Marty wanted to know what had happened; he had heard the gunfire and other noises from the mini battle of the previous evening not too far away. Kim had commented that she thought the noise was actually Marty's ministrations!

That afternoon
West Ridge

"Oh crap!"

"What's wrong?" Kyle asked.

"I need to use the damn bathroom," I replied.

"I won't look!" Kyle quipped with a hopeful grin.

"Nothing doing, asshole!" I replied. "Bottom drawer, over there. You'll find a mega size t-shirt."

..._...

Once I had struggled, rather painfully, into the large t-shirt, Kyle had helped me out of the bed. That was another struggle in its self; both moving and maintaining what dignity that I had left. My legs were weak and the bruise on my thigh made walking painful and difficult. However, this was not the first time that Kyle had had his hands on my body, which was something, so I didn't mind his hands on me. Nevertheless, if he touched anything he should not, then he knew full well, that I would slap him – and so would Josh, if he found out.

..._...

When I returned from the bathroom, I heard laughter coming from Josh's room. I recognised Mindy's laugh. I pushed open the door to find Kyle and Mindy sitting on the bed talking and laughing.

"If you two are laughing at me; I'll slap you both."

"Chloe, right now a caterpillar could put you down, and keep you down!" Mindy quipped and Kyle laughed.

"Such a funny bitch!" I growled as Mindy helped me into bed.

"Just rest your mouth for a few minutes, Shadow! You need time to heal. That was a hefty sized bullet that went through your side," Mindy said and could tell by her tone that she felt responsible.

"I'll heal – I have before."

"We'll get a move on, so we can get back to killing that fucker, D'Amico."

"I will!"

Two days later
Friday

There had been no sign of the masked cunts, since the other night. I assumed that they needed to build up their numbers again! Only a dozen seemed to have survived the fight and escaped.

While Beast was down for repairs, I was out with Mist in Iron Hide. This was the first time that it had just been the two of us out on patrol. I was very impressed with Mist – she was good, very good, with her weapons and had fought well that other night. She was also proving to be a crack shot with the P90, too – almost as good as Shadow.

We were driving to the south of Chicago and we were near the water when Mist suddenly called out.

"Over there – that guy, he's covered in blood!" Mist exclaimed.

I drove over to where Mist had indicated and stopped. Beneath a streetlight there was a guy, lying prone, he must have been about Dave and Marty's age. I jumped out of Iron Hide, ran over, and was shocked to see who it was under all the blood.

..._...

"Todd!" I exclaimed. "What the hell?"

Todd looked up at me in a dazed state. He had obvious bullet wounds, in his stomach. He must have been bleeding internally. He grasped my hand with an iron grip.

"Hit Girl, Mindy – D'Amico – boat. I found him for you – told him that I had fought alongside his nephew – Chris D'Amico – he let me join him. Shot trying to escape..."

The words spilled from Todd's mouth, disjointed and difficult to understand. I leant close to his lips where blood was bubbling up from his punctured lungs.

"You'll be fine, Todd – an ambulance is on the way!" I said.

Mist had called into the Command Centre and an ambulance was on its way, although I doubted that it would arrive in time. I felt completely helpless – the bleeding was internal. There was absolutely nothing, I could do to stop the bleeding.

"Tell Dave – I'm... I'm sorry about his Dad..."

"You can tell him yourself, Todd..." I felt tears stinging my eyes; this was heart breaking.

"Tell me his injuries!" Medic called over the comms and I welcomed the interruption as I described the location and type of wounds and Medic pause before replying.

"Keep him comfortable, Hit Girl. Give him morphine from your belt."

I did as instructed. At least I could ease Todd's pain, if nothing else. He was starting to fade from consciousness, but between Mist and I, we tried to keep him talking – to keep him fighting for life.

..._...

However, just as the ambulance could be heard screaming down the street towards us, I felt Todd's grip on my hand falter and I turned to see his eyes close for the very last time. I almost lost it at the moment. Not since I had watched Daddy die in that warehouse, all those years ago, had I had somebody die like this.

The paramedics did everything that they could, but it was all in vain. They were unable to restart Todd's heart and he was pronounced dead, at the scene – there had been far too much blood loss and internal trauma. Mist and I left as soon as we could, before we attracted too much attention.

Before he had died, Todd had passed me a bloodied piece of paper and a USB memory stick. I clutched these in my hand as I got back into Iron Hide. I pushed my emotions down deep inside me, but started planning a special, extra violent, death for Ralph D'Amico.

Todd would be avenged, I swore to that.

Safehouse F

I watched Hit Girl pull Iron Hide into the Safehouse.

What I had heard over the comms had hit me hard. Todd was dead. Todd who I had known for years. Todd was dead. It took time for me to grasp it. Marty and Kim had been at the Safehouse, too. He was shocked at what he had heard over the comms, too. It had all been recorded; all of Todd's dying words, every breath and every scream of pain.

I saw Mindy and Erika climb out of Iron Hide and they both looked dejected, as they pulled off their masks. I saw the blood on their hands. Todd's blood. Marty went to comfort Erika, without any complaint from Kim.

..._...

After a few minutes mourning, it was time to get back to work. We could mourn properly once D'Amico was dead and gone.

Dave, Marty, Kim, Abby, Erika, Josh and I, stood around the large table, with a touch screen interface, that sat in the middle of the Command Centre. I passed over the bloodied paper and USB memory key, without a word.

Marty connected the USB memory key and started examining its contents. The piece of paper was a portion of a map that looked to be a section of Chicago. The blood obscured too much of the detail to be more accurate, but Marty said he should be able to get through the blood.

Todd had hinted at a boat. Was D'Amico hiding on a boat on Lake Michigan? There had been no sign of him in Chicago, but he definitely had had a hand in those masked cunts.

The following afternoon Saturday

Megan flew across the room, landing hard.

She sat up and glared at me. The girl seemed both annoyed and surprised at the way she was being treated.

She could even be seen to mutter 'bitch', under her breath!

"Don't look at me like that, Megan! You want to be a vigilante – then you need to learn what you're gonna be up against," I said, without pity.

Megan got up and came over to stand ready for the next attack.

"Remember, Megan – you are only a ten year-old girl."

"So were you, once!" She retorted.

"Megan – I... Yes, I was your age once and I killed people. But when I was only a few months older than you are now, I had the shit literally kicked out of me."

Megan's faced showed a mixed expression of surprise and disbelief.

"Frank D'Amico threw me down onto his desk, so damn hard that I couldn't breathe or move for what felt like hours. He then proceeded to ram his fucking fist into my face, twice. My vision swam; I could not focus on anything. Then when I could finally focus, I saw the muzzle of a pistol inches from my face. I was fairly certain that my time on Earth was over – the end of Mindy Macready and the end of Hit Girl."

I looked around and saw that I now had a small crowd of eager listeners. Nobody, except of course Dave, knew about this event.

"Then my Knight in shining armour arrived, well actually a dick in a wetsuit with a conveniently available bazooka!" I grinned apologetically at Dave, who waved it off. "What I am getting at Megan, is that I was only eleven, but I had the body of an eleven year-old girl. Even now, I am seventeen, but I am still susceptible to being fucking snapped in half. Only, Dave, who is built like a fucking battle tank can take tons of abuse and I have to admit that sometimes I envy the asshole for his lack of nerve endings; especially when I am suffering from intense pain during a fight!"

"I'm sorry, Mindy – I didn't mean..." Megan started.

"I know you see me as invincible, Megan – but I am not. I have never told that story to anybody – it was a part of my early life, which I prefer to keep private. However, if it helps you become a better vigilante, then I'm happy to tell you my mistakes, so that you can avoid them – and that includes you too, dipshit!" I finished, looking at Curtis.

"Did you call moi a dipshit?" Curtis replied casually, with a smirk.

I rolled my eyes.

"Curtis, you are too young for that movie!" I commented.

"Oh yeah! How many R-rated movies had you seen by the time you were ten?" Curtis challenged.

I saw Dave smirking at me. I scowled back.

"Where were we?" I said, getting back to the mat and changing the subject.

Chapter 147*: Boarders Away

Two days later
Monday evening

We met up with Ralphs's cunts again.

We met up with somebody else, too!

The masked cunts were smaller in number, this time. However, Fusion was also. With Shadow laid up, we were shorthanded; so it was just Jackal and me this evening. I didn't mind; Jackal was good company and we enjoyed winding each other up!

We were both on our Multistrada motorcycles this evening. The idea for the evening, was to try to track down where the cunts were coming from. We needed to find their headquarters and until we did, they would keep appearing – D'Amico seemed to have a seemingly endless supply of them.

Marty and Abby were working on the data that Todd had recovered, but so far, nothing concerning the headquarters, nor the 'boat' that seemed to be involved somehow, had been identified.

..._...

We had come across the cunts, purely by accident. They had been busy attacking property and vehicles, on the west side of Chicago. There were innocent civilians running around in a panic, trying to avoid the attacks. Jackal and I had pulled up and parked our motorcycles, then headed towards the trouble.

There were cheers from the civilians as we moved towards the cunts. I drew my Katanas, while Jackal drew his Ninja-To and we prepared to fight. The cunts were armed with melee weapons that evening; there seemed to be no firearms in evidence. Obviously, they had not expected to meet up with Fusion, but we gave them no choice, but to fight.

..._...

Soon after the fight had begun and I was wading through the cunts, I heard the distinctive sound of a high-powered motorcycle arriving at speed. I turned for a moment, to see a graphite black, Honda CBR1000RR Fireblade pull up beside our own motorcycles. The motorcycle itself was cool, despite being a Honda, but what intrigued me more was what was riding the motorcycle. The rider dismounted and headed towards the fight without a moment's hesitation.

The new arrival wore a suit that was form fitting, with armour and padding in essential locations. Overall, the suit was a blue-grey colour with light steel-blue highlights. The boots were conformal to the feet and were black to the ankle. The calves were blue-grey to the knees, where the kneepads were light steel-blue. The thighs had contoured armour in blue-grey, which connected to a utility belt that was worn around the waist and was white in colour. Supporting the utility belt was conformal armour for the chest and back, which came together under the arms.

The suit went up the neck to the jaw line. The shoulders were protected with pads, in light steel-blue. The lower arms had additional armour that ran from the padded elbow, down to the wrist. Compact black gauntlets protected the wearer's hands. The head was covered in a combined mask that hid all facial features and rendered the wearer unrecognizable. The mask was blue grey on the face, while the rest was a light steel blue. The eyes were oval and had tinted lenses. On the utility belt were holsters for a pair of Beretta Px4 Storm Compact pistols. There were also various pouches for additional equipment, including magazines. Mounted on the back armour were attachments for a pair of Tactical Katana Swords.

As the new arrival came towards the fight, she smoothly drew the twin Katana swords and moved towards me. It was obviously a 'she', as the armoured combat suit accentuated the hips, breasts and other curves of her body, very well. As she approached, she started hacking her way through the cunts – so she was obviously not on the cunts' side! Once she was closer, she called out to me, in a strange electronically enhanced voice, similar to that which Jackal and Kick-Ass used.

"Relax; we're on the same team – I'm Petra!"

"Hit Girl!" I replied.

"And he's Jackal – I know!" Petra called back, over the noise – with a nod towards Jackal.

Questions would have to wait for now; we had work to do. I would tolerate the interloper for now. With three of us fighting, things moved quickly and cunts fell left and right.

"Fusion, be advised we have a new vigilante on the scene, by the name of Petra!" I called over the comms as I fought.

"She has some nice curves, too!" Jackal commented.

"Focus, Jackal!" I cautioned.

The blood flew as we fought through the cunts.

It was proving to be a good work out, too. I missed being out with Shadow, but she needed time to heal and that could not be rushed. I concentrated on swinging my Ninja-To through the air and driving the cunts back and away from the civilians and their property.

I kept glancing over at the new arrival. She was of a similar height to Hit Girl, but with a bigger chest! The armour looked to be as good as our own – so she was somebody with access to money. Due to the combat suit covering the girl completely, I had no way to judge her age. However, she moved lithely and knew how to use the Katana swords that she wielded in each hand. The girl, or rather Petra, had no concern about killing, either and fought with the same gusto as Hit Girl.

It was not long before the fight was over and we were applauded by the watching civilians and some CPD Officers who had arrived on the scene. I was annoyed to see one dead and several injured civilians, but it could have been much worse, if we had not arrived to help.

..._...

The three of us stowed our blades and walked back to the parked motorcycles. When we got there, Hit Girl turned to face Petra.

"Who are you?" Hit Girl demanded.

"I am Petra."

"Why are you here?"

"I am a vigilante – just like Fusion."

"You may wear body armour and you may fight as a vigilante, but you are not like us!" Hit Girl responded. "I would suggest that you stay out of our way."

I was a little surprised at Hit Girl's attitude. I knew that Petra was an unknown and I was also, very aware of what Hit Girl thought about unknown intruders. Petra seemed to be the real thing, a real vigilante out to fight crime in Chicago. We were the major force in Chicago, but we did not have the monopoly on fighting crime.

I watched as Petra shrugged her shoulders and she nodded at me as she climbed back onto her motorcycle and started the engine. I waved and she pulled away. I actually laughed when I saw the licence plate: 'BITE ME'. So, Petra had a sense of humour!

"Problem, Hit Girl?" I queried.

"Maybe," Hit Girl replied, cryptically.

Four days later Wednesday night

The 'Vigilante' skimmed across the waves at over twenty knots.

It was completely dark out and all that could be seen beyond the control station windows was the bright lights of the Chicago waterfront and skyscrapers; a beautiful sight it was, too. The 'Vigilante' had a large crew, on this trip. Besides myself, at the helm, I had Jackal seated to my left and behind his seat, stood Kick-Ass. Seated in the main salon were Mist, Trojan and Wildcat. Battle Guy and Hawk were watching over us from the Command Centre at Safehouse F.

Constant updates for weather were being sent by Battle Guy, direct to the large screens in front of me. We were travelling completely blacked out, in violation of international navigation rules. However, we were visible to radar, which should prevent a collision. We had left the Calumet River forty minutes previously and were heading on a course of zero-one-five degrees.

Fifteen minutes later, we slowed to five knots when we were eleven nautical miles, due east of Montrose Harbor. Just five nautical miles away, was the 'Nebuchadnezzar'. The one hundred-foot luxury yacht was moving at ten knots on a reciprocal course and would pass close aboard in approximately twenty minutes, if we both held our current courses. I hoped that we would look just like another innocent pleasure craft on their radar. As we closed I turned on our own navigation lights, so as not to look suspicious.

"Twenty minutes, people!" I called.

..._...

We had had a busy few days.

Marty and Abby had been able to identify the 'Nebuchadnezzar', as the boat where Ralph D'Amico had been hiding himself. They were also close to finding where, in Chicago, D'Amico had his headquarters. On top of the D'Amico problem, I also had to consider this new vigilante – Petra. We had not seen her since that other night. I had to admit she had helped us, but we had no idea how to contact her, so there was nothing I could do about it. I wanted to talk and find out more about her. I also had concerns about where she had got her armoured combat suit from – I would need to talk to The Armourer about who he sold combat suits to!

Eighteen minutes later

We could all easily see the approaching vessel.

She was lit up and we could see the green and red navigation lights, with a white light above. The 'Vigilante' and the 'Nebuchadnezzar' were now closing at a rate of fifteen knots. The International Rules of the Road dictated that both vessels turn to starboard (right) to avoid a collision. Except, a collision, well a minor tap, was just what I wanted!

Five rapid blasts from a horn were heard, from the 'Nebuchadnezzar' as her Captain indicated his displeasure at us passing so close. I sent back a single blast on the 'Vigilante's' horn, indicating that I would be turning to starboard – except I had absolutely no intention of altering course!

..._...

Suddenly the 'Nebuchadnezzar' turned sharply to starboard and continued her turn for a full one hundred degrees, before taking up a new course and increasing speed rapidly to thirty knots. I turned to port, in pursuit, and pushed both throttles forward and setup a pursuit course. Within minutes, we were zipping over the, thankfully smooth, waves at almost thirty-six knots.

"Jam their radios!"

"Consider them jammed!" Kick-Ass replied as he flipped a switch, connected to an illegal radio signal jammer, on a control panel. The 'Nebuchadnezzar' would now be unable to call for help by radio.

There was no way that the 'Nebuchadnezzar' could outrun us.

The pursuit was underway and we easily kept up with the 'Nebuchadnezzar'. Thirty minutes later, we had closed to eighty yards when somebody on the 'Nebuchadnezzar' opened fire on us. It was only sub-machine-gun fire and I decided that they were only trying to scare us away. We continued to close the yacht.

We also had our target confirmed!

I had seen him on the flying bridge of the yacht. The 'Vigilante' had a gyro-stabilised camera system that had allowed us to zoom in on the 'Nebuchadnezzar'. Ralph D'Amico himself, was confirmed as being aboard, so the attack was launched.

We came alongside the port quarter of the 'Nebuchadnezzar', matching her speed.

Kick-Ass was firing rounds from his Heckler & Koch 121 machine gun, at the armed men on the stern. Jackal was at the helm, holding us alongside the 'Nebuchadnezzar'. Mist and I jumped across once the stern was clear, landing on the boat platform and jumped up the port and starboard steps to the aft cockpit of the yacht. We ignored the dead bodies, as we made our entry into the main salon. We were rapidly joined by Wildcat and Trojan, each armed with a pistol in their hands.

With Kick-Ass, keeping watch, the four of us proceeded into the 'Nebuchadnezzar' through the curved glass doors. We came under fire almost immediately. Mist and I returned fire with our Heckler & Koch MP5KA4 sub-machine guns. Gunfire was coming from the forward end of the main salon. Wildcat kept watch on the curved stairs that led up to the flying bridge, while Trojan watched out over the aft deck.

The attack was coming from behind the bar. Our bullets destroyed a bulkhead-mounted television and sent it crashing down onto the shooters. Using the distraction, I ran forward and shot two men, who were behind the bar, dead. I then moved forward to the control station and pulled back on the throttles, stopping the 'Nebuchadnezzar' dead in the water. I turned and yelled out to Mist and Wildcat, as I saw feet appear on the curved stairs from the flying bridge.

..._...

Wildcat fired several rounds upwards and the feet vanished rapidly. Leaving Mist and Wildcat to guard the salon and after deck, Trojan and I went up towards the flying bridge.

"Kick-Ass! Clear the flying bridge!" I called.

"On the way!"

I heard a brief burst of gunfire from the 'Vigilante' and a scream from above.

"Hit Girl, you are clear!" Kick-Ass reported.

I crept up the steps slowly and peered over the top step onto the flying bridge. Apart from a dead body, spewing blood onto the teak decking a foot from me, all seemed clear. I stayed low and felt Trojan behind me, his left hand on my back. Apart from another two dead bodies, the flying bridge was clear.

"Trojan, stay here and watch the foredeck," I ordered.

Once Trojan had acknowledged, I headed back down below to the main salon. I then took Wildcat and we climbed over the dead men and went down the staircase to the lower deck, which was to starboard and beside the control station, forward of the bar. We had studied plans of the Italian built, yacht, so we knew our way around – kind of.

Aft of the lobby where we stood, was the main stateroom. To port, and to starboard were twin cabins and forward was the second stateroom. We searched the forward stateroom first; I went in while Wildcat kept watch in the lobby. The yacht seemed eerily quiet, now that the majority of the resistance had been eradicated and the engines had been set to idle. I found nothing and nobody, the port and starboard cabins were the same. That just left the main stateroom and I was certain that this would be where D'Amico would have slept. He was still aboard somewhere.

The stateroom door was shut, so while Wildcat covered me, I kicked the door in. I heard somebody moving and as I entered the stateroom, I was struck by the butt of an assault rifle. I fell to my left, onto the deck and tried to bring my MP5K around.

I saw Hit Girl fall to the side.

I raised my pistol and fired two rounds, before the slide locked back on the empty magazine.

Crap!

As I ejected the magazine and attempted to insert another, I felt myself kicked backwards. I dropped the pistol and the magazine. Rather than fumble for them, I seized my panther claws and within seconds had them ready for use and as I sensed somebody close to me, I swung my right hand out and heard a man yell out in pain.

I jumped to my feet and found myself face to face with Ralph D'Amico!

Chapter 148*: Abduction

Wednesday night
Lake Michigan

The 'Nebuchadnezzar'

My claw had ripped three, vertical, parallel grooves down his face, from his forehead and down his right cheek. Blood ran freely down his face. I lashed out with my other claw and ripped into his chest and I saw blood on the claw, when it came free. Then I heard two gunshots, from the main stateroom, behind D'Amico and I was momentarily distracted. D'Amico thrust me to the deck with his left hand and rushed up the stairs to the main salon above us.

"D'Amico is coming up!" I yelled into the comms as Hit Girl came out of the stateroom, a pistol in her hand.

"You okay, Wildcat?" Hit Girl demanded, her voice full of concern.

"I'm fucking fine!" I growled back and instantly regretted my tone of voice, as Hit Girl did not look happy.

I grabbed up my pistol, rammed the magazine in and holstered the weapon. I followed Hit Girl up the stairs; I could hear shooting from above and then the 'Nebuchadnezzar' was rocked by an explosion from aft.

As I got to the top of the steps, I saw black and white smoke billowing from the stern of the 'Nebuchadnezzar' and I could see that the 'Vigilante' was more than a dozen yards away, to port. I was feeling scared now – my meeting D'Amico had almost made me shit myself, but now my fear was of drowning, if the 'Nebuchadnezzar' sank with me inside.

I was slightly annoyed with Wildcat, but it could wait till later.

Once back in the main salon, I looked around for that bastard. Looking aft, I could see that the stern boat garage was open. I had a distinct feeling that the bastard had managed to get away again.

"He came up the stairs, dived past the bar and down the stairs to the galley and crew quarters," Mist said and she sounded dismayed with her actions. "I shot at him and I think I got him..."

"It's okay, Mist – we'll get him!" I replied. "Kick-Ass, D'Amico is making a run for it!"

"We saw him! He's in the tender and racing for shore. We've lost sight of him – he has no lights and is not visible on radar," Kick-Ass advised. "He used a smoke grenade to cover his escape, plus an HE grenade after he left. The 'Nebuchadnezzar' looks to be taking on water and sinking by the stern."

I took a moment to examine the warning lights on the control station. It did not look good for the 'Nebuchadnezzar'!

"Let's move – she's going down!" I ordered.

..._...

Jackal brought the 'Vigilante' back alongside and I watched as Mist, Trojan and Wildcat jumped aboard. I took a moment to dive back down to D'Amico's stateroom, looking for information. I saw two laptops, so I seized them and then just as I was leaving, I caught sight of something reflecting in a mirror. I looked under his bed and saw an LED display.

01:42... 01:41... 01:40...

I ran out of the stateroom, still clutching the laptops. I could still see the timer counting down in my head.

01:33... 01:32... 01:31...

I scrambled up the stairs and into the main salon.

01:24... 01:23... 01:22...

I ran aft and then threw myself over the gunwale towards the 'Vigilante' and into the waiting arms of Kick-Ass.

01:08... 01:07... 01:06...

"Fucking move – bomb – less than a minute – GO!" I yelled as Kick-Ass lowered me to my feet and I lost my footing as Jackal pushed both throttles to their stops and the 'Vigilante' surged forwards and away from the 'Nebuchadnezzar'.

Everything was quiet, except for the ear-shattering roar of the twin diesels at flank speed, as Jackal put as much distance between the two boats as possible, before...

The sky lit up for miles around, as the 'Nebuchadnezzar' came apart. The fireball was enormous; then the sound hit us, followed by the shockwave. Thankfully we were far enough away for little damage to be caused. It was still an awesome light show, though.

Jackal made a large sweeping turn, well away from the burning wreck and set a course, due south for the Calumet River.

Three hours later
Thursday

Safehouse F

2 A.M.

It had been very late when we had finally moored the 'Vigilante' in Safehouse W.

The trip back had been rough, plus we had had to avoid the US Coastguard who seemed to be zipping about like angry bees! I was pissed that we had lost D'Amico again, but pleased that we had fucked up his plans yet again! We had driven back to Safehouse F; Mist and myself on motorcycles and the rest in Iron Hide.

..._...

"Welcome back, team!" Marty announced, as we pulled off our masks on the way to the armoury.

"Hi, Marty! Hi, Kim! You guys okay?" I asked.

"Oh yeah! The video from the 'Vigilante' was fucking awesome!" Marty exclaimed excitedly. "When the 'Nebuchadnezzar' blew – fucking wow – HD and all!"

I laughed.

"It was cool! Here – take these – they were D'Amico's," I said, handing over the two laptops.

The laptops were housed in a special box that would block all electronic signals. Marty would examine them in a special room on Level Zero.

"Cool, thanks!" Marty said and seized the box.

I left him to it – I knew that he would enjoy himself! Kim came with me to help us all get out of our suits.

3 A.M.

"I'm not fucking tired!"

"Oh yes you fucking are!" I replied. "Get to bed."

Megan looked like she wanted to fight; but right now, she was more of a danger to herself than she was to anybody else!

I sighed and rolled my eyes.

"Megan, come with me," I said and led her upstairs to my bedroom. I pointed to my bed. "Sit!"

Megan looked a little confused, and possibly apprehensive, too. Dave appeared at the door with a quizzical expression.

"Give us a few minutes, Dave," I said, looking meaningfully at Megan, and Dave closed the door. I then looked at Megan. "Spit it out!"

"You're mad at me – I fucked up!"

"Yes, you did! However, I'm not going to hold that against you, Megan."

Megan looked up at me, in surprise.

"You fired off five rounds, at the man coming down from the flying bridge – then what should you have done?" I asked.

"I should have changed out my magazine, as I only had two rounds left," Megan said, looking sad.

"You should always keep track of how many rounds you have fired. Always keep a full magazine in the pistol, whenever possible. It is a lot easier to change out a magazine when you are not under pressure," I said and saw Megan flinch back, away from me. "That leads us to the next issue."

Megan looked at the floor.

"I fumbled my pistol and dropped it, along with the magazine," Megan almost whispered and I saw tears start to fall. That was rare – Megan almost never cried and never in front of anybody, either. "I let you down – big time!"

"No you didn't – that was your first time, in that kind of situation, Megan – shit happens!" I explained. "However, you made a snap decision; the right one, by the way and made use of your other weapons. You also came face to face with that bastard, D'Amico and you hurt him. That was very brave, Megan and I'm damn proud of you."

Megan looked up at me and smiled weakly and I smiled back.

"You made mistakes, but you're new to this shit, Megan. You also called in D'Amico's escape, which was a very wise move. You are exactly the type of person we want as a vigilante, in Fusion!"

Megan had stopped crying and she smiled with pride.

"Remember; you don't need to be a bad-ass to be a super hero, you just have to be brave!" I said with a smile. "I once said that to somebody very dear to me..."

"Dave," Megan stated.

I nodded. And remembered the kiss.

"Can I stay with you for a few minutes?" Megan asked.

"No problem."

I went back up to the bedroom and pushed open the door.

Both girls were fast asleep on the bed. I scooped up Megan and carried her through to her own bed, in the bunk above Erika, who smiled when I came in and she pulled the duvet down so that I could slide Megan in.

"Night Dave," Erika said.

"Night Erika, and thanks for your work tonight."

..._...

When I returned to the bedroom, Mindy was awake.

"Sorry, I fell asleep!"

"No problem, gorgeous – you were both very tired," I said, waving it off.

Mindy had that look on her face – the one that she used when she felt ashamed about something. I lay down on the bed, beside my fiancée and faced Mindy.

"Spit it out!"

Mindy bit her lip, before speaking.

"I almost fucked up in D'Amico's stateroom. As I went in, a man swung the butt of an assault rifle at me. He must have been out of ammunition, as there was no magazine in the weapon. He caught me on my shoulder and I fell down. I saw D'Amico rush out of the stateroom and towards Wildcat; I drew my pistol and fired two shots, killing the man that attacked me."

"So – what's wrong with that?"

"I should have been ready for an attack; I could have then killed D'Amico and Wildcat would not have been put at risk!"

Dave just stared at me.

Then he looked at me like he would a cute little puppy!

"What?"

"My dear Mindy, if you didn't want to put the girl at risk, then you would never have damn well taken her!" Dave said in a patronising manner.

I glared at him, but softened my expression as I realised that he was bang on, as fucking usual! I had been horrified at the thought of what could have happened to little Megan.

"You trained her well, Mindy; she used her training and acted without hesitation – I listened at the door!" Dave admitted with a grin. "Plus, I spoke with Erika, earlier."

"I thought you might and I'm glad you did," I replied. I had no secrets from Dave – I needed him to know what I knew.

Dave was my sanity check.

Later that morning Thursday

It was early afternoon by the time all of us, had woken up.

We were all tired and we met up in the galley for brunch. I smiled at the girls, as Megan and Mindy came in, followed by Erika and Josh. Curtis and I had been up for an hour, talking with Marty. Megan looked a little embarrassed – she knew that she had fallen asleep in our room, but had woken up in her own bed!

After some food and some time to debrief, we all went home to rest. We could do nothing more until Marty and Abby had found us the headquarters for D'Amico.

That was most probably, where he was at that moment – we were closing in on him.

Two days later Saturday

Safehouse F

There was trouble brewing!

"You are not coming, Chloe!" I said forcefully.

"You gonna stop me? Eh, Hit Bitch?" Chloe retorted getting angry.

"I'll stop you!" Josh tried.

"You'll do what exactly, wanker?" Chloe demanded with a murderous look.

"I could tie you up!" Josh replied, without really thinking.

Chloe opened her mouth, closed it and then blushed. I looked at Dave and grinned.

"Joshua – I never knew! Chloe – is this the 'next level'?" I asked innocently.

"We have never done anything like that!" Chloe insisted, glaring at Josh.

"Yeah, right – I've heard you two 'at it'!" Dave commented, laughing.

Chloe looked very annoyed and glared dangerously at us all.

Marty and Abby had come up trumps!

We had the location of what we hoped was D'Amico's headquarters. No matter, headquarters or not, it was going to be destroyed. Mindy had finally given in to Chloe. It had been two weeks, after all, since she had been shot. Nevertheless, Mindy had left it up to Cathy to make the final go, no go, decision. Cathy had ultimately given her daughter a full physical and declared her ready for combat.

Naturally, Shadow was very pleased!

That evening

Southwest Chicago

I looked over at Hit Girl, Shadow, Mist and Jackal. They all had their bows raised with explosive arrows fitted.

"Okay, girls – ready to fire?" I asked.

"Hey, green arsehole – I am not a girl!" Jackal complained.

"Could have fooled me!" Hit Girl laughed.

"He is most definitely not a girl; his equipment is perfect in every way – I can vouch for that!" Shadow announced with a grin.

"Jeez, can we not get through one damn day without you two talking about each other's, whatever's?" Hit Girl moaned. "Ever since they discovered sex, it's been non fucking stop!"

Kick-Ass coughed pointedly.

"What!" Hit Girl demanded.

"How is their behaviour, any different to the way that you behave, eh Hit Girl?" Kick-Ass asked with a chuckle.

"Fuck!"

"Let's shoot, people!" Kick-Ass suggested and four arrows were released into the air.

All four arrows fell true and on target.

As the arrows landed, they exploded and destroyed not just the wooden doorway, but the explosion also flattened the two, armed guards who never knew what had hit them.

The five of us ran forwards, heading for the doorway. We were engaged almost immediately by several guards armed with sub-machine guns. We took cover, on each side of the destroyed doorway and returned fire. The lights were out, due to the explosion and the emergency lighting must have been damaged as well. We were wearing our NVGs, to assist our targeting in the darkness. The guards had no such advantage; so we were able to cut them down without any risk to ourselves.

We proceed further into the facility and came across small groups of guards, whom we attacked, before we moved on. The groups only exchanged fire for a few minutes before melting away into the darkness of the facility.

After the fourth such 'hit and run' strike, we paused in a large open room.

"Something is not right here!" Kick-Ass said, cautiously.

"I'm inclined to agree with you," I replied.

Something did not feel right. Indeed, this felt like a trap!

I looked around, carefully checking every inch of wall, floor and ceiling for trouble. That was when I saw something move and it was not a man with a gun! The wall bulged outwards and then exploded, throwing us all across the warehouse.

"Fusion, this is Battle Guy, report!"

"Fusion, this is Battle Guy, report!"

We must have all been knocked out for a few seconds, but as the dust settled, I was able to focus and I heard the radio call.

"Fusion, this is Battle Guy, report!"

"Battle Guy, Hit Girl – there was an explosion – we... Hold one!"

I looked around, checking the team. I saw Kick-Ass and Jackal pulling themselves out of the rubble. I also saw Mist, coughing a few yards away as she shook off the dust. There was no sign of anybody else.

"Shadow!"

I feverishly started to dig through the rubble, followed by the others. Kick-Ass found Shadow's P90 and Mist, her NVGs, but nothing else.

Shadow had vanished.

The warehouse

When I came to, I found that I had been seized by a very large man.

His enormous hand was over my mouth and preventing me from calling out. I had to admit that I felt a little shocked at waking up like that. Nevertheless, I sorted myself out fast and I shoved my head back hard, and heard an exclamation, as I broke the nose of the man holding me. His grip loosened for only a moment; but I was ready and I broke out of the man's grip. I followed through and rammed an elbow into the man's stomach followed by a reinforced heel into his groin.

The man doubled over and I kned him in the face, flipping him over backwards. I then drove my heel into the man's throat, crushing his windpipe and he was left gagging for breath, his face turning purple – Mindy would have liked that, I thought for a second!

..._...

I looked around me. I was in a long corridor and, it seemed, on the wrong side of a locked, heavy steel door – I could only move forwards. I pulled out my pistol; I was low on ammunition, but would have to make do – I had also managed to lose my P90; Hit Girl was gonna kill me for that!

I wandered down around for a while, constantly calling on my comms for help. I was getting no response – just static, but I was sure there was some snatches of voice getting through. Marty said that our comms were un-jammable – he used the phrase: 'frequency hopping spread spectrum'. Something though was blocking the signal – I would need to talk to Marty about that when I got back!

..._...

Finally, I found windows, but they were mounted high up. Then I turned a corner and I saw men running towards me – two men, both of whom were very large – just like the last one. I started shooting at them, but after only a few rounds, the slide locked back on an empty magazine. As I had done many times before, I ejected the empty magazine and inserted a new one. I pushed the magazine home and released the slide, which sprang forward under the pressure of the spring. The men were getting closer and a third man had joined them – it was Ralph D'Amico, himself!

I had my chance; I raised my pistol, sighted on D'Amico and squeezed the trigger.

Chapter 149*: Finding Shadow

Author's Note: This chapter breaks through the three-hundred thousand, word mark, for Forsaken. Thank you to everybody who has stayed the course and read each, and every word!

Nothing happened – just a click.

I pulled back and released the slide, but a round was not being pulled from the magazine into the chamber. I ejected and reinserted the magazine. I racked back the slide several times, but to no avail. The two larger men were almost on me. I holstered the pistol and pulled my bō-staff from my back. I attacked, but I could not fight both men together – I had fucked up again; I was alone.

"Hit Girl – I need help..." I called over the comms – still no response.

The two men had large machetes, which they were using to deflect my blades and they worked as a team to beat me down. I could hear snatches of Hit Girl in my headset, trying to find me; she sounded beside herself with worry. I was forced down to one knee trying to fend off the attacks, and finally I lost hold of the bō-staff, fell backwards and froze as a sharp machete rested on my chest.

"Don't move – bitch!" One man snarled.

"Fuck you, bastard!" I retorted.

"Fire – now that is good – we're gonna have fun with you, little girl!" The other man grinned, almost drooling. "I like my girls to be feisty and that mask is a fucking turn on!"

I felt horrified at the thought of what might be about to happen to me – I had seen enough of Mindy's warped DVD collection, to know what he was talking about. I started to struggle in vain, as the men seized my arms. I started to kick out, but Ralph D'Amico himself slapped me hard enough to make me lose consciousness.

Two hours later

The warehouse

Shadow was gone.

We had been able to search the entire facility. We had seized all of D'Amico's men that were still alive. They were currently lined up, in front of us. Kick-Ass stood in front of the first man.

"Where is Shadow?" Kick-Ass growled in his electronically enhanced voice, staring through sightless eyes at the man.

The man glared back and said nothing. Despite the fact that I could not see the faces of Kick-Ass and Jackal, I knew enough about them that I could read their body language to gauge their moods. As they could with me! Kick-Ass was pissed, majorly pissed and very concerned for Shadow's welfare. Jackal? He was beside himself with worry and pissed off as hell! I had seen Jackal vanish back to Iron Hide and return with something hidden behind his back.

"Nothing to say?" Kick-Ass roared. "Bad fucking choice!"

Jackal came from behind Kick-Ass and lowered the weapon that he had been hiding and the man's left knee vaporised, as the AA-12 barked once. The man collapsed, and then started to scream. Blood ran across the floor from the wound, as the man rolled around the floor in agony. Kick-Ass stepped forward with a Glock 17 in his hand. He fired a single shot into the man's head, ending his pain. He then turned to the other men, who were still lined up and who looked horrified.

"Now, Jackal is very keen on knowing where Shadow is – anybody?" Kick-Ass demanded.

After a two minute wait, the AA-12 barked twice more and the head of a man, further down the line exploded, showering the other men with blood and brains.

"Time is not on your side, bastards!" Kick-Ass continued.

The remaining four men all started shouting at once!

Early the following morning Sunday

It was a little after one in the morning.

We had our location and we sincerely hoped that we would find Shadow there. We also hoped that she was still alive...

Titan thundered through the dark streets of Chicago. SWAT was mobilising and we had got word out to Vladimir, and his Bratva. Kick-Ass was at the wheel. I was in the passenger seat and behind me, on the benches were most of Fusion. Jackal, Battle Guy, Trojan, Wildcat and Eisenhower. Mist, Medic and Lynx were following us, in Iron Hide. Hal and Hawk were in the Command Centre.

It had been very hard telling Cathy that I had lost her daughter. I had almost broken down into tears, but Cathy had told me that recriminations could wait. Cathy went on to say that we all had work to do, before the night was out.

The warehouse

I felt really groggy as I regained consciousness.

My head hurt. I tried to focus my eyes, but could only see shadows. Then I felt agony shoot through my body. Somebody had punched me in my left side, just below the level of my breast. I screamed with the pain. The man had hit my wound and although it was healing well, the pain was excruciating.

"Just wanted to get your attention!"

I braced up – I recognised that sneering tone of voice.

"Fuck you Ralph!"

"Still full of fire, I see – good, good!"

Outside the warehouse

We had arrived at the same time as SWAT and between Titan and the single SWAT truck; we smashed down the perimeter fence.

Iron Hide stayed outside the perimeter, with Lynx and Medic. Mist had transferred to Titan. We would have to fight our way to the warehouse. This was definitely somewhere important; there were two sited machine guns – M60s as before. We were pinned down and taking cover behind Titan, whose armour was greater than the SWAT truck's armour. We managed to put one M60 out of action using explosive arrows, but they were the last we had with us, but the Bratva came to the rescue!

There was a bright flash, a bang, then something streaked towards the remaining M60 machine gun, and there was a large explosion, which included the M60 flying into the air, surrounded by various body parts. I span around to see a Krysha throwing down the fibreglass casing of a used RPG-22 rocket launcher.

"здравствуйте!" I called and received several nods in return. [Hello!]

"Sorry, we are late – Hit Girl!" A Krysha said.

"Better late than never!" I replied.

I spent a couple of minutes talking with the Russians and SWAT – D'Amico's men had moved back, towards the building – but they were still ready and in large, heavily armed, numbers. I felt uneasy, about what we might find, once we gained entry to the building. Anything that involved D'Amico – always went to shit!

I could hear the explosions from outside the building.

At least I was no longer alone. Hit Girl would come for me. I knew she would.

"Have no fear, Shadow – one of two things is going to happen. Either your pals will be outgunned and killed, or they will get here, just in time to see my finale!" D'Amico laughed.

"Keep dreaming, asshole – you will not survive this night!" I prophesised.

"We will see!" D'Amico replied, pragmatically.

I revved up Titan's engine and accelerated for the main vehicular access door on one side of the building.

The reinforced front bumper, followed by eight tonnes of armoured truck, struck the steel roller-shutter at speed. The door bent and screeched loudly, as it gave way. Then it was physically ripped from its track. Titan burst through into the warehouse, riding over two guards and skidding to a halt. We all poured from the vehicle and I smirked at the blood-streaked tyres.

D'Amico's goons were being rapidly reorganised, which was a bit of a surprise. I had expected them to be disorganised, so we could mow through them and put an end to this fighting. However, the men had radio communications and I could see plenty of CCTV cameras. Somebody was controlling the gunmen and very efficiently, too!

We came to an office that extended down one side of the building, before coming to a staircase up to the floor above.

Hit Girl ran forward, a pistol in each hand. As she leapt and flipped from chair to desk, to windowsill, she sent a bullet into every gunman within sight. She neatly dodged almost every bullet that was fired towards her. Any bullet that did catch her failed to penetrate the armoured combat suit and accomplished nothing more than temporarily pushing her off her next leap. However, Hit Girl was lithe and nimble; she was able to react like a cat and adjust her movements to take account of any change. Such as a bullet hitting her armour.

Trojan and Wildcat were working together as a team. Trojan would flip Wildcat into the air, past flying bullets and over the heads of the gunmen. As she flew past the men, she would drive a panther claw into their neck before nimbly landing on the nearest item of furniture or a part of the building that was suitable.

Trojan in turn would shoot at anybody that dared come close to Wildcat. He covered her back so that she could concentrate on what was going on in front of her. Indeed, one gunman was stabbed in the throat as he himself tried to stab Wildcat. Without hesitation, Trojan retrieved his fighting knife and cleaned it off before stowing it and moving on to the next fight.

I followed Hit Girl through the office, covering her back and shooting anybody that dared to put her at risk. I also kept an eye open for the younger members of Fusion as they fought. Anybody that missed a bullet from my pistols, met Mist and the vicious point of her chain whip, which flew towards their neck.

Eisenhower meanwhile was literally ripping into the gunmen. She had received a number of strikes on her armour from bullets and knives; none of which had penetrated, allowing the animal to continue to strike fear into the gunmen as she lunged, growling and snarling, at anybody that moved. One man lost his manhood in an epic struggle that lasted mere minutes. It did not take long for the gunmen to avoid Eisenhower, altogether, and concentrate on the human vigilantes! The sight of the large dog with blood dripping from her fangs was more than the seasoned gunmen could handle!

I could see no sign of Jackal or Battle Guy, which was weird.

We had made it to the stairs and were now on the second floor.

We could see that the Russians had fought their way up another staircase and were visible over the other side of the building. The Krysha, were proving very accurate with their shooting and were dropping D'Amico's armed guards, but there seemed to be an almost constant stream of the gunmen to replace the dead and wounded. D'Amico had done well recruiting ex-Army and ex-Special Forces types for his personal guard.

SWAT were covering the exterior of the facility to ensure that nobody escaped and were still exchanging sporadic fire with gunmen in the upper windows of the building. Wounded, were brought out for Medic and Lynx – irrelevant of whether they were friend or foe.

I got a shock while I was fighting with a man, who seemed to be ex-Special Forces, possibly Delta. The man was highly skilled, and he knew to use his weight and strength against me. Suddenly he stopped and fell backwards as a large hole appeared in his forehead. I span around to see a man, wearing body armour standing with his .45-calibre Glock 21 pistol aimed at the falling man.

"Thank you, Marcus!" I called and sent him a warm smile.

What, the hell Marcus was doing here, I had absolutely no idea! I could ask that question later, but he had helped save my life. However, I could have won that fight! I watched as Marcus vanished down a corridor, with Fellowes and another cop that I did not recognise. All around the building, I could hear gunfire, shouts and screams.

..._...

I passed through to another room and saw different fights underway. Immediately in front of me, was Mist and she was facing off with three men, all armed with knives. They were attempting to dodge past Mist's chain whip. I could see another man, on the floor behind Mist, with a Sai embedded in his chest - he was very dead!

Across the room, I could see the large form of Kick-Ass as he threw a gunman, bodily against the wall. The man hit the wall hard and left a red smear as he slid to the floor. I grinned - Kick-Ass did like to use his strength, whenever possible! Another man was trying in vain to stab Kick-Ass, but his protective armour ensured that Kick-Ass remained uninjured. Kick-Ass instead, swung around and drove his fist into the man's face, breaking his nose and sending a spray of blood across the room.

Further over to the right, was one hell of a sight. That fight seemed to involve five people - two of whom were quite a bit shorter than those they were fighting! The two kids were brandishing their bō-staffs and the much larger men, armed with what seemed to be older model M16 assault rifles were dodging the razor sharp blades. The men tried to bring the rifles to bear, but had to use them to deflect the bō-staff strikes.

As I watched, the first man fell as Trojan severed his left hand. The man dropped the rifle and screamed in agony, before rolling around the floor. Then as Trojan moved to attack the next man, he was struck on the back of the head by a rifle butt that sent the boy flying. Wildcat took the opportunity to drive her bō-staff into that man's chest, then reversed the blade, and plunged the opposite blade into the back of the third man as he went to shoot the fallen Trojan. I was impressed by what I had seen, as I ran over to check on Trojan.

"I'm fine – I think!" Trojan confirmed. "I'll be fine!"

"Well done, you two – but it is not over!" I said and led my junior operatives towards Kick-Ass.

"You guys okay?" Kick-Ass asked Hit Girl, Trojan and me.

"Awesome, Kick-Ass!" I answered for them, almost skipping with excitement.

The adrenalin was surging through me and I felt so alive – this was awesome. I had killed six men in the past hour, all personally by claw or by blade. However, I felt nothing for those men – I had a job to do and I intended to do it and make Hit Girl proud. Trojan and I made one hell of a team and I was grateful to have him as my partner.

My head hurt from being struck by that rifle butt.

I would survive though – I would not let down Kick-Ass and Hit Girl. I enjoyed fighting alongside that wild child, Wildcat. She was awesome and we worked well together as a team.

The experience of fighting alongside the real vigilantes was fucking awesome!

A door suddenly exploded outwards and a man fell through, followed by a blue clad Battle Guy. His shield covered in splattered blood and his Gladius embedded in the man's stomach.

"Hey, Jackal – I've found them!" Battle Guy yelled through the doorway.

"Thank fuck for that!" Jackal announced as he appeared. His Ninja-To, was dripping blood.

"Where have you two been?" Hit Girl demanded.

"Long story – took a wrong turn. We did find their control room, though! They're going to need a few new flat screens, too!" Jackal explained.

"Good – that means they've lost their guidance; good, well done, ass!" Hit Girl said.

We continued down a corridor that led towards the far end of the building.

Suddenly I felt a chill up my backbone. I could hear D'Amico's voice. I reached the end of the corridor and found a door. The door led to a walkway. Beside the door was a window and I watched in horror, at what was going on beyond.

"I have plans for you, young lady. Have no fear; your identity will remain secret. Your mask will not be removed, but something else will. You took my arm, so I think it only fair for me to take yours – don't you think so, Shadow?" D'Amico asked, his face a picture of joy and happiness.

"You fucking bastard – I die, then so will you. Your fucking life is over, no matter what!" Shadow yelled back.

"Oh – you are not going to die – I am going to make you suffer; just like you did for me. An arm for an arm!" D'Amico responded, his smile getting bigger as he indicated for his man to start the saw.

The saw started to cut into Shadow's armour, just below her elbow and Shadow screamed and screamed.

Chapter 150*: The Final D'Amico

The D'Amico warehouse

The saw started to cut into Shadow's armoured suit. Shadow screamed and screamed as she struggled against the iron grip of the men holding her down.

I kicked open the door and ran down the walkway. I had just seconds to do something. The roar of the spinning blade, cutting into the carbon-fibre armour was cutting into my senses. Jackal stopped, withdrew his two fighting knives and threw them hard towards the large electrical box that was mounted on the wall immediately behind the industrial disc saw.

The knives penetrated the thin aluminium door and caused havoc in the intricate electrical systems inside. There was a spark, followed by a loud bang and a flash. Then copious amounts of black smoke poured from the electrical box. But above all the shrieking of the spinning saw blade, as it carved into the reinforced carbon-fibre armour of the combat suit, eased and was replaced by the screaming of Shadow.

I leapt from the walkway and reached for a suspended light fitting. Behind me, Mist and Jackal did the same thing. The three of us swung from the light fittings and dropped onto machinery below. I immediately jumped off the machine that I had landed on and spun through the air, firing bullets into the men that surrounded D'Amico. I landed on the saw, itself and was immensely glad not to see a large pool of blood. In fact I could see very little blood, which was something good at least.

Mist appeared and dragged Shadow off the saw table, with the help of Jackal. Shadow seemed unable to stand unaided and seized hold of Jackal and Mist for support.

During this distraction, D'Amico had been surrounded by a dozen of his minions who were doing their best to push him towards an exit and relative safety.

But, it seemed, Ralph was having none of it and he was trying to push forward; back towards me.

"You have failed this City, indeed this country, for the last time, Ralph D'Amico. It is time for your wretched family to be reunited in hell!" I growled, feeling the anger of what he had tried to do to Chloe, build up inside me. "I am sure that that bastard brother of yours, Frank, will be waiting for you, not mention your nephew Chris!"

"You have not seen the last of me Hit Girl. I will return, as I have before – I will avenge my brother and my nephew. You and your freaks, will die!" D'Amico shouted back.

"Not if we have anything to do with it!" A loud electronic voice said from behind D'Amico.

He and his men spun around. Arrayed behind them were Kick-Ass, with Battle Guy to his left and Trojan to his right. Further over were Wildcat and a growling Eisenhower, who both stood beside Marcus and Sergeant Matthews of the CPD SWAT.

Wildcat shouted a single word and all hell broke loose.

"Schwanz!"

Eisenhower bolted forward and ran unerringly for Ralph D'Amico. Ralph screamed and fell back as Eisenhower but deeply into her most prized part of the male anatomy.

I saw Marcus and Sergeant Matthews wince, but they both dived into the final fight. D'Amico was going nowhere, but we all wanted our time with that bastard – we just needed to remove the excess minions.

Wildcat was a surging miniature tornado as she ran and drove her panther claws into thighs and stomachs – whatever she could reach. The floor was getting red with blood, but after several minutes all the minions were either dead or lying on the concrete floor, injured.

Marcus was smiling at me. I couldn't help but smile back. We had won and we had won, big time. There being guarded by Eisenhower was the best prize ever; Ralph fucking D'Amico. There was no way that he was getting away from us, this time.

..._...

Shadow came over, being supported by Jackal; she was favouring her right arm and I could see where the saw had badly damaged her suit.

She walked over to D'Amico and kicked him hard in the side, raising a scream of agony. I walked over to her and looked pointedly into the eyes that I could not see, under her mask.

"You do it – for me, Hit Girl – please," Shadow said weakly.

D'Amico was covered in blood. There was a very large amount around his crotch. I hauled the fallen mob boss to his knees and glared into his dark eyes. I looked for some sign that he knew he was about to die, but I saw nothing but darkness. This man was pure evil – there was nothing else inside him but evil.

I raised a single Katana sword, stowing its twin on my back. Everybody took several steps backwards, as I steadied myself and focussed on D'Amico's neck.

The blade flew through the air in an elegant arc, from above Hit Girl's right shoulder and then passing cleanly through the neck, before being brought to a halt.

Ralph D'Amico's head was separated from his body and both the head and the body fell to the ground. Blood spilled across the floor and ran towards the nearest drain where it gurgled away to join the other shit in the drains – very apt, I thought!

There was silence for several minutes as everybody just stared at the corpse, with the head lying a few feet away. That corpse signified the end of a reign of terror that had begun decades before. No more would the D'Amico family reign in Chicago. The family was decimated, wiped out – they were no more. Ralph, Frank, Chris; all were very, very dead.

I looked over at Hit Girl – I had killed the first D'Amico, Hit Girl had killed Chris and she had now dispatched Ralph. She smiled at me, before turning her back on the corpse, for that was all it was now. Ralph D'Amico was gone.

Shadow continued to stare at the severed head for an entire minute before she walked over to Jackal and held her hand out.

"Pistol!" She demanded and Jackal complied without hesitation and passed over his FN Five-seven.

Everybody watched as Shadow checked that the pistol was loaded and that there was a chambered round. She then walked over to the severed head and raised the pistol and fired off eight rounds, directly into the severed head. The head was initially sent spinning, before it finally exploded after the eighth round. Shadow returned the pistol to a stunned Jackal before she turned to me. She was breathing heavily and was still shaking from her ordeal.

"I had to make sure the bastard was dead – permanently!" Shadow explained, rubbing her right arm.

I put my arm around the young vigilante and pulled her close.

"You'll get no complaint from me, missy!" I whispered back.

We all gathered outside, near the vehicles.

CPD were taking over the scene and there were many happy grins, a lot of them aimed at us. There were a lot of bodies to be scooped up and quite a few injured gunmen to be sorted out, too.

As soon as I came out of the building I took Shadow over to her mother. They both climbed into Titan, for a private reunion. Once inside I pulled the rear door closed and stayed to ensure nobody else came in. Mother and daughter appeared from under their masks. Chloe with tears spilling down her cheeks, then hugged her mother tightly.

I had to admit, to myself that things had been very tight in there and Chloe might not be hugging her mother right now, or at least, not with both arms. Damn, this was getting too close. I would never have forgiven myself if Ralph D'Amico had got his way and maimed that girl. Right now I was glad that my face was hidden behind my mask. I felt guilt like I had never felt before.

Cathy forced Chloe to remove her right gauntlet and to let her check out the damage to her arm. Thankfully, there was just some grazes and cuts; the suit had absorbed the majority of the damage. Cathy cleaned up the wounds and wrapped a bandage around the injured area. Chloe was still much shaken from her ordeal, so I suggested that Cathy take Chloe back to the Safehouse, in Iron Hide, along with Paige and Mist.

Once Iron Hide had departed, I gathered together the team and they all climbed into Titan.

Hit Girl was very quiet. Much more quiet than I would have expected, considering our successes that night. I had a good idea what was wrong, though – but it would have to wait until we were alone.

For now, though, Hit Girl was talking with Vladimir.

"Thank you, Vladimir – you and your men fought magnificently," I said.

"So, will you give us a few minutes head start, before you slaughter us?" Vladimir asked jovially.

"Vladimir, I will give you a lifetime's head start... If you can keep your nose clean..." I replied.

Vladimir looked apprehensive.

"... However, we cross paths as we have before and you will feel my steel and the full force that Fusion can bring to bear!" I finished, crossing my blades in front of me.

I looked into Vladimir's eyes and saw a host of emotions: surprise, shock, fear, respect.

"You are truly a foe to be respected, Hit Girl and you define 'old school', as the saying goes," Vladimir said and held out his hand; I took it and shook it.

"We will continue our current truce; if my men come to your attention – then they deserve to die; however I would advise Fusion to steer clear of our neighbourhoods, and we will steer clear of yours. До свидания, вы были достойным противником, Хит Девушка!" Vladimir finished and he and his men left the area. [Goodbye, you have been a worthy adversary, Hit Girl!]

I watched them go, and then headed for Kick-Ass and Titan.

Later that night

Safehouse F

Chloe looked a lot better now that she had showered, but my eyes were drawn to the fresh white bandage on her lower arm, just below her right elbow.

Chloe noticed.

"Mindy! Don't start with the fucking guilt trip – or help me God, I'll slap you one!"

"Chloe – I almost lost you, tonight. You were almost..." I couldn't go on.

Chloe grabbed my hand and dragged me into the range. Then she looked directly into my eyes as she spoke.

"You know what kept me going, while that bastard had me?" She asked. "You! I knew that you'd come for me – I knew I would be rescued."

"Chloe, I..."

"Mind you – you cut it fucking close!" Chloe quipped with a grin, which faltered as I felt tears on my cheeks. "Mindy, please – don't feel guilt because of me. You're Hit Girl for fuck's sake – I became Shadow because of what you represented. I have never regretted a single day, since I met you and Dave. That night I woke up on your couch at West Ridge, was the start of a new life for me. Without you, I would never have found Joshua and he might have died 'again', without me ever knowing that he had been alive. I owe you and Dave everything that I am, today."

"Yes, but..."

"Without your training and the equipment that you provide to protect us, I would be dead – probably months ago during one of my many fuck ups! Please, Mindy – don't feel guilty, because of me."

We both hugged each other for several minutes, until both our tears ceased.

"It's good to know that you care, Mindy – it really is."

As soon as we were all back at the Safehouse, I ensured that everybody was okay.

We all got ourselves cleaned up, had something to eat and then went to bed. I was immensely grateful that apart from bruises, nobody had been hurt. Psychologically though, there were wounds. Principally, Chloe and Mindy; both had been traumatised at that warehouse. In our chosen line of work, we all saw and did a lot of things that gave us emotions, feelings and memories that we had to bury and bury deep. We had all done unspeakable things in the name of fighting serious crime.

I had plenty of memories that haunted my dreams, including many that featured a certain purple menace at various ages! I knew that Mindy must have some whopping great things buried deep in her sub-conscious, from the many years of active vigilantism before we had met that night at Rasul's. Then it had just been her and Damon. Now though, she was running a team of Vigilante's. She was running Fusion – Marcus' 'fucked up super hero club'!

I could tell that she was feeling immense guilt about Chloe being seized and then almost maimed for life. This would be difficult, but we would get through it together, like we always did.

"So, how did your chat with Chloe go?" I asked as I entered our bedroom and closed the door.

Mindy was in bed, looking very sad.

I can't keep anything a secret from Dave!

"Yes, Chloe had a fucking go at me – happy?"

"Yes, actually!" Dave replied, climbing into bed.

I knew that I should not be feeling guilt, but I did. It was a part of me being human, as Dave would put it. Hit Girl was not supposed to have a human side – she was a killing machine. I was trained to bury emotion deep and lock it away, permanently.

But Chloe was different, she was a sister to me and my best friend after Dave. I felt able to discuss anything with Chloe, especially girl type stuff. She always made me feel comfortable, being with her. I could discuss almost anything with Dave, but where I couldn't; I could speak with Chloe. Besides Dave did not want to discuss certain girl type problems!

I wrapped my arms around Dave and hugged him tightly.

Chapter 151*: Celebration

Monday evening

Morton Grove

I had gone with Josh and Mindy to see Chloe at home. There we had taken Chloe through everything that had happened while she had been with D'Amico. Chloe had seemed overwhelmed by how much effort had gone into her rescue. Josh was holding her hand as she added her own parts to the story.

Finally, we explained the last attack, as the disc saw had been started. When I had mentioned Josh and his fighting knives, Chloe had spun around and launched herself on top of a very stunned Joshua. She had started hugging and kissing the kid, oblivious to Mindy, Cathy and I sitting only feet away. Finally, Josh managed to shove Chloe away for a minute. Chloe then looked around and blushed badly at her audience.

"Nice, Chloe – you definitely have some moves!" Cathy commented with a laugh at her daughter and the still stunned Joshua.

"Sorry," An embarrassed Chloe mumbled. "Joshua saved my arm – without him..."

"Okay, Chloe – we understand, but still – I'm sure your Mom doesn't want a live porno on her couch!" Mindy said with an evil smirk

Chloe had looked totally mortified!

"Wouldn't be the first time!" Cathy said with a sly grin.

With D'Amico gone, everybody had gone back to his or her 'normal' life.

All the kids were back at school and those with jobs were back at work. Everybody needed time to rest and recover from the past weeks activities. I had received a couple of phone calls from Cathy letting me know how Chloe was doing. Chloe had been having some vicious nightmares because of what she had experienced at the weekend. She had not been alone – Mindy had had her fair share of nightmares as well. Chloe had also been extremely nice to Josh since the weekend.

Chloe had eventually suggested a party, to let everybody unwind and I had persuaded Mindy – not that that had been hard!

Five days later

Saturday night

Safehouse F

Cathy, Paige and Kim had outdone themselves putting together a huge buffet.

As before, everybody that knew of Fusion had been invited, although this time there were some newcomers.

As before, Chloe and Josh were occupying a couch, this time in the briefing room and they both seemed to be permanently joined at the lips – that seemed to be their version of partying! Curtis, Cam Fellowes, Brad Murphy, Tommy Morgan and Megan were nearby and watched Chloe and Josh as they ran their hands over each other. Curtis winked at Megan, suggestively.

"Don't even think about it, asshole!" Megan cautioned with a scowl, before stalking off to find some food.

"Hard luck, Curtis – maybe next time!" Tommy commiserated.

"She's a tough nut to crack!" Cameron added with a laugh.

"Give me time," Curtis said and followed Megan.

"He's gonna get himself slapped or worse!" Brad prophesied.

..._...

Paul Murphy and Sam Fellowes, along with their wives, were chatting with Marcus and Paige; Sharon and Rachel were very pleased to meet Dave and Marty and to thank them personally for saving all their lives, the previous year. They were also pleased to be able to thank Curtis and Megan for looking after their sons the month before.

Sophia insisted on following Tommy around, as he kept offering her items from the buffet. Jack Bay was chatting with Marty and Kim. Kim was now fourteen weeks pregnant and starting to show visible signs; she was now attracting the attention of the other adult females, including Rachel Murphy and Sharon Fellowes.

Tony and Shannon Morgan were chatting with Erika and Mindy. I was concentrating on keeping an eye on the youngsters and ensuring that they were not causing any trouble!

In the corner of the galley, I found Abby and Kyle caressing each other, totally oblivious to everybody else in the room!

"So, what do you think about the new vigilante?" I asked Josh, once he had been able to tear himself away from Chloe.

Josh looked a little uncomfortable.

"Well, Joshua – Mindy asked you a question?" Chloe asked with an evil smirk, enjoying her boyfriend's intense discomfort.

"Do I have to answer?" Josh asked, knowing the answer he would get.

"Yes you do," Chloe pushed.

"She has some nice curves," Josh started, blushing slightly. He then saw Chloe's scowl. "And looks almost as hot as Chloe!"

"Good save, kid!" Dave said with a chuckle.

"You damn pussy, Josh!" Erika said, with a wink at Chloe.

"Seriously though, who is she?" Dave asked.

"She must have some serious money," I commented. "That armoured suit she has looks to be almost as good as ours. Also, that motorcycle of hers is not cheap!"

There was general agreement at my comment.

"Maybe she is as good as you, Mindy," Erika suggested.

"Ooh – you can't say that!" Kim said with a glance towards me.

"It is possible," I acceded.

"Nobody is better than you, Hit Girl!" Megan said, as she cut into the discussion.

"Megan – we've been through this!" I said seriously.

"Can't you stop being such a fucking serious bitch for just one damn minute?" Megan demanded. "You were out there, in New York City, fighting crime, before Curtis and I were even fucking born!"

Mindy blushed furiously at Megan's comment.

"About time somebody said that!" Cathy commented.

"Could have been a little less foul, though – eh, Megan?" Marcus added and Megan blushed.

"Okay – I'll take the goddamn hint!" Mindy growled.

I laughed at Mindy's discomfort. Then Marcus spoke up and started to make Mindy even more uncomfortable.

"If I could have everybody's attention, please!" Marcus said loudly and silence descended on the Safehouse, as Marty muted the music and all conversation ceased. "As some of you know, Paige and I have been spending a lot of time together and indeed we now live together."

I noticed Mindy cover her face with her hands and shake her head.

"Paige and I have a lot in common – not to mention each of us having a very wayward daughter!" Marcus continued.

There was a lot of laughter at that comment and both Mindy and Megan scowled. Their expressions were almost identical.

"Paige and I have decided to take things to the next level and as such..." Marcus began.

"... Last night, Marcus proposed and I accepted!" Paige finished, grinning fit to burst.

There was a silent pause, before Megan spoke.

"Bloody hell!" Megan exclaimed.

"Fuck me!" Mindy added.

Both girls looked shocked and everybody laughed and began to offer their congratulations to the couple.

"Damn – Hit Girl will be my sister!" Megan said, with a big grin.

Mindy looked at Megan.

"Well, I could have worse for a kid sister!" She said with a smirk.

Then Megan asked a question, aimed at her mother.

"Does this mean you two are having sex?"

Mindy's eyes almost popped out.

"Megan, dear – that, is none of your business!" Paige said sweetly, smirking at Marcus.

An hour later

Something was missing.

Actually it was more like five short people, were missing. I stood on the walkway and gazed around the Safehouse. The briefing room and galley were occupied by just teenagers and adults – all of the pre-teens, were nowhere in sight!

"Sophia!" I called and the large dog appeared from the galley.

The Alsatian had been extra happy since having had the opportunity to chomp on Ralph D'Amico.

"Sophia – the little brats are missing, can you find them for me?" I asked.

Sophia gave a muted woof, before sniffing the air and heading down to the main level.

"What's up?" Mindy asked, coming up beside me.

"The brats are missing!" I said. "Time for some fun!"

"I'll warn everyone that you want to play!" Mindy said laughing and turning towards the briefing room.

..._...

I followed Sophia down to the main level, but one there I took a detour into the armoury. I reappeared with several small items in my hand. Sophia was sniffing in the direction of Iron Hide and Beast. I heard some muted conversation from between the two armoured vehicles.

I whistled quietly and Sophia ran back to me, looking pleased with herself. The kids were still hidden and continuing with their conversation, believing themselves undiscovered.

"Sophia – go to Mindy!" I ordered and the dog ran up the stairs.

I noticed that a small audience had gathered on the walkway. I raised five fingers indicating five seconds and moved over towards the glass shield. I rapidly pulled the pins from four FBG Mk II Flash Bang Trainers and threw them over the shield and they fell to the ground and rolled under Iron Hide before they all exploded.

BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!

There were screams and yells of pain, and then five shocked kids rapidly appeared from between Iron hide and Beast. They ran onto the mat, covering their ears. There was laughter and jeering from the adults and teenagers on the walkway.

The five kids looked up at their audience, a little embarrassed and Megan scowled.

"Fucking funny, asshole!" Megan exclaimed, glaring at the grinning Dave.

"You guys have been warned about playing around the vehicles!" Mindy called down.

"I never, play, bitch!" Megan retorted and Mindy scowled back.

"I assume that it was your idea, Megan?" Mindy asked.

"Why am I always assumed to be the guilty one?" Megan demanded, looking hurt.

"Well, 'cause you, young lady, usually are the guilty one!" Paige cut in with a laugh.

"Okay, brats," Mindy called. "Get back up here – now!"

"That was awesome!" A laughing Brad said, on his way up the steps.

"Yeah, very funny, dickhead!" Megan growled.

"It was your idea," Tommy said, grinning.

"Only because I've got bigger balls than you lot put together!" Megan retorted, with a smirk.

"You've picked a damn firestorm there, Curtis!" Cam said.

"Don't I bloody know it?" Curtis replied with a grimace.

That girl was trouble.

She also seemed to have the boys under her control, which was a concern!

All of the kids had been warned about messing about near the vehicles. I had set rules, now that we had kids in the Safehouse. When not operational, like now – they were to stay away from the vehicles, armoury and any weapons. I had warned them all, especially the kids who were not operators.

The Safehouse, while protecting those inside, also contained some very dangerous items of equipment and weaponry. The last thing that I wanted was somebody to get hurt, or worse, while they were somewhere that they should not be.

Maybe, Megan needed a talking to or something stronger!

Later, just before midnight

The lights had been dimmed in the briefing room and couples were chatting, with some dancing – or just kissing.

Chloe and Josh were enjoying each other on a couch. The other end of the couch was occupied by Kyle and Abby, equally active. Another couch supported Marty and Kim, with Megan, fast asleep on Sophia with Curtis beside her. Tommy, Cam and Brad were trying to ignore their parents who were dancing and kissing, which they found somewhat embarrassing. Marcus and Paige were gently kissing, while dancing too.

A different song came over the speakers in the Safehouse.

'We are young! We are strong! We're not lookin' for where we belong. We're not cool! We are free! And we're runnin' with blood on our knees!'

I looked down at Mindy and I felt like the happiest man alive. Mindy smiled up at me, and then we kissed and continued kissing.

Chapter 152*: Back On The Streets

The following morning
Sunday

Safehouse F

I awoke to the smell of bacon cooking.

The Safehouse was a lot emptier this morning. Most of the couples had gone home, taking their kids with them; which was a blessing! I had to admit that I envied Megan and the others – they were enjoying their childhoods. Me, I had never been able to play and have fun, like them.

When I got to the galley, I found that Cathy and Paige were cooking breakfast. Megan was sitting with Kyle and Abby, while Dave was chatting with Marcus and Marty. There was no sign of Josh or Chloe, nor Kim or Curtis. Sophia was chomping her way through an enormous bowl of biscuits and some other disgusting looking shit that she liked.

"Hey, gorgeous!" Dave called, passing me a coffee in my 'World's Greatest Bitch!' mug.

"Morning everybody!" I groaned and sat down, burying my head in my arms.

"Is she alive?" I heard Josh ask and felt myself being poked in the ribs.

"Do you like your fingers intact?" I growled.

"Not quite Dave, but they'll have to do!" Chloe said, placing a plate of sausages, eggs and bacon down in front of me.

"Fuck!" I growled and then smiled at Chloe. "I am hungry, thanks!"

..._...

Just then, Curtis came into the galley. He seemed a little apprehensive, but looked directly towards Megan and strode between the tables directly towards her.

"Morning, Curtis..." Megan said, but she was interrupted as Curtis grabbed her face and kissed her on the lips.

Just a quick kiss, nothing more. Megan's eyes bulged out and as expected, she slapped Curtis before he drew away. Curtis just smirked and he seemed to ignore the red, hand-shaped mark on his left cheek.

"It was worth it!" He said, before heading to get some food.

..._...

I stared at Megan.

After slapping Curtis, she just sat there. Then she slowly licked her lips and a sly smile appeared. She looked to be trying to process what had just happened to her. I knew that look; I had seen it on my own face, often enough. Then I saw Megan blush as realisation hit her. I was not sure whether the blush was because she was embarrassed or because she had realised why Curtis had kissed her. They meant a lot to each other, those two. Curtis came back over, with his breakfast, and sat down opposite Megan. He smirked at her, as he started on his bacon.

"Why?" Megan asked simply, biting her lip.

"Just to prove that I do have some balls!" Curtis replied.

"I know you have balls, Curtis – I've seen them," Megan said, then blushed even deeper, before stammering on. "I mean... I've seen you fighting, err, proving you have balls!"

"Wow!" Paige commented, looking down at her mortified daughter. "You learn something new every day!"

Later that day

West Ridge

"Mindy!"

I turned to see who was hissing at me. It was Chloe.

"What?"

"I need to talk to you – now!"

"Go ahead!"

"In private!" Chloe hissed.

"Okay!" I replied, smiling at Dave.

I followed Chloe outside and onto the deck.

"What?" I asked.

Chloe looked very uncomfortable and somewhat upset.

"I'm late!"

"For what?"

"Come on, doofus – do I have to spell it out!"

"I guess!"

"I should have started by now!"

"Started what?" I asked. "Started making sense?"

"Mindy you can be such a..." Chloe growled, getting mad. "You're supposed to be clever, for fuck's sake!"

I had absolutely no idea what she was raving on about; she was nuts! Chloe's shoulders slumped and she held her head in her hands.

"I've not had my fucking period, you stupid bitch!" Chloe growled angrily.

"Oh!" I exclaimed, feeling rather stupid!

"Jeez, thick bitch!" Chloe breathed.

"Sorry, I was having a blonde moment!"

"You're not blonde anymore!" Chloe stated.

"It's part of me!" I replied with a grin, before turning serious. "Have you been at it with Josh recently?"

"Yeah, we've had sex – a few times – recently," Chloe, admitted blushing a little.

"I assume you used protection?"

"Always!"

"You absolutely certain?" I persisted.

"Yes! I'm on the damn pill, too!"

"Shit happens!" I quipped.

"Not fucking funny, Mindy!"

"Go piss on a pregnancy thingy," I suggested.

"Will you drive me to the store?"

Forty minutes later

"Oh thank fuck for that!"

"I take it the scare is over?" I asked.

"Not pregnant and my period just started!"

"Dodged a bullet there, young lady!"

"Tell me about it! Yes, I want kids and yes, I think I want kids with Josh – just not right now!"

"Good to hear," I said.

"Our secret?" Chloe asked with a hopeful grin.

"Our secret, Chloe."

What the hell, would I do in that position?

I mean, what if one of those little wriggly things got past all the protection? Wham! I would be pregnant and no more Hit Girl. I was not going to give up sex, no fucking way; it was arguably better than killing!

I was six months away from turning eighteen. Maybe I should consider taking some time off, maybe in my early twenties and have kids. I would not be young forever and besides, something may happen to me, or worse, something may happen to Dave!

Deep, heavy thoughts. They could wait for another month.

Anyway, I had the streets to patrol, along with Kick-Ass!

Two days later

Wednesday

West Ridge

"How you doing hunk?"

I looked over to the smiling light of my life.

"Feeling old!" I quipped.

"Happy Birthday!"

Mindy was naked and cuddling into me. Another year of my life was beginning, another year with Mindy Macready. Mindy was the one person I loved more than anyone, in the whole world.

I ran my right hand over her compact, but soft, chest and as I touched the nipples, Mindy tensed up and her breath caught. As usual, she was having a stiffening effect on me and she knew it. I started to kiss her neck as I ran my hand down across her strong, flat stomach and into the soft, but damp region between her legs. Mindy was squirming and she started to moan as my fingers explored the warm moist...

Damn him!

He knew exactly which buttons to press and which ones to caress. He knew me perfectly, every square inch, inside – and out. It helped that I was fit and healthy, as Dave had me panting like a dog on heat! The orgasm that I knew was coming would rip me apart from the inside out and take all my energies to absorb.

Minutes later, I was panting, as all my muscles and limbs shook with the sensations building inside them until I could take it no more. I screamed. Dave was laughing as I folded up to ride out the sensations that surged from between my legs to my brain, via my breasts.

When I could breathe again, I turned to Dave, who planted a kiss on my lips.

"You are gonna be the fucking death of me, asshole!"

"So you didn't enjoy it?" Dave asked, pretending to be hurt.

"You know what I meant, Ass-Kick!"

An hour later

After a long shower – together of course, where I thanked Dave for his wonderful fingers, we headed down for a late breakfast.

We found a scowling Josh in the kitchen.

"I am going to buy some bloody ear plugs! Noisy bastards, the both of you!" Josh moaned. "Oh, Happy Birthday, Dave!"

"Thanks, Joshua!"

That night

It felt good to be back out on the streets, just Kick-Ass and Hit Girl.

I was able to ride my Panigale, which made me immensely happy – it felt good to ride side by side with Kick-Ass on his Diavel motorcycle. It was even better that the City was back to its normal, relatively safe, state.

We cruised the streets and enjoyed the view, not to mention the waves and smiles from the public and the CPD. We also had a visit from Petra!

As we cruised up Route 50, Kick-Ass motioned to his rear and I saw a third motorcycle catch up and pull alongside Kick-Ass. It was the same Honda CBR1000RR Fireblade, which we had seen Petra with previously. She turned her head and nodded at us both. I nodded back, along with Kick-Ass. I revved my engine and Petra revved back. Kick-Ass looked at me and shook his head before dropping back. I nodded at Petra and she accelerated, pulling a wheelie and speeding away.

"Be careful!" Kick-Ass cautioned.

"Hey, it's me!" I replied, laughing as I accelerated after the vanishing Fireblade.

"That is exactly what I am afraid of!" Kick-Ass said.

"Battle Guy – you following that speed junkie?"

"Every turn!" Battle Guy replied.

I followed from a distance as the two rival vigilantes passed through Midway International Airport. I could tell that there was rivalry building up between Hit Girl and this Petra. There was no way that Hit Girl was going to allow herself to be outridden by anybody! They finally slowed, as they turned right onto South Archer Avenue. Battle Guy was giving me directions to their location. I finally caught up, just as Petra waved to Hit Girl and turned away.

..._...

"You enjoy that?" I asked as I pulled alongside.

"You know I love speed!" Hit Girl replied.

"I do!" I agreed. "Can we get back to what we came out here to do?"

"If you insist!"

I knew that Hit Girl enjoyed racing around at speed on the Panigale. I also knew that one day it would not end happily for her! At least we knew that Petra was still around and I was pleased to see that Hit Girl was not intending to kill her.

At least not yet.

Nothing particularly exciting occurred as we rode around the City.

The important thing was that we were being seen, which raised our image and let those to whom we were a danger know that we were about and would respond where necessary.

The CPD had reported that crime levels were lower. Many criminals had been killed or put away by the time Ralph D'Amico had died. Plenty had been ratted out since, too! As usual, just the threat of us was enough to keep the small-time criminals at bay.

Chicago PD
District 21

It had taken almost ten months, but the rebuilt District 21 was now open for business.

"Not bad!" Marcus commented to Voight as he was shown the new office space for Intelligence.

"A step up from the previous, I'll admit that!" Voight replied.

The new premises was all glass and aluminium, and very, very smart. Voight had a glass-enclosed office, on the third floor, at the end of a larger, open area that had space for ten desks. Voight's team were hard at work and seemed to be enjoying the new facilities.

"I understand that you will soon be working across the corridor," Voight commented, indicating an almost identical, but empty area across the corridor from Intelligence.

"It's still under discussion, but yes it looks like the new 'Organised Crime Taskforce' will be stood up soon," Marcus replied.

"Congratulations, Lieutenant – I'm looking forward to working with you."

"As am I, with you and your team, Sergeant."

Chapter 153*: Cold War

The following afternoon
Thursday

West Ridge

I received a very disturbing phone call that evening.

"Help me, please!"

"Vladimir?" I growled in surprise.

"Anatoly, he has taken over the Bratva... He is coming for me. It is just me and Vasily. Please, I must get out of the City – I need your help, Hit Girl."

"We can do that, Vladimir," I confirmed.

"Avoid the Bratva – all past deals are off!" Vladimir warned.

"Trouble?" Dave asked as I dropped the call.

"You could say that!"

That night

Kick-Ass was driving Beast, with Jackal beside him.

I led on my purple superbike. Shadow was annoyed that she was unable to come, but her new combat suit was not yet ready. Shadow was with Battle Guy, in the Command Centre, providing support.

We had arranged to meet Vladimir and Vasily in a secluded part of the City. We would then escort them out of the City – from there, they would be on their own. As we approached the place, I could hear gunfire.

"Battle Guy, we have contact ahead!" I called over the comms.

Kick-Ass immediately overtook me, placing the armoured Beast between the gunfire and my motorcycle. As we approached, my cell rang.

"Hit Girl! We are under attack – it's the Bratva – they've found us!" Vladimir called.

I could hear the shooting in the background. Automatic gunfire as well as the sharper sound of pistol fire. As we turned the final corner, I saw three SUVs. Two were black and were stopped in the middle of the street facing us. Between them and us was another SUV, this one red and it was riddled with bullet holes. Behind this SUV, I could see two men, one of whom was returning fire with an AKS-74U assault rifle.

The two black SUVs had six men, all armed and engaging the red SUV. I could see two bodies on the street. Vasily seemed to be doing well! Kick-Ass stopped Beast near to the Red SUV and jumped out with Jackal. I stopped behind Beast and dismounted. Kick-Ass had his G36K up and he was engaging the black SUVs. Jackal was doing the same with his P90. I ran forward, cradling a G36C and knelt down beside Vladimir.

"Thank God!" Vladimir called over the noise.

The gunfire from the Bratva reduced and then ceased.

"Hit Girl! Our fight is not with you – we just want the traitor, Vladimir!"

"Nyet!" I yelled.

"Not clever!" The same voice called back. "This is not your fight!"

"He's right, you know!" Shadow said from the Safehouse.

"Vladimir is an important ally, Shadow!" I replied.

"Worth a war?" Battle Guy asked.

I paused to think this through. I owed Vladimir – he had helped us, more than once. Hit Girl had a reputation to uphold. I could not go back on my word – it would get out – it always did!

"Vladimir – get to Beast, now!" I ordered. "Vasily – you too!"

As Vladimir moved, the gunfire started again. He made it to Beast, along with Vasily. Kick-Ass fired a smoke grenade from his rifle before jumping into Beast and accelerating away.

I kept pace, on the protected side of Beast and we headed for safety, to the west.

The next day

Friday

We had been able to get Vladimir and Vasily to safety, outside of Chicago.

The Bratva had chosen not to pursue us through the City, which had been a blessing. Neither of the Russians had been injured, which was also good. Nevertheless, the success had its consequences. There now existed a state of 'cold war' between Fusion and the Bratva. We could be attacked at any time – or nothing might happen; we had no way of knowing!

This all just added another layer of danger to what we did for this City. We would need to be on the lookout, constantly; which was no different from normal. Constant vigilance was the rule for us and would continue to be.

At least things could not get any worse!

Three and a half thousand miles to the east

Palermo, Sicily

Vito Genovese was an 'old-school' Mafioso bastard. If you went to Vito and told him about some person who was doing wrong, he would have that person killed and then he would have you killed for telling on that person. At least that was how the story went; he was ruthless and as a result, he had few adversaries.

Vito stared angrily across the desk, at his brother-in-law Joseph.

Joseph Valachi was as bad as, if not worse than Vito. Vito and Joseph were originally from two opposing families, but then Vito had married Joseph's sister, Anna Valachi and created a monster crime family that controlled Sicily and had done so for many decades. Both families were old and went back hundreds of years, with a trail of potentially thousands of murders.

In front of Vito was the cause of his anger.

The newspaper La Sicilia had the headline: 'D'Amico decapitato da vigilantes a Chicago'.

"We cannot be seen to do nothing about this..." Vito spat. "This insult to our family!"

"I know that you were never happy letting your daughter marry that Frank D'Amico, but it was more convenience than anything else," Joseph said.

Joseph ran the day-to-day operations of the organisation. He was also the chief enforcer and he enforced with an iron hand, both in the name of his own family and that of Vito Genovese. Nobody dared to say no to Joseph Valachi and those that did...

"How could a jumped up group of vigilantes cause such damage over a period of less than six years! First Frank, then Angie and then their son Chris and now Ralph – what the hell is going on in those damn Cities!" Vito said, his temper flaring and his voice getting louder with each word.

Joseph paused, deep in thought for a minute, before replying.

"We could send in Anthony, from Detroit. We send him some men and start laying down the law – our law!" Joseph stated, his own temper flaring.

"Let me put some thought into this. Now back to our side of the world, back to Europe..." Vito went on.

A Mafioso storm of immense proportions was heading for New York and Chicago. Only no storm warning had gone out...

North Park Elementary School

Chicago, USA

This week had been hell on earth!

Being back at school, while fun, was torture. Every time that I glanced at Curtis, he was smirking! I was even getting strange looks his friends, Jake and Zack. Had Curtis told them about his kissing me? Yes, I had told Nikki and she had demanded to know what it felt like and how I had felt. She had also said that the kiss had explained the bruise on Curtis' cheek! I had felt really embarrassed about hitting Curtis; not that he had minded, apparently; he seemed to wear the bruise as a badge of honour.

My mind had also been reeling from the events of the weekend. I had killed half a dozen men and I had enjoyed it. I had felt alive; I had felt the adrenalin flowing through me. I had also slept well, in addition, which was more than a bit worrying! I had been expecting nightmares – the worst nightmares, but nothing. Was there something wrong with me?

"I'm a psychotic maniac!"

"No you're not," Curtis said, sitting down beside me.

I had not realised that I had spoken aloud. I needed to be careful. Talking like that in the school at lunchtime was not a very good idea.

"You two gonna start kissing?" Zach asked, sitting down across from me.

"Maybe I will!" I smirked.

"Bring it on, wild one!" Jake commented as he joined Zach.

"You gonna embarrass yourself again?" Nikki said as she sat down.

"I never embarrass myself!" I growled back.

The expression Nikki threw back at me said that she thought otherwise! I took a bite out of my sandwich and ignored them all.

That evening

I was also getting concerned with how Marcus would see me know that he knew I had killed – that I was to all intents and purposes, a mass murderer.

"Marcus, I know that you and Mindy often had fallings out, in her pre-teen years. I know that you have always detested her alter ego..." I started.

Marcus looked directly at me as he replied.

"You want to know what I think about having another daughter that kills people!"

"Kind of..."

"Megan, I love you as much as I love Mindy. I may not be entirely happy with the life that you have chosen and I was not happy with the life that Mindy had chosen for her," Marcus explained. "Okay, I did my best to dissuade Mindy, but she, like you, was too strong willed!"

I actually felt myself blushing.

"As I also tell Mindy – stay safe and remember that in most cases 'I don't want to know!'" Marcus finished.

I smiled and gave Marcus a hug.

The following night Saturday

The fuckers ambushed us!

Wrong time, wrong place! The first bullets had pounded on Jackal and his motorcycle. He had skidded and crashed. I had skidded to a stop and dived for cover. The gunfire was intense. I returned fire with my G36C, giving time for Jackal to get into cover.

"Battle Guy, we've been ambushed!" I called. "Jackal check in!"

"I'm fine – except for some bruises and a bruised ego!" Jackal responded. "Got a feeling I'll be worse once Hit Girl sees what I've done to my Ducati!"

"Funny cunt!" I responded.

"Mist and Medic are five minutes out in Iron Hide!" Battle Guy responded.

"Have them go for Jackal first!" I ordered. "Jackal, set the self-destruct on your Ducati!"

..._...

The gunfire was getting heavy and my ammunition was getting low. Medic and Mist had been patrolling in another part of the City. Medic had complained about her daughter getting all the fun and had insisted on a night out. Shadow had been a little annoyed: "It's not all fun, mother!" I had good cover, Jackal had not; he was keeping down, behind his crashed motorcycle, and was returning limited fire from his P90. I was doing my best to stop anybody from getting near him.

"Ten seconds!" Mist called.

I heard Iron Hide before I saw it. Nevertheless, as it came around the corner, I was filled with awe at the sight of the huge truck as it sped down the street and the large reinforced bumper clipped the rear end of a Bratva SUV, flipping it around and crushing several gunmen as it slammed sideways into a building.

"Women drivers!" Jackal quipped.

Medic headed the truck directly towards Jackal and pulled up; shielding him, so he could jump up and yank open a rear door and climb in the back. I saw two Krysha moving to the rear of an SUV and removing something; I recognised the shape instantly.

"Medic! Get outta here – they have rockets!"

I heard the engine of Iron Hide roar as Medic floored the accelerator, sending the truck down the street and then turning right into cover. The Krysha looked mad at losing their prey, but instead aimed the rocket in my direction!

Not exactly, the first time that I had faced a rocket pointed directly at me!

I dived to my right, just as the rocket was fired.

It hit a small building behind me, dumping rubble into the street at the intersection and blocking my escape towards Iron Hide. I was cut off from the others and I was cut off from my Panigale. Last time, this fucking happened, I was shot!

Just as the Krysha started to move towards me, I heard the familiar sound of a high performance motorcycle engine.

Chapter 154*: Petra

Saturday Night

I turned to see that damn Petra, racing towards me. Her left arm was stretched out to the side; she was intending to scoop me onto her Honda as she rode past.

I had no choice but to accept. The only alternative was injury, death or worse!

..._...

"Thanks!" I called as I swung up behind Petra and she accelerated away from the scene as bullets whizzed past. I also heard a large explosion as the explosive charges on Jackal's motorcycle exploded.

Petra kept up a high speed as she zigged and zagged around any traffic, in the thankfully almost clear streets of the, mostly sleeping, City.

I lost track of where we were heading and just had to trust Petra.

Finally, we stopped in some woods, near a river to the west of the City.

"Where the hell am I?" I whispered into my comms.

"White Eagle Woods South, Hit Girl!" Battle Guy responded.

"You get carried away, my love?" Kick-Ass asked.

"Just come and get me, asshole!" I growled into my comms.

The asshole was laughing; I would never live this down!

..._...

We stood facing each other for what felt like hours, but was only minutes.

Finally, Petra broke the silence.

"I wish I could have arrived sooner, to help you."

"I had no need for your help, Petra!"

"Temper, Hit Girl!" Kick-Ass said in my ear.

Asshole!

To tell you the truth I felt uncomfortable, us standing here not talking. It even felt ridiculous. Here we were, two vigilantes, in armoured combat suits, standing in a wood, in the dark, beside a powerful motorcycle!

"You fought well," Petra said.

"I always do," I replied.

I gazed at the Honda Fireblade.

"Mine's faster!" I commented.

"Speed isn't everything!" Petra replied.

Another long pause.

"What do you carry?" I asked, trying to make conversation.

"Beretta Px4 Storm Compact in nine-millimetre," Petra said, drawing on of her two identical pistols.

The bitch seemed to know her weapons.

"Glock 26 in .40-calibre," I said with a smirk as I drew one of my own.

"Size isn't everything!" Petra replied.

Jeez!

If they had been men, they would have been seeing who could pee the furthest! I pulled up, in Beast, and stopped alongside the Fireblade. I climbed down and walked over to the two girls.

"Enjoying yourself, ladies?" I asked.

"Petra, meet my sarcastic partner, Kick-Ass!" I growled, glaring at Kick-Ass.

"My lady!" Kick-Ass said, with a nod to Petra.

"Kick-Ass!" Petra replied, in her electronically enhanced voice that was eerily similar to that which Kick-Ass used.

The three of us stood there, no conversation for several minutes.

"So – you think you're a vigilante, do you?" Hit Girl asked.

"So, you want to fight?" Petra asked, without hesitation.

"Yeah, let's see what you can do!" Hit Girl responded enthusiastically.

..._...

This should be good, I thought! I always enjoyed watching two girls fighting – it could be one hell of a turn on! Josh would be very annoyed to miss this. Then I had another thought.

"Battle Guy, you recording this?" I asked over a discrete channel.

"Hell yeah – in full HD!"

The two vigilantes were standing in front of Beast, which meant that Battle Guy could use the onboard High Definition cameras to record the ensuing fight. They started circling each other. Neither had a weapon out, but I knew that Hit Girl did not need weapons - she was a weapon! I had a distinct feeling that Petra could hold her own, too. I had seen her in action before, but not in a full-blown fight like this promised to be.

..._...

Petra got in the first hit; on Hit Girl's left thigh with her right leg. Hit Girl absorbed the kick and dealt one of her own back, catching Petra on the left shoulder. Neither girl was making much effort at avoiding the other, neither were they hurting each other. They were just warming up and testing each other. I could hear crunching over the comms.

"You got fucking popcorn, asshole?" I asked Battle Guy.

"Hal just finished making some – this should be one hell of a show! Want some?"

"Funny!" I retorted with a chuckle.

..._...

The strikes were now getting harder and faster. The girls were now actively trying to avoid each other's strikes. Things were speeding up as the girls span around the grassy ground. They seemed evenly matched, which was a surprise considering Hit Girl's obvious decade or more of experience as a vigilante.

The sound of carbon-fibre armour clashing against carbon-fibre armour, punctuated the fight. I hoped that Hit Girl was not going to take this 'friendly' fight too far! I knew how that girl hated to be beaten. Petra was a friend; not an enemy and I hoped that Hit Girl would remember that!

Oh, fuck!

Hit Girl just put Petra down hard on the ground. I saw my fiancée smile across at me, before she was toppled to the ground as her legs were swept out from under her.

Hey, cat fight!

Both girls were now rolling around the ground, each trying to get the better of the other.

"Fucking turn on or what?" Battle Guy asked.

"Disgusting twat!" Hal cut in. "Awesome though..."

I chuckled.

..._...

Currently, Hit Girl was pinned, but then I saw her right leg snake upwards and around the front of Petra's neck and Petra was thrown backwards. Then Hit Girl was on top and pinning the new vigilante to the ground. Damn, I never thought seeing Hit Girl fight could be so fucking hot! Petra was desperately trying to free herself, but Hit Girl obviously thought that she had her pinned completely – well almost...

Petra managed to get purchase on the ground and forced her body to one side; she was then able to throw Hit Girl off and onto the ground. Hit Girl's body language told me that she was really pissed and I sensed trouble.

Oh, crap!

Hit Girl drew her Katana swords, in one smooth motion, and her movement was mirrored a split second later by Petra. Hit Girl's upper lip curled and she flew forwards. The blades clashed as they fended off each other's advances.

This really was monumental!

I was also starting to get a little concerned that this could end up with one of them getting hurt – or worse!

The blades clashed and the vigilantes whirled around as they fought. I was pleased that the two of them had different colours to their armoured suits – it made it easier to follow who was who with the high speed movements. I was not sure, but I thought that both girls were not striking as hard as they were capable of striking. I knew that Hit Girl could fight harder than this – but it was good; it meant that neither was trying to kill the other!

Finally, the spinning vigilantes started to slow down – they must have been exhausted. Then two minutes later, they both stopped. Both were breathing heavily and I saw Hit Girl smirk.

"Now that was one hell of a work out!" Hit Girl exclaimed.

"Hell, yeah!" Petra replied.

"May I?" Hit Girl asked, looking at Petra's swords.

"Of course – may I?"

The two vigilantes exchanged swords and examined each other's blades. I watched as Hit Girl moved Petra's blades through the air, examining their movement and balance. Petra was doing the same with Hit Girl's blades. I had never seen Hit Girl let anybody touch her blades before, ever!

"Err, Hit Girl – should I wait for you two to make out, or..."

Two heads whipped around and I felt two pairs of eyes boring into me.

"Just kidding!"

Hit Girl turned back to Petra and they returned each other's swords, which were stowed on their backs.

"I look forward to working with you again!" Hit Girl said, holding out her gauntleted hand.

"Me too, Hit Girl," Petra replied taking the outstretched hand and shaking it, then she mounted her motorcycle, started the engine and accelerated away.

Safehouse F

When we got back to the Safehouse, we heard cheering from the Command Centre. I laughed when I saw what was displayed on the fifty-inch wall-mounted screen. It was 'the fight'. Josh and Chloe were cheering - Chloe for Hit Girl and Josh for Petra!

I saw Mindy start to blush.

"You recorded this?" Mindy asked turning to me.

"Seemed a good idea..." I saw Mindy's expression. "At the time... damn you were fucking hot!"

Mindy opened her mouth to respond, but then shut it again.

"I do look good, don't I?" Mindy conceded.

I had to admit that I had been very impressed by Petra that night.

Yeah, I could have flattened her! No doubt about it, but it would have been a challenge; she was good! The main question in my mind was: where did she learn her skills? I also had other questions, but that was the main one. I would tolerate her for now – admittedly I had no choice as she just seemed to turn up, without warning!

That night

West Ridge

I was in my pyjamas and ready for bed when I heard a gentle knock on the door.

I looked up at the small screen that showed an image of the area in front of the front door. What the hell? I opened the door.

"What are you doing here?"

"I need to talk to you," Megan said, coming in.

I shut the door and followed Megan into the living room, where she sat down. I sensed that something was wrong. Dave appeared, saw Megan and frowned. I just shook my head and Dave took the hint and headed upstairs with a curious Sophia.

..._...

"You have my attention!"

"I spoke with Marcus, last night..."

"Oh – I see. You are worried about what he thinks about you, now that you have 'notches' on your belt?" I asked.

Megan scowled.

"I've been there, Megan," I said and sat down beside Megan and put my arm around the girl's shoulders. "Marcus hates what I do, he always has. Now his new daughter wants to follow the same path and has already killed people!"

"Will he hate me – he says he won't, but..."

"No, Marcus would never hate you Megan. Marcus loves me and I know that he loves you, too. He may not like what we do, but that will never change the way that he feels about either one of us."

Megan thought about this for a minute before responding.

"Am I an abomination?"

"Where the hell did you get that word from?"

"Heard it – looked it up... Am I damaged? Am I psychotic? What is wrong with me?"

"Wow there, girl! Where the hell did all that come from?" I asked. I was a little shocked by what was coming out of Megan's mouth – which was a fairly normal state of affairs, but this was different.

"Last weekend... The killing in the warehouse... I enjoyed it!" Megan said, looking horrified. "Tell me that's normal, for fuck's sake!"

"For us – it's normal. For other people – not so much!" I replied. "You are special young girl, Megan. Shit things happened to your Mom and you; but you didn't let it dictate your life – you just got on with it. Admittedly vandalising cars might not have been the best choice, but you could have made a worse decision."

"True," Megan acknowledged.

"You have a few crap years ahead of you; I'm not going to lie to you about that."

"Whatya mean?"

"Puberty sucks big time, all on its own – especially for a girl. Not to mention trying to be a vigilante at the same time! Puberty hit me later than most; I was almost thirteen. It also made me more of a bitch than I already was! Ask Dave; I actually bit him once!" I said, chuckling. "I think he still has a scar on his arm."

Megan looked a little shocked at my mention of biting Dave.

"Puberty does crap things with your mind. I had Dave to help me, as Marcus was beyond useless! You have your Mom, me, Chloe and even Curtis!"

Megan glared when I mentioned Curtis, but she also went a little pink at the sound of his name.

"So I'm normal for who I am?" Megan asked.

"Yeah... That just about sums it up. Now, tell me about Curtis!"

Megan said nothing, but just went a nice shade of pink.

"I see – it's like that is it!"

"No!"

"He kissed you again, yet?"

"No!"

"You want him to kiss you again?"

"N – Yes!" Megan admitted, blushing red now.

"Try kissing him back, instead of slapping him," I suggested with an evil smirk.

"Funny bitch!"

..._...

My cell rang – it was Marcus.

"You got mini-Mindy over there?" Marcus asked with a chuckle.

"You are so not funny, old man!" I growled. "Yes, Megan is here – she needed to talk with her big sister!"

"You keeping her for the night then, big sister?"

"You staying here, tonight?" I asked Megan, who nodded enthusiastically.

"Looks like it!"

"Okay! Night Mindy!"

"Night Marcus!"

Chapter 155*: Erika

The following morning Sunday

West Ridge

Dave had still been awake by the time I had been able to persuade Megan to get to bed in the spare room. I had explained how she felt and what I had told her.

"She's lucky to have somebody like you to talk to," Dave had commented.

"Yeah – kind of surprises me, sometimes; I'm supposed to be 'Hit Girl' not 'Agony Aunt Girl!'"

Dave and I were in the kitchen when Josh came downstairs, with Chloe behind him.

"Why did I just see Megan coming out of the bathroom?" Josh asked.

"She stayed here, last night – she needed to talk to Mindy about something," Dave said with a meaningful expression.

"Oh – I see!" Josh replied, catching on quickly.

A few minutes later a smiling Megan appeared.

"Morning world!"

"Morning Megan," Josh said politely.

"Morning runt!" Chloe said with a smirk.

"Chloe – be nice!" I suggested.

"Megan can take it – she's a hardened bitch," Chloe replied with an evil grin. "Unless Curtis kisses her; then she melts!"

"Megan! Put that knife down!" I called. "Chloe has enough wounds for now."

"Another fun day at 'The West Ridge Home for Nut Jobs!'" Dave quipped with a grin.

That afternoon

Erika came over and we met two of her friends, Hailee and Toni.

Hailee was a stunning brunette about the same height as Mindy. Her eyes were an attractive hazel colour, which went well with her long hair. She was slim and seemed, well, a little shy. While Toni was, quite literally, all over Erika and could not stop talking! In contrast, Hailee was very quiet and seemed to keep to herself. She also, apparently, hated talk about motorcycles, which Toni and Erika enjoyed immensely. Toni rode a powerful Kawasaki motorcycle and enjoyed telling stories about her and Erika on their motorcycles.

..._...

During the conversation, Josh jokingly suggested that Toni enjoyed cuddling up with Erika. Josh had expected his comment to generate a sarcastic response, but instead he was rather shocked by Erika's reply.

"She's my girlfriend," Erika said brazenly.

Josh looked confused, then his eyes went wide and he coloured slightly.

"You mean..." Josh started.

"Yes, Joshua; we are in a relationship," Erika expanded, reading his expression.

"You mean you are the, um, L-word?" Josh asked, blushing slightly.

"I assume you mean: 'lesbian', Josh?" Toni enquired with a laugh.

Josh was really blushing now!

"I'm actually bi – but currently I'm with Toni," Erika explained.

"Josh, close your mouth!" Mindy suggested.

"Wouldn't mind a bit of that action!" Josh commented, before yelling out as Chloe hit him hard. "I just meant that I wanted to see what two girls would, err, well, do together..."

"Time to leave, Joshua, before your face sets fire to something!" Chloe grinned and dragged Josh upstairs.

It was actually quite funny; Mindy seemed a little uncomfortable with the revelation, too and she actually glowered at me for smirking!

Two Days Later
Wednesday

Lake View High School

"Ah, Miss Bennett; how is your arm?"

"Very good, thank you, Mr Swanson."

"Good, good. Sorry I couldn't make the party last week. I was out of town, but I heard it was entertaining!"

"It was good, very good."

"Chloe!" A voice called – it was Avery, with Riley coming along behind.

"Be good, Miss Bennett!"

"I always am!"

Mr Swanson walked off, with a sarcastic laugh!

That Weekend
Saturday

Safehouse D

"What the hell have you done to the place?"

"Just preparing it for your next training session, young Wildcat!"

"I don't like the look of this!" Curtis moaned.

The warehouse was no longer clear, like it usually was. The small building inside the warehouse, that housed the armoury and bunks, was surrounded with piles of what could only be described as 'junk' that stretched almost to the walls of the warehouse! Titan was parked over by the main door, alongside Iron Hide. In front of me, I had Curtis, Megan, Chloe, Joshua and Erika. Standing beside me, was Dave and sniffing around the warehouse, was Sophia. We were all in our combat suits, but holding our masks.

Chloe had on her brand new combat suit, which was to the same design, but had heavier armour without an increase in weight.

"Thank you, guys – you've done well!" I said to Tony Morgan, Jack Bay and Isaac Swanson.

"It was fun!" Jack said, smiling, while Tony and Isaac nodded.

"Well, let's see what these boys and girls think of your little mess!" I grinned back.

"Now – you guys and girls know how to fight with knives, swords and guns," Dave started.

They all nodded.

"So, what do you do when you have no weapons – or when those that you have, are damaged or otherwise unusable?" Dave continued. "After Shadow's little escapade with Ralph D'Amico, she went through an intensive debrief with Mindy and I. Shadow did not enjoy herself!"

I glanced at Chloe, who looked a little unhappy. Yes, we had taken her through every second of her movements, from arrival, to being captured.

"Shadow lost the use of her pistol, through no fault of her own. The top of her spare magazine had been dented, which meant that the top round could not be stripped and moved into the chamber. That is an extreme, but you will all learn to fight with what you find around you. Hence, all this shit that you see stacked around the Safehouse," Dave finished.

"Now – you may find some surprises, as you wander around. Some of our friends are here to help today and they will try to interfere – do not hurt them! Now – all of you, remove all your weapons and place them in the armoury," I directed. "Then get your masks on."

"What!" Chloe exclaimed.

"Pistols, knives – armoury – now!"

Chloe was not happy; but she complied anyway, as did the others. Once Dave and I had checked each of them for weapons, we pulled on our masks.

"Okay, you cunts, let's see what you can do now!" I growled.

"You love that phrase, don't you?" Kick-Ass laughed.

"Hell, yeah!" I acknowledged as I killed the main lights, leaving only small lights that were scattered around the warehouse.

Safehouse D: Trojan

I did not like the look of this.

I also knew what Mindy was capable of when it came to training; Mindy's idea of training was only marginally safer than actual combat! I also knew that Mindy would do her best to keep us safe, although she generally saw small wounds as a joke.

It was dark with small patches of light. I could hear movement, scuffling. I had no weapons, except for my suit and my hands. I searched around me for anything that I could use as a weapon. The piles of rubbish and junk had all sorts of miscellaneous items sticking out. I saw a metal clothes pole and seized it. It was about three feet long and could prove useful.

What the hell?

I saw something move and then a shape came towards me. The shape had a baton, which was now moving towards my head. I intercepted the baton with my clothes pole, pushed back, and heard a familiar laugh.

"Brad?" I asked the shape. Then I felt a sharp pain as the baton struck my left arm.

"Don't lower your guard, Trojan!" Brad advised as he raised the baton to strike me again.

Instead, I blocked and then twisted the baton out of Brad's hands. I swiftly put my friend down and hog-tied him with some rope I found close by me. Ignoring the words obviously learnt from Megan, which poured out of his mouth, I moved on.

Safehouse D: Wildcat

I was not scared – I could overcome anything Hit Girl could throw at me!

First thing – I needed a weapon. I started rooting through the crap scattered around me, looking for something useful. There was nothing visible, so I moved through the semi-darkness, hunting.

Suddenly, I heard a crack and I felt something hit my chest; I was pushed backwards by the impact. Fuck it hurt! Then again a few inches from the previous impact! I looked around, almost in a panic and saw a – fuck me, a Fusion shield. I seized it up and heard the impacts of two objects on the shield.

It had to be Hit Girl – only she would fire on me without warning!

Safehouse F

"You got her, good!" I announced.

"Thanks, Battle Guy – I enjoyed that!" Lynx announced with a laugh.

"I can't believe that you would shoot your own daughter!"

"It's only a rubber bullet and her suit's armoured – she's been a bitch lately!"

"My turn!" Medic announced from Safehouse D.

"This should be good!" Hawk announced from beside me.

Safehouse D

I saw my daughter edging through the darkness.

She seemed to be armed, with a sword shaped piece of steel. Shadow was being very careful with her movements and moving like her name. I lay in ambush, armed with a five-foot wooden bō-staff – without blades. Chloe had no idea that I was familiar with that weapon. I had not even let on to Mindy.

Time to see what my new combat suit could do.

Safehouse D: Shadow

Something was up.

This smelt like an ambush. I had been in enough of the fuckers – I had learnt to sniff them out. I came to what passed as a T-junction. The bad feeling was getting worse. At least I was armed; it was only a three-foot long flat piece of steel, but it would do. I hefted it in my right hand, ready for an attack.

..._...

The attack came from nowhere, as I expected. Whoever it was, they were skilled and wore an armoured suit. The wooden bō-staff swept down and I was barely fast enough to block it before it hit me. I rolled and brought my makeshift sword around and swiped at the attacker's legs.

The attacker jumped up and drove one end of the bō-staff into my chest, shoving me backwards. I felt all my breath knocked out of me and gasped for air.

"Shadow!"

It was Jackal appearing from my left. He helped me to my feet and then stood beside me facing the unknown, masked attacker.

Safehouse D: Hit Girl

Fuck me!

The old girl could move and since when, could she use a goddamn bō-staff; that family was full of fucking surprises! She was doing well, so far. She had flattened her daughter and was now facing off against both Shadow and Jackal.

I was standing on a pile of scrap, a few yards away, hidden in the darkness. I stayed there watching the drama unfolding in front of me. Cathy was spinning the bō-staff as if she was born to it. Jackal had a pair of metal poles and Shadow a sword shaped piece of metal. Both were struggling to get past the woman in her early forties, who fought back hard and had laid each kid out at least twice!

I actually winced, each time either Shadow or Jackal received a crack from the bō-Staff. It was a hard hit – maybe Cathy was getting her own back for something!

Safehouse F

"That woman has a serious attitude – remind me never to get on the wrong side of Dr Bennett!" Battle Guy announced.

"Tell me about it – kind of explains where Shadow gets it from!" Hawk admitted.

"Oh! That must have hurt!"

Safehouse D: Kick-Ass

Shadow and Jackal both crashed to the ground – again!

This time, though, they stayed there, grimacing with pain. Medic was a serious badass with that bō-staff! Cam and I had shot rubber bullets at Wildcat, which had just seemed to piss her off. Now, I was looking for Mist.

Others were going after Wildcat!

Safehouse D: Wildcat

I was ambushed!

Fuckers!

I am gonna damn well kill 'em all!

I had been kicked to the ground by what looked like a black-clad ninja. I had never seen the outfit before, so I had absolutely no idea who it was that had attacked me. They were good though. I struck out with the shield, catching the attacker in the stomach; I then followed this up with a kick between the legs. It was a boy!

The boy was not happy and proceeded to attack me with a pair of what looked to be two-foot Escrima sticks. I used the shield to defend myself. One stick caught me on the right upper arm and it stung. Another stick caught me on my left thigh. I managed to kick out and cause the boy to cry out as I hit his right thigh hard, but he responded by using both Escrima sticks together to flip me backwards by levering both sticks under my left thigh.

I landed hard enough to knock the breath out of my lungs. My attacker rapidly vanished into the darkness, leaving me alone.

..._...

"Get up little girl – it's my turn!" Growled a familiar voice, as I saw a non-bladed bō-staff slide across the floor and stop three feet away. "Do you feel lucky, little girl? Do you think you can reach your weapon, before I put you down – permanently?"

Fucking bitch – I'll damn well put her down permanently! I had to make this movement work, or I was dead. That jumped up purple bitch, she needed to be put in her place!

I saw Hit Girl smirk, as I made my move.

Safehouse F

I had zoomed in on Wildcat and I had noticed something – I sat up straight and turned to Hawk.

"The little bitch found one!" I said. "Hit Girl is not going to be happy!"

"Damn! This is going to be awesome – I've not seen Hit Girl go ballistic since she kicked the shit out of me!" Hawk admitted.

Safehouse D: Kick-Ass

Ow!

My ear was hurting.

Hit Girl was using every foul word that she could muster. Apparently, Wildcat had just turned the tables on her. Anyway, I was still searching for the illusive Mist.

I ignored Hit Girl's foul-mouthed rant and headed deeper into the darkened warehouse.

Safehouse D: Hit Girl

I was raging!

That conniving little bitch had the nerve to fucking shoot me; with my own rubber fucking bullets! Okay, I had placed some real weapons in the scrap piles of junk that were scattered around the warehouse. Wildcat had obviously found the Glock 26 and stuck the pistol into her otherwise empty holster, earlier. I had not noticed the pistol sticking out of her holster.

Rather than just diving for the bō-staff, she had drawn the pistol and fired half a dozen rounds into my chest armour. Only then, did she dive forward, grab up the bō-staff and then sweep my feet out from under me!

I was going to kill the scrawny little fucker!

Then I heard Kick-Ass swear, almost as foul as I just had.

Safehouse D: Mist

Kick-Ass was flat on his back and I had his batons, in my left hand and his Glock 17 in my right hand and aimed at his head.

He was not carrying his Ko-Wakizashi swords today, so now he was unarmed. I had been able to come up beside him and kick him down before he had had a chance to react. I was certain that if this had been real, I would be flat on my back, but I enjoyed it while it lasted.

Kick-Ass moved, so I prodded him with his batons to remind him who was boss!

Safehouse D

The lights came on in the Safehouse.

"Okay, assholes! Debrief in three hours – Fort Fusion!"

Chapter 156*: Splinter

Three hours later
Saturday

Safehouse F

The three hours had given us all time to get out of our combat suits and grab a shower.

On the dot, we all gathered in the briefing room. I could see from some of the expressions that some people were not happy with the afternoon's results. Abby, Kim and Cathy passed around some food and drinks for everybody, before we began.

"Okay – that was a first," I commented glaring at Megan, who sat with Curtis, Brad, Cam and Tommy. She smirked back. "Now I know that some of you have questions and yes, I played a few dirty tricks – but hey, that's combat!"

…_…

"Let's start with Trojan!" Dave said, pointing to a screen that showed Trojan being attacked by Brad.

Brad was older and bigger than Curtis was, but he did well. Curtis, however was better trained and soon got the better of his attacker.

"Why did you tie Brad up?" Dave asked Curtis.

"Or has Megan got something to look forward to?" Chloe grinned, ignoring the not so friendly looks her comment had prompted from Curtis and Megan.

"So the asshole couldn't ambush me later on," Curtis said reasonably.

"Good plan – it hurt though!" Brad acknowledged, with a smirk at Curtis.

"We'll skip over the little bitch and move on to Shadow and her partner, Jackal!" I said, sending a scowl towards Megan who was smirking at me.

"You did well, Chloe," Dave said, as we watched her progress, right up to the point where she was struck in the chest. I watched Chloe absentmindedly rub her chest, which I understood was more than a little bruised! "To that point!"

"Yeah, who was that person with the goddamn bō-staff? I've never seen that combat suit before, nor do I know anybody who can wield a bō-staff like that," Chloe exclaimed, then looked at me. "Except for you, of course – oh mighty leader!"

I laughed.

"Thank you Chloe for that vote of confidence. Now, I know who was wearing that combat suit, but I have to admit that I was just as surprised as you, Chloe!" I admitted. "Care to explain yourself – Medic!"

Every head turned to stare at Doctor Cathy Bennett, sitting near the back of the room. I was pleased to see that Cathy actually blushed.

"That was Mom in that combat suit!" Chloe exclaimed incredulously.

"Awesome, Aunt Cathy!" Curtis cut in.

"When I ordered your replacement suit, Chloe, your mother asked for one and I've learnt not to argue with Doctor Cathy Bennett!"

"Mindy, Chloe – I used the Martial Arts to keep fit at Annapolis and while there, I learnt to use several different weapons; which included the bō-staff," Cathy admitted, still blushing slightly. "Besides, it was fun wiping the floor with Shadow and Jackal!"

"Great fun!" Josh said sardonically.

"You were awesome, Mom!" Chloe admitted.

"High praise from Shadow," Cathy said, smiling at her daughter.

"You were good, very good, Cathy – well done!" I said and received a nod from Cathy as thanks. "Now, Dave – want to mention Mist?"

"Funny bitch!" Dave growled. "Okay, Mist, you did very well, letting me come to you and then putting me down and seizing my weapons. Well done, Erika!"

Erika blushed wildly, as she sat next to Paige, Kim and Cathy.

"There is always an advantage to being able to choose your own field of battle. That can give you every advantage; however waiting can allow the enemy to build their forces or to get themselves acclimatized. Always a difficult decision to make," Dave explained before turning to me. "Now what about the youngest person here, eh, Mindy?"

I glowered at Dave, before staring at Megan.

..._...

"Wildcat!"

"Yes!" Megan replied defiantly.

"You had a varied afternoon. You found one of the hidden pistols – well done! I will have to return the privilege of you shooting me – six fucking times!" I growled and Megan grinned while everybody else laughed. "

"Paige would you like to let your wayward daughter into a little secret?" Dave prompted.

"Why not!" Paige said and laughed at Megan's curious expression. "It was I, dear daughter that shot you the first couple of times – after that it was Dave and Cameron."

"You'd shoot your own daughter?" Megan asked sounding very put out.

"Well, you have been more of a bitch than usual, the past week!" Paige chuckled and Megan looked a little shocked as everybody had a good laugh.

"I have a question!" Megan asked, as the laughter died down.

"Yes, little sister!" I growled.

"Who attacked me?" Megan demanded.

I could not help laughing.

"Would the mystery black ninja please show themselves," Dave asked, ignoring me.

Everybody looked around the room in expectation. Then young Tommy Morgan stood up, blushing shyly.

"You!" Megan exclaimed standing up astonished. Her expression was mirrored by many in the room.

"I – I learnt some things while I was in captivity. The third group of people I was with; they made me fight against other boys – for entertainment – I had no choice but to learn to fight. Mindy has been helping me build on those skills – in secret. Sorry Megan, you fought well!" Tommy said, lapsing into an embarrassed silence.

"I'm sorry for squishing your balls!" Megan announced, slightly embarrassed.

"They're fine – I checked!" Tommy replied, grinning.

..._...

Tommy Morgan had approached me a few months previously, at the end of January.

I had been alone at what was then Safehouse A.

Safehouse A
January 29th

At that moment, I had no idea that within a few days, I would be burning the place to the ground.

I was in the armoury when I heard a tone chime, as the side door opened. Being alone, I grabbed a pistol and a magazine, before heading out of the armoury.

"Morning, Mindy!"

"Tommy – what are you doing here? Shouldn't you be at school?"

"Yes – I should be at school, but I needed to talk to you."

The boy looked uncomfortable.

"Briefing Room," I suggested.

..._...

Once we were sitting down, Tommy started to talk.

"I owe you everything, Mindy –"

"No you don't," I interrupted.

"If you had not found me and rescued me – then I hate to think about what I would be doing right now. They used to make me fight, you know – I still have the wounds..."

"Why are you telling me this, Tommy?" I asked with concern.

"I want to help, but I know my parents would never let me. I'm also way too young, but I learnt to look after myself, during my years of captivity and like I said – I owe you and your team, Mindy. I want you to train me – I want you to help me put my past life behind me."

I shook my head.

"I don't like the idea of hiding things from your parents, Tommy. I will only train you, if your parents know. I'm happy to keep the training secret from everybody else, though – except for Dave, of course."

Tommy thought about that for a minute before replying.

"Thank you, Mindy."

Safehouse F

Dave and I had trained the boy – not that he had needed very much training.

He had picked up many good skills; he had also learnt to fight dirty, which I had found out to my cost during sparring. Tommy was strong for his age and had kept himself healthy during his captivity. I had also seen his wounds, which on an eleven-year-old boy were quite shocking. However, Tommy seemed proud of his wounds, which varied from small burns to badly healed welts on his chest, stomach and back. I had recognised the stab and slash wounds, having inflicted many myself on the enemy. He also proved to be very intelligent.

At the same time as I had obtained the new combat suits for Shadow and Medic, I had obtained a suit for Tommy.

The suit was black from head to toe and was made from a synthetic carbon-fibre material that was ultra-flexible, but provided padding and stab/slash protection. The feet were clad in custom boots with soft and flexible protected soles. The hands were enclosed in gloves that were slim and followed the contours of the hand, perfectly. His chest and back were protected with Type II armour, which was removable.

The mask was full face and covered the entire head. Voice altering technology was embedded into the mask as well. Around the waist was a utility belt that held some of the boy's weapons and equipment. In this case, a Walther P99C pistol on his right hip, spare magazines, his communications and four black titanium, throwing knives. On his back, he carried a pair of black, tactical machetes with eighteen-inch blades.

..._...

Returning to the present day.

"I suppose now is as good a time as any, to introduce our new vigilante. Fusion, please welcome: Splinter!" I announced to the room.

"Fucking cool!" Megan said, banging Tommy on the back.

There was a round of applause and calls of congratulations to Tommy. Overall, it had been a good day.

The following day Sunday

West Ridge

Things changed in quite a major way that morning.

Josh and Chloe had gone to a movie and Dave was out with Sophia. I was on the mat with Tommy. Now his training was out in the open, it made life a lot easier! For the past few months, I had had to schedule Tommy's training to when the house was empty. No more secrecy was required, thankfully.

"Hey – not damn well fair!" Tommy complained as I dropped him onto the mat.

"You're not the only one who knows how to fight dirty, kid! I was fighting dirty before you learnt to walk!"

"I fight to win, otherwise what's the point?"

"Not bad, kid!"

I pulled Tommy back up and allowed him to start another attack. I had challenged the kid to come up with something new, each week. So far, he had not tricked me, as I had seen an awful lot in my decade or more as Hit Girl. Some of his moves would out fox Chloe and Josh, but probably not Dave.

Tommy had learnt to use the human body; he had learnt the hard way where the pressure points were in the body. When possible he would target these points and relatively easily incapacitate a larger opponent. As Megan had done with him, Tommy was not afraid to target the more delicate parts of the human body – anything that gave him the edge. Men hated certain parts being kicked and women had parts that they hated to be kicked, too.

Both Tommy and I had learnt to fight where anything went – there had been no rules! I felt sorry for him, being forced into that kind of life – needing to fight to survive. I had personal experience of being forced to fight for my life and I had not enjoyed it in my early years. Finally, after another hour of fighting off the brat from hell, I decided I needed food.

"Hungry?" I asked.

"Yeah!"

We got ourselves cleaned up and headed out in the SUV.

..._...

I drove down North Kedzie Avenue, chatting with Tommy. Just as we were approaching North Lincoln Avenue where we would turn left, I heard sirens – which was nothing out of the ordinary in Chicago, only I also heard gunfire. Coming up the avenue were a couple of CPD cars, which appeared to be pursuing a green, Jeep SUV, which was swerving all over the damn avenue.

"Oh fuck!" I yelled as the oncoming SUV strayed over onto our side of the avenue.

The other side of the Avenue was filled with the two CPD cars. I had nowhere else to go, then the car in front of me slammed on its damn brakes and skidded to a halt; I jerked the wheel to the right in an attempt to go around the stopped car. Something went wrong, a tyre dug in, and I felt the three and a quarter tonne Land Rover LR4 start to flip over.

"Hold on!" I yelled, as the world turned upside down.

The roof of the LR4 hit the blacktop and the windshield cracked. It may sound stupid, but everything seemed to slow down and there was very little sound. I saw the lights of the CPD cars as we rolled in front of them. One seemed to skid in an attempt to avoid us, but then its reinforced bumper hit us hard. The LR4 performed another roll; my head hit something hard and the last thing that I remembered was the sight of the dark green water of the Chicago River through the windshield, as I sank into blackness.

Chapter 157*: Touch and Go

Sunday Afternoon

I heard the call over the radio.

I had only been a few miles down North Lincoln Avenue, on my way home, when I heard that gunshots had been reported. I hit the lights and siren, and then floored it. I didn't like the sound of gunfire this close to home; Mindy had to be involved somewhere!

I reached the scene quickly and saw a total mess on North Kedzie Avenue. There was a green SUV, buried in a parked car. I saw an ambulance cutting through the traffic and then I saw the back end of a Police Car half way down the riverbank. The bonnet and front doors were submerged, the roof-mounted lights were still flashing.

I pulled up on the bridge over the Chicago River, got out, and jogged over to the scene. For now, it looked like I would be the Senior Officer on the scene. Then my heart literally skipped a beat as I saw the backend of a Land Rover LR4, which looked suspiciously familiar, sticking out of the water. I looked more closely at the licence tag and felt sick to my stomach.

..._...

"Sergeant!" I yelled.

"Lieutenant!" The Sergeant called, jogging over.

"That Land Rover – the driver?"

"She's down there, Lieutenant – doesn't look good. A boy pulled her out, she wasn't breathing."

"Thanks, Sergeant," I said and felt numb inside.

I could see the paramedics gathered on the riverbank, gathered around somebody. I saw legs encased in wet jogging pants. Then I saw a face. Tommy's face was wet with both the river and streams of tears.

I felt cold.

Then I felt a hand in mine. I opened my eyes and tried to focus on the shadow beside me. The shadow was tall and muscular. It had to be –

"How you feeling, baby doll?"

My sight cleared and I focused on –

"Daddy?"

"I'm here, child. I'm always here when my little girl is hurt."

Then I froze.

"Where the hell am I?" I cried out, almost panicking. "You're dead!"

"Nothing gets past you, Mindy!"

"Am – I – am I – dead?"

"No, child – it's not your time – not for a long time..."

My vision went hazy and so did my mind – then everything went black.

"I was so scared. We were upside down and we slid into the river – the water was so cold."

"You're safe now."

"The Land Rover righted itself and started to sink. We were underwater – Mindy wasn't moving, I fought with my seatbelt buckle and it felt like forever before it released. Then I struggled with Mindy's and managed to release hers too. She wasn't breathing – I thought she was dead – I pushed open her door and dragged her out. A cop helped me drag her out of the water – it was horrible."

"You did well, Tommy – you may very well have saved her life."

"Only if she survives – she has to survive!" Tommy declared.

"She will, Tommy, she's survived a hell of a lot worse!" I replied as the paramedics placed my unconscious daughter into the ambulance.

Northwestern Memorial Hospital

"Where is she?" Dave demanded as he rushed up the corridor.

"Room 32 – I'm sorry Dave, it is still touch and go," I said, feeling completely empty inside. Mindy was like a daughter to me.

I followed Dave down to Room 32. It was not a pretty sight. Mindy was naked, with her modesty protected only by a white sheet. Wires ran from under the sheet to electronic devices beside her bed. A tube was down her throat and connected to another plastic tube that led to another machine. Her head had a large pad taped to one side and there were arterial lines in her arm.

I saw Dave hesitate and then stop, only feet from his fiancée.

Dave had seen Mindy beaten almost to a pulp, bleeding from numerous bullet wounds and covered in bruises. He had even seen her shot by a crossbow bolt, and then crash her motorcycle! However, this – I had seen so many people visit loved ones in that room and other rooms just like it. Nevertheless, this was the first time I had known both the person in the bed and the person visiting.

I could not have felt any worse, if it had been Chloe in that bed.

Two hours later

I felt so damned helpless.

Seeing Mindy just lying there – it was unbearable. I had sat staring at the most important person in my life for the past two hours. Mindy's vitals had picked up about half an hour or so ago and the tube had been removed from her throat. Cathy kept appearing to check on me, but I could tell that she was struggling with it too. Cathy was a senior doctor here and she had ensured that Mindy had received the best of everything. I felt somebody sit down in the chair beside me and cuddle in to the side of me. It was Chloe.

"I'm so sorry, Dave."

Chloe had tears running down her face. Looking at Chloe, I had a thought just then and laughed. Chloe looked up at me, appalled that I could laugh at a time like this.

"Considering what else has happened to her – it's kind of funny that Mindy ends up in hospital after something as mundane as a car crash!" I explained weakly.

Chloe actually grinned a little.

"It is rather nuts!" She agreed.

Four hours later

I awoke again.

This time I was alone – or at least I thought I was. I could not hear any voices, just the sound of machines. I hoped that I was really awake this time. I looked around me – I was in a hospital bed, my mouth and throat were dry. I felt around with my hands; I was naked and there were tubes in my arm and wires on my chest. My head hurt, too.

The room was dark, but I could make out two shapes sitting beside the bed. I recognised the larger shape as Dave and then realised that the smaller shape was Chloe. They were both fast asleep, with Chloe cuddling into Dave.

..._...

A shadow moved into the doorway.

"So, young lady, you've decided to wake up!" Cathy announced.

"Thought it was about time," I croaked. Cathy helped me to sip some water from a glass with a straw.

"Sips – no gulps!"

How long have they been here?" I asked, indicating Dave and Chloe.

"Dave, about six hours; Chloe, about four hours. Marcus was here for a couple of hours, but he had to leave. You scared us Mindy."

"What happened?" I asked. I couldn't remember anything at all after leaving the house.

..._...

"You drove the goddamn Land Rover into the goddamn river!" Another voice announced. "You really need to learn to damn well drive – people like you give women drivers a bad name!"

Cathy turned and I saw Paige and Megan. I tried not to laugh at Megan, but failed and I saw a look of panic on her face.

"I'm okay, Megan," I croaked to reassure her.

"I heard swearing. That must mean either Megan's here or Mindy's awake!" Dave said, waking up and coming over to me smiling broadly.

"Funny cunt!" Megan said for us both, with a smirk in my direction.

Chloe woke up, too and looked very pleased to see that I was awake.

"Right – too many people – Mindy needs her rest!" Dr Cathy Bennett announced, wiping away a tear.

The next day
Monday

Northwestern Memorial Hospital

The boy looked nervous.

"I think we're even now – don't you?" I suggested with a grin. "You don't owe me anything."

"I suppose so," Tommy said, blushing.

"I understand from Marcus that you gave me the 'kiss of life'," I said and the boy blushed even more.

"Somebody had to do it," Tommy said smiling.

"Remember – she's mine!" Dave quipped with a smile. "All future kissing is done by me!"

I glared at Dave.

"Oh, I brought you some fresh clothes – considering you trashed the ones you were wearing," Dave said innocently. "I brought the purple bra and knickers."

I felt myself blushing now and Tommy laughed to cover his own embarrassment.

Marcus had appeared earlier that morning and we had spent half an hour talking. He had explained what had occurred at the scene. Apparently, the two escaping gunmen were dead – killed when they crashed their SUV as they had tried to avoid me. I was actually pleased – saved me from having to go after the bastards. Dave had then appeared with Tommy, who was desperate to see how I was.

I grinned at Tommy. "He only brought me those, 'cause he likes to remove them rather quickly – he says they put him in the mood!" I teased and laughed at Tommy's expression of horror.

"I don't think you are ready for any exertions, Mindy," Cathy announced, sweeping into the room. "Definitely not that sort!"

"Okay – but can I at least think about what I am not allowed to do, even though I am not allowed to actually do it?" I asked facetiously.

"Knock yourself out – figuratively speaking of course!" Cathy replied, laughing.

Four days later
Friday

West Ridge

"You are staying in bed, my girl!" Marcus insisted as I started to complain. "At least until tomorrow."

"I'll make sure she stays in bed!" Megan announced, grinning at Mindy.

"Okay, I'll be a perfect little angel," Mindy said sweetly.

"Bullshit!" Marcus said as he headed out of the room.

Mindy was not a good patient.

She even managed to push Megan to her limit. I tried to explain to Megan, who was doing as much as she possibly could for Mindy that Mindy hated being stuck in one place. I also told Megan that Mindy really did appreciate her help, even if the moody bitch refused to admit it!

Just about everybody, appeared to check on Mindy during the day. Some even brought flowers! Mindy did not approve of flowers all that much – too girly she said. I reminded her with a few carefully phrased, whispered comments, which made her blush furiously, that she was in fact a girl!

"What you whispering to Mindy?" Megan asked, curiously.

"Never you mind, little one!" Mindy spluttered trying to hide her embarrassment at my comments.

Megan just scowled.

The following afternoon
Saturday

West Ridge

Thank fuck for that!

Those assholes allowed me out of bed, at long bloody last! I still had a small gauze pad, taped to the left of my forehead but otherwise I was healed – according to Dr Bennett. According to me, I had been fine for the past few days!

I was annoyed that I had totalled the LR4, but very glad that neither Tommy, nor I, had any lasting damage. In fact, I owed that kid a lot – first time I'd been kissed by an eleven year-old too! Well, he must have been a good kisser, as he did get me breathing again!

Marcus had been over to tell me about his new job. He was now the head of the new Organised Crime Taskforce. He would be based at District 21, along with Voight and he would be targeting the Russian Mafia and other organisations like them. Marcus was really looking forward to this new job and I wished him well with it.

That evening

Safehouse F

I had a fucking mutiny on my hands.

"You are not going out Mindy Macready!" Dave insisted. "You shouldn't even be here!"

"Dave – for your own safety – stay out of my way – I am getting my combat suit on!"

Next thing I knew, Dave had me in a bear hug and Chloe wrapped duct tape around my ankles and wrists. I was mad and I made Tommy blush with my comments.

"Are you going to be quiet or do I need to tape that sewer you call a mouth?" Megan asked sweetly, holding up a roll of purple duct tape.

I scowled at the little girl who never flinched. She just grinned at me and waved the roll of duct tape. Dave deposited me in the Command Centre and gave me a very nice kiss! On the way out the door, Megan patted me on the head.

"Be good, young lady."

Chapter 158*: The Mutinous Fusion

The same evening
Saturday

Safehouse F

Okay, I was mad at them for tying me up.

Nevertheless, in a weird way, I kinda liked it! Marty cut me loose after the team had left in Iron Hide. However, he insisted that I had better behave and pointed to the Taser on the desk beside him. I glowered at him, but laughed.

I knew why they did it and I actually felt a little humbled by it. They all cared about me; sometimes I forgot that. Still, it was absolute hell sitting on the sidelines and watching my team go into action without me. Nevertheless, I knew that I could still stay in contact and help them as much as I could from the Control Centre.

Megan and Curtis were sparring on the mat – tonight was not their night for going out; I was still a little over-protective, where those two were concerned.

"What a good girl!"

I turned to find Cathy smirking at me and I actually blushed.

"Gee, thanks Cathy!" I growled back grinning.

"I'll get you two some food," Cathy said, heading off upstairs.

"Does nobody trust me?" I growled to nobody in particular.

"We trust you, Mindy – we just know you, that's all!" Marty replied, grinning at me.

Time to change the subject.

"Hey, green asshole!" I called over the comms.

"How's my good little girl?" Kick-Ass responded.

"Looking to have the bed to herself tonight?" I retorted.

"Never gonna happen! You never did like DIY!" Kick-Ass replied, starting a chorus of laughter over the comms. I blushed and tried to hide it from Marty – I was speechless.

"Kick-Ass, Battle Guy – err – she may not be wearing purple, but her face most definitely suits her!"

The funny bastards finally got bored of winding me up and got down to what I had trained the cunts for in the first place!

I sat with Marty and Cathy, eating some pancakes and syrup – my favourite comfort food! Just as I had finished my last mouthful, the call that I had been dreading came in.

"Contact! Contact! Contact!" It was Shadow's voice, calm and in control. "Jackal flank to the left with Mist – I'll take the right with Kick-Ass."

Dave and I had decided that it was time for Chloe to start learning some leadership skills and letting her take charge – she had to learn one day!

"Battle Guy – we have six Krysha – we surprised them fucking up a store. Protection racket if ever I saw one!" Shadow reported.

"You go girl!" Kick-Ass commented.

"Enough from you Kick-Ass – get moving!"

"I think command has gone to her head," Cathy commented.

I was listening to everything that went on and doing my best not to intervene. I knew I should not second-guess Chloe – she was the one on the scene and above all, she knew how to keep a level head when everything went to shit. I still found it difficult, though.

"Jackal – on your left!" Mist's voice.

"Oh, yeah – ten rounds plus head equals stir-fry, baby!" Jackal replied.

I laughed and even Cathy grinned.

"We're not going for style points, Jackal – just kill the fuckers!" Shadow pointed out.

"I think I need to have words with Little Miss Bossy!" I whispered to Cathy who simply nodded.

"Four Krysha down – last pair taking cover behind their SUV!" Kick-Ass reported.

"Let 'em go!" Shadow announced, taking Kick-Ass' hint.

I was pleased. Shadow had done well, despite getting herself a tiny bit carried away with being in charge!

"Fusion check in!" Shadow called.

"Jackal clear!"

"Mist clear!"

"Kick-Ass clear!"

"Battle Guy, Shadow – Fusion is clear!"

"Battle Guy copies Fusion is clear. Well done, Shadow – Hit Girl wants a word..."

"Good, Shadow – very good!" I said.

"I'm glad you guys can't see my face – damn it's hot under this mask; I think I'm blushing!" Shadow replied.

I laughed and suggested she get her team back on the road.

"Hit Girl – Fusion is rolling!"

It seemed that the Russians were back to their normal tricks: in this case extortion for protection.

There was a lot of Chicago to protect and we could not protect it all. All we could do was set boundaries and then dare the Krysha to cross them. Well, we could handle the bastards; we had on several occasions before. I was pleased that Shadow was not intimidated by them and was still able to direct her operatives. I knew that Shadow thought nothing about ordering Kick-Ass around! Shadow was very like me – we both saw the opposite sex as inferior to us women and felt that we had a God given right to order them around.

I was also extremely relieved when Iron Hide rolled into the Safehouse and all dismounted without injury.

"Well done Shadow!" I said, as the girl removed her mask; she was blushing badly.

"It was good," Dave commented. "I'm used to being ordered around by over-bearing bitches with a God complex!"

That got a laugh from everybody and had me blushing; I just scowled at Dave in return. We then got serious and spent the next hour debriefing Chloe and going through her thoughts of the evening. Her thought processes had been spot on; I was impressed. In a little over two months, Chloe would be fifteen. She was developing into both a stunning young woman and a front-line vigilante.

Two days later
Monday evening

Safehouse F

There were no patrols scheduled for tonight, but I was busy getting my body back into shape.

Cathy had given me a clean bill of health – somewhat reluctantly! I was pounding the weights when Dave came in with Josh.

"A hot sweaty woman – now that's a turn on!"

"Joshua, that woman you are talking about; she just happens to be my fiancée!" Dave laughed. "But damn it, you're bang on!"

I blushed at the compliments! I was about to make a snide remark, but that was when my cell rang – it was one of our snitches, or rather it purported to be.

"Go ahead!" I growled and was very surprised by the response.

"Same place – I'll be waiting with a package for you!"

Dave studied my expression, after I hung up, for a minute before speaking.

"Trouble?" He asked.

"Kind of – it was Petra!"

Thirty minutes later, we were speeding through the darkened streets of western Chicago.

I was leading, on my freshly repaired Ducati and behind me was Jackal on his 'stolen', Kawasaki Ninja ZX-10R. The motorcycle had been totally rebuilt, tuned and repainted in Tan. It also sported the licence plate: JACKAL. He was lucky; the motorcycle had been removed from Safehouse A only a few days before the place had been destroyed. Kick-Ass followed Jackal, on his Diavel. Between us, we sported an engine capacity of nearly two and a half litres and over five-hundred horsepower. Thankfully, Jackal was not power-mad like Shadow, so he could be trusted with such a high-performance motorcycle.

..._...

We pulled into White Eagle Woods South, and found Petra sitting calmly on her Honda Fireblade. Petra dismounted and walked over to Jackal. She looked him up and down and checked out his wheels.

"See something you like?" Jackal growled.

"You look, um, very good close up and the wheels are fucking cool!" Petra replied.

"Would you two like some time alone?" I asked, shaking my head.

"Well –!" Jackal started to reply.

"Think very carefully before you say another word!" Shadow growled over the comms. "My knife is very sharp –"

"No thanks, Petra – I'm already spoken for!" Jackal replied.

"Your loss!"

"When you've finished trying to make out with Jackal, please let us know why we are here!" I growled impatiently.

"Oh – sorry!" Petra replied and ran over to some trees and returned a minute later dragging something.

..._...

"Fuck me!" I growled as I recognised what Petra was dragging.

"Hit Girl, I believe you are acquainted with Regina!" Petra announced, dumping her cargo on the blacktop.

The assassin was bleeding from several wounds and seemed to have a broken left wrist, which was crudely bandaged. The woman was grimacing in pain. I looked at Petra, but thanks to the full-face mask, I saw no emotion – was she happy that Regina was banged up? I felt nothing for Regina and felt no emotions as Regina looked up at me with a pleading look.

"I owe the bitch – she killed somebody very close to me," Petra said with a large helping of malice in her electronic voice.

"Why?" I asked simply.

Petra shrugged before replying.

"I want to prove to you that I am on your side; that I am not your enemy."

"I know that dumb-ass!" I replied.

"Just wanted to make sure..."

"So what do you want to do with her?" Kick-Ass asked, directing his question at both Petra and myself.

"Her death means more to you, than me," I offered.

Petra nodded and flexed her hands in her gloves.

"You gonna let her kill Regina?" Jackal asked me.

"Yeah."

Regina looked pathetic; she was shaking. She looked from mask to mask, but since I had changed to a full-face mask, this week, she could see no emotion to support her.

"You can't let her kill me!" Regina begged, reaching out for my boot; I took a step back.

"Get it over with, Petra – Kick-Ass always complains when I play with my prey, before killing it!"

Petra nodded, before circling the ill-fated Regina. Then she drove straight in, attacking the former assassin and kicked Regina in the face, sending her sprawling. Blood flew from Regina's smashed nose and she screamed with the pain. Regina held up a hand, begging for mercy, but Petra drew one of her swords and severed the hand. Then, as Regina held her arm in front of her, staring in shock at the severed limb, Petra swung the blade again and severed the upraised arm at the elbow.

Regina fell back, screaming and next to go were her feet, followed by her lower legs. Regina had passed out by that point and I could hear Jackal in my headset; he was appalled by what he was witnessing. The way that Kick-Ass stood and gazed at me through his mask, said the same thing. Kick-Ass had seen many violent things, indeed many perpetrated by yours truly; but I drew the line at extreme sadism – for most criminals anyway.

Finally, Petra stood back and I stepped forwards to deliver the coup de grace with my .40-calibre Glock 23 Gen 4 pistol. I fired one round through Regina's forehead and ignored the rest of the scattered body parts.

..._...

"You happy?" I asked evenly, turning to Petra.

"Yes – her death puts many things behind me," Petra commented.

As Petra turned to go, I grabbed her arm.

"You are an ally, Petra – never forget that; you helped us when we needed it. I respect that." I handed Petra a cell phone. "You need us, you call us!"

"Thanks – if I need you, I'll call!" Petra said, adding. "You need me – you call, Fusion!"

With that, Petra mounted her Fireblade and burnt rubber out of the parking lot; she had not looked at the remains of Regina, once.

The next morning
Tuesday

West Ridge

"Please tell me that you weren't slicing and dicing, last night!"

"No Marcus, I never used a blade, last night," I replied honestly.

"She's telling the truth, Marcus," Dave added.

"So the single bullet through the head was you, then?"

"Can't a lady have any secrets?"

"When you become a lady, then yes – you can have secrets!" Marcus grinned, heading for the door before stopping short. "Oh, by the way – keep August 29th free!"

"Why?" I asked curiously.

"Wedding bells!"

Chapter 159*: Turning Point

Three days later
Friday

West Ridge

Things were changing in Chicago.

Not for the better, either!

I had no idea where things were going, but it was heading back to the bad old days of being a vigilante.

We had new Mayor and he had brought along people who played his tune!

Chicago Police Department
District 21

"Good morning, ladies and gentlemen!"

"Morning, sir!" The gathered Police Officers called out as a resounding greeting to the new Chicago Police Department Superintendent.

"Good to see you all! I am Superintendent Trevor Howards and I intend to put the Mayor's ideas into practice as far as the Chicago Police Department is concerned."

The new Superintendent prattled on for almost an hour, detailing his history and his view of crime fighting. That was before he went on about how he wanted the Chicago Police Department to be perceived by the public.

..._...

Then he put both feet into his pet hate.

Vigilantism.

"They are not superheroes; they are people with personality disorders. They must be eradicated from this City."

"Hit Girl and Kick-Ass are not our enemies, Sir!" Murphy complained and received a loud murmur of assent from the other assembled Police Officers.

"Ah! You must be Sergeant Murphy and that must be your partner, Sergeant Fellowes – the, so called, 'Fusion Cops!'" The Superintendent said dryly. "Now this Hit Girl and her partner in crime, Kick-Ass, are a scourge on society. They exhibit what is bad about society. They began their criminal acts in the City of New York and then they came here to do the same – that will not be tolerated. They are criminals. Vigilantism is a crime!"

"But, Sir..." Murphy persisted.

"No, Murphy! While some may say that their being here is making the City safer, others know, full well, that they make things worse. Hit Girl is a mass-murderer of immense proportions, hell-bent on revenge. Kick-Ass, while his reasons for being may have been genuine, he ultimately became a menace to society." There was a murmur of anger, which rippled through the Police Officers at those words. "I will clamp down on these vigilantes! Now, why is that you two cannot be like Lieutenant Williams? This Officer is a glowing example of the calibre of Police Officer that we need in this City. He fought against these outrageous vigilantes, in New York City and came here to help us fight them in Chicago."

Marcus looked at the two Sergeants, trying to keep a straight face.

"Lieutenant Williams would never have anything to do with these damn vigilantes – he would never consort with them, like you do. He hates everything about them and everything that they stand for. He would never associate himself with the likes of Hit Girl and Kick-Ass!" The Superintendent said, finally finished.

"I suppose he wouldn't!" Fellowes commented dryly, playing the game.

..._...

The Superintendent studied the two Police Officers as a spider might contemplate a fly caught in her web.

"Lieutenant Williams is standing up the Organised Crime Taskforce – I think that you two should get out of uniform and join him! Maybe you can learn about vigilantism; not to mention why it is such a menace to our City."

"Thank you, Sir – we shall look forward to that!" Fellowes announced.

West Columbia

Marcus was playing this close to his chest.

I almost pissed myself laughing when he told me about the new CPD Superintendent and his view on Hit Girl. Then Marcus wiped the smile off my face – the new Superintendent was coming to visit his star Lieutenant and I was expected to attend.

"What!" I blurted out. "Have you finally lost your fucking marbles?"

"Mindy, it is important – I couldn't exactly say no, could I?" Marcus asked reasonably.

"But he's the top man!" I growled. "And by the sounds of it – the enemy!"

"Well, you and Megan will just have to be perfect little ladies for an hour or so!" Marcus insisted.

"Like Mindy could ever be a perfect little lady!" Megan quipped.

"You enjoy breathing? You want to reach puberty?" I growled back, scowling at the smirking, little bitch.

"Girls!" Marcus said loudly to get our attention.

"Yes, Marcus!" We both responded, smiling innocently.

"Oh dear – I'm having second thoughts, now!" Marcus said, grimacing at Paige, who just laughed at Marcus.

The following evening Saturday

West Columbia

Marcus answered the door, when Superintendent Trevor Howards arrived.

"Welcome, Sir. This is my fiancée, Paige and her daughter, Megan, while this is my daughter, Mindy."

I smiled uncomfortably and shook hands with the senior Police Officer. We all went through to the living room and sat down – I was glad that this was only a short visit and not a meal. Dave had thought it very funny, when I had told him what was happening. He also suggested packing, as no doubt I would end up killing the Chicago Police Department's new Superintendent! I swore to Dave that I would behave, but I didn't think that he believed me.

..._...

After the usual bullshit covering the first forty minutes, the senior Cop turned to me.

"I hear that your wealth is due to your father's acquittal, of all wrong doing, in New York. A fine example of a real Police Officer, you must be very proud of him. I assume that an upstanding Officer, like your father, would never have anything to do with these vigilantes, such as Hit Girl. He must have been a real inspiration to you, Mindy."

"Oh, he was. He taught me everything that I know," I replied, fighting desperately to keep a straight face. "I would not be the woman I am today, without him."

Out of the corner of my eye, I saw Megan about to explode as she tried to stop herself laughing. Marcus looked uncomfortable too.

"It is so very good to know that you and your family are so anti-vigilante. Truly a breath of fresh air!" The superintendent commented. "Marcus has told me all about how you teach self-defence to women and children at your training centre. I am impressed, especially as I hear that you give discounts to members of the CPD."

"Not a fucking word!" Marcus breathed as he closed the door.

Paige, Megan and I just all burst out laughing!

"Sam and Paul did the exact same thing when that asshole left the District!" Marcus said. "You should have heard what Voight had to say about him; he was scathing."

"I thought my sides were going to explode!" Megan said when she finally finished laughing.

..._...

I left Marcus and walked home.

"We need to leave town?" Dave asked. "I heard no sirens, so I assume our secrets are safe!"

"Dickhead!" I breathed, pushing past the grinning asshole.

Well I had the measure of the new problem. It looked like we would need to watch our backs from the Chicago PD, now. It shouldn't be too bad, as Marcus was leading the taskforce that was hunting us! However, if Marcus did not accomplish anything – he would be replaced. I had some planning to do; I had to protect my team.

I called everybody in to the Safehouse, for the following morning.

The next morning Sunday

Safehouse F

I gazed at my team.

Kick-Ass, Shadow, Jackal, Battle Guy, Hawk, Mist, Trojan, Wildcat and Splinter. Not to mention Medic and Lynx.

"Times are changing!" I began. "The City is now against us – we are the enemy, as far as the CPD are concerned. Nevertheless, that does not mean that we hurt Cops – we do not hurt uniforms, period!"

For once, there was no joking; everybody was taking this change of events seriously. I was glad they were, too; the possibilities scared the crap out of me! We would be looking over both shoulders for an enemy we could kill and an annoyance that we could not.

We would come under a lot of scrutiny as we were hunted by friend and foe, alike. Our security would have to be ramped up. Everybody had to be extra careful. I had already spoken with Marty and he was increasing physical and electronic security for all the Safehouses and our homes. We would not be able to cruise around on our motorcycles, as we once could.

Since coming to Chicago, and setting up Fusion; we had moved out of the shadows and were on public view. People felt safe when they saw us. Now, we needed to return to the shadows, where I had learnt my trade. Of everybody in front of me that morning, only Dave knew about keeping to the shadows. The rest were too new to the game, except maybe for Marty – he knew about the seedier side of being a vigilante.

..._...

"Now, you guys need to learn some counter-surveillance techniques. We will be restricting access to the Safehouses, to preserve their anonymity. This place will be stocked up, in case of siege. You will all come under scrutiny, as the CPD hunt us down. You must resist the urge to do anything which might attract attention to yourselves and thus risk your most prized possession – which is?" I asked.

Megan was jumping up and down as if she was on a pogo stick!

"Yes, Wildcat!"

"Our secret identities," Megan said seriously.

"Very good, Wildcat!"

"Your secret identity is yours and yours alone. Nobody must be able to link your vigilante identity to your secret identity. With a group like ours, just one person being identified could lead directly to others," Dave explained. "This also means that changes need to be made to our daily habits. People should never see us all together, in case people start to join the dots. Continue with your daily lives, go to school – do everything that a normal person would do."

"Think about what you do, before you do it. Speak to Dave, Marty or myself, if you are concerned about security in any way! There cannot be any lapses – I don't want any of you to be put away for life – or worse," I continued. "If you are chased by the Cops – evade, do not get into a fight. We cannot risk a Cop being injured – we still have friends in the CPD, but they may be forced to turn against us if we hurt Cops."

"Remember – never use your Fusion identity when out of your combat suits. Conversely, when in your combat suits, never use real names. It is a very good habit to get into; it just takes one slip... We are sorry to scare you like this, but we need to get the message across; especially to our younger and newer members."

That night

West Ridge

"Today really sucked!"

"It had to be done, Mindy."

"I know, Dave, but..."

Everything that we had built was now in danger. All because of some self-righteous asshole! We would survive and Fusion would continue. Hit Girl and Big Daddy had survived for years in the shadows. Kick-ass had also survived our early time in Chicago, with me.

"You have taught them all well, Mindy – as you taught me. We have survived a lot of shit, together. If somebody ever wrote a story about us, this event would be a long way away from the end of Kick-Ass and Hit Girl!"

"If anybody ever did write a story about us – it would have to be 'M' rated!"

"Why? Oh..." Dave tailed off as I dropped the last item of my clothing onto the floor.

"I think we could do better than an 'M' rating!" I teased, my breathing getting heavier as I saw something rising steadily, in my fiancée's shorts.

"I agree!" Dave commented, as his lips met mine and I felt a tingling sensation down being my belly button and then I gasped as a finger found its way into the very warm and very damp region, between my legs.

I gasped, louder than I had expected.

There was a banging on the door.

"Hey! Can't you two fuck quietly?" Josh growled, angrily.

"Noisy cunts!"

"You can talk 'screamer!'" Josh commented with a chuckle as he closed and locked the door.

"Let's out scream them, then!"

Josh shrugged off his shorts and crawled onto the bed before running his fingers down my stomach and between my legs. His other hand massaged my chest, as only he could. Damn, Josh knew where to put his hands and what to do once his hands got there. The tingling turned into electric shocks – Josh said I was sensitive; maybe I was!

"Oh God!" I screamed.

Authors Note: At this point, you are strongly advised to read the story: Knife Edge, for the next events in the Forsaken timeline. You can ignore the story, but events in Knife Edge will be referred to from time to time. Chapter 160 of Forsaken continues three weeks after the end of this chapter (Chapter 159). For those who have already read Knife Edge, changes and updates have been made to that story to bring it into line with Forsaken.

Chapter 160*: Into The Danger Zone

Author's Note: This chapter (Chapter 160) of Forsaken picks up three weeks after Chapter 159. The events in between these two chapters are covered by another one of my stories: Knife Edge and you are advised to read that story before starting this chapter.

Monday morning

West Ridge

The intention was to set sail in a weeks' time, next Monday morning.

There was a lot to be done, not to mention keeping an eye on the City and the ongoing changes. Marcus was still refusing to use my yacht's proper name. That was getting on my nerves, but the stubborn old man would not budge! That kinda gave me an idea for a wedding present for Marcus and Paige; something that I could have some fun with.

Weddings!

With the wedding of Marcus and Paige coming up, people were talking about nothing else, which I was finding a tad annoying! One wedding also led to talk of other weddings; those same people had started dropping hints about Dave and myself.

Some of the hints, though, were not subtle – at all!

Marty: "So when are you cunts getting hitched?"

Megan: "Will I be a bridesmaid?"

Sam Fellowes: "You need to at least try and make an honest woman out of her, Dave!"

Cathy: "You getting married before you have kids!"

Not to mention my favourite: "That wild bitch needs you, Dave!"

Marcus could be so elegant at times!

I had hoped that the Fusion mutinous streak from a few weeks ago was gone, but no, it was still firmly out in the open and thriving, as it tried to catch me out!

..._...

On top of all the shit that was going on, Megan was going through a 'weird' phase: despite still being wounded, she had managed to find time to dye her hair. It was no longer the cute auburn colour, which went well with her gunmetal blue eyes, but black with a red streak on the right-hand side. Paige thought Megan was trying to make a point, although what the point was, I had no idea.

Chloe had thought that Megan's new hair looked cool and therefore she had then reverted her own hair back to its original blonde colour, with a purple streak on the right-hand side as before. Chloe's hair was no longer short, as it had been when we had first found her, but her hair now fell to below her shoulders.

"So?" Dave had asked.

"So, what?"

"You going back to blonde?" Dave had enquired somewhat hopefully. I knew that he loved and preferred my blonde hair.

I had considered his question for a few minutes, before responding.

"I'm staying like this for now – maybe after our cruise; we'll see."

That night

Somewhere in Chicago

We were testing the new 'regime' as I liked to call it.

Just Kick-Ass and Hit Girl. We were out on our motorcycles and patrolling the darker Chicago neighbourhoods. I was actually pleased to see that we still received one or two discrete nods from parked Cops! However, I had received three totally separate warnings before we had gone out that evening. Jack Bay, Hank Voight and Marcus had all warned me about some fresh, new Cops that had appeared in the ranks over the past two weeks. These seemed to be under the direct control of the Superintendent and were out for blood. More specifically vigilante blood!

Something else was going on, too. I had no idea if it was part of the new 'anti-vigilante' thing, or something completely different. I felt like I was being followed. It was what Dave called my 'purple-sense'. I could not put my finger on anything, but I knew that I was in some form of potential danger. I was also certain that I had spotted a black SUV, more than once – it was an older model and would not normally have stuck out; but thanks to the 'anti-vigilante' problem, my senses were heightened.

Kick-Ass said that I was being paranoid, as he had not seen the SUV once. Kick-Ass, though, did not have the training and experience that I had – I just knew that something wasn't right. This feeling plagued me all night until I was finally distracted by something else.

Something familiar.

Later that night

I received a text.

The display in my visor advised me that it was the cell, which I had provided for Petra, almost four weeks previously. The message consisted of a single word, followed by a location.

'HELP. S WOOD AND S BLUE ISLAND.'

That address was on the Lower West Side. I called Battle Guy and asked him to check into the location while Kick-Ass and I changed direction and headed south.

..._...

As we approached the cross-section, I could hear gunfire, and then as we got closer, I could see four Police SUVs with eight Police Officers shooting at something or somebody. I pulled over to the side of the road to assess the situation and called Petra.

"Where are you?"

"I'm being engaged by the Cops and I don't know why!"

"Long story, can you disengage?"

"I'll need a distraction."

"I'll distract them, you go with Kick-Ass," I advised before dropping the call.

..._...

We split up, Kick-Ass keeping to the shadows and moving to the left of the CPD, while I headed directly towards their rear. As I approached, I revved my engine loudly and span my rear wheel creating noise and smoke, which attracted the attention of two of the Officers who turned around and shot at me – I was much more of a catch than Petra!

I rode fast, continuing to produce smoke as a distraction. These Cops were not the usual sort; they all wore overt upper body armour and their SUVs seemed lightly armoured too. These had to be some of the 'new' Cops that I had been warned about by Marcus and the others. They were all armed with automatic weapons, which considering who they were hunting was not all, that unexpected.

"Hit Girl! Petra and Kick-Ass are clear!" I heard over the comms and accelerated away followed by two of the SUVs.

The other two SUVs had gone after Kick-Ass and Petra.

I flew south, along South Ashland Avenue, heading south.

Petra easily followed my every move, as we made to evade the pursuing CPD SUVs. We were nowhere near a regular Safehouse, but the nearest Safehouse would have to do for now. I turned left, following the guidance that was displayed on my visor. Battle Guy had seen where I was and had provided me with directions to Safehouse K.

The SUVs never saw my sharp turn and continued straight while we accelerated away before the CPD noticed their mistake and doubled back. They were quick; I noticed the flashing blue lights reappear in my rear view mirrors very quickly. We raced along West 34th Street and then onto South Iron Street before I swerved to the right, up an alley between two buildings and saw a steel gate close automatically behind Petra as she followed in my tracks.

Then on the left, a dozen or so yards from the end of the building, a door opened that was just wide enough to allow our two motorcycles to pass in single file. The moment we Petra passed the door closed and a heavy steel shutter dropped, covering the doorway.

"Kick-Ass, I'm bringing the Safehouse systems online..."

Lights clicked on all around us as we sat astride our motorcycles. We were in a large room with no windows and bare concrete for the floor. Above us, the ceiling appeared to be solid concrete.

"All the comforts of home!" I commented.

"We must keep some secrets, my love!" Hit Girl commented over the comms.

"Well, we'll settle in and await the all clear!" I replied dryly sitting down beside the motorcycles.

Petra sat down opposite me.

"You hurt?" I asked.

"Some bruises from the bullets – but I'll be fine."

"The CPD has some new enforcers on a mission to remove vigilantes from the City of Chicago!" I advised my fellow vigilante.

"That sucks!" Petra replied in her electronic voice. "How long we need to wait in this, err, palace!"

"An hour maybe," I replied hopefully.

The following morning – early! Tuesday

"You took your fucking time!" I growled, three and a half hours later, as I met up with Hit Girl outside the Safehouse.

"These new Cops are not your average Cops – I'm certain they are ex-Special Forces. They are careful – too careful."

"Nice – just what we don't need!" I commented as we loaded my Diavel and Petra's Fireblade onto the back of Iron Hide.

Hit Girl was driving, with Shadow literally riding shotgun with my Remington Model 870 Express Tactical held in both hands. She actually looked kinda cool, as she stood guard!

We dropped Petra off, well to the west and she waved, as she rode off.

Safehouse F

"So, you and Petra get up to anything in the Safehouse?" Shadow asked with a grin, as she stowed her weapons in the armoury.

"You get up to anything with Mindy when you shared that bath in New York?" I replied with a wink.

The look on both girl's faces was priceless as their mouths dropped open, but not exactly friendly!

Chapter 161*: Hiding

Later that morning
Tuesday

"Hey lazy tits – it's time to get the fuck up!"

"Fuck off Josh!"

Josh laughed.

"I know how to wake you up..."

"Don't even think about it, cunt!" I warned meaningfully. "Already occupied!"

"Bloody hell!" Josh said with a laugh.

"You got it in one – you're learning," I said, glaring at my boyfriend.

Late night, plus period, equalled very grumpy Chloe!

"What's up?" Dave asked later.

"Nothing," I groaned.

Mindy laughed. "He's not gonna be getting laid for the next few days!"

"I know how you feel!" Dave commented with a genuine smile.

"Assholes!" Mindy growled and made a point of violently chopping the ends off all of her sausages and then mutilating what remained.

"Anyone else and I'd laugh," Josh commented dryly before turning to Sophia. "And don't you get any ideas, either."

Sophia just sat there, licking her lips.

"You're lucky, she's already had hers!"

The events of the previous night had worried me.

I had not been able to sleep much, what with thinking about everything that had happened. I had considered putting Fusion into hiding for the duration, but that would just send a bad signal to the criminal fraternity of Chicago, not to mention elsewhere. Eventually I had gotten myself up, where I had then sat with Sophia, on the couch in the living room, and started writing ideas down and almost instantly crossing them out. The crossed out ideas included whacking all the new Cops and the new Mayor as well as the new Superintendent. I had even considered moving out of Chicago completely and finding yet another City to call home.

All were stupid ideas and most would just end up with us all in prison, or worse. I was not about to retreat either – Daddy would turn over in his grave! I had a responsibility to the City of Chicago and I was not about to run out on that responsibility.

That afternoon
D-JAK

"I need a break!"

"You turning into a pussy, or something?" Zach asked.

"You want me to kick your balls somewhere where they won't drop till you're thirty?" Megan responded.

"Megan!" Paige called over sharply, before going back to her work.

"Snarky, 'ain't she?" Nikki suggested with a grin. "Maybe, she's not so tough anymore."

"Maybe, I'll jam my foot up your snatch!" Megan said quietly, so her Mother could not overhear.

"I'll pass, if you don't mind, Megan," Nikki replied still grinning.

Megan turned to glare at Jake and Curtis who were whispering and sniggering.

"Care to share?" Megan demanded.

"Look little stormtrooper, give it a break!" I suggested strongly.

"You want a kick where it hurts, Kyle?"

"Enough is enough!" I said and dropped Megan to the mat before whispering into her ear. "Keep this up and Mindy will be pissed."

Megan glared as she tried to fight me off. I released her and she stood up, painfully. I was aware of her stab wounds, but most of the kids here, were not.

"What's wrong Megan?" Jake asked, showing some concern at Megan's grimace of pain.

"Silly bitch keeps overdoing it and taking on the bigger kids," Curtis laughed, using our cover story for Megan being a bit tender.

"You guys ready for some real work?" I asked, ignoring the glowering Megan. "Right, line up."

Lawndale

"You look a little sore, this morning, Toni," I commented.

"Bad day, Marty, I've got some bruises."

"I see – you and Erika pushing it a bit?"

"Marty!" Kim laughed.

"How you doing, Kim – that bump looks enormous!" Erika commented.

"It feels enormous – not to mention that it spends half it's time kicking me," Kim complained, running a hand over her rather large belly. "I feel hideous!"

"You look beautiful!" Marty said with a grin.

"Yeah, right!"

D-JAK

"Hi Mindy!"

"You young lady, are going to come seriously unstuck!"

"Yeah, yeah!" Megan growled.

"I mean it – Marcus will not stand for it," I warned. "I should fucking know, short ass!"

"Okay, but a girl needs to vent, that's all."

"Vent?"

"You heard me!"

I laughed and left her to it. I actually felt a little sorry for Marcus, but in hindsight not so much!

That evening

West Ridge

As if I had not heard enough both from and about Megan that day, she called about nine that night in a bit of a panic.

"Mindy, help me – something monstrous is happening over here!"

"If this is a goddamn wind up, shit head, I'm gonna kick your fucking butt," I growled in response.

"Problem?" Dave asked with a grin.

"Short ass needs help, apparently..." I laughed, heading out the door.

I wandered down the street, towards Marcus' house, on the other corner of the estate. I had a distinct feeling that this was a wind up, as Megan had been behaving strangely over the past week or two.

Nevertheless, she was soon to be my little sister, so I had to look out for her.

..._...

Megan was waiting at the open door, by the time I got there.

"Jeez, take your fucking time, why don't you?" Megan growled, shutting the door behind me.

"What's the emergency, rat?" I asked, and then I heard a very disturbing noise and Megan pointed at the ceiling with a grimace.

"Oh yeah, baby!"

"Keep it coming, big guy!"

I closed my eyes for a moment and groaned. "As if I wasn't emotionally scarred enough!" I whined, looking at the rather freaked out Megan.

"Tell me about it!"

"How long they been, err, at it?" I asked delicately.

"You mean, how long has Marcus been boning my Mom?" Megan asked.

"Been enlarging your vocabulary?" I asked, slightly appalled at Megan's choice of words.

"Gotta catch up with you, haven't I?" Megan replied. "They've been up there for almost a whole hour! What could they be doing for so long?"

"You really don't want to know!"

"I thought sex only took a couple of minutes."

"You also have a lot to learn!"

We went and sat out the back, where we could not hear all the commotion from upstairs. We talked together about general shit and eventually we ended up talking about our own lives. I had no secrets from Megan and I hoped that she didn't feel the need to have any from me. We ended up talking about our Fathers, which I found a bit depressing, but apparently, Megan had not really spoken about her own, since he died. I told her about what my Daddy was like, when he was not hell bent on the destruction of the D'Amico family. About trips to the bowling alley, but I left out trips to waste ground to get myself shot in the chest!

Finally, the obscene goings on upstairs were terminated and I headed home to what turned out to be some extremely whacked out dreams, or were they nightmares.

That night in dreamland

Safehouse B, New York

Fuck! Fuck! Fuck!

My back hurt like hell, my chest hurt like hell. What was I doing flat on my back on a flat roof? Why were there three holes in my costume jacket? Then it hit me like a punch to the stomach!

Daddy!

I scrambled, rather painfully, to my feet and looked upwards. There, a dozen feet above me was the window to Safehouse B. It all flowed back into my mind like a torrent: Red Mist! That fucking bastard – he shot me, three fucking times! The pain was almost unbearable; it was nothing like when Daddy had shot me. I pulled up my jacket and looked underneath – thank God for Kevlar!

Once back inside the building, I surveyed the Safehouse. It was obvious that the place was burned and would never be able to be used again. I had to rescue Daddy – the bastards must have taken him. On my way back into the building, I had come across the 'Mist Mobile', parked outside and seemingly abandoned. I grabbed a set of NVGs from the Safehouse, made sure that I had spare magazines and climbed into the Mustang; the keys were still in it – idiot!

I noticed that Red Mist was actually quite tall – I had to wait for what seemed like a year for the damn driver's seat to motor itself fully forward so that I could reach the pedals – yeah, I was fucking short! I also noticed that it was a stick-shift – that should be fun; I started the car and looked through the last few destinations that had been recorded on the satnav – I recognised one, it was the warehouse, which Daddy had burnt down – as good a place as any to start.

The D'Amico Warehouse, New York

Bingo!

There were several vehicles parked outside the supposedly abandoned warehouse, so I parked a block away, before I then headed back through the darkness to the warehouse and I started to work out a plan.

There was something going on inside, but exactly what, I was not sure. I crept closer and climbed upwards, to a vantage point in the roof where I could see the inside of the partially destroyed facility and once I had had a good look at what was happening below, I covered my mouth as I almost gasped out in horror.

Daddy!

He was strapped into a chair and beside him, similarly strapped in, was that green fucker, Kick-Ass. Some asshole was talking to the camera.

"This, for all you cavemen out there... Is fire... Fire..."

I felt rage building up inside me; somebody was going to fucking die – I grabbed the NVGs and turned them on before pulling them over my head. I pulled my Heckler & Koch USP Compact pistol and checked that a round was chambered and that the suppressor was securely attached.

"Fire is good... Fire is our friend... Gentlemen..."

Fuck! That bastard had a lighter and I had previously seen him pouring fuel around Daddy and that fucking twat, Kick-Ass. Note to self: kill that green asshole, once I have saved his life. Was that a weird idea, or what? I surprised myself sometimes! I swarmed down the girders to the ground.

..._...

"Time to die!" The asshole drawled to the camera and that snapped me back to the situation at hand.

"Guess it is, asshole," I breathed and fired my first round, clean through his head, followed by two further shots into the floodlights.

Darkness instantly descended on the warehouse. I liked darkness; darkness was my friend. I removed the suppressor and concentrated on the eerie green image visible through the NVGs. I moved towards Big Daddy and stopped short of the man nearest to him. None of the men seemed to know where the attack had originated, which was just as I had intended when I used the suppressor. I could see pistols aimed in various different directions and I could hear panicked shouts.

I moved away and scanned for my next target, taking full advantage of the darkness.

..._...

"Focus, Mindy – this is a piece of cake!" I thought as I shot the next guy, some wanker with a moustache, then turned and took down the next man.

Panicked gunfire erupted all around me, muzzle flashes everywhere. Chaos reigned – I so loved being Hit Girl! I stabbed a man, who was wearing a balaclava, through the heart, with the knife in my left hand and followed up with a bullet to his face. I double tapped another man, and then followed through with a shot at a man holding a shotgun; my bullet took him in the chest. The slide locked back on an empty magazine. I switched out the magazine, released the slide, and then shot another cunt in the leg and chest, dropping him.

Some fucker dared to fire in my direction; he went down to another bullet. A gun appeared around a pillar, being fired wildly in different directions. When the man wielding the pistol came around the pillar, I dropped him with a single bullet to the head. A gunman, further over, must have seen my muzzle flash, as he got a shot off in my direction. I ducked behind the pillar and then...

Oh, fuck, fire!

I ran towards Daddy, I was not thinking. The flare of the fire was dazzling my NVGs. I pulled them down off my face so I could see.

Daddy was on fire!

"NO!" I shouted – very stupidly in hindsight, as I attracted several bullets.

"Take cover, child!" Daddy called out, as I turned and made for cover.

As I ran, I jumped and span around, firing off a few rounds to cover my retreat. Once in cover, I dumped the NVGs. I then heard Daddy's anguished bellow of assistance.

"Now switch to Kryptonite!"

I thought quickly.

"Kryptonite!"

I felt behind me, seized the flashlight for my pistol and attached it below the muzzle of the USP, and set it to rapid flash. In the disorienting light, I saw men covering their eyes and trying to see their prey – me. Two shots and they both fell.

I heard my Daddy screaming as the fire took hold, but I blocked him out; now was not the time for emotion. I kept dropping D'Amico's gunmen with impunity. I took cover and switched out another magazine. The men were using sub-machine guns now, on full automatic. The adrenalin surged through me – I could do this; I had to do this.

"... Go to Robin's Reveeenng!"

Again, I thought quickly, removed the flashlight and knocked a can out of the way on some shelves, and I placed the flashlight in its place. The flashlight was targeted by the D'Amico gunmen, but not hit. Using that flashlight as a distraction, I ran around behind the men and came at them from their rear.

I dropped the man with the MP5 and then the final man. I shot out my own flashlight and ran over to Big Daddy, sweeping the cape off my back and over his body, extinguishing the flames. I felt the anger boiling inside me and I strode directly over to the camera, raising my pistol for what I expected to be the last time.

"Shows over motherfuckers!"

I then calmly turned to face the squirming Kick-Ass and shot him in the head.

I awoke with a scream.

The real world

West Ridge

"What the hell, Mindy?"

"Hold me Dave, please, just hold me."

Mindy had just awoken me, rather forcefully which while not exactly unusual, the fact that she had tears streaming down her face, was. Mindy also looked the way that she did when she had just done something that she knew I would disapprove of.

"What did you do?" I asked with a calming smile.

"I shot you in the head!" Mindy stated, burying her face into my chest and rapidly soaking me with her warm, and very wet, tears.

Yeah, I would disapprove of that! It could only be one thing –

"Damon at the warehouse?" I asked rhetorically.

Mindy replied by sobbing even harder. She had these nightmares periodically – I did too; however, that night was the worst that I could remember.

Not to mention that she had never shot me before!

Chapter 162*: Obsession

That same night, back in dreamland

The D'Amico Penthouse, New York

God I looked ridiculous!

I mean: long white socks and a short fucking skirt, with pigtails – I ask you!

I was standing outside an enormous building, in the centre of New York – it was dark and I was attempting to con my way past the main entrance to the D'Amico Penthouse. I felt just as ridiculous as I thought I looked.

"Nobody could be dumb enough to fall for this shit – nobody," I thought.

Minutes later...

I stood corrected!

The one asshole that was that dumb still squirmed, so I put him out of his misery with a single shot as I headed for the elevator, with my case, and acquired a key card to operate the aforementioned elevator. Not bad for a few seconds light exercise!

..._...

After a brief strip, in the elevator, followed by some speedy dressing, I was ready. The elevator came to a halt and I braced myself, rope in my left hand and knife in my right.

The doors opened –

There was a man standing to my left, he turned towards me and received the knife in his neck for his trouble. I yanked back on the rope and was immediately aware of another man to my left rising from a chair, where he had been reading a newspaper; I made a slashing movement with my blade and as the man fell backwards, away from the slashing blade, I turned to my next target.

The man to my right had his pistol out, but I placed a boot onto his left thigh, jumped up to his shoulders, and drove the knife into the side of his neck – the blood was awesome! The man that had fallen backwards was now coming at me with his own pistol and I sent the knife flying through the air and into his right wrist. I then rolled the man, on whose shoulders I stood and used the momentum to slide across the floor and using the rope made the guy shoot himself through the chin – cool!

Up until that point, I had been stealthy; however, the gunshot would have been heard. I discarded the rope and knife, and then dived for a pedestal that had some weird sculpture thing on it and braced myself against it facing the elevator. Meer seconds passed before I heard movement coming down the corridor. I had no idea who it was, nor how many it was.

..._...

I drew both of my pistols and readied myself.

Fighting my way down that corridor was going to be virtual suicide; but that was what I did. Daddy had trained me to accomplish the virtual impossible and that as what I was going to do.

I had seven rounds in the SIG-Sauer P232 pistol in my left hand and ten rounds in the H&K USP Compact pistol in my right hand, plus a spare magazine for each pistol. It would have to do, else I would have to improvise; I was good at improvising! For some strange reason it occurred to me at that point, that one day somebody should make a movie about Hit Girl – this attack in particular would probably make an awesome action scene!

My senses told me that the men were close; it was time to engage. I flexed my foot, ready to push off. This was it! I moved to my right, around the pedestal and I fired the first round, from the USP in my right hand, dropping the nearest man with a bullet to the forehead. I started to engage the men as I moved up the corridor. The men were spread out on either side of the corridor – maybe it was doable! The next man fell, and then the next. I used a chair to jump up and kicked the next man down, and slotted the next with a bullet to the head as I came back down again. The next man fell with a bullet dead centre to the forehead, blood spurting out. I hung off the right side bookshelves, which lined either side of the corridor and I blew a hole in the next cunts head. A man appeared from a doorway to the left and I dodged his bullets, but then the man that I had kicked down earlier, stood up and received a bullet in the back from the man behind – awesome!

Another man received a bullet in the head and I swapped out my magazines. The next two men fell with a bullet each in the chest. I skidded along the floor, shooting another man in the stomach and as he fell, he triggered his own shotgun, blowing the back of his head off through his jaw. A man, who seemed to be one of the last of D'Amico's goons, stood in the middle of the corridor. He fired off round after round in my direction.

Then the unthinkable happened – both of my pistols locked back on seemingly empty magazines, which was nuts as I had barely fired half of either magazine! Nevertheless, shit happened, so I dumped the pistols and flew at the goon. I seized his pistol with both hands and swung myself up and around onto the goon's shoulders, pulling the pistol out of his hands and then firing a bullet down through his head. As the body fell, I shot at the final goon and then rolled onto the floor of the corridor.

The final goon was using a long, tall table as cover. I fired three rounds, with the previous goon's pistol, before the magazine was empty, so I threw the pistol into the face of the final goon, used the table like a vaulting horse, and kicked the goon in the stomach forcing him to drop his pistol, which flew up, and into the air.

I landed on my feet and caught the pistol. This final goon was going to die where he lay on the floor of the Penthouse. I strode forwards and stopped astride his body, aiming his own pistol directly at his face and I happily pulled the trigger.

..._...

Click.

"CLICK!" I thought in disbelief. The pistol had jammed. Then I heard the 'ding' of the elevator at the far end of the corridor – I turned and stared down the corridor. Everything had very rapidly gone to shit – well it could not get any worse, could it? I was in a large dining-kitchen with windows that provided a panoramic view of the City. I saw the elevator doors open and men appear; I ran over to the large kitchen counter, executed a perfect forward roll, and dropped down behind the same counter.

I could hear voices coming up the corridor and some shouts. I was being discussed in loud whispers by some men. I was feeling the tingles of panic as I found that I had no weapons left.

"You stupid bitch, Mindy!" I thought. "You've fucked up and you won't be walking away from this!"

I looked around me and saw a block of knives ahead of me and on the opposite counter.

..._...

A few minutes after I had obtained the knives, all hell broke loose as some wanker emptied an entire, large calibre magazine in my direction. I kept moving behind the counter, scurrying backwards and forwards and covering my head with my arms. Glass from the shattered windows fell all around me and the noise was horrific. I was actually borderline scared now; this was getting out of hand. Normally at this point Big Daddy would step in and rescue me – but he was dead. I was alone. My only back up was that green asshole; only I had no idea if he was really going to come through for me, or if he was, would get here in time?

The firing stopped. I briefly stuck my head up and smiled, then sent the two largest kitchen knives down range. Bullseye! The look on that asshole's face was fucking priceless! I dropped back down behind the counter and heard the assault rifle that he had been holding drop to the floor, closely followed by his body. I heard more chatter, and then silence – but I had heard one word, quite clearly...

"Bazooka?" I said to myself – what the fuck was going to happen next...

Then more bullets and some larger shit came my way and I crouched down against the kitchen unit, cowering against the flying glass. Finally, I had had enough and I forced my way inside a cupboard. I moved some pans to one side and found a bullet hole to look through.

Oh, crap!

"Say hello to my little friend!"

My eyes went wide – this was the end of Hit Girl, unless...

I saw a flash...

The real world

West Ridge

"Again?"

Mindy had bolted upright, the tears were there, but not like before. This time she just looked at me.

"You never came..." She said simply.

"Huh?"

"I died in that kitchen – you never came..."

"It was just a dream, Mindy – I did come and I was your backup."

"I know, but – two nightmares; first you die and then I die."

Mindy seemed very worried.

Two days later

Thursday

We never said a word about Mindy's nightmares after that night.

I was unsure what had brought on the nightmares, but I promised Mindy that I would always be there for her and most importantly, she believed me. It worried me that her dreams involved us both dying. Yes, Mindy's dreams were normally violent and bloody and she enjoyed that! I had similar dreams, but they often involved me having the crap kicked out of me, although those dreams were gradually being replaced with the new Kick-Ass.

I had a feeling that Mindy was feeling a little dejected. Our long line of successes had now changed to a few disasters! Technically Fusion was on the run and that included our friend, Petra.

..._...

Back to the current issues. The Cops seemed to have lost the plot somehow; maybe they were trying to garner support from the citizens of Chicago, whatever it was, Marcus had dropped over a CPD 'Most Wanted' leaflet. Nothing out of the ordinary, except for the list:

#1: Hit Girl

#2: Kick-Ass

#23: Shadow

#34: Jackal

#55: Red Mist

#56: Wildcat

This list had caused some consternation within Fusion!

I was pleased to be number one and Dave felt it was cool to be number two; however, Chloe was pissed to be all the way down at number twenty-three, not to mention Josh who said it was 'not bloody fair', to be at number thirty-four. Curtis was annoyed because he did not even feature; but Megan thought it was very cool just to make the list! Wasn't really sure where Wildcat had come from, either! Now, who spotted the fuck up at number fifty-five? What the fuck was Red fucking Mist doing on the goddamn list – he was dead for fuck's sake!

Well, if they wanted to waste their time and resources looking for Red Mist, then good luck, I thought!

As I watched, I saw the armoured truck with the flatbed, pull up and stop at the side of the road.

Out climbed Hit Girl and Shadow, from the front, followed by Jackal and another, shorter vigilante whose name I did not know, from the rear. They should not have youngsters doing that shit – I should know. Any kid under sixteen was way, way too young, to be taking lives and doing what they did. That was my view on things and that would never change. I had been way, way too young, when I had started my shit, over six years previously.

The four vigilantes left the truck and headed towards a large building. That night was the closest that I had been to them, so far. Next, I had to track down their headquarters; that would be a complex and most dangerous task, but it had to be done, if I was to complete the task for which I had come to Chicago in the first place.

Chapter 163*: It Begins

That afternoon
Thursday

D-JAK

"It has begun!" Paige confirmed that morning at D-JAK.

"What?" I asked, stupidly.

"The beginning of the end!"

"Huh?"

"Megan has officially started puberty!"

I grimaced.

"Oh great! Just what we need around here; another hormonal girl!" Dave complained, shaking his head.

"Gee, thanks Mom!" Megan said sarcastically, walking over. "Just let every fucker know about my fucking private life!"

"She's also getting very stroppy!" Paige added needlessly.

"Been there with Mindy – not fun!" Dave conceded.

I scowled at Dave before turning to the belligerent Megan.

"Back to the mat, hormonal terror!" I suggested, pushing Megan back in the direction of her friends.

The following night
Friday

West Columbia

"Megan – is that blood?"

"Yes, Mother!"

"Did Mindy hit you?" Mother asked.

"Not even close, Mother!" I replied shortly, heading upstairs.

Yes, I had been involved in a fight. Nevertheless, I really was not in the mood for twenty questions; however, Mom was!

"Megan Wilson, get your backside down here, right now!" Mom almost shouted. I paused on the stairs and considered ignoring the command. I knew I had pushed way past my bounds – I was an hour late to boot.

Anyhow, common sense quickly prevailed and I turned around and headed back downstairs, but threw Mom a filthy look, anyway. Which turned out not to be a good idea, apparently!

"You, young lady, need to sort your life out – I am not going to tolerate this behaviour from you – you are grounded!"

I snapped; who, the hell, did she think she was!

"Like hell, I am!" I retorted and turned towards the door, intending to leave the house.

"You walk out that door, young lady and you are history!"

"Try it, bitch!"

That same time

Fourteen miles south

The fireball exploded out from the side of the building.

Masonry fell all around us, as we cowered behind a large truck. I glared at Shadow – not that she could see my face!

"How the fuck, was I meant to know the dickhead had a dead man's switch!" Shadow moaned, trying to sound innocent and failing badly.

"The Lieutenant is not gonna like this!" Kick-Ass chuckled.

"Ya think!" I retorted angrily.

"Cool explosion, though!" Jackal cut in.

"Well, you're another dickhead; so you would think so!" Shadow countered.

"Hit Girl, this is Battle Guy – we have an alert out for Wildcat; the little bitch skipped out after turning up at home covered in blood!"

"Oh for fuck's sake!"

..._...

"She's gone – I'm worried about her," Paige said, sounding panicked. "I don't think she's thinking straight."

"I'll sort it out, Paige – hang in there."

I was fuming; Paige had been in tears, when I had called.

Something had obviously gone wrong!

However, the explosion was cool and it gave me the distraction that I needed to attach my tracker to their truck. Now I just needed to wait and follow the signal! Too simple? Maybe, but I had to try something!

I was fully aware that if I were caught, I would most likely be killed.

Western Chicago

119 South Oakley Boulevard
Home of Sam Fellowes

I heard a knock on the window of my bedroom.

It was after nine at night, who could be on the balcony outside my room? I pulled back the curtains and...

"Megan!"

"Let me in asshole!"

I opened the window and let the girl into my bedroom. Normally, I might have been surprised to have a hot looking girl at my bedroom window, but this was Megan and nothing really surprised me about her – not anymore at least! Once Megan had climbed in, I closed the window and turned to the girl who was now making herself comfortable on my bed.

"Hiya, Cam!" She said with a smile.

"Err, Megan – it's late, my Dad will kill us both, if he finds you here – not to mention that I'm only wearing a towel."

I had just climbed out of the shower and had not had a chance to put my shorts on yet.

"Don't mind me!" Megan replied with an evil smirk.

I vanished to the bathroom and returned with shorts and a t-shirt on. Megan was gazing up at the ceiling. Then I noticed something.

"Megan – is that blood?"

"Don't you, fucking start on me!"

"I won't," I replied defensively.

"But I will!"

I turned to find Dad standing at the bedroom door and he looked pissed. I turned back and glared at Megan, who had turned away from the door and was pointedly ignoring my Dad. I knew what was about to happen.

"Megan, it is time to go home..."

"Go fuck yourself – I'm busy!" Megan retorted, cutting Dad off.

I winced; this was not going to end well!

"Err, Megan, you're coming with me!" Sam Fellowes said. "You're going home."

"Oh no I'm not! I am not a fucking kid, anymore."

"You are coming with me – voluntarily; or in cuffs – your choice."

"You wouldn't fucking dare!"

I felt myself lifted off the bed and I twisted my head, just in time to prevent my nose hitting Cameron's bedroom wall. My arms were pinned behind me and I then felt cold steel on my wrists. The cuffs were ratcheted closed with my arms behind my back. Fellowes then dragged me downstairs and outside, where I was then thrown, unceremoniously, into the back of his unmarked Chicago Police Department SUV.

"You asshole!" I breathed.

"Shut it, before I tape that trap of yours!" Fellowes growled, getting into the driver's seat.

..._...

Fellowes drove me home and pulled up outside the house. I was more than pleased to see that Marcus was not home yet! Fellowes hauled me out of his SUV and up to the front door. He knocked and the door flew open to reveal Mom, who looked none too pleased; in fact, she looked just a bit pissed. I was marched inside and once the door was closed, Fellowes span me around to face him.

"What's going on kid?" He asked with genuine concern.

"Get these damn things off of my fucking wrists!" I growled savagely.

"You have surprised me, Megan," Fellowes said calmly.

"You think I give a crap?"

"You are supposed to be Wildcat, somebody that I respected – but this... This is not whom you are – you are behaving just like a spoilt little girl, who cannot get things her own way," Fellowes continued. "It is time to grow up Megan!"

"You can't speak to me like that!"

"Well I just did, because I used to respect you and I do respect your Mother and I want to help in any way that I can."

"I am old enough to look after myself... I do not need anybody to tell me –"

Wham!

Fellowes slammed me against the wall and I almost screamed with pain as he whispered into my ear.

"What would Mindy think if she could see you now? A delinquent child in cuffs. I think she would be ashamed of your childish behaviour. She needs disciplined people – not immature, little brats. I have now lost all the respect that I had for you and what you do. You need to sort yourself out, Megan," Fellowes said, before starting to yell. "DO I MAKE MYSELF CLEAR?"

"Yes!" I replied insolently.

"I DON'T THINK YOU DO!" Fellowes bellowed before continuing more quietly. "I am going to remove the cuffs – you misbehave and I'll put them straight back on."

Fellowes removed the cuffs and replaced them in his pocket. I turned around and looked up at the Cop.

"Sam, I –."

Fellowes cut me off.

"It's not 'Sam' anymore, Megan; it's Sergeant Fellowes to you!"

It hit me then that I had really fucked things up. What had been a small firecracker of an issue had now gone nuclear. I was fucking history and I felt ashamed, I felt tears forming. I turned to Mom, who looked beyond disappointed. That dug in, as a knife and I knew exactly what that felt like.

"Megan, please go to your room and stay there," Mom said. "Do not come out for any reason."

I did not dare to look at Fellowes, so I just headed straight upstairs and shut my bedroom door behind me.

I sank on to the bed and started to cry.

"I'm sorry if I went too far, Paige."

"No, Sam, you didn't go too far – it had to be done."

"You know – I was way worse than Megan at that age. I just worry about what Cameron will be like when he approaches puberty."

"We've all been there – I hate to say it, but my parents saw me brought home by Chicago's finest much more than I would like to admit!" Paige admitted. "Just don't tell Megan!"

"Does Marcus know?"

"Oh yeah – I had to tell him where I got my taste for handcuffs from?"

An hour later

Oh, crap!

I heard the truck pull up outside first and then the sound of the front door opening.

"Where is she?" Marcus demanded.

A minute later, Marcus entered my bedroom, after knocking. I did not think I had ever seen Marcus look this mad before, ever. He stood there and just looked at me. I felt so fucking small; it was horrible. I had tremendous respect for Marcus, so I kept my mouth firmly shut.

Ultimately, Marcus just turned and left my bedroom, closing the door behind him.

The fact that he had never said a single word felt worse than if he had yelled at me.

The following morning
Saturday

West Columbia

I knocked on Megan's bedroom door.

There was no answer, so I pushed the door open and went in. I found Megan lying on her bed, staring at the ceiling, still dressed and with dried blood on her face.

"How you doing, oh grounded one?" I asked.

"Not good!" Megan replied, still staring at the ceiling.

"I'm not here to lecture you – that isn't my place. I just want to help," I offered. "Besides I'm all lectured out having gone through Shadow like a ton of bricks after she blew up most of Chicago!"

Megan sat up and looked at me. I expected a smile, as I sat down on the end of the bed, but then she surprised me by jumping up, wrapping her arms around me and bursting into tears. Between sobs, she asked questions.

"I've fucked up badly, haven't I?"

"Will Mom forgive me?"

"Will Marcus ever speak to me again?"

"How will I regain Fellowes' respect?"

When Megan stopped crying, I smiled at her.

"In order. Hell, yeah! I should think so. Probably, and you'll earn it back," I said.

"Thanks Mindy. I am sorry for letting you down and I am sorry about running out and, well, I'm sorry about everything. I honestly don't know why I snapped."

"Hormones, huh?" I queried.

"It sucks – big time!"

"You don't know the half of it, girl! Now go get yourself showered and make yourself presentable," I suggested.

"Why?" Megan asked.

"Move it!"

..._...

Megan spent almost twenty minutes in the shower, followed by me helping her with fresh dressings for her knife wounds and yet another twenty minutes of her rushing backwards and forwards, getting herself dressed. She looked a lot better, now that she was cleaned up. I had the feeling that she had not slept much the previous night.

"Feel better?" I asked.

"Not really."

"Ready?"

"Not really."

"Come with me," I directed and took Megan's hand.

..._...

I led Megan downstairs into the living room. There sat Paige, Marcus and Sam Fellowes. Megan stopped dead and tried to backtrack. I pulled her forwards and pushed her towards Paige.

"You can do it," I whispered, before stepping back.

"Mom, I'm really, really sorry. I did not mean any of it. I will never treat you like that again – ever!"

"You hurt me, Megan, but I love you and I will never let anything get between us," Mom said, smiling.

Megan turned slowly towards Marcus, but he pointed towards Sam Fellowes and Megan moved to face him.

"Sergeant Fellowes. I am sorry for what I said and did. I never stopped to think about my actions. I know actions have consequences – I know because my actions have led me to be wounded and I have the wounds and eventually the scars that will remind me of that bad decision every damn day. I understand why you were hard on me and I deeply regret causing you to lose your respect for me. I am sorry for letting you down and I am sorry for letting everybody down. If it had not been for Mindy, last year, I would probably have been brought home in cuffs, way too many times by now. I hope that I can earn back your respect."

Fellowes nodded approvingly.

"That was a very mature and well thought out apology, Megan. You have gone a long way to regaining my respect."

Megan grinned for the first time that evening.

"Thanks, Sergeant Fellowes."

"Call me Sam, Megan!"

Finally, Megan turned to Marcus and her smile faded.

Marcus did not say a word.

"Come on, Marcus. The girl's doing her best!" I said. Marcus enjoyed his little game; I had 'played' it often enough!

"I accept your apology, Megan. As Sam said, it was very mature and I am proud of you, for the apology at least. Now back to your room."

"Yes, Marcus."

Two days later
Monday morning

Burnham Harbor Marina

Megan had spent all of the weekend in her room.

Marcus had told her that she was to be allowed out for the trip and that, how well she behaved, while aboard, and would affect how long she would be grounded for, on her return.

Marcus had a heart and knew how difficult it was to control a wayward daughter!

Authors Note: At this point, you are strongly advised to read my other story: The Voyages of The Salty Swallow, for the next events in the Forsaken timeline. You can ignore the story, but events in The Voyages of The Salty Swallow will be referred to from time to time. Chapter 164 of Forsaken continues ten days, or so, after the end of this chapter (Chapter 163).

Chapter 164: Mathilda

Author's Note: This chapter (Chapter 164) of Forsaken picks up a little over a week after Chapter 163. The events in between these two chapters are covered by another one of my stories: The Voyages of The Salty Swallow and you are advised to read that story before starting this chapter.

Friday morning

The City of Chicago

There was nothing out of the ordinary about the client.

The fucking shit deserved to die and I was being paid to help the fucking shit die. Nothing more complicated than that. This was not the first time that I had killed and it would not be the last – I hoped, as that was my chosen profession – I was an assassin, a cleaner.

That night, I moved down the darkened streets, of the south side of Chicago. I was dressed in my usual long, dark blue coat and navy blue hat that I had started to wear when I was about fifteen. The coat came down to below my knees and hid my 'equipment'. In my left hand, I carried a compact carbon-fibre workbag that contained the tools of my trade. To anybody watching, I was just a young woman heading home for the night. Innocuous was how I wanted to look and it had worked for my teacher, so it would work for me.

..._...

I stopped outside the building, where my client stayed. Once certain that I was not observed, I slipped my hand inside the workbag that I carried and pulled out a black plastic box. The box was about eight inches long by about four wide. On the longer side were three antennae. I pressed two buttons on the top of the box before replacing it, back inside my workbag, with its three green LEDs lit. The jammer would block all wireless cell and data transmissions. My target building used wireless CCTV cameras with no wired backup - stupid, but convenient for myself.

I walked in the main door and into the lobby of the building. It was marble and actually reminded me of some photos that Tony had shown me, almost five years ago. Four dead bodies, single shots, in a lobby just like the one where I stood, but that had been in New York at a time of quite a few unexplained and violent, deaths. I had followed the deaths while I was at school – it had seemed cool at the time – culminating in the death of that mob dick, Frank D'Amico – now that was one man who deserved to die!

..._...

One of the things that had kept me going, while at that damned school, was knowing that somebody else was keeping those who deserved to die, on their toes. I was a big fan of that Kick-Ass – he tried, but he wasn't all that good, although his heart seemed to be in the right place. Although, the strange deaths had seemed to dry up, when D'Amico was killed – rumours were he was killed with a bazooka; but I knew that was complete bullshit! Then, only a couple of years ago strange things started to occur in New York – and I mean strange for New York!

The name D'Amico seemed to crop up again, not to mention some weird individuals dressed like, well, weirdoes! In addition, a name – Hit Girl – that name had cropped up, all those years before, but she was very elusive – almost a ghost, or maybe a legend. Kick-Ass was back, too, only with fans! Then again, things seemed to calm down and the vigilantes just vanished for a few months.

I had been planning what to do next and I had even considered moving away from New York; a new start maybe? I had come across some news articles that hinted towards Kick-Ass and Hit Girl being active in Chicago.

That had done it for me – I had found a new destination!

..._...

To my right, was a reception desk, with a concierge; he nodded at me, barely giving me a glance, as expected. I headed directly for the staircase and made my way up – I never used elevators; what I carried, and wore, would take a lot of explaining if the elevator broke down and I had to be rescued!

I exited the staircase on the eighth floor and carefully pulled open the door into the corridor and looked towards each end, looking for trouble.

Once happy that I was clear; I moved out and headed towards my target apartment.

Southside of Chicago

Now that was fucking cool!

The rope ascender had pulled us, individually, from the ground to the roof, in less than a minute. On the roof we found a grinning Hit Girl.

"Okay – you made it! Now, Trojan, Splinter – we have work to do," Hit Girl said as she pulled up the rope and stuffed both it and the ascender in to a black canvas bag that was then hidden in an AC vent for future retrieval.

Hit Girl and taken us both out to give us some experience. Wildcat was still grounded!

..._...

We followed Hit Girl down the fire stairs and stopped at the landing for the nineteenth floor. We listened for any sign of activity in the hallway beyond the door. There was nothing, which was expected for that time of night.

The apartment that we were heading for was number nineteen-ten and was only a few feet from the fire stairs. Hit Girl expertly picked the lock within a minute and we were in. With our pistols out, we searched every room for anybody dangerous, but found nobody home which was also expected. Hit Girl had insisted that this would be an easy night.

We then split up to search the place.

Trojan went to check the main bedroom, while I started checking the kitchen. Splinter was in the main living room. Suddenly, I heard a buzzing noise, coming from the bedroom and I went in, to find Trojan wrestling with a long, cylindrical object.

"I found it in the drawer, beside the bed. It started buzzing and vibrating and I can't turn it off!" Trojan whispered.

"Don't look at me!" I replied. "I've never used one of those damn things!"

"Twist the base," A voice behind us offered. "You two are going to poke somebody's eye out!"

Trojan did as he had been advised and the noise stopped. We both turned and looked at Splinter, incredulously.

"How the fuck, does boy, six months from his twelfth birthday, know how to operate one of these things?" I asked, just as incredulously.

"I just remember strange shit!" Splinter commented, wandering off to search the other bedroom.

I looked at Trojan and Trojan looked back at me.

"That kid is so strange!" We both said, together.

We continued searching and finally found what we were after.

Secured to the back of the fridge we had found several brick-sized packets of a white powder-like substance. These were carefully broken apart and dumped down the toilet. We had also found some 'frozen equity', in the freezer, almost eighty-thousand dollars in cash. This went into the pack that Trojan wore on his back. Just as we were finishing off the disposal of the drugs, we heard a commotion from a short distance away.

There was shouting and then a single gunshot.

..._...

Prudence dictated that we should leave as soon as possible, only I had a nasty habit of ignoring prudence! Dave would be made, but... What the hell!

"Battle Guy, we have trouble on the same floor; I am investigating!"

"What a fucking surprise!" Battle Guy called back dryly.

"Take care, Hit Girl!" Kick-Ass added meaningfully. He was at Safehouse F, in case he was required.

"Hey, it's me!" I replied.

"That's what I am afraid of, gorgeous!"

I laughed and jumped through a window and swung onto the balcony of the next apartment over. Trojan and Splinter waited by the front door of the apartment and monitored the hallway. It was clear for now.

As I proceeded from balcony to balcony, the commotion got louder.

"Trojan, Splinter, the commotion is five apartments down, nineteen-fifteen!" I called.

Apartment nineteen-fifteen

So much for an easy ride!

I had made my stealthy entry into the apartment, after picking the door lock as I usually did. I had expected to find one man, my target, and maybe a couple of others guarding him. Only I was boned and I found eight men in total. I immediately dropped one with a suppressed round to the head from my Walther. As I moved down the lobby, three men chose that moment to come out of a bedroom. At first, my mind enquired as to why three men might be in a bedroom together, but I shrugged it off and shot another man before I, myself, was shot in the chest from only two yards away and the impact shoved me against the wall.

Fuck that had hurt!

The men were Mafia – probably Italian, or maybe Sicilian – whatever; they were bad news!

I was now fighting for my life. I had dropped my Walther when I had fallen back against the wall. My workbag was waiting for me at the front door, as usual, so I had to rely on the lighter weapons that I was carrying. I flicked two throwing knives out of my belt and into the throats of the two nearest men.

That was when the window in the living room disintegrated and something purple and very menacing appeared, dropping two more men with suppressed pistol shots as it rolled onto the living room floor. Almost simultaneously the front door burst open and what seemed like a hoard of men appeared.

It was pandemonium!

The menacing vigilante, clad in an awesome black and purple armoured suit, was wading through the hoard of men.

Some of the Mafiosi were physically large and muscular. At one stage I saw the vigilante, who my mind told me was the famous, or was that infamous, Hit Girl, being physically thrown across the room where she hit the wall, badly damaging the drywall. That did not seem to stop her as she launched forwards, fighting off anybody who approached and then put them down, hard. She drew a vicious looking blade and used that amazingly skilfully in the tight confines of the apartment.

I was doing my utmost to force my way towards the front door of the apartment and at the very least, relative safety. However, before I could get there a Mafiosi appeared behind me and twisted me around to face him.

..._...

Something short and black flipped into the room and drove both feet into the chest of the Mafiosi, driving him against a wall. The 'ninja' caught himself before he landed on the floor and flipped back to his feet. He held out a black clad hand towards me.

"Come with me, if you want to live!" The rather short, black-clad ninja growled, in a somewhat weird electronically augmented voice.

"Seriously!" I responded. "Kyle Reese, you fucking ain't!"

I had no choice, so I just shrugged and ran after the short ninja, aware that my back was covered by another, slightly shorter, vigilante in a blue and green armoured suit. I also saw a brief glint of purple, as Hit Girl continued to fight the Mafiosi in the apartment.

The hallway did not seem much better than the apartment!

I could see two men, dead from obvious stab wounds and I noticed that the blade which the ninja held in his right hand, was covered in blood up to the hilt.

The blue and green vigilante held a Glock 26 pistol fitted with a suppressor, in his hands and shot two Mafiosi that appeared out of the elevator. Seconds later, a pistol appeared around the edge of the elevator and I instantly recognised it as a Glock 18, which then sent a spray of bullets in our direction on full automatic.

Several bullets hit the vigilantes, who obviously wore full body armour and did their best to cover me. Nevertheless, I still felt a stinging sensation from my right thigh and fell down against the wall, leaving a bright red smear down the wall. I must have screamed out as well, but I could not remember doing that at all.

The black ninja seized hold of me and made a go at dragging me towards the fire stairs. I could hear him talking but I could not make out what he was saying.

He must have been using a radio.

I must have passed out, because all I could remember was being dragged to the fire stairs and then nothing.

Although there were strange flashes of memories since then that started to find their way into my mind. I remembered seeing a green and yellow mask gazing down at me as I was picked up and placed into the back of a large truck.

I looked around me.

I was lying on a couch, on my left side. My right thigh was on fire. A purple mask appeared in my field of vision, which then gradually cleared.

"So, what are we going to do with you?" Hit Girl growled.

"I'm not gonna beg, if that's what you're thinking," I replied, grimacing with the pain from my thigh. "Kill me if that is what you desire, Hit Girl."

..._...

Hit Girl took a step back and held up both gauntleted hands with the palms toward me.

"Hey, you've got me all wrong there, girl!" Hit Girl said somewhat defensively. "We need to get that wound looked at, before it gets infected."

Privately, I would admit that I felt a sense of relief at that!

"Who are you? Hit Girl continued.

"I'm Mathilda, but professionally I go by 'The Heir'," I stated without fanfare.

Hit Girl nodded. "I've heard of you, but you worked New York," She commented.

"Things got a bit hot there; so I decided to move."

"Me too; I know what that's like!"

"In fact I was looking for you guys; I have been, ever since I arrived in Chicago."

Hit Girl paused thoughtfully.

"Black, shitty looking SUV?" She asked.

"Yeah, how did you know?"

"Seen it around. I felt like I was being watched and know I know that I was – I thought I was going nuts!"

"Obviously my tracking skills require a little improvement!" I grimaced.

..._...

Just then more people arrived.

"Meet Shadow and Medic," Hit Girl announced.

"Medic, Shadow – meet Mathilda, professionally known as 'The Heir'," Hit Girl continued before getting back to business. "Medic, Mathilda is wounded in her right thigh."

The woman, called Medic, was dressed in an off-white suit, without armour, although I could see where armour panels could be attached to the suit as necessary. Shadow was just that, a shadow in black and navy blue. I had not seen the two other, much shorter, vigilantes since we had left the building to come here – wherever here was.

Medic immediately got to work and started to cut away my trousers from around the wound. She then started taking my vitals and I noticed that my coat, hat and weapons harness had already been removed. Medic pulled open my shirt and started to remove the thin armoured vest that I wore beneath.

"Wow! That's gonna be one hell of a bruise, girl!" Medic quipped and I looked down to see a large red welt where the bullet had caught me.

Hit Girl passed across the squished bullet that she had recovered from my vest.

"Souvenir!" She said.

"This is going to hurt; the bullet is still in there, but don't worry I have done this many, many times," Medic said with a sly glance at Hit Girl.

"Where are we?" I asked, then screamed as Medic jabbed me with a needle, close to the wound.

"Some local anaesthetic," Medic said conversationally, ignoring my question.

A new vigilante appeared, this one with ears that stuck up from his mask.

"Hey, eyes off my tits!" I growled at the new vigilante who was obviously checking out my bra, which was showing, and what was in them after Medic had taken my vitals and removed the vest.

"Sorry, we're not all that big on dignity, here," Hit Girl growled. "Jackal, eyes elsewhere!"

"Can't help a vigilante for peeking at something nice!" Jackal announced in his electronically enhanced voice.

My thigh was going numb, but I could still feel Medic's fingers in the wound, which felt really weird! In all my time doing this shit, I had never had a bullet wound; lots of cuts and bruises, but never a bullet wound!

These guys were actually being nice to me, rather than just killing me, but then I had not seen their faces and I had a distinct feeling that Hit Girl knew much more about me than she was letting on. I had learnt that Hit Girl and Kick-Ass, with their team, Fusion, had morals despite what some may have thought about them. They never hurt innocents and only used force where force was necessary and then only proportionate force.

I started to feel queasy with all the poking around, then my vision started to blur and I blacked out.

I came around again and I could hear voices.

"So what do we do with her?"

"Can we keep her?"

"She's not a damn dog!"

"You kept Shadow!"

I heard something being hit, followed by an exclamation.

"She needs time for her wound to heal."

"She can't stay here."

"I'm sure Jackal would love her to stay!"

The final voice, a young female's, was dripping sarcasm. I tried to raise my head up, but felt weak and my thigh was very sore and throbbing with the pain now that the local anaesthetic had worn off.

"The bad-ass assassin is awake!" A new, electronically distorted voice, said.

A face appeared, or rather a masked face; it was green – Kick-Ass. I recognised him as the person that had lifted me up and placed me into the truck.

"Hello, err, Kick-Ass..."

"You'll be dry, here have a drink," He said, passing me an open can of Pepsi. I drank some down. "How long was I out?"

"About two and a half hours," Hit Girl said, standing beside Kick-Ass. The diminutive Hit Girl made Kick-Ass seem huge in comparison. Which was probably the point!

"Oh, shit; I need to get home," I said and tried to sit up, felt a little dizzy and slumped back down again.

"When was the last time that you slept properly?" It was Medic's voice.

"I think I was thirteen and I had just started all this shit!" I replied, trying to smile.

"You tend to sleep with one eye open in this job!" Hit Girl confirmed.

Chapter 165*: Hiking

The following day
Friday

West Ridge

"Are you wearing a bra?" Curtis enquired with a smirk.

"Maybe," Megan responded, looking a little shy.

"First bra – got it yesterday!" Paige whispered to me.

"Oh!" I replied.

"She wants to wear one; says it makes her feel grown up, but she hates wearing it! She does need one though."

"I know – been there!" I grimaced.

"We all have! What fun we are going to have – I just think back to myself at that age and I know what I've got to look forward to!" Paige said unhappily.

Later that morning

The five kids looked a little unsure about what was about to happen to them.

Dave and I were driving them out to the west of Chicago in our nice, shiny new LR4 SUV.

"Right," I said as Dave pulled up at a deserted section of road. "All of you – out!"

"Okay, the weather is good and the forecast is good. Now, I want all your cell phones and any other electrical equipment that you have on you," Dave said.

"What!" Megan exclaimed.

Dave just held out a bag. First Josh, then Chloe dumped their cell phones, closely followed by Curtis and Tommy, then lastly and most reluctantly, Megan.

Each kid was wearing good, strong hiking boots on their feet and wore a t-shirt and shorts, plus a waterproof jacket. They had been purposely limited in what kit they could bring to ensure that there would be more of a challenge.

"Think yourselves lucky; Mindy considered sending you out naked!" Dave advised them. "She seemed to think that you couldn't be trusted not to cheat!"

"Would I?" Megan asked with her innocent smile.

I threw each kid a small rucksack.

"Oh yeah!" I replied as I walked away. "You need to walk on a course of zero-nine-seven and you will find somebody waiting with your lunch. In the packs are maps and compasses. You will also find adequate water – don't waste it, or you will run out."

"Be good – no diving into bushes, eh!" Dave quipped before getting back into the SUV.

We watched as the kids vanished into the wilderness.

It had been an eventful couple of days since returning to Chicago. Medic had helped Mathilda back to her SUV and then Erika had followed her home on her own motorcycle. That had been in the early hours.

We knew where Mathilda lived, which was very useful, so now I had to figure out what to do with her. Would I allow her to join us? Not yet, I would need to find out a lot more about her first and that would involve a visit to Marcus as he might know more about what happened in New York.

"I think little madam is busted!" Dave chuckled, his eyes glued to a sniping scope.

"The fucking sneaky bitch, I knew it!" I growled. "Cell phone?"

"Yeah!" Dave answered. "Not a problem though."

"Why is it not a problem...?" I paused as Dave smirked. It was an evil smirk.

"Hidden in Megan's pack, is one of Marty's miniature signal jammers!" Dave said simply.

"Bastard cell!"

"I thought you said you would be able to get us out of this!" Chloe demanded.

"I can't get a fucking signal so get off my fucking back!"

"Told you Mindy wouldn't let you cheat!" Josh chuckled.

Megan glared at Josh, but never said a word; she just turned and stalked off in the rough direction of lunch.

"Come on, Tommy, let's go wind her up," I suggested, heading off after Megan.

Those cunts; they did something!

The cell worked perfectly, earlier. The plan had been to find out where we were and call for a taxi, if possible. The maps that we had been given told us very little about where we actually were and we had been forced to wear blindfolds in the SUV!

I hated to admit it, but Dave and Mindy planned for almost every eventuality, but I was not beaten yet.

I would prevail!

Three hours later

Seven miles away

The kids had not yet arrived!

I trusted them about as far as I could throw them; I even kept the doors of the Jeep locked. My cell rang; it was Mindy.

"Hi, Mindy!"

"They there, yet, Cathy?" Mindy asked.

"No; I think they are planning to cause trouble."

"Cathy, follow plan B and leave their lunch as agreed, then leave the area," Mindy ordered.

"She just dumped the food and left?"

"Yes, Megan, that's what I said," Curtis insisted.

"My reputation precedes me!" I laughed and ran out of the trees and down towards the food.

The intention had been to assault whoever was waiting for us and take the vehicle. It had been Dr Bennett, but she had gone within several minutes of us arriving. I heard someone shouting after me, but could not hear the words, not that I was bothered; I was hungry!

I was only feet from the food when I saw something strange, then my feet seemed to have nothing beneath them and

I fell into...

"I warned you!"

"Get me the fuck out of this mud, assholes!" Megan almost screamed.

I just laughed. Chloe and I had seen the trap, Mindy would not allow the food to be abandoned, nor would she make it easy for us to get it. Megan was up to her waist in mud and water. The food was on a plank of wood that stuck out from the other side of the bog, and had been camouflaged.

"Way to go, girl!" Curtis laughed.

Megan smiled, seeing the funny side.

Four hours later

Four miles away

I smirked.

It was evil, but I was also proud. All the kids had made it. Megan was covered in mud from above her waist downwards and Josh showed evidence of mud from having helped Megan out of the bog. They all seemed in high spirits though.

They gathered around the SUV.

"My cell isn't working!" I stated innocently.

"Mine neither," Dave replied.

I saw Megan scowling.

"Almost forgot!" Dave said. "Megan pass me your pack."

Megan did so, looking confused. I reached in and lifted the false bottom, lifting out a small black box. Megan looked livid. I flicked the switch on the side.

"You can use your cell now, Megan!"

The following morning Sunday

West Columbia

"So, to what do I owe this mass invasion?" Marcus asked with a grin as Dave and I trooped into the living room.

"New York City," I stated simply.

"Yes, I know it well, what's left of it, anyway!"

I ignored Marcus' implication and ploughed on.

"Think back about six years, before Daddy died..."

"Okay..."

"... I'm looking for a strange occurrence..."

"Okay..."

"... That did not involve me or Daddy," I clarified quickly. "An assassin maybe?"

Marcus seemed to pause for a few minutes before he answered.

"There was an incident in Brooklyn, involved SWAT. Would have been right up your street!"

"He's getting funnier as he gets older!" I groaned.

"It involved the DEA, I think they had a dirty agent and there was a standoff, in an apartment building, then a massive firefight and finally a large explosion, which seemed to kill the assassin, who was the original target and the dirty agent.

"Rumours were that it was an assassin called 'The Professional'. We were aware of him, but he lived up to his name and he was a professional, always several steps ahead of us. To some extent we liked him! He only killed the scum of the earth, much like you guys; he never once hurt a woman or a child.

"Nobody even knew what he looked like! However, after that day, we never heard of him again... Although, that is not technically true, there was a report or two from a few years back that showed somebody following his MO, in operation in the City."

"Now, it's interesting that you should bring that up, as just the other night that same MO seemed to appear at a building on the Southside, but only so far... The rest of the MO looked like Hit Girl! You know, total death and destruction, that sort of thing!"

"Definitely getting funnier as he gets older!"

"Considering all was quiet here, while you were sinking boats all over the Great Lakes, it just seemed a little suspicious that things started to go to hell within hours of you stepping ashore from your battleship!"

I really did not know where to start!

"I was not... I did not... How..." I blustered.

"She looks so cute when she gets all flustered!" Dave chuckled, stepping back out of arms reach.

"I am not flustered, Ass-Kick!" I retorted.

"Definitely not!" Marcus said sarcastically.

That evening

West Ridge

"So, to what do I owe this mass invasion?" I asked with a grin as Marcus, Paige and Megan trooped into the living room.

"New York City," Marcus stated simply.

We all sat down and Marcus passed me a file.

"You never saw that!" He said, pointedly.

"Saw what?" I replied with an innocent smile.

The file was not very thick, but was full of freshly printed documents. It appeared to be an NYPD report, which concerned the murder of an entire family, in New York, some six years or so previously, in March 2009. The family had been gunned down, during the day. It had been something to do with drugs apparently. Which would explain how the DEA got involved.

I was a little shocked by what I read. The Lando family had been all, but exterminated. The father, the mother, an older teenaged girl and a very young boy. They had all been shot dead, some in the back while trying to escape. That sent a wave of rage through me; you did not kill children at all, let alone by shooting them in the fucking back; only a coward did that!

Apparently, there had been a fifth family member, a girl of around twelve or thirteen. She had vanished; and had then been presumed dead. What was the missing girl's name? I dug through the report.

There it was in black and white, Mathilda Lando!

..._...

I looked up at Marcus.

"Horrific reading; even for you!" Marcus stated.

"It is – that bastard who killed those kids..." I was raging.

"It was not nice, but the guy died, blown up by a grenade, or two, I understand," Marcus added.

"My family was destroyed in a vicious manner, but nothing like that..."

"Anything I need to know?" Marcus asked.

"I'll let you know, but nothing for now!"

"Hey, can I look?" Megan asked, eyeing the file.

"Above your pay grade, kid!" I chuckled.

"I don't get paid!" Megan retorted.

"But, I do; lots and lots of money!" Paige teased and started flipping through the file.

"Yeah, a large chunk is compensation for looking after you!" I laughed.

"That's low, even for you, Macready!" Megan bristled.

"Save it for the streets, Wild Kitten!"

Chapter 166*: The Sicilians

Four days later
Thursday

Safehouse F

The shit had not just hit the fan; it had fucking vaporised the fan!

That Mathilda had kicked up a fucking shit storm. Whomever she had been targeting was connected and whomever they were connected to had been both pissed and Sicilian. Not a good combination!

We were all gearing up – even Wildcat! I had called Petra, but so far, we had received no response from her; we needed everybody for this. According to Marcus, the Sicilian and Italian population of Chicago had recently blossomed. They seemed to have come from abroad and from neighbouring states. Both Marcus and Voight were worried; these were hardened killers and they were not in Chicago for the sights.

There had also been a growth in Mafia style hits, which were very, old school. Mutilations with power-tools, being at the top of the list.

The reason for us gearing up that evening was intelligence gathered by Voight and his team that anticipated a major breakdown in order, within the City. The alert had gone out mid-afternoon and I had called everybody in.

Battle Guy and Hal were in the Command Centre with Lynx. Kick-Ass, along with, Mist, Medic, Splinter and Eisenhower were at Safehouse D, and would go out in Titan. Jackal, Shadow, Trojan and Wildcat, were also at Safehouse D; but would go out in Iron Hide.

I would be leaving from Safehouse F, on my Ducati.

North State Street and Wacker Drive

"Olinsky!"

"It's Roman, something is happening here. Voight wanted to know about anything out of the ordinary concerning the Mafia or the Sicilians; we have it."

"What do you have, Roman."

"We have a car here, with two dead. They've been tortured, gunshots to the legs and knees, arms and shoulders."

"Fuck; it's starting as we thought," Detective Alvin Olinsky confirmed. "Keep your eyes open, Roman."

East 29th Street and South Calumet Avenue

Sergeant Trudy Platt was a minute from the District 21 building when her car was rammed from the side by a large SUV. She was initially very pissed; she was a Sergeant in the CPD and was not used to being rammed, at least not since she had last been on patrol. Being a Desk Sergeant was rather boring in comparison.

Sergeant Platt jumped out and walked around to the driver's side of the SUV.

"What the hell do you think, you are doing?" She demanded.

The driver was young, male and seemingly not bothered about having rammed a Police Officer's car. The passenger, another white male, just sat and smirked.

"Out!" Platt yelled at the driver, who did so and she pushed him to the side of the SUV and cuffed him.

Then she looked up as the passenger opened his door and came around towards the front of the SUV.

"You stay there!" Platt called over, reaching for her Smith & Wesson Model 60 pistol.

Before she could fully draw the pistol, the passenger raised an Ingram MAC-10 sub-machine gun and several gunshots rang out.

Southeast Chicago

As I cruised down West 38th Street, I saw something familiar.

It was Worm!

I pulled a fast one-eighty, and pulled up alongside Worm who positively jumped out of his skin and started to shake.

"What are you doing out?"

"Err, long story, err, Hit Girl!"

"Make it short, or your life will be shorter," I growled.

"Everybody's been paid to be out here, tonight," Worm explained. "They said, 'Go cause trouble' and gave me two grand. Who was I to say no?"

"I see you again, tonight; in fact, I see anybody out tonight, they die – you get me?" I growled meaningfully. "Go spread the word!"

The scared, rapid nodding told me that the spineless Worm had understood. He ran off as fast as he could. Criminals were being paid to cause shit. Things were getting better and better!

I pulled out my cell.

"Marcus, I just bumped into one of my informants. Apparently the cretin was paid to 'go cause trouble!'" I explained.

"Bit worrying that," Marcus replied. "However, it does kind of explain why so many petty crimes are being committed. Everybody is out responding to 9-1-1 calls and therefore not available to watch out for bigger problems... A very cunning plan!"

"Tell me about it!" I replied.

"Stay safe, kid!"

"You, too, old man."

North State Street and Wacker Drive

The car seemed to bulge, as flame built up within the steel body and then the body burst, allowing the flame to explode upwards and outwards. The force of the explosion lifted the vehicle sixteen feet into the air before it came crashing back down again.

Officer Sean Roman had just milliseconds to respond to what his eyes saw and his brain was rapidly processing, however he had barely started to turn when the explosive shockwave hit him and he was thrown twenty-feet, landing on another vehicle, shattering its windshield.

The concussion caused him to black out for a moment, before he was able to focus on the carnage before him. Strangely, everything was silent, as his hearing had not returned. He instinctively grasped his radio and sent an alert back to control, but he was unable to hear the response.

His body ached from head to toe, but he consoled himself with the fact that you had to be alive to feel pain.

South Racine Avenue

Chicago Fire, Truck 81 was speeding down the street, with Squad 3 and Engine 51 close behind.

They were on route to a building fire, north of Little Italy. Ambulance 61 had been dispatched elsewhere, but with the intention of joining them as soon as possible.

As they turned down West Flournoy Street, they found their route blocked by a seemingly empty, Chicago Transport Authority bus that was stopped cross the road. Lieutenant Matthew Casey sounded the air horn, but to no avail, the bus did not move. As he climbed down from the cab of Truck 81, he was shot in the shoulder with several bullets from a sub-machine gun. He fell to the street as his colleagues dived for cover within the cab.

..._...

Seconds later, a strikingly slim, blue and grey clad vigilante appeared at the open door pushing the wounded Lieutenant up into the Fire Truck with one hand while she fired a P90 at the gunmen in the CTA bus. She was helped by a white-clad woman in body armour.

"Standby to move!" The white-clad woman announced before slamming the door of the truck.

There was the resounding roar of a 6.7-litre V8 turbocharged diesel as eight tonnes of armoured truck shot past and smashed into the rear end of the CTA bus, pivoting it around and clearing the route.

Truck 81 surged forwards, following in Titan's wake. Squad 3 and Engine 51 followed suit.

East 29th Street and South Calumet Avenue

Sergeant Trudy Platt braced herself for the bullets that never came.

She saw the man drop behind the SUV, the MAC-10 landing on the hood. To her left stood Lieutenant Marcus Williams and his second in command, Sergeant Vicky Richards. Both had their pistols out and smoke curled away from both barrels.

"You okay, Trudy?" Vicky asked, holstering her weapon.

"Hell, yeah!"

Marcus laughed.

"You are under arrest for everything, asshole!" Sergeant Platt announced to the man in cuffs.

"You've nothing to charge me with!"

"Apart from dangerous driving, I'll charge you with vandalism!"

I ain't vandalised anything!" The man retorted as his head was smacked down onto the hood of the SUV.

"You vandalised this SUV!"

The man continued to rant as blood flowed from his nose and the Sergeant passed him to some Officers that had appeared from the precinct.

"Tough old bird, that!" Marcus chuckled. "Let's take my truck."

Safehouse F

The City was going mad!

As I watched Fusion members move across the electronic map, I matched this with reported events occurring around the City. It was sheer mayhem.

Hal was busy hammering away at her keyboard while Lynx kept up a constant stream of coffee.

"This is going to be a night to remember!" Lynx commented.

"Tell me about it!" Battle Guy responded as he listened to the snippets of conversation between Fusion members.

Northern Chicago

Detectives Kevin Atwater and Jay Halstead drove slowly down the street.

They were in an unmarked unit and on reconnaissance. Within the space of twenty minutes and two blocks, they had witnessed countless scenes of criminal behaviour, all of it minor. All they had been able to do was call them in and hope that the camera in the car caught most of them. They had bigger fish to search for that evening.

The alert had come from Lieutenant Williams, via Sergeant Voight: Ignore the petty crimes; they were a diversion – look for the major problems. That was exactly what they were doing, looking for the major problems.

The news of an explosion and a Fire Truck being attacked had spread and neither Detective were taking any chances. While Atwater drive, Halstead had an AR-15 ready for use on his lap. Neither was sure whether they had found the trouble or the trouble had found them, either way their windshield exploded as something heavy hit it and exploded into flame.

Atwater slammed on the brakes and both Detectives dove out of the burning vehicle searching everywhere for trouble. There was little to no cover. Halstead called the situation into control and waited for assistance.

Then the bullets started to fly.

Three blocks away

"Atwater and Halstead are in trouble, let's move!" Sergeant Hank Voight called to his team.

Detective Alvin Olinsky floored the car's accelerator. They were followed by another car with Detectives Erin Lindsay and Adam Ruzek onboard. They flew up West Chicago Avenue and turned right onto North Hoyne Avenue, lights flashing and sirens wailing.

As they turned left up West Iowa Street both vehicles came under sustained fire from an alleyway to their right. A minivan blocked the street. A couple of hundred yards up the street Halstead and Atwater could be seen beside their burning vehicle.

"This is not fucking good!" Voight growled as he returned fire with his AR-15 rifle.

One block over

"Come on, fucking put your foot down!"

"Fuck off, Shadow; I go any faster and we'll crash!" Jackal retorted.

"This is so cool!" Wildcat announced from the back seat.

Trojan just rolled his eyes and said nothing, holding on for dear life.

"There!" Shadow said, pointing.

The firefight was not going well.

Voight and his team were very effectively pinned down and unable to provide support for their colleagues up the street. Suddenly, Iron Hide shot out of a side street and came to a halt, providing a bulletproof shield for the Police Officers. Four vigilantes jumped down. Voight vaguely registered that two of them were very short!

However, he valued any support and armoured vigilantes were just perfect for that moment. Obviously, the vigilantes knew who they were, as the tall one with funny ears sticking up took charge.

"Voight, Lindsay; with me! Ruzek and Olinsky, with Shadow!" Jackal announced and Voight just smiled at Olinsky who shrugged but followed orders nonetheless.

The vigilantes had paired off and with two Detectives using them as shields there were two well-armed fire teams, especially as both vigilantes in each team were equipped with a P90 PDW each.

The Sicilians soon realised that they were outmatched in firepower and skill and seemed to melt away within minutes, however they left three dead. Immediately, Voight and his team jumped into the back of Iron Hide. They were taken down towards Atwater and Halstead.

A fierce firefight erupted, but only lasted a short time before those gunmen melted away, too. Neither Halstead, nor Atwater were wounded although they did seem a little surprised to see the armoured vigilantes.

"Thanks for your support, guys!" Voight said honestly, to Jackal.

"Yeah, thanks," Olinsky added holding out his hand and shaking the hand of each of the Vigilantes.

Olinsky then laughed as the shortest Vigilante, obviously a young girl piped up.

"Come on!" Wildcat announced excitedly. "We have more cunts to kill!"

"You heard the lady; let's not stand around like village idiots!" Voight growled with a chuckle and Olinsky just shook his head.

East Pilsen

I was being pursued by several black Kawasaki motorcycles.

Each machine carried a man armed with a Spectre sub-machine gun. Each sub-machine gun had a standard magazine of fifty-rounds. My G-36C only had thirty-round magazines and was a lot harder to operate at speeds approaching sixty miles per hour.

As I careered around a corner, I heard a different pitch of gunfire, coming from behind me, and turned to see that I had a partner.

Petra nodded in greeting, as she came alongside, firing her Heckler & Koch MP7 at the Sicilians. I nodded back in response and we accelerated away east, along West 18th Street

..._...

Petra and I found our route blocked at South Michigan Avenue and we skidded to a halt in the parking lot of an apartment complex. We took cover behind parked cars, beside our motorcycles that annoyingly lay on their sides.

The incoming fire was heavy and coming from two directions, as the remaining motorcycle riders caught up and joined the fight. The majority of the Spectre weapons appeared to be of the nine-millimetre variety and were little more than bee-stings to our armour.

Unfortunately, some had the .40-calibre versions, which stung like fuck!

McKinley Park

Sergeants Fellowes and Murphy were under heavy fire.

Their unmarked Police SUV was wrecked, having been rammed by a large truck. Fellowes had a broken arm, but he was still returning fire with his pistol. Murphy was cut and bruised but alive.

"Need help?"

"Lieutenant, Sergeant!" Murphy growled as Marcus and Vicky crashed down beside them.

"Ran out of doughnuts and thought we'd see what you lazy assholes were getting up to!" Marcus chuckled. "What do I find? You're both sitting on your fucking asses!"

"Sorry, Sir!" Fellowes quipped through the pain.

A loud air horn sounded and Murphy looked past the SUV.

"The cavalry's here!" He yelled.

..._...

Moments later the large armoured form of Kick-Ass appeared around the SUV, seemingly impervious to the bullets flying around.

"You four run out of doughnuts?" Kick-Ass quipped as Medic appeared, with Mist providing covering fire.

Medic rapidly attended to Fellowes and secured his arm in a sling with a splint until a proper cast could be fitted. She also tended to the wounds on Murphy's face where glass had dug in.

Marcus and Vicky were alongside Mist, returning fire. The Sicilian gunmen seemed to be proficient shooters and their fire was very accurate.

West 18th Street and South Michigan Avenue

Petra and I were effectively pinned down by the gunmen.

There was nobody close by, not to mention that everybody else had their hands full. I listened to the chatter over the comms as other Fusion members were engaged in firefights across the City. I studied our location and suddenly, I had an idea and placed a call to a friend.

"Wondered when I would be hearing from you, dear girl!" Mathilda responded.

"You at your apartment?"

"I would ask how you know about my apartment, but why waste my breath... Yes, I am. Is that you making enough noise to wake the dead?"

"Petra and I are pinned down. You should be able to see the bad guys from your place..."

"Already on it – I just wasn't sure who the bad guys were!" Mathilda replied.

There was a pause and then I heard the crack, of a high-powered sniper rifle and briefly popped my head up in time to see a head exploding as the .338-inch Lapua Magnum bullet passed explosively through before hitting the building behind.

"What the fuck was that?" Petra demanded.

"A friend!"

There were four more 'cracks'. The bullets coming in our direction, from the Sicilians, were rapidly diminishing as Mathilda cut them down.

Damn that girl could shoot!

Eleven o'clock

Everything went silent.

"What the fuck!"

That comment seemed to reverberate around the City of Chicago.

All incoming gunfire stopped and the Sicilian gunmen seemed to vanish, leaving only the bodies and the spent casings.

I had heard about coordinated cease-fires, but that was unreal!

Chapter 167*: Chloe

Four days later
Monday

The City had been in uproar after the lawlessness from the previous week.

Citizens wanted answers and the Mayor was not very popular – not that we gave a fuck about the Mayor!

I was very pleased that no member of Fusion had been injured. There were plenty of bruises, but that was part of doing business! Fellowes was resting at home, letting his arm heal. Murphy was back at work, ignoring his cuts. Cathy had received an enormous bouquet of flowers as a 'thank you' from the two Sergeants. According to Chloe, Cathy had blushed very badly when she had received the flowers!

Marcus had seemed to enjoy himself, hugely. He had also learnt that his second-in-command was an avid Vigilante fan, despite being on a taskforce intended to stamp out Vigilante activity! I had paid a personal visit to Mathilda at the weekend to say thanks for saving the hides of Petra and myself! Mathilda may have been struggling to walk, but she could still shoot and that had impressed me hugely.

Overall, Vigilante standing in Chicago had improved. We had save many lives, both civilian and otherwise.

The next task was finding out who had been behind the masterful attack.

West Ridge

We were going to have an emotional couple of weeks, to put it mildly!

We were still recovering from all that shit with the Sicilians, but now we had some anniversaries to, if not celebrate, at least commemorate.

Josh was gently rubbing his throat where there was a still a small scar visible.

"If you're trying to make me feel bad, then it's working!" Mindy said quietly.

Josh rapidly pulled his hand away from his throat.

"Sorry, Mindy, I did not mean that," Josh replied quickly. "I didn't realise I was doing it."

"Well you did almost cut his head off within five seconds of meeting him!" I growled.

"He has that effect on people!" Erika laughed.

"He does not!" I responded sharply, blushing a little.

"It was the best day of my life; I had found my Chloe..." Josh said, before blushing himself.

I felt my own cheeks getting very warm.

"For good or bad, one year ago, Josh was discovered in Safehouse A, before he managed to burn it down!" Dave said with a brief chuckle.

"Hey!" Josh responded defensively. "That was D'Amico's cunts!"

That discovery, of Josh, a year previously had been the start of a tumultuous week.

Chloe and I had discovered Joshua hiding out at Safehouse A, in New York City. Then we had spent the remainder of the week chasing down Ralph fucking D'Amico. That was the week, I had been separated from Dave by almost a thousand miles; it had been hell.

Yes, I had lost a Safehouse; but it had done its job; it had kept Joshua safe and we had gained a valuable member of Fusion.

"I don't regret a second of finding you, Josh," I said honestly. "You have paid me back many times over for that Safehouse."

"Thanks, Mindy," Josh replied, sounding a little surprised.

Five days later
Saturday

Safehouse F

It was the first day of August and it was roasting!

"You having fun?"

"Oh, yes," I replied. "The sun is so lovely."

"Never really saw you as a sunbather," Dave commented.

I was not a sunbather, but I could not resist lying on the grass, down at the park and just dozing. I was wearing shorts and a shot top. I knew I was showing a little too much skin, but what the hell! Sophia was panting beside me, having just taken a swim in the river.

"Dog, that water is cold!" I growled.

We were making progress in identifying what had really happened the previous week. Ignoring the shit caused by the normal wankers who caused trouble in the City. The hard-core of the trouble had been the Sicilians. It was also very strange that everything had stopped at the same time. They were sending a message; telling us what they could do.

Many people had died and many more had been injured. Okay, most of those killed had been the enemy, but that was not the point. However, we had proven what Fusion could do at short notice. Marcus was not having a good time however, having been yelled at for over an hour about not capturing any vigilantes!

One downside about the evening had been the damage to Iron Hide, Titan and my motorcycle. Tony had told me to get some perspective after moaning about two small scratches on my Panigale, when Titan required some twelve thousand dollars' worth of repairs.

Two days later
Monday morning

West Ridge

I had the house to myself for a change, well almost.

While almost everybody was down at the Safehouse, I was sitting in the living room, on a couch with Sophia, and we were gazing over at Chloe. She had spent the past half hour crying her eyes out. Today was not just the anniversary of the end of that appalling week; it was also the anniversary of Joshua throwing himself in front of Chloe, just as Ralph D'Amico had fired at her, almost point-blank, with her own FN Five-seveN pistol.

Sometimes my life sucked!

That evening

West Ridge

The Bennett family were over for dinner.

Chloe had even chosen to wear a dress, which was a little out of character, but Josh was not complaining. In fact, Josh was a little uncomfortable with the night ahead of him. It was in his honour, after all! At the table, were Dave, me, Ryan, Cathy, Chloe and Josh. Curtis was spending the night with Megan.

"I would like to raise a glass, to a very special young man," Ryan Bennett announced, standing up. Josh slunk down in his chair trying to hide. "Without him, my daughter would be dead, or very badly injured."

Josh and Chloe were both looking distinctly uncomfortable. Chloe was absent-mindedly rubbing her right shoulder.

"Yes, he might be loading his torpedo into a tube that I may not approve of..."

"Ryan!" Cathy growled as Chloe blushed a mortified shade of red and Dave did his best not to laugh.

"I promised Cathy that I would behave – I may be an old bastard, but I can remember what it was like to be in love. I can also vividly remember the looks I used to get from Cathy's Dad when we started, err..."

"Dad!" Chloe growled her eyes wide and her face a deep red.

"Okay, enough humiliation for my little girl!" Ryan laughed turning to face Joshua. "Everybody, I give you our British friend, Joshua Williams, who almost gave his own life, to protect my daughter from some very serious harm."

There was cheering from all those present and the two youngsters looked like they were about to die from embarrassment.

Three days later
Thursday

Morton Grove

"I assume you gave Chloe her present last night?" Ryan chuckled, enjoying the two fifteen year-olds' discomfort.

"Daddy!" Chloe warned.

"Okay, I'm still getting used to my little girl growing up!"

"Daddy, I may be fifteen and an ass-kicking vigilante, but I will always be your little girl," Chloe said, giving her Dad a hug.

"Look after her, Joshua, although you will have your hands full!" Ryan said with a straight face.

Chloe just scowled good-naturedly at her father.

The following afternoon
Friday

D-JAK

"Well look at you!" Nikki said.

"Look at what?" Megan demanded of her friend.

"You look different," Nikki continued. "No more black hair?"

"Oh, that!" Megan replied with a laugh. "Wanted a change; I thought I needed to lighten up a bit!"

Megan's hair was now the natural auburn colour it had been previously and was up in a neat ponytail.

"She does look different," Jake commented then smirked. "I see two more changes, too!"

"Yeah, on her chest!" Zach added checking out Megan's top.

Megan scowled and Zach hit the mat in short order.

"Okay; no talking about her tits!" Zach groaned.

I laughed.

"You want to join him, asshole?" Megan growled at me, so I just smirked and shook my head.

..._...

"Why did Megan hit Zach?" Paige asked.

"Zach made a comment on her tits!" I replied honestly.

"That would explain it!" Paige chuckled as she went back to her work.

I had to admit, Megan looked a lot better now that the black hair had gone.

Later that afternoon

Megan screamed.

"What now?" I yelled over.

Megan looked white. She just pointed towards the cupboard at the back of the room that stored the mats. I looked over at the cupboard and saw two people sneaking out of it. Kyle and Avery!

"You two are fucking disgusting!"

"Megan, language!" Paige called over.

"Well you shouldn't have been peeking!" Avery retorted, looking a little pink in the face. Whether that pinkness was from embarrassment or from whatever she and Kyle had been getting up to, I had no idea!

"What part of Martial Arts was that then?" Megan persisted. "I've read a few books, but never saw any chapters that involved handfuls of boob and a hand down a girl's knickers, not to mention the moaning!"

Paige laughed and both Kyle and Avery really blushed.

"Can't you control your daughter, Mrs Wilson?" Avery moaned.

"I just pretend I don't know her!" Paige replied, hiding behind the computer screen; Kyle grinned.

"Kyle, you're supposed to be defending me!" Avery continued.

"Megan, when you are older, then maybe Curtis will be squeezing your boobs and have his hand down..."

"Keep me out of this!" I groaned, as Megan seemed to be getting a little bit annoyed and more than a bit embarrassed.

"I still think it's disgusting and well, people have to use those mats for other things!" Megan went on.

Avery went to say something in response, but just turned, grabbed her things and headed for the door. Just then the door opened and Chloe breezed in followed by Josh.

"You need to control your feisty little friend, Chloe!" Avery said in passing as she flew out of the door. Kyle just shrugged apologetically as he went past.

Chloe looked more than a little confused, but then she focussed on Megan.

"What have you done this time, you little shit?" Chloe demanded.

Josh rolled his eyes and went to stand out of the line of fire. Megan rounded on Chloe; I could sense a fight brewing.

"Your friends are dirty little fuckers; I came across them feeling each other up, just like you do with him!" Megan said, indicating Josh who just smirked.

"Why can't you learn to control yourself? Stay away from my friends; you always cause trouble, wherever you go, and I don't like my friends getting upset by you," Chloe said menacingly. "Stay out of my way, too, you scruffy little..."

Chloe was interrupted by a stiff punch to her left side, followed by a kick to the back of her legs that dropped the girl to her knees, then a fist struck her left cheek and she fell to the mat.

I stared at Curtis as he glared down at Chloe.

"Wow, what the hell?" I exclaimed.

"Do not talk to my girl like that, ever!" Curtis growled at Chloe.

"That was awesome, Curtis!" Jake said and Zach seemed to approve, too. Nikki was frozen in shock while Paige just put her head in her hands and groaned.

Megan however, seemed rather amazed at Curtis defending her like that; flooring his own cousin! I ran forward and checked on Chloe. She was a little dazed and there was a bruise developing on her left cheek. That boy had one hell of a strong punch!

Curtis showed no remorse, however he smiled at Megan who actually blushed, but he ignored his cousin completely and went back to talking with his friends who seemed in awe at what he had just done. Megan soon drifted over to Curtis, while I picked a rather shell-shocked Chloe up off the mat.

Never a dull moment!

The following afternoon Saturday

West Ridge

Paige had been unable to contain herself the previous evening.

She had come around within seconds of coming home and had told me all about what had occurred at D-JAK, earlier that afternoon. We had both had a huge laugh about it and then I had got on the phone to Cathy. Cathy had initially been concerned when she had seen the bruise on Chloe's cheek, but when Curtis had happily informed her that he had given Chloe the bruise, Cathy had just laughed. I understood that Chloe had not retaliated towards Curtis and neither had she actually spoken to him since he had attacked her.

..._...

Megan breezed in, around noon, looking very pleased with herself.

"Heard lover boy stood up for you, yesterday," I said offhandedly and Megan stopped dead in her tracks.

She turned to me and went a little bit pink before slumping onto the couch beside me.

"He was awesome; I've never had somebody do that for me before. He said that I was his girl!" Megan said wistfully.

Dave started fiddling with his iPad and then a tune started playing.

*'Love is in the air,
Everywhere I look around
Love is in the air
Every sight and every sound'*

I started laughing, but Megan just scowled and blushed.

"Chloe is a fucking bitch and if I see her again, I am going to plant my fist squarely in her smug face!" Megan stated very convincingly.

I looked at Dave who just shrugged.

"Megan, look..."

I was interrupted by a different tune.

'I don't give a damn 'bout my reputation...'

"Hey, asshole, that's my tune!" I laughed.

That afternoon

Safehouse F

Dave had things to do, so I took Megan down to the Safehouse on my BMW.

Chloe was already there. I had seen nothing wrong with that and had not really believed a word of what Megan had said at the house. However, in hindsight, maybe I should have been prepared. I was just saying 'hi' to Josh, when Megan launched herself at Chloe and shoved her to the ground and started to punch her, just as she had said she would.

I seized hold of Megan, dragging her off Chloe who had tried to protect herself, but still had blood streaming from her nose. Wildcat was living up to her name – she was hissing and spitting, desperate to get her claws back into Chloe.

"What the fuck, Megan!" Chloe exclaimed. "You're fucking out of control!"

Curtis came pounding down the stairs followed by Cathy and Ryan.

"I love a bitch fight, just like any man, but..." Ryan began before a glance from his wife shut him up.

"Mom, look what that bitch just did to me and that shit yesterday," Chloe moaned bitterly.

I was very familiar with the expression on Cathy's face.

"Cut the waterworks, Chloe; you're fifteen, not five..." Cathy said.

Jeez, it felt like yesterday that Marcus said that to me. Chloe just stood there.

'Bet you're feeling stupid, right now!' I thought to myself.

"You're really going to stand there; a fifteen-year-old Shadow, and bleat about being beaten up by two, almost eleven-year-olds?" Cathy lectured.

Ooh, that stung!

..._...

"You two going to bury the hatchet?" I asked seriously.

"In her fucking head!" Megan retorted.

"You could never reach, you stumpy piece of shit!" Chloe countered.

"Look, either you two end this, or Dave and I will!" I said angrily.

"I'll end it if that walking disaster stays away from me and my friends!" Chloe growled.

"Fine by me; they're all disgusting little fuckers, just like you. I'll stay away just for some sanity!" Megan spat back.

"That is enough!" I yelled back. "Go suit the fuck up! One word from either of you and I'll Taser your fucking asses!"

..._...

Ten minutes later the two girls were back, on the mat, in their full combat suits, but unmasked.

"You two are going to fight it out – with no outside assistance," I instructed, glaring at Josh. "Only one of you leaves that mat, still standing. Mask up, bitches!"

Both girls pulled on their masks and readied themselves.

"Oh, one more thing – anything goes!"

Chapter 168*: They Come They Go

Author's Note: Please be warned that this chapter includes smut and behaviour that could be seen as indecent and salacious, including words or insinuations of a dubious, unseemly or suggestive nature!

Saturday afternoon

Safehouse F

The fight started slowly.

Initially, the two girls just circled each other, gauging each other's mood. They were each well aware of the other's capabilities. The fight looked uneven, considering that there was a good few inches in height difference and that Shadow had a weight advantage, too. I was hedging my bets and I was secretly rooting for Wildcat.

Josh, of course, was rooting for Shadow and Curtis was rooting for Wildcat. We all stood at the side of the mat watching and I was to be the referee for the little skirmish, just in case things got out of hand; I wanted the girls to hurt each other, but not to inflict any permanent injuries.

Shadow struck first, but it seemed half hearted as Wildcat easily avoided the kick. Then Wildcat landed a kick on Shadow's thigh, which produced an audible intake of breath from Shadow. Wildcat may have been short and slim, but she could hit hard and had very strong muscles for her age and stature.

"Fucking runt!" Shadow shouted as she kicked out with her full force, catching Wildcat in her chest and sending her flying backwards across the mat. Wildcat landed in a heap, but she did not get up.

Well, that fight did not last long!

..._...

"Go help her up then, you heartless bitch!" Curtis said to his cousin from the walkway above the mat, as he headed for the steps.

"Help your, yourself, dickhead!" Shadow spat back. "You're the one who likes the fucking bitch!"

I was partway across the mat when I saw Wildcat stirring. Shadow's back was to Wildcat, so I kept quiet and stepped back. Wildcat started taking deep breathes and I saw her limbs brace up. I looked at Cathy and winked; she nodded her understanding and kept quiet.

Shadow never saw what hit her as Wildcat sprang up and swept Shadow's legs out from under her, followed by sharp jabs to her chest and stomach.

..._...

Shadow screamed with pain and anger, not to mention a little humiliation at being blind-sided. Nonetheless, she jumped up and swung for Wildcat who performed her signature backflip and was quickly out of reach. I could tell by her movements that Shadow was outraged at being put down and I knew that she would not stand for it!

I was right.

Shadow was pissed and she charged at Wildcat who must have realised that she was in big trouble, so she did the unexpected, as she usually did, and charged towards Shadow. However, at the last minute Wildcat jumped up and grabbed hold of the steel walkway, above her, swinging over Shadow, but kicking her in the left shoulder as she went past. Wildcat flipped herself upwards and landed on the walkway. Shadow gazed at the short vigilante and although we could not see her face, her stance showed that she was majorly pissed off and very annoyed at missing her quarry.

..._...

Shadow bolted for the steel staircase and ran upwards; we all leapt out of the way, but moved to where we could follow the fight. Wildcat ran directly at Shadow as she appeared on the walkway and jumped sending her full weight into Shadow's chest, with both her feet. Shadow crashed back against the wall as Wildcat under inertia then cannoned into her. Shadow seized Wildcat's arm and threw her down the walkway, towards the Briefing Room.

Wildcat hit the ground, rolling forwards to absorb the impact, but she sprang up and seized hold of a red fire extinguisher from the wall, emptying the contents in Shadow's direction. Shadow fought through the spray of water and kicked Wildcat in the chest. Wildcat dropped the fire extinguisher, fell backwards before then scrambling back to her feet and diving over the railings, and she fell the ten feet to the mat, rolling as she landed.

"You've got to do better than that, you useless bitch!" Wildcat shouted at the incensed Shadow.

..._...

"How long you going to let this go on for?" Cathy asked, sounding a little concerned.

"Until it's over..." I replied.

Not to be outdone, Shadow also dived over the railing after her target who stood waiting with her hands on her hips. Wildcat waited until Shadow was back on her feet before she moved to attack and there began a whirling maelstrom of colour as the two youngsters fought a seemingly uneven battle.

"Kind of reminds me of the battle between Yoda and Sidious!" Curtis said to Josh.

"You know, you and your girlfriend have caused a lot of trouble," Josh replied. "Can't say you did anything wrong – Chloe can be a mouthy bitch at times."

"So can Megan!"

"The two girls must be tiring by now; it's been twenty minutes and neither are letting up," Josh added, obviously worried about Chloe.

My trained eye could see that both girls were starting to tire; naturally, it was Wildcat, who was making mistakes first. She had a lot of stamina, but Shadow was older and more capable. Wildcat would be a formidable opponent in a few years if she kept it up. Both girls were really pounding on each other; their bruises would be monumental.

Shadow made a small mistake, which allowed Wildcat to kick her hard in the right thigh, which must have hurt as Shadow screamed out. Shadow responded with a swift punch from her right fist into Wildcat's left upper arm. Wildcat yelled out in pain.

..._...

Both girls seemed to collapse at the same time.

Wildcat rested her head on Shadow's stomach. The two vigilantes could be seen breathing heavily after their exertions. Wildcat pulled off her mask first, looked up at Shadow who removed her own mask and grinned.

Chloe grinned back and started to laugh.

"Not bad for an old girl!" Megan said with a chuckle.

"Hey, I'm only fifteen..."

"That's old..."

"You'll be fifteen in a few years, Megan!"

"Jeez, they'll be making out next!" Josh grinned hopefully.

"In your fucking dreams!" Both girls retorted.

"Oh, yeah..." Josh commented dreamily.

Three days later
Tuesday

West Ridge

The door flew open and Marcus stormed in.

"You have gone too far!" He growled with added menace.

"I've done nothing!" I whined innocently.

"Not you; them!" Marcus said, glaring at Dave and Mindy.

Oh, cool!

"What?" Mindy tried, trying to look innocent, but just looking very guilty.

Marcus turned to me.

"Megan, home, now!"

"Ah, come on; everybody gets to see me getting chewed out, why can't I see you chewing them out for change?" I groaned. That was so unfair!

"Megan!"

"I'm going, jeez!" I slipped out the door, leaving one of Marty's discrete micro-camera transmitters on the couch. I hid round the side of the house, pulled out my cell and logged on to the camera.

Dave and Mindy looked a little unhappy.

"Now where do we start with you two jokers?" Marcus began. "The boss is enough of a nightmare without me having to endure a goddamn multi-hour ass chewing!"

"I thought he liked doughnuts!" Mindy quipped with a smirk.

"Oh yeah, he loved that stereotype, but did you have to colour them?" Marcus continued. "Six purple and six green?"

Dave just shrugged.

"But did you two clowns stop there? Oh, no, you left a card with the doughnuts: 'To our pal, all the best, Hit Girl and Kick-Ass!'"

..._...

I was laughing, but doing my best not to laugh too loudly. There were times that I thought of Dave and Mindy as being far too 'straight-laced' to get up to anything like that; the top Cop must have been so pissed!

"Then we come to the source of those doughnuts," Marcus was now in full flow and Mindy was smirking, while Dave was studying the ceiling. "You know, I never knew what the Superintendent's daughter did for a living, but you two did, obviously! That was where you got the doughnuts from; she makes the damn things!"

Mindy was now starting to almost, piss herself laughing. Even Marcus was smiling and Dave was chuckling.

"She was a fan!" Mindy managed to spit out.

"Damn nutcases!" Marcus laughed. "I'm going home."

I then saw him stride towards the front door but he stopped and then I saw his face get bigger and bigger.

"You're busted!" Marcus said into the camera.

Later that week
Friday

New York City

That time of year sucked, for oh so many reasons.

The biggest one of which was Dave; this was the anniversary of his Dad's death. That was the first time, since that day, all those years ago, that we had stood together in that very cemetery.

We gazed down at the gravestone and I wrapped my arm around Dave's waist to comfort him. We could both remember that day, as if it was yesterday. I had felt so much guilt because maybe I could have prevented his Dad from being killed, but...

I was not going there, not at that moment, in that place. I gazed around the cemetery; it seemed so peaceful, so different. Nevertheless, I could visualise the men with guns, the moment of realisation and then my yelling at Dave to get down, then blackness as I was blasted into a statue.

I smiled as I remembered regaining consciousness amongst all the noise and smoke. I remembered seizing Marcus' pistol and running after that damn van.

"Game on cock-suckers!" I muttered to myself.

"Huh?" Dave asked, turning to me.

"Oh, sorry, didn't mean to say that out loud!"

"I still can't believe some nutcase chose to fight it out on top of a moving van!" Dave grinned.

I smirked at the memory – it was an awesome sequence of events.

"Somebody said something very profound that day and I have never forgotten it," Dave continued. "She told me: 'Dave, your father loved you... Just like my Daddy loved me, and I know it hurts. But, maybe... Maybe that's the real meaning of being a superhero; it's taking that pain and turning it into something good... Something right'."

I was always amazed that Dave remembered everything that I had ever said to him.

"She also said: 'Remember what you told me? This is your life, you've gotta live it'," I said.

"The crazy bitch then said: 'Now help me find some pliers; I'm gonna make this guy eat his own dick!'" Dave laughed.

"I'm good with words!" I grinned back.

Dave and I had taken the train to New York, early that morning.

Dave had insisted that he could go on his own; however, I had forced him to let me go. I knew that it would be hard on him and I wanted to be there to support him, not least because I felt bad about the whole thing! Not that I mentioned feeling bad to Dave as that would have started the one argument that got us both very angry with each other, so I kept my mouth shut for once!

I also wanted to take the chance to inspect my assets in New York, as it had been a year since I had last been in the City. We also kept our head down, in case anybody recognised us. The first stop was Safehouse C.

Safehouse C, New York City

The building appeared intact.

We approached carefully; we were both armed with concealed Beretta Px4 Storm SubCompact pistols. What no Glock? I fancied a change – so shoot me! We climbed the stairs, which were covered in dust; it did not look like anybody had been there. I was not taking any chances, not after finding Joshua happily installed in Safehouse A the previous year!

Dave punched in the code for the door, while I provided cover. The door clicked and Dave pulled it open so I could go in with my pistol up in front of me. All seemed just, as we had left it, albeit for a lot of dust! Weapons were still on the walls and the alarm system showed no signs of tampering or any other entry since we had left the previous year.

We checked out every room, just to be safe, but all was clear.

"Needs a damn good dusting!" I commented, holstering my pistol.

"Just a bit!" Dave added, holding up a hand with a thick layer of dust on it then smirking. "I don't mind getting a little bit dirty, if you don't..."

"You read my mind!"

Mindy threw herself at me, pushing me down onto the mat in a cloud of dust.

Surprisingly, we did not choke on the cloud of dust. Maybe that was because Mindy was kissing me passionately on the lips. I reached up under her shirt, around to her back and flicked the catch of her bra. The garment fell loose, I ran my hand around to the front of her body feeling the soft, warm skin, and then Mindy froze.

She shuddered as my fingers ran over her pert nipples. I could feel my trousers getting rather tight and wished that I had worn a pair with a little more space. Mindy seemed to have read my mind as her hand reached for my belt and wrenched it open along with the buttons on my jeans relieving the pressure.

I felt Mindy's hand dive down my shorts and I breathed in involuntarily as Mindy grabbed hold of me. Her hand felt soft and smooth as she caressed me. I pulled Mindy's shirt up and over her head, followed by the bra. I undid the button on Mindy's jeans, sliding them off along with her purple panties, which were decidedly damp.

I ran my hands across the firm but soft skin of Mindy's backside. I felt Mindy kicking off her shoes and shrugging off her jeans. I rapidly kicked off my own shoes and jeans and then allowed Mindy to slide off my shorts. I pulled off my shirt and felt Mindy's fingernails digging into my bare chest. I pulled her to me, her soft breasts resting on my chest and I kissed the woman who would very soon be my wife.

..._...

We lay there, on the mat, completely naked for what seemed like hours.

"Brings back some weird memories, being here," Mindy muttered. "Like this."

"You mean that you used to kick the fuck out of me, on this very mat, rather than me just fucking you here?"

"Something like that," Mindy commented. "Has to be the first time that we have ever had sex in this Safehouse."

"Well we weren't banging each other back then."

"Kind of wish we were."

"Marcus would never have approved."

"Marcus would never have known!"

Chapter 169*: Trapped In New York

Author's Note: Please be warned that this chapter includes smut and behaviour that could be seen as indecent and salacious, including words or insinuations of a dubious, unseemly or suggestive nature!

One a more serious note; there are also scenes that some readers may find somewhat disturbing.

Friday afternoon Safehouse C, New York City

Reluctantly, I decided that we needed to get dressed.

We had one more destination to visit in New York before we would be catching our train back to Chicago. That destination would be a real test of my nerves and I was both, looking forward to it, as well as dreading it, both at the same time! Dave had promised that he would stay with me, to support me, just as I had with him.

We headed out, towards Queens.

Northern Queens

We moved slowly between the rows and rows of graves.

I was very apprehensive, as we got closer and closer to a certain part of the Cemetery where there were two graves, side by side; however, they both shared the same gravestone.

In Loving Memory

*Kathleen Macready
Died 3rd November 1997
Loving Wife and Mother*

*Damon Macready
Died 25th September 2009
Devoted Father*

I had avoided that place, like the damned plague. I had never wanted to see the grave of my Mother; I had always hated her for taking what I saw, as the easy way out. I bitterly missed not having had a Mother. I could never draw myself to visit the grave of my Father, either, partly because he shared it with my Mother; yeah, I could be a cast iron bitch. Daddy had tried in vain to get me to visit the grave. Marcus had tried, after Daddy had died, but I could not do it.

Now, though, I was older and I had Dave.

..._...

I had tears running down my cheek; the emotions running through me were mixed and very new to me.

"I've been a pretty awful daughter, haven't I?"

"Why?"

"It's taken me seventeen years to turn up to see my Mother and six years to see my Father..."

"You had other things on your mind, so I'm sure they would understand."

Dave always knew what to say, when I did not.

"Hi, Mom, I'd like you to meet Dave; he's my fiancé..."

"Did you feel that?" Dave suddenly asked.

"Feel what?"

"I'm sure I felt Damon turning in his grave!" Dave quipped.

"That is not funny, Lizewski!"

It was kind of, though. I had no idea what Daddy would think about my current predicament. Marriage was an enormous step.

"Sorry, future Mrs Lizewski!"

I grinned.

"Daddy liked you; you know that!" I retorted.

"Yeah, like a Rottweiler likes a juicy steak!"

"You're probably right," I replied.

"However, I am certain that both of them would be very proud of their daughter, right now," Dave said. "I am."

Forty minutes later, we headed back towards the City.

The intention was to retrieve some items from Safehouse C and then head directly to the train station. However, we seemed to have acquired a tail, so once close to a secluded part of the street we were in, I span around.

The unfortunate tail was rapidly pinned against the wall of a building while Dave stood overwatch. I was rather shocked to find that it was a girl, about my age, that I had pinned to the wall with my lower arm across her throat. I was even more shocked to recognise the face that tried to smile at me. I quickly released my arm from her throat.

"Err, hi, err, Mindy..."

"Brooke!"

Dave's head span around at that name.

"Brooke, as in, that complete bitch who made your life hell?" Dave asked.

"Yeah!" I replied and then my eyes went wide as I saw a shape appear behind Dave and then I felt somebody behind me, immediately followed by a sharp pain in my neck.

Then I lost consciousness.

I had felt myself being moved around.

Everything was very hazy and I could not make sense of where I was in my mind. I could hear voices, but not what was being said. I tried to move my right arm, but it would not move. I tried my other arm; it was the same, as were both of my legs.

I opened my eyes but initially only saw blackness, until my eyes focussed and I started to see shadows and then I felt something on my face; I was wearing a hood. Then it started to come back to me – Brooke!

That bitch was pure poison; last time I was involved with her, I was humiliated and then I was grounded, which in turn led to my being unable to help Dave when his Dad was arrested, which then meant his Dad had been murdered on the orders of Chris D'Amico.

Had the bitch distracted me on purpose? Was this her way of getting back at me? Where was Dave? Did Brooke know that I was more than just Mindy Macready? Was my pistol still in the holster on my back?

So far, I had kept my head down where it had been resting on my chest. To anybody looking I would still be unconscious. I kept my ears open, listening for anything and everything. I would need to know as much as possible before I dared to act.

I also had a decision to make for when I 'regained' consciousness. Would I play the frightened teenager, or the hardened Hit Girl?

So many decisions.

A short while later, I heard footsteps, then the scraping of metal as a bolt was pulled back.

Seconds later, my hood was pulled off and I squinted in the bright illumination that came from industrial light fittings mounted high above. I looked around above me and saw that I was in a warehouse of sorts. I looked to my left and was very relieved to see a rapidly blinking Dave tied to a chair beside me. Neither of us had been gagged.

"Brings back some fond memories this!" He quipped quietly and I grinned.

"First for me!" I responded.

I looked to my right and saw Brooke, but ignored her. There were five men, all wearing masks of sorts. One man stepped forward, addressing Dave.

"This girl yours?" He said, indicating me.

I left Dave to do the talking.

"Maybe," Dave responded with a neutral expression.

The man smirked.

"You fucking her?"

"Maybe."

"She good in the sack?"

"Maybe."

The man seemed to be getting annoyed, so without warning he lashed out, slapping me across the face, and I allowed a scream to leave my lips.

"You like your girl getting beaten?"

"She enjoys it," Dave commented.

..._...

Brooke was borderline hysterical and gibbering away in her chair. The slap had hurt, but I had had worse and as Dave said, I kind of enjoyed it; I was not a normal girl! The men laughed and all five left the room, shutting a metal door behind them and I heard a bolt shoved into place.

I studied my bindings. My wrists were bound with thick plastic cable ties, as were Dave's and Brooke's. I had to admit that Brooke looked to be the victim here, but I did not trust the girl; I had no reason to.

"Wh- what's happening?" Brooke mumbled through her tears.

"I might ask you, bitch!" I growled back and Brooke just looked at me blankly.

"Oh for fuck's sake!"

I studied Dave's ankles, as I could not see mine; cable ties, again. I could feel my pistol in the small of my back, not that it was of any fucking use right now! However...

..._...

"This is going to hurt!" I commented and pushed myself backwards, crashing down to the concrete floor.

"You okay?" Dave asked, grinning down at me.

"I'll survive!" I grumbled lying on my back with my legs in the air. "Brooke, I need you to reach into my right boot and grab my Balisong."

Brooke just stared at me, blankly.

"Brooke!" I hissed urgently, to get her attention.

Brooke focussed and nodded.

"Reach into my boot and pull out the knife," I instructed gently and watched as Brooke eased it out of my boot.
"Good!"

Brooke smiled.

"Now, unlock the knife by flicking off the catch at the base... Good... Carefully, flick open the handle to expose the blade... Good... Now, trying not to touch the blade, flick the handle over and then roll the knife over, bring the handles together and there we go!"

"Not bad, Brooke!" Dave commented and Brooke smiled, weakly.

"Now, without cutting my foot off, cut the tie..."

Brooke, despite her obvious faults, actually managed to slice the tie that bound my ankle and not my skin! Now that I could get a foot down, I pulled myself forwards so that my wrist was beside my Balisong.

"Okay, Brooke, I know we've had our differences, but please don't slit my fucking wrist!" I growled and Brooke produced a warped giggle.

A minute later, we were all unbound, with my arteries intact!

I flipped my Balisong closed and stowed it back in my boot. Then I drew my pistol, as did Dave.

"What the fuck are you two doing with those?" Brooke exclaimed as I racked back the slide on my pistol, chambering a round.

I checked my front pocket and found that my cell was missing. As were Dave's and Brooke's cells. It was a miracle that the idiots had not found the pistols.

..._...

I made for the door; it was solid and did not budge an inch as I shoved it. There was no way out of the windowless room where we were being held. We had no choice but to await the return of the men. I also had a conundrum: if it were just Dave and me, things would be easy; but we had Brooke to protect and to get to safety, which would complicate things.

For now, I did not answer Brooke's comment.

Just as I was mulling things over, I heard voices and footsteps followed by the rasping of the bolt being pulled back. I nodded to Dave and pushed, or rather shoved, Brooke back against the wall and out of the potential line of fire.

The door was pulled open and a man stepped through with his back to me; he was chatting with his pals. He stopped talking and froze the moment that he caught sight of me, and the pistol that I had aimed at his head. He started to call out a warning, so I blew his head apart with a single shot. Brooke screamed, but I ignored her. Before the body had hit the floor, I had moved and engaged the remaining four men who were standing in the doorway.

..._...

My pistol held only thirteen, nine-millimetre rounds, as did Dave's and neither of us carried a spare magazine. We had to make each round count, so I dropped the first two men with a single shot in the chest, each. Dave caught a third man in the head with another single shot. The fourth man dived off to one side and returned fire with what sounded like a .45-calibre pistol.

Brooke was still screaming and staring at the spreading pool of blood. Dave and I had not returned fire, conserving our rounds. I edged towards the door but could not see anything useful from my position and I was not about to stick my head out and get it blown the fuck off! I turned to Brooke and slapped her hard around the face, just once. She stopped screaming and seemed to pull herself together.

"That felt good!" I muttered and Dave smiled.

..._...

"I have a confession to make," Brooke said quietly, rubbing her cheek and I saw her eyes change with understanding.

I stared at Brooke, who looked a little embarrassed.

"They are after Daddy; his company has things that people want," Brooke continued. "I – they – they will use me to get to Daddy."

"That makes sense," Dave said after a few seconds consideration.

"Yeah. So why drag us into it, wise ass?" I demanded.

"I saw you on the street and well, I wanted to talk to you. I've changed since that day – I'm not that self-centred bitch, not anymore," Brooke explained. "I now know who you two really are and well, I'm glad I have you two to protect me, despite our differences. I also know that you have changed since then, too. I've seen the news reports from Chicago; you both fight for good."

"Quite a speech, Queen Bee!" I commented grudgingly.

All gunfire had ceased, but I could still hear movement from outside the door.

We had seconds to come to a decision on our next actions, before our kidnappers sorted themselves out first and mounted a counter-attack. Dave picked up a chair and threw it through the doorway. There was an instant barrage of gunfire from the single man and I distinctly heard the final bullet zing through the doorway and then silence followed by the sound of a magazine being ejected.

I sprang up and rolled through the doorway, coming up and sending a pair of bullets dead centre into the man's forehead. I span around covering a full three-sixty-degree view; I saw nobody else.

"Clear!" I called to Dave.

West Ridge, Chicago

"Shouldn't we have heard from Dave and Mindy, by now?"

"Maybe," Chloe replied dreamily. "Maybe they're having fun, like we are!"

"You are insatiable, girl!" I laughed as Chloe ran her hands across my naked nether regions. "You're going to wear it out and have nothing left for when we're married."

Chloe took a moment to look at me.

"Why would I let a tosser like you, marry me?"

"Who the fuck else would put up with you?"

"Good point!" Chloe admitted and took me into her mouth.

New York City

We checked out our surroundings.

We were in some sort of warehouse. There were racks of all sorts of stuff in neat lines. The building was enormous and seemed to extend in all directions. I checked my watch; it was past nine at night and we had been there for hours.

Dave grabbed up a pair of pistols from the dead men. They seemed like hired muscle and only two of them had been armed. They did not seem very professional, at all. I had an idea that they had been hired to keep us busy, while the professionals sat back out of the way.

Dave proceeded two aisles over and moved parallel to Brooke and me. We had only moved about twenty metres when I heard something to my right followed by a bellow from Dave and gunshots.

"Run!"

Then all went black again.

When I regained consciousness, I could hear screaming.

That was bad, but nowhere near as bad as the fact that I could feel my jeans sliding down over my hips! That fact brought me immediately awake and I opened my eyes to see a man above me, upside down and pinning my arms above my head. My legs were pinned, too, by another man who was intent on removing my jeans.

I was not going to be fucking raped, no fucking chance!

I prepared myself to move. The man's face was just inches from me, so I head-butted him hard in the face, breaking his nose and I felt his warm blood on my face; this galvanised me into action. As soon as the man released my arms, I seized the man's head and twisted it sharply to the side, snapping his neck. The man collapsed behind me and the man who was pulling down my jeans stopped and looked up from staring down at my crotch. One of the last things in life he saw was my fist, driving into his face and he screamed as more blood flew, and then the man seemed to fly backwards, and he was thrown bodily against the concrete wall, leaving a vivid red smear.

..._...

I looked up and for a moment went all fan-girl as I saw Dave standing over me. He was madder than hell and his expression while turning me on, also scared me.

"You getting up or what?" He growled yanking me to my feet. God he was strong!

Focus, Mindy, focus!

There was a pistol on the ground beside me; it was mine! I grabbed it up and walked over to the man crumpled at the base of the wall; he was groaning in pain. I sent three bullets into the man's groin, followed by another into his head.

Dave had moved so fast that the man currently astride the screaming, half-naked Brooke had not actually noticed anything until I had fired the four bullets. Then he had jumped up, his trousers and shorts around his ankles. He was ready for action in every way, so he was dispatched in the same manner as his friend, the slide locking back on the empty magazine.

..._...

Brooke screamed as the man's warm blood sprayed across her bare skin and the emasculated body collapsed on top of her. I ran over and dragged the dead body off her. Brooke was completely exposed from her neck, down to her knees and she was trembling. I helped her up from the concrete floor.

"He had his hands all over me; it was horrible..."

"Did he?" I asked, not wanting to say it.

Brooke closed her eyes and simply shook her head as I helped her to sort her clothes out and looked over at Dave.

"We need to get the fuck outta here!" I growled.

Chapter 170*: Escape From New York

New York
Friday

We moved away from the dead bodies and headed in the direction indicated by a sign that pointed towards a convenient fire exit.

I had been impressed by how well Brooke had stood up to being groped, almost raped, not to mention seeing the men killed by Dave and me. Maybe there was more to her than met the eye; she had figured Dave and me out quicker than expected; but then nobody ever said that Brooke was stupid!

After a couple of minutes, we reached the fire exit and immense relief seemed to flood over the three of us; we were safe. I shoved open the door and was about to step through when bullets pounded into the door and surrounding wall. The gunfire was suppressed and not easily heard as I dived off to one side, pulling Brooke with me and slamming the door closed.

..._...

Bullets pinged off the steel-lined fire door as I looked at Dave.

"I think somebody wants us to stay inside..." He said calmly.

"Yeah, a potentially painful cloud of bullets does tend to be quite convincing!"

"I cannot believe that you two can be so goddamn calm about this fucking shit!" Brooke cried out. "I'm about to have a fucking nervous breakdown and you two are cracking jokes!"

"Look, Queen Bee, you know who we are, right?" Dave asked.

"Yeah, you're Kick-Ass and Hit Girl..."

"Could you be in better hands?" Dave continued.

"Probably not..."

"So stop ya yappin' and start thinkin'!" I growled in annoyance.

"I always did like your bitchiness!" Brooke added with a weak smile.

Twenty minutes later, we had moved to the far end of the warehouse and I was able to look through some locked double doors into what appeared to be a branch of fucking IKEA or something very similar!

"We're in a goddamn furniture type store!" I growled to Dave.

"Cool!" He replied. "A bed would be good, right about now."

I just glared.

"I'm tired!" He elaborated as he passed over his Beretta while keeping hold of his seized SIG Sauer P226 pistol.

"Wait, why do I get the girl gun?" I demanded.

"Are you kidding me?" Dave asked incredulously, passing over the SIG.

"Nah, just fuckin' with ya!" I said taking the Beretta and blowing out the bolts that held the doors closed.

Dave and I went through the doors into the darkened store. We found ourselves in the kitchen department, which was just plain weird. We saw nobody and then I saw a sign above that made me smile.

"What?" Dave asked.

I pointed upwards: 'Outdoor Sports'.

We ran over and I felt like it was fucking Christmas!

I grabbed various items as I came across them, as did Dave. Within eight minutes, we all had on a ballistic vest and I had found Brooke some proper shoes to wear. We all wore a pair of gloves and I had loaded my vest with some throwing knives and a cool survival axe among other things. Dave had grabbed a pair of wicked tactical knives and machete.

There was no way to get at the firearms or the ammunition the store held, but we would improvise. I tried a phone on a service desk but not surprisingly, it was dead. The final act for Brooke and me was to put our hair up and out of the way. I gave Brooke instructions on keeping under cover and away from the action.

Now we waited.

I heard movement and indicated the fact silently to Dave via a hand signal.

Our intention was to use stealth and reserve our pistols for the last resort. The footsteps came closer and closer. The first thing we saw was the muzzle of a Heckler & Koch G36K assault rifle. Dave swung his arm out to where the head should be and we heard a satisfying crunch. I followed up with a tactical knife into the man's stomach as Dave lowered the man down to the ground with a hand over his mouth.

One down!

Dave pulled off the man's assault rifle, which was fitted with a suppressor. Dave also grabbed the two spare magazines from the man's body armour, sticking them into pouches on his own vest. Dave indicated further movement and we moved to the right, into the 'tools' section of the store.

We moved behind the displays.

I came up behind two more men, both facing away from me and moving slowly away.

I was about to drop them with the G36K when something caught my eye. I seized hold of a pair of two-foot long adjustable wrenches and killed both men with a swinging hit to each head. Both men went down; however, one body caught a portable floodlight stand, which I managed to intercept before it crashed to the floor.

I smirked at Mindy as she gave me a look that said, 'Dickhead!'

Two more down!

I helped himself to two more G36 Magazines and passed over, a G36C to Mindy, along with two spare magazines. The G36C was similarly equipped with a suppressor. The men were well equipped in fairly anonymous, black, combat gear. We now had extra pistols, however we could not carry too much weight, especially Mindy.

We did, however cache what weapons we had, but could not carry for possible later use.

I heard a door opening, somewhere over by 'soft furnishings'.

Dave slid to the floor and hid behind a reception counter while I did likewise, close by. The approaching team was professional, using hand signals to communicate. I saw an opportunity and drew four throwing knives.

Two men appeared around a display carousel and both went down hard with knives in their foreheads. I saw Dave move to intercept a third man; behind him was a fourth with his assault rifle raised.

I threw my remaining two knives.

"Oh, fuck!" I muttered

Oh my God!

Mindy had just thrown two knives, which had taken down two of the attackers, then she had thrown two more knives; only for one of the knives, a smallish one, to end up embedded in Dave's right thigh! He glanced down at the knife, then looked back up and glared at Mindy who just shrugged apologetically without a hint of shame; and then mouthed the word 'sorry'!

"We'll talk about this later!" Dave commented to Mindy as he hobbled past, pulling out the knife and throwing it down to the floor in disgust.

Those two made one hell of a couple. I had to admit that considering what I knew at that point, I was damned lucky to be alive. If I had known Mindy's secret then I would never have dared to do the things to her that I did. I shuddered to think about what Mindy could have done to me! She was a strange girl, that was an undeniable fact, but she had also kept a remarkable secret. I respected her for what she had done in her secret double life and regretted that we could not have been friends, rather than enemies. Maybe I could change that...

"You with us, Queen Bee?" Mindy called, dragging me back to the present.

There was a clatter as Dave knocked over some large cans.

"Jeez, really!" Mindy growled at Dave.

"I didn't touch a thing!" Dave growled back.

"Yes you did!" Mindy shot back.

Then, before Dave could respond to Mindy, gunfire erupted from all around us. We ran through that section of the store, with Dave and Mindy firing their submachine guns on full automatic and doing our best to avoid the bullets that flew in every direction. We dived through the open doors of an elevator and Mindy stabbed the UP button repeatedly.

The elevator ride was a little surreal considering that both Dave and Mindy stood with their submachine guns posed at their shoulders and we were listening to some typically crap, muffled, elevator music.

Mindy was getting impatient, but Dave looked calm and unconcerned.

The doors opened and it was instantly like a scene from Apocalypse Now!

Gunmen were emptying their magazines into the elevator as we all pinned ourselves to the sides and Brooke stabbed the DOWN button. There seemed to be dozens of the fuckers! Mindy and I had swapped out magazines during the elevator ride and we emptied thirty rounds, each into the upper floor of the store as the elevator doors slid shut.

Again, we endured the surreal elevator ride, this time downwards.

"I'm sorry about the..." Mindy began.

"I don't want to talk about it!" I interrupted.

"... Knife!" Mindy finished.

The elevator stopped and the doors opened.

Silence!

I had a pistol raised, having used up my last magazine for the G36C. I dumped the G36C in the elevator and scanning the closest dead bodies, I seized a combat shotgun that held a full seven rounds and a G36K that had a sniper scope. The lull did not last long as bullets started to head in our direction.

I shoved Brooke to one side and fired two rounds to cover our escape. I split off, leaving Dave with Brooke, while I looped around and pulled the trigger of the shotgun five times, and dropped three men. I then jumped up onto the grid that supported the store's lighting. I was small enough and light enough not to collapse the grid. I started to sight on the enemy and gently squeezed the trigger each time a head came into view.

I could see Dave, with Brooke behind his back, engaging the enemy with his G36K and a pistol. One man had a bead on Brooke, but I dropped him before he could fire, then I was targeted. Bullets hit the concrete roof above me so I dropped the now empty assault rifle and started running carefully along the grid.

That was what I lived for, the adrenalin rush of danger.

I saw the men targeting Mindy and started picking off as many as I could see that were aiming at my partner.

Then I saw Mindy fall from the grid and I paused in horror at what I was seeing. Mindy wore no armoured combat suit, nor was there anybody close by to help her. My attention had been drawn for too long.

"Dave!" Brooke screamed as a man appeared to my right, but before I could turn, Brooke pulled a SIG from my webbing and sent three rounds into the man, dropping him dead.

"I wasn't always a cheer leader!" She yelled with a brave smile.

I smirked back. I could hear single shots from where Mindy had fallen; she was still active. I saw Mindy between some sales displays, she was on her ass and pushing herself backwards; she was hurt.

The bullets were still flying and we were getting very short of ammunition.

My side hurt where a bullet had grazed it.

I grimaced with the pain, pushed it to one side, and concentrated on the moment. I fired the last bullet from the pistol and dropped it, reaching for my axe. A man appeared ten feet away and fell with the axe embedded in his chest; I loved improvisation!

I jumped as an arm wrapped itself around my waist and heaved me up; it was Dave with Brooke beside him and I was a little surprised to see a pistol in the girl's hand! Brooke offered her arm and I took it for support. With my free arm, I swept up the G36C from the man I had killed with the axe and returned fire in short bursts. Dave was doing the same while Brooke guided us through the store.

All three of us received bullets into our ballistic vests, Brooke screamed, unused to the abuse. The enemy was fucking everywhere, above us and to the side. Then the firing seemed to die down, slowly.

..._...

"What the fuck?" Dave uttered. The men had us; we were as good as dead...

Then more people seemed to appear; only these men were wearing body armour marked up with 'NYPD' in white. We instantly dropped all of our weapons, as we were seized by two Cops who were not in SWAT gear.

"What..." I began.

"Not here!" A familiar sounding voice said.

We were escorted outside and over to an unmarked SUV that was obviously NYPD. The older man turned to me.

"Mackenzie!" He said, holding out his hand. "Marcus had a feeling that you were in trouble and might need help; he was not kidding!"

"I..."

"Not another word!" The other Cop said. "We know that you are Damon's daughter and many of us owe your old man, not to mention owing Marcus."

"Take the SUV; just leave it somewhere conspicuous!" Mackenzie said with a grin.

A commercial unit some miles away

We had abandoned the NYPD SUV, along with all weapons and equipment, except for my Balisong, of course, a couple hundred yards away. I was not about to let Brooke see anything important, but we also needed to sort ourselves out before heading home and I needed to talk with Brooke.

"Where are we?" Dave asked.

"Hopefully in the right place; only I've never been here before!" I replied as I pulled the cover off a small plastic box on the wall revealing a keypad.

..._...

I punched in an eight-digit code and the door clicked open. So far so good. I pushed open the heavily armoured door and waved Dave and Brooke inside, pushing the door shut until it locked. I fumbled along the wall and found a light switch. The resultant light found us in a small vestibule with another armoured door before us. I punched in the same code into an adjacent keypad and we passed through the door into another darkened area.

Again, I fumbled for a light switch which when turned, illuminated a large square area about thirty-six feet on a side. The central part of the room had a training mat, bars and other assorted fitness and training equipment. To the left was a small kitchen, with a table and at the back were three doorways; that went to a bathroom, a storeroom and a bedroom with two beds. One of the beds had pink bedding!

I was as wide-eyed as Dave and Brooke, well almost, as I had never been here before, ever.

"Welcome to Safehouse Delta!" I said proudly.

Brooke was studying the pictures on the wall, over a desk, to the right of the main door. The photos were of myself, at about ten years old, with my Daddy and... A picture of my Mom! There was also another photo, my favourite, showing the two of us suited up and ready to fight, Hit Girl and Big Daddy!

"You actually look quite scary!" Brooke commented.

"She was!" Dave acknowledged.

"You were a fucking wimp back then!"

An hour later, it was just after eleven, but we had all showered and treated our wounds.

I came out of the shower last and judging by Brooke's expression, Mindy had just given her the old, 'say anything and I kill you', speech! Within minutes, though, the two girls were chatting away happily as if they had always been the best of friends.

"You remember Simon?" Brooke asked.

"How could I forget?" Mindy replied and I knew that Simon was the dick who had left her in the woods, alone.

"He, err, ended up in bed with Dolce and well she had a little infection and she passed it on..."

Mindy looked incredulous and then burst out laughing, along with Brooke.

Oh, Fuck, I thought, I am in hell!

Chapter 171*: Honda Training

The following afternoon
Saturday

West Ridge, Chicago

"Can't you two go anywhere, without destroying something?"

"Marcus, it was not our fault!" I complained as Cathy checked over my wounds.

"When you had not called in, I got worried and called Mackenzie in New York and suggested that he look for anything violent happening!" Marcus commented.

"I'm glad you did!" Dave replied. "It got really close!"

"Goddamn vigilantes!" Marcus moaned heading out the door.

"Did Mindy really stab you?" Chloe asked Dave.

"It was a fucking accident!" I growled. "Jeez!"

"I've learnt to put up with the abuse!" Dave quipped.

"I'll show you 'abuse', cunt!"

We had managed to return Brooke home, for the early hours.

It turned out that nobody had known she was missing as her parents had received a message, fake as it turned out, that Brooke was staying with a friend. Her parents were very concerned about what had happened and said that they would send Brooke to stay with relatives. Neither Hit Girl, nor Kick-Ass, were mentioned by anybody. We had said goodbye to Brooke and told her to look us up if she ever came to Chicago.

It had been a very strange visit to New York, but we had accomplished what we had gone there for in the first place, kind of!

The following week
Tuesday

West Ridge

The little rat was now eleven!

Curtis was very pleased to be eleven-years-old and I was proud of my cousin for how much he had grown and improved himself since his previous birthday. Curtis' happiness was tempered slightly by the fact of his parents not being with him. To counteract this, we all tried to keep his mind on happier things and that meant birthday presents!

I had personally dragged him out of bed and Mom had driven us over to see Dave and Mindy. There was something special, lined up for him.

..._...

I pushed a box into my cousin's hands.

It was quite a large box and heavy. Curtis looked a little overwhelmed by all the attention he was receiving. Megan was sitting next to Curtis, and she prodded him into action. Curtis carefully unwrapped the box and then sat staring at the wooden box that had appeared.

"Jeez! It'll be your twelfth birthday before you open the damn thing!" Megan growled.

Curtis laughed and opened the box carefully, and then he gasped.

..._...

Inside the box were a pair of matching Glock 19 Gen4 compact, nine-millimetre pistols. The frame of each pistol was a Dartmouth green colour, the same as that on Trojan's combat suit, while the slide was black with olive stripes, which formed a camouflage pattern. Mounted below the muzzle of each pistol on the accessory rail, was a GTL 22, combined tactical light and laser unit in the same Dartmouth green. Attached to the muzzle of each weapon was a short suppressor, in black.

"Cool, huh?" Chloe asked as she watched her cousin's face.

Curtis was slightly, speechless and he ran his hands over the perfectly finished weapons.

"They are from all of us," I said. "You've accomplished a lot and we decided that you should have some weapons of your own."

Megan actually looked a little Jealous, but her turn would come.

"Thanks, everybody, these are awesome," Curtis eventually managed to say.

..._...

"Come here, lad," Ryan said, pointing towards the garage.

Curtis placed the box containing his pistols down on the coffee table and followed Ryan with slight confusion on his face.

"Your father wanted you to have one of these when you were about thirteen, but Cathy and I decided that you needed to learn now."

Ryan led Curtis into the garage, followed by Chloe, Mindy and a curious Megan. It was Megan, who saw it first.

"Fuck me!" She gasped.

Parked in the garage where the SUV usually sat was a white and green, Honda CRF125FB motorcycle. Hanging on the handlebars was a black full-face helmet while draped over the saddle were dark grey motorcycle leathers and gauntlets and on the ground beside the machine was a pair of black, lightweight motorcycle boots.

I was certain that Curtis was very overwhelmed, so I dragged a reluctant and very jealous Megan, out of the garage, leaving Curtis alone with his uncle and cousin.

"I don't know what to say..."

"Think of it as a gift from your parents," Dad said gently.

I put my arm around Curtis' shoulders; the kid seemed close to tears.

"Thank you..."

Almost the moment that I came out of the garage, Megan dragged me outside to the deck.

"What...?" I tried.

"Don't talk..." Megan said placing a finger on my lips and pushing me up against the garage.

Her face was only inches from my own. I was not sure if the look on her face was one of shyness, or not. Megan was rarely shy about anything.

Then she kissed me.

The next morning
Wednesday

Safehouse F

Erika was now twenty-two-years-old.

"Damn that's old!" Megan exclaimed.

"Thanks, runt!" Erika laughed.

I was being constantly nagged by Curtis to teach him how to ride his new motorcycle. I had promised to take him riding on Saturday, just for some peace and quiet.

An hour later

I heard a yell from upstairs and when I got to the briefing room, I found Curtis on his ass, holding his hand to his rather puffed up cheek.

"What did you do?" Chloe asked accusingly coming up behind me.

Curtis looked a little unsure about his response.

"Well, err, Megan just started her second period and she said that she was trying to figure out a box of, err, thingys and well I – I asked Megan if she needed a hand with – her – err – it..."

I burst out laughing and so did Chloe, although Chloe continued to look at Curtis rather severely.

"You have so much to learn about girls, Curtis! Like: not mentioning their periods, or anything to do with them!" Chloe suggested sagely.

..._...

"In my own personal experience, girls become very dangerous when they start puberty and that goes on for many, many years and tends to get worse once they become teenagers!" Dave advised, appearing on the scene.

"By 'personal experience', I assume you mean me, asshole!"

"Mindy, you were a fucking nightmare from eleven to... Well, you still are; ask Marcus if you don't believe me!"

I punched Dave hard on his arm, which did not seem to do very much!

"Chloe wasn't exactly a little angel either – although..."

"Not one word, mother!" Chloe growled.

"She was over the moon, the day that she found her first few pubic hairs!" Cathy finished, ignoring her horrified daughter completely.

"Look! Nobody discusses my pubic hair except for me and Josh – he likes it – he thinks it's soft and sometimes moist!"

Chloe glowed bright red and muttered something unintelligible, before vanishing to the lower level as we all howled with laughter.

"Must be why some men decide that it's safer being gay!" Curtis commented.

Two days later Friday

"Do I have to remember the shit that happened that night?"

"Yes, Mindy, you do!"

"But I almost got my ass kicked!"

"But you didn't; you won!" I replied. "And that bastard was finished – kind of!"

"True... I suppose!"

"Besides a hot, sweaty Hit Girl was one hell, of a turn on!"

"Dave!"

"It was the worst morning of my life, the next day..."

'You can't go. People need you.'

'They've got you now.'

'I'm not like you.'

I could remember it like it was yesterday and it still hurt.

"... 'You don't have to be a bad-ass to be a superhero, Dave... You just have to be brave'," I added.

"Some of my best words!" Mindy said, blushing slightly.

"The kiss was awesome!" I admitted.

"'That was my first kiss'," Mindy mused, remembering.

"'Be nice... Or I'll rip your ass out through your mouth', I think you said!" I laughed. "So very 'Hit Girl!'"

It was not only us remembering that fight, Marty remembered it too; it had been his first time in real action and he had not enjoyed it all that much! For me, that morning after the fight, had been the start of my searching for Mindy; the start of everything that we had now.

I could not believe that it had been two whole years, since Mindy had left New York.

The following morning Saturday

The Farm

Megan screamed!

"Really?" I demanded covering my ears.

We had travelled up to The Farm so that Curtis could learn to ride. Although, I had decided to extend the training somewhat to include some other members of Fusion. In the barn were three, almost identical, motorcycles. One motorcycle belonged to Curtis and was white and green, the next one was white and pink, with a light-purple helmet hanging on the handlebars. The third motorcycle was white and grey, with a red helmet hanging on the handlebars.

I grabbed a pack from beside the pink motorcycle and threw it at Megan. Then another, identical pack from the grey motorcycle and threw it at Tommy.

"Get changed, both of you!"

Both kids ran off with enormous grins on their faces. I thought it would be easier to train them all together, so both Megan and Tommy were getting early birthday presents! Chloe laughed at their excitement; Chloe was to be my assistant as Dave had been when she had learnt. Josh was also present to assist.

Thirty minutes later

The three kids stood uneasily in their leathers and boots, holding their gauntlets.

Mindy and I stood before them, in our own leathers. Josh slouched over to one side in his leathers.

"Okay, kiddies!" Mindy began. "Let's go over the ground rules, which apparently did not sink in, last time!"

Mindy glared at Josh.

"You're not going to forget that minor transgression, are you?" Josh moaned.

"None of you little midgets will ever ride these motorcycles unless you have had permission and somebody else is with you..."

"You bad boy, Joshua!" Megan said seriously.

"Megan the angel!" Josh growled back and Megan smirked smugly.

"I mean it; I let that idiot off because he was wounded and I went soft on him," Mindy explained. "No more free passes!"

The three kids nodded acceptance of the rules.

..._...

"Now, these machines are very basic, but also powerful and you can get hurt if you do not listen and follow instructions. These machines are off-road only, so don't have the usual clutter of indicators, lights and speedometer..."

"Not that Mindy knows what a speedometer actually is..." I quipped before shutting up as Mindy glared at me.

Mindy pulled out Megan's motorcycle to the grass and Josh braced it while Mindy took the kids through the basics of the machine and the controls: ignition switch, engine start button, clutch lever, front brake, throttle grip, engine stop button, rear brake pedal, gear shift lever, fuel valve and kickstarter.

Megan was told to climb onto the machine and shown how the clutch operated and the positions of the gear shift lever; horizontal for neutral, first gear, one notch down and then second to fourth gears above the neutral position.

"You're lucky with this bike, it has an electric start, so no dicking about with the kickstarter," Mindy explained, as she ensured that the gearshift lever was in neutral and then had Megan pull in the clutch lever and press the button to start the engine.

The engine jumped to life instantly and ticked over happily. Megan had an enormous smile on her face! I passed the girl her helmet and she pulled it on and strapped it securely. Mindy then had Megan kick the gearshift lever down, into first.

"Ready?" Mindy asked, smiling encouragingly.

"No – Yes..." Megan replied, sounding anything but positive!

"Let in the clutch gently. Remember, when you stop you must pull the clutch lever or you will stall. Ignore the front brake for now. Use the rear brake, the one down here. Twist the throttle backward, gently, to go faster, twist it forwards to go slower."

"Okay..."

"Don't look at the front tyre, try to look ahead and don't worry if you fall, okay?"

Megan nodded slowly, still very apprehensive.

"Apply a little gas, and then let in the clutch gently! Try and follow the course, keeping it slow!" I said, encouragingly.

We all watched as Megan twisted the throttle gently and let in the clutch... She moved and then the motorcycle stalled.

"Damn it!" We all heard over the concealed comms units that we all wore.

"Take your time, Megan!" Mindy said. "Back into neutral, clutch in, press the start button. Try again."

Megan restarted the engine, kicked the gearshift lever down into first, and then gently let in the clutch. She moved, jerkily, but she moved and kept moving; she managed a full, but shaky, circuit, before coming to a halt beside me, pulling in the clutch.

"You enjoy that?" I asked and Megan nodded enthusiastically.

"Well keep going then. Go around a couple more times and then we'll try second gear," Mindy said. "Just keep it slow!"

..._...

While Megan was riding in circles, Mindy went to see the two boys and get them moving while I kept an eye on Megan. She was doing well and was on her third go around when she seemed to slither a bit and then she over corrected and the motorcycle went one way and Megan went the other.

I ran towards her as she lay on the grass. Megan was on her side and was not moving, so I lifted her visor and peered in to see her eyes flickering open.

"That fucking hurt!" She growled.

"You okay?" I enquired.

Megan flexed her arms and legs then sat up.

"I think so!" Megan replied.

I could hear the boys starting their engines and Mindy taking them through the gears and moving off.

"Get up then, ass!" I said, helping her up and back onto her motorcycle.

..._...

After twenty minutes, we had all three kids riding around the course with a dozen or dozen yards between each other. Both Curtis and Tommy came off once each and Megan came off a second time, but generally, they were doing well.

We stopped for lunch; Curtis and Tommy were very hungry as was Megan. They were all very excited by what they had achieved.

I was now back on my Honda and it was an awesome feeling.

I managed to start it and move off, without any help. Now I just need to pull the clutch lever and flip the gear selector up two notches for second gear.

Cool!

I was instantly going faster, but I twisted the throttle forward, slowing down... Better. I managed a circuit in second gear, as did Megan and Tommy.

"You're all doing very well! Keep going, when you each get around the next corner, shift into third, one notch, up, okay?" Mindy said.

"Okay!" I replied.

"Okay!" Megan replied.

"Okay!" Tommy replied.

I turned around the next corner and pulled the clutch lever and flicked up the gear change lever, one notch, then let the clutch lever out, gently.

Cool... Third gear!

An hour later

The three kids were exhausted.

All three motorcycles were securely chained up in the barn and the kids had changed out of their leathers.

"You guys enjoy yourselves?" Jack asked with a big smile.

"Hell, yeah!" Megan replied for them all.

Chapter 172*: Petra Revealed

Three days later
Tuesday

West Ridge

"You two are worrying me!"

"Makes a change from you worrying us!" Marcus laughed.

"Are we going to like this?" Megan asked with trepidation.

"Possibly..." Paige said with a smirk.

"For fuck's sake, just spit it out, old man!" Mindy exploded, obviously unable to take anymore suspense.

"Paige is pregnant!" Marcus explained with a smug grin.

I watched as Mindy and Megan just seemed to freeze.

"Congratulations!" I said, ignoring the rather freaked out girls.

"Thank you, Dave!" Marcus said.

"Ewww!" Megan announced.

"What she said!" Mindy added with a grimace and a nod at Megan.

Paige and Marcus laughed.

"How long," I asked, again ignoring the two idiots.

"Four weeks," Paige said happily.

"You looking for a girl or a boy?" I asked.

I saw Marcus and Paige look uneasily towards Mindy and Megan.

"A boy!" Both said together, very quickly.

That weekend
Saturday night

Western Chicago

I was unsure why I had gone along with it, but I did owe the girl for what she had done to help us.

Anyway, here I was with Petra. I followed her into the building. Petra had warned me to stay close behind her, as we rode in. I was somewhat surprised to notice that the approach was similar to that for Safehouse F. We passed miscellaneous piles of rubbish and rubble. The building had holes in the roof and sections of wall were missing.

We then passed out of the building and followed a path that was made up of crushed rubble and provided surprisingly good grip to the tyres of our motorcycles. Despite Petra riding quite fast, I was easily able to keep up with her, on my Panigale. The path was hidden by thick evergreen trees, which would also muffle the motorcycle engines.

Finally, after a few minutes, I saw a building up ahead. It looked like a decrepit workshop from the outside. However, a roller shutter opened – presumably triggered by Petra and we rode into the darkness. My headlight illuminated a workbench, but little else. We stopped and once the roller shutter had closed behind us, overhead lighting snapped on.

Wow!

We had both stopped, side by side, on a section of floor that was made up of black ribbed steel.

In front of us was a well-equipped workbench, with the expected tools and equipment. I could not see much else, beyond a steel door that was fitted with a keypad.

..._...

Petra seemed somewhat hesitant, as she dismounted from her Honda and stood in front of me, as I dismounted my Ducati.

"Hit Girl, I... I see how you guide and protect your team, singularly how you and Kick-Ass lead Fusion. I want to be a part of that – if I could – I would very much like to join Fusion," Petra said.

That was unexpected!

Petra had to trust me, as she had led me to her 'lair'. Now she wanted to place herself under Dave's leadership and my own! What the hell, should I reply? I would love to have Petra, with her skills – but we knew nothing about her...

Petra must have sensed my indecision.

"I know you have no reason to trust me. I hoped that my actions, up until now, would show you that I am out to help and to work for good, in this City," She continued. "To show you how serious I am – I am willing to not only show you my Safehouse, but I am also willing to reveal to you, my true identity, Hit Girl."

Before I could say anything – Petra reached up and pulled off her mask. I had not known what to expect, only now, I was even more confused and to say the least, more than a bit shocked.

"My name is..."

"Hailee Richards!" I blurted out and saw a very surprised expression appear on Hailee's face.

"How did you know?" Hailee asked incredulously.

Now, I decided to take a chance; I reached up and pulled off my own mask.

"Holy fuck!" Hailee exclaimed.

"So – you never figured it out?" I asked.

"No, you – err – Mindy is very different to Hit Girl!"

"Some would disagree with you there, Hailee!" I replied, grimacing.

"Did you know it was me?" Hailee asked.

"No – you played the innocent, unassuming teenager, very well!" I replied.

"As do you; to outsiders at least!"

"So – you want to join Fusion? Well, I would need to discuss it with Kick-Ass..."

"Oh my God – it has just occurred to me – if you're Hit Girl... Then Dave must be Kick-Ass and that hormonal girl, Chloe; she must be Shadow – it just stands to reason!"

"Well, when you put it like that..." I agreed with a chuckle and then I had a thought. "You fancy a little fun, Hailee..."

"Bring it on!"

The following afternoon
Sunday

D-JAK

We all stood around the edges of the main mat.

I smirked at Dave, who just rolled his eyes and nodded for me to go ahead. Beside me stood Chloe and Josh, with Erika and Hailee opposite me.

"Just thought that we could have a little fun this afternoon!" I suggested as I walked to the centre of the mat. "Chloe - front and centre!"

"Why do you always pick on me?" Chloe moaned, but stepped forwards anyway.

"Because I can!" I replied. "Hailee!"

"Who, me?" Hailee asked, feigning ignorance.

"Yeah, you – come over and stand opposite the moody cow!" I suggested.

Hailee moved forwards slowly and I could see that she was playing along and looking apprehensive. Chloe seemed a little confused, but she did not seem threatened in any way.

"Now Hailee – watch!" I said and promptly flattened the unsuspecting Chloe. "A simple move – think you can manage that?"

"I can try..." Hailee answered in her usual, timid fashion as Chloe got back to her feet and threw me a nasty glare.

I looked across at Dave and saw him shake his head and chuckle. Hailee took a good hold of Chloe's Gi, before looking at me, directly.

"Go ahead, Hailee – it's not like you can hurt her!" I suggested with a nod.

Chloe's face mirrored the thought, at least until she was halfway to the mat. Chloe struck the mat very hard and Hailee jumped back as if shocked. Chloe, too, looked more than a little shocked at her current situation. She slowly got up and glared at Hailee. She then looked at Dave who just shrugged without giving the game away.

"Hailee – could you do that again?" I asked, grinning.

"I can try," Hailee replied – again sounding timid.

"Like hell she can!" Chloe retorted. I was certain that Chloe smelt a rat.

"Try fighting back, Chloe. You're much better than Hailee!" I suggested.

Chloe and Hailee faced off against each other. It was similar to before but I could see that Hailee had adjusted her stance and was now ready for a real fight. Chloe smirked and went in for what she saw as an easy 'kill', only to find herself flying through the air and down onto the mat.

Chloe jumped up, looking mad. Then just seconds later she was back, face down on the mat. Then Chloe started to drive in hard and Hailee fought back easily, much to the surprise of Erika and Josh!

"Josh – help Chloe!" I ordered.

"Josh saves the day – as usual!" He quipped as he joined the fight.

His entry into the fight did not last long, as Hailee was perfectly capable of fighting them both.

Bang!

Josh hit the mat hard, closely followed by Chloe who landed on top of him.

"Bloody hell, Chloe – you weigh a fucking tonne!" Josh blurted out.

Josh then yelled out in pain as Chloe thumped him.

"I do not weigh a fucking tonne, cunt!"

Chloe turned to me.

"Mindy – I smell a fucking rat!" She growled, somewhat menacingly.

"That would probably be me!" I admitted.

Chloe scowled and then looked at Hailee.

"So – is she some new fighter that you've been training in secret?" Chloe demanded.

"I've not taught her a thing," I replied honestly.

Hailee smirked. "Tell 'em – Hit Girl!"

..._...

Everybody gasped at what Hailee had just said and they all turned to me.

"What do you want me to tell them – Petra?" I replied with an enormous grin.

Several jaws dropped and nobody said a word.

"I thought you said these guys were intelligent!" Hailee quipped.

"They were!"

"You mean that Hailee and Petra are one and the fucking same?" Chloe demanded, looked mad.

"The same as Mindy and Hit Girl, Chloe and Shadow, Josh and Jackal!" I replied. "Need I go on?"

"No!" Chloe groaned.

Two days later
Tuesday

Northwestern Chicago

It was the first day of September and I intended to have a peaceful week, only fate seemed to have other ideas.

It was very dark and it was just myself, and Wildcat, enjoying a night out together. I was being responsible for a change and riding carefully so that Wildcat could learn something while we were out. I would comment on what I was doing, as I did it, when I approached junctions and made turns. Wildcat would ask questions, I would show her why I made certain movements, and in some cases what would happen if I did something different.

We were having a lot of fun. Which in hindsight might have been a distraction. I should not have even been in that neighbourhood and my biggest mistake had been turning right. I slammed on the brakes as I found the road blocked.

"Oh, fuck!"

"This is not good!" Wildcat muttered and I felt her gripping my waist tighter.

I spun my rear tyre, pulled the motorcycle around, and accelerated out of the street. We were now being pursued, not only by bullets but also by three SUVs and a pair of motorcycles.

"Fusion, we're in shit!" I called over the radio as I accelerated past ninety.

We were heading east on West Roosevelt Road. I had not received an answer to my radio call, which worried me, as I knew that both Dave and Marty were at Safehouse F.

Safehouse F

Marty and I were chatting away, just as we always had.

The conversation was bordering on the obscene and the disgusting, however there were no kids about, or females, so there was nobody to upset!

Then the speaker on the wall jumped to life.

"Fu – re – t!"

"What the fuck?" Marty asked.

"Was that Mindy?"

"Sounded like it, pal!"

Marty started tapping away and then frowned.

"I can't connect to either of their radios; I have no GPS, no diagnostics!" Marty said unhappily.

"Where were they last?"

"Somewhere along West Roosevelt Road."

"You think they're in trouble?" I asked.

"It's Mindy and Megan!" Marty replied.

"Fuck!"

West Roosevelt Road

I anchored on at South Clark Street, taking a right.

"Fucking hell!" Wildcat growled. "Why hasn't anybody replied?"

"How the fuck am I meant to know!" I growled. We still had short range; I could communicate with Wildcat, but nothing long range enough to get to the Safehouse. We were on our own!

The SUVs and motorcycles were still there, not far behind. I had no idea who the fuck they were, but there were far too many to stop and make a stand. Maybe if backup was on its way, but right now, I had no idea if anybody had even heard my radio call!

A few yards after passing under a railroad bridge, I turned right up a dirt slope onto some waste ground. I was very pleased that I was currently riding on dual-purpose tyres and uprated suspension, but despite the improvements the heavy motorcycle, not to mention being one up would mean I would have my work cut out controlling the ride!

The SUVs were right behind us, but I was just beyond the reach of their headlights and I had killed my own, which was lethal!

"Stop!" Wildcat yelled.

"Huh?"

"Let me off, I can take some of them out with the P90!"

Megan was checked out on the P90, but it was still a large and heavy weapon for her, however she could shoot it and reasonably well. Not having her behind me would also help with my evasion. However, this was Megan and I could not just abandon her. Nevertheless, she was a Fusion Vigilante and had already proved herself.

As we passed through an extra dark piece of the waste ground, I eased back on the throttle, careful not to touch the brakes. I felt Wildcat leap off the motorcycle and instantly accelerated drawing the SUVs and motorcycles away from Wildcat.

Heading East

"Marcus?"

"Yeah, Dave?"

"Trouble!"

"Why does this all seem so normal?" Marcus groaned.

"The two girls are missing and comms are out. As you can probably imagine, wherever they are there has to be World War Three erupting!"

"I'll make some discrete enquiries; but I have my own problems here!"

Wasteland off South Clarke Street

I aimed the FN P90 and focussed on the oncoming SUVs; I settled the sight on the front SUV and triggered the IR laser. I lased the right front tyre and squeezed the trigger twice. The SUV was travelling at speed and as the bullets hit, the tyre shredded, but the SUV only slewed until its driver regained control; it had run flats!

The SUV was now very limited in its performance, off road, but it was still in the game. I moved the laser onto the windshield and sent six rapid shots downrange. The bullets went through the windscreen, but the windscreen was not as badly damaged as I had hoped it would be. It was obviously armoured, but to a low level that could not deflect the 5.7-millimetre rounds. I re-aimed, matching the swerving vehicle and sent a stream of automatic fire into the driver's side.

The SUV seemed to lose traction and skidded before it flipped over and crashed down on its side and rolled twice. The other two SUVs stopped, with the wrecked SUV between them, and where, they deemed the shooter to be.

I had to move. I could hear Hit Girl's motorcycle over by the river. I could also hear two more motorcycle engines as they pursued Hit Girl over the rough ground. There was also sporadic gunfire. As expected the waste ground was in near total darkness, having no street lighting. I was using my NVGs, which turned the dark waste ground into a green hued wilderness. I saw the men pouring out of the intact SUVs and pulling men from the wrecked SUV.

I sent single bullets in their direction to keep their heads down and to distract them from targeting Hit Girl who had other worries right at that moment.

The other riders were good.

In the darkness, I could not make out what they were riding, but they were powerful machines nonetheless. I kept ahead of them easily, but the going was tough on the sandy ground. I had to get rid of my tail, and get back to help Wildcat.

I soon moved onto a long strip of concrete and an idea formed in my mind. I increased speed before slamming on my brakes. The first of the two motorcycles came past me, applying his own brakes hard, only I jammed the muzzle of my G36C into the spokes of his front wheel.

The motorcycle flipped into the air quite spectacularly, the rider landing on the concrete, breaking his neck. I span around, firing off several rounds from my Glock into the other motorcycle rider, who came off his motorcycle, which was sent spinning away into the darkness.

I turned and headed towards Wildcat.

"Wildcat, Status!"

"Dropping bad guys, all good!" I replied and heard Hit Girl laugh.

"Just keep safe!"

"Hey, it's me!"

I was actually enjoying myself. Every time somebody came in my direction, that person died. After the first three men, they seemed to have figured that out and stayed put close to their SUVs. I hoped that the bastards would just fucking give up and go home.

It had been a little over fifteen minutes since I had started taking pot shots at the SUVs. I was rather surprised that no

Cops had arrived, but thought that they may have been busy elsewhere in the city. I was really impressed by Hit Girl; I had seen her destroy the two motorcycles and send them both spinning off into wreckage and that was cool!

I could see Hit Girl heading in a circle towards the SUVs and then I saw her being engaged by the gunmen. I started firing larger bursts from the P90 to keep their heads down as Hit Girl made her way back around, towards me.

Two minutes later, she skidded to a halt beside me.

"Get on; it's time to go!"

I leapt up and climbed aboard the Ducati, sending short bursts towards the SUVs. Hit Girl accelerated, just as I was almost dazzled as a bright light flared from the Roosevelt Road Bridge and seconds later the wrecked SUV exploded as a rocket struck it, causing the perfect distraction for our escape. Hit Girl powered back towards the ramp where we had originally entered the waste ground and turned left up South Clarke Street, increasing speed. As we made another left on West Roosevelt Road, we were joined by Kick-Ass on his own Ducati.

"You guys having fun?" He called over our short-range communications channel.

"Just us girls having a night out on the town!" I replied.

Northern Chicago
The same time

The Mafioso stared at the dead body on the sidewalk, as the handcuffs were placed on his wrists, before turning to the man who had made the killing shot.

"You are fucking dead, policeman, mark my words, you will die for this!"

Chapter 173*: Marcus Down

Two days later
Thursday

Chicago PD, District 21

Sergeant Hank Voight was debriefing Detective Erin Lindsay in his office, when several gunshots rang out.

Voight and Lindsay ran out of the office, hot on the heels of other members of both Voight's unit and the Organised Crime Taskforce, across the hall. Everybody ran to the back entrance and as they entered the area that Intelligence and OCT shared Lyndsay and Halstead saw several prone forms on the concrete floor, blood pooling around them.

"We got Officers down!" Halstead bellowed.

The first Officer, in plain clothes was obviously dead, with a bullet wound to his head and a spreading pool of blood.

"You see anything?" Lyndsay shouted as she reached the large vehicular access door, which was open.

"No. Nothing." Came the response from Ruzek.

"I'll go left." Lyndsay announced.

"No visual!" Ruzek called out.

"Lieutenant Williams is down!" Voight called out and checked for a pulse – it was there.

"Somebody call an ambulance!" Ruzek shouted, as he scanned the area, his pistol out in front of him.

Voight had his radio out, "Ten-One, squad! Officers shot, 21st District at the OCT compound!"

West Ridge

I was at home when an unmarked SUV slammed on the brakes outside, there were blue strobe lights flashing inside the windshield. I opened the front door to see what was happening and saw that Fellowes was driving and he was ashen.

"What's wrong?" I asked.

"Why aren't you answering your damn cell?" Fellowes yelled.

I grabbed the cell out of my pocket. It was off. I turned it on.

"Must have turned it off by mistake," I said. "Sorry!"

"Get in!" Fellowes said. "It's Marcus!"

I slammed the front door of the house and jumped in the front of the SUV. I had barely closed my door when Fellowes floored the accelerator and slewed the SUV around and headed out of the street. The moment he reached the main road, he hit the siren.

Oh, God, not Marcus!

Northwestern Memorial Hospital

The ride down had been fast.

Fellowes had rarely dropped below fifty, racing through red lights where it was safe to do so and we hit one-twenty on the Interstate. All Fellowes would say was that Marcus had been shot, along with some other Cops at the District.

I wished Dave was with me, but he was at the Safehouse, although Fellowes said that he was on his way to the hospital. I wished that I could have been with Marcus when it had happened. However, what could I have accomplished?

"Mindy, he's going to be okay, the bullets went straight through," Cathy said trying to console me. I knew that there was more, Cathy's expression told me that there was more.

I was a fucking wreck; I could not control my emotions, my tears, nothing! Dave came into the room, concern etched into his face, and I just crumpled into his arms, sobbing. We both went to the waiting room, which was filled with Cops, some in uniform others not. Most I recognised, but only a few knew that I was Marcus' daughter and even fewer knew that I was Hit Girl.

..._...

Hank Voight came over and I could see blood on his clothes. It had to have been Marcus' blood.

"Mindy, isn't it?" Voight asked gently and I nodded.

Did Voight suspect that I was not who I appeared to be? If so, he did not let on.

"We're doing everything we can and we will hunt down the bastards behind this; you have my word."

"Thank you, Hank. Marcus always had a good word to say about you. He also said that you're like a Rottweiler with a steak when it comes to a case," I said and there was a ripple of laughter from the Cops.

"You need anything; we're here to help, all of us!" Voight said waving his hand around the room and I received nods from everybody there.

"Thank you, all of you," Dave added.

There was a tense moment when Kim arrived and saw some of her ex-colleagues, but most of them were more shocked to see how pregnant she was. The biggest surprise however was when Marcus' deputy arrived; Sergeant Vicky Richards and she was accompanied by a very shy looking Hailee.

Hailee answered my unspoken question.

"Mom, meet Mindy; Marcus' daughter. Mindy, please meet my Mom; Sergeant Vicky Richards," Hailee said.

Therefore, Hailee's Mom, the second-in-command of the OCT, which was charged with hunting down Chicago's vigilantes, was also the mother of Petra!

"Hello, Mindy. I'm sorry we didn't get to meet under better circumstances," Vicky said with a genuine smile.

The following day
Friday

Northwestern Memorial Hospital

The grumpy bastard was awake and ready for visitors.

"Damn bed is like a piece of lumpy concrete!" He moaned.

"Give it a rest old man!" I said.

"Don't go doing anything stupid, Mindy – I mean that!" Marcus warned.

"Would I?" I replied innocently.

"Do I even need to honour that comment with an answer?"

"Not really," I muttered.

"Look, Mindy, I'm fine; just a few new ventilation holes! "Marcus chuckled. "Nothing important was damaged, although I understand my shoulder is going to be a little sore!"

"Take it from somebody with more holes than a damn sieve; take it gently!" I warned.

"What, like you always do?" Dave laughed.

I scowled.

That night

South Chicago

Voight and Olinsky rolled their vehicles the last few metres with engines and lights off.

The team exited the vehicle quietly and without fanfare. They all wore ballistic vests and three of their number were carrying the long-guns, the AR-15 assault rifles. As they approached the building there were signs of life; a light was on in the front room.

The team split up with four heading to the rear of the property and the rest arraying around the wooden steps that led up to the porch. Just seconds before Voight gave the go signal, there were two shotgun blasts and the front door partially disintegrated as the Cops out front, dove for cover.

At the same time as the shotgun blasts, the rear team smashed open the back door. They entered the property with Detective Halstead leading and Ruzek immediately behind him. There was a man in the hallway, beyond the kitchen; he was feverishly attempting to reload a shotgun. At the sight of the armed Cops, he dropped the weapon and pulled out a pistol, firing off several rounds before Halstead and Ruzek shot him dead with their AR-15 rifles.

"Clear!" Ruzek yelled and Voight appeared through the demolished front door.

"Damn it!" Voight breathed. "We needed him alive!"

"Search the place, top to bottom!" Olinsky ordered, heading upstairs. "Every fucking mouse hole!"

The following night

Saturday

Voight and I met in a discreet coffee shop, after dark.

"I'll get straight to the point, Mindy; I know what you do at night..."

Voight must have read my expression as he continued quickly.

"... You are not going to get an argument from me about what you do. I believe in what you do one hundred and ten percent. No to mention that without your team, I would probably be long dead!"

"Okay, I trust you."

Voight nodded.

"It looks like the orders came from within Chicago, but the gunman was imported for the hit," Voight explained. "Now, we can handle the Chicago end, but I know that you will want the shooter and I wouldn't mind a piece of him, either, for that matter..."

"So, where is the gutless bastard?" I demanded.

"A seedy little backdrop that makes Chicago and Ralph D'Amico seem like a walk in the fucking park!" Voight explained. "Gotham..."

"Gotham?" I repeated.

"That City is like nothing on this earth; makes Mogadishu seem quiet and safe in comparison!"

"We can handle it..."

"I know; that is why I am giving you this information and I never let a Cop killer get away, ever!" Voight growled.

"We'll do it; just keep us informed with your end, Hank and thanks," I said.

"Good luck my purple friend."

The next afternoon
Sunday

Safehouse F

My emotions were very mixed about letting Mindy and Chloe head to Gotham alone.

However, we needed an advance party to check things out and to give us time to gather all of our equipment. We had been packing for a couple of days, just in case and we had prepared plans for just this eventuality, ever since the last time we had needed to operate outside of Chicago.

"You take care, both of you!" I said, emotions growing inside me. "Just one missed check-in and I will kick your fucking ass, Mindy Macready!"

"No picking up strangers in Safehouses this time!" Josh quipped and I could sense the worry in him.

"We promise to behave and not take any risks," Chloe said. "Don't we, Mindy?"

"I promise to behave; happy?" Mindy growled.

"Not really, but it will have to do!" I said, hugging Mindy tightly.

"Keep me informed about the old man and stay safe, yourself," I said and I could feel tears welling up. "We'll see you in a few days."

I started the engine and dropped the SUV into gear. We accelerated up the ramp and then Chloe and I were on our way.

Destination: Gotham.

Authors Note: At this point, you are strongly advised to read my other story: The Gotham Vigilantes, for the next events in the Forsaken timeline. You can ignore the story, but events and characters in The Gotham Vigilantes will be referred to from time to time. Forsaken may continue in parallel with the events in Gotham from Chapter 174 of Forsaken.

Chapter 174*: Investigations

*The following morning
Monday*

Chicago PD, District 21

The new building had cost over $21 million and covered 44,000-square feet, over five levels.

The building was very impressive, which I assumed had been the idea when it was designed and built. I walked into the glass-fronted building and up to the front desk where I nodded at the desk Sergeant.

"David Lizewski to see Hank Voight."

"Come right this way!" The Sergeant said and came around the desk.

She led me through a door that had required the sergeant's fingerprint to unlock.

"Trudy Platt," The Sergeant said, introducing herself. "How is the Lieutenant?"

"Grumpy!"

"Sounds about right!" Sergeant Platt said with a brief smile. "Up the stairs to the top and then go through the door and down the corridor."

"Thanks."

..._...

Once through the door at the top of the stairs, I was in a corridor that ran between two glass-fronted areas. The one on the left had twin glass doors and a sign: 'Chicago Police Department, Intelligence'. Opposite, over to the right, were an identical set of doors and another sign: 'Chicago Police Department, Organised Crime Taskforce'. Behind the doors on each side was a small reception desk and beyond that eight desks arranged in two groups of four. Beyond these were a pair of offices for the senior officers, a small conference room, a kitchen and a locker room. It was all very smart and functional. I pushed open the doors into Intelligence.

"Dave!" Olinsky called, looking up from his desk. "Welcome! Hank's downstairs – you ready for this, kid?"

"Bring it on, pal!" I replied.

..._...

Olinsky led me downstairs, via another set of stairs and we came out into a large open area which housed the vehicles that belonged to both Intelligence and OCT. Sergeant Hank Voight was examining a large red stain on the concrete. He looked up as Olinsky and I entered.

"Detective Vincent Jackson. One of Marcus' crew, single bullet, 7.62-calibre, destroyed his heart. He died instantly."

"Sniper; we're still looking for his firing point," Olinsky added.

"Marcus was standing beside Jackson; they were talking according to the CCTV. Detective Jim Ransom was over there, by the armoury. The first shot took out Jackson, Marcus drew his pistol and ran over to the door, he looked out and the next bullet hit him in the shoulder, sending fragments of bone and bullet into his left side. The third bullet left Ransom drowning in his own blood."

I could tell that Voight was on the verge of losing it; those were not men under his command, but they were Cops none the less.

"We got lucky that afternoon; somebody found a sniper rifle in a dumpster of all places. They always wear gloves when handling the weapon and firing it, but many slip up when it comes to loading the damned magazine!" Voight explained.

"Two beautiful prints; one led us to somebody who deals in anything and everything, including guns – only he died when we breached his house," Olinsky added with a grimace. "Nevertheless, his place was a damned treasure trove of information. That started to lead us towards the bastard who actually took the fucking shot."

"It appears that Marcus was targeted because of his role with OCT, by the Genovese family," Voight went on. "Those fuckers from Europe, now they aren't stupid, so they told the dead fucker, err; Randy White his name was, to get somebody in from out of town to dilute and spread the blame somewhere else."

"In this case they used a man from Gotham," Olinsky finished.

"Thank you for being so candid; it means a lot."

"We owe you guys a lot," Olinsky said in reply. "Marcus too."

"We all believe in protecting this City," Voight said strongly before going on.

"Nobody fucks with my City!"

Safehouse F

The place was a hive of activity as equipment was brought together and vehicles were packed.

Everybody was on hand to help, even Sophia! There were magazines to load, boxes of ammunition to pull from storage and check, weapons to be selected and inspected from stock to muzzle. On the not so popular side, Cathy was packing various trauma kits that included everything that might be needed when entering into a major battle. I severely hoped that Gotham was not going to be a major battleground, but I did not hold out much hope!

The mood was sombre, as everybody knew that we already had two of our member operating in harm's way, including our de facto leader. We all knew that Mindy and Chloe were both highly trained and were a perfectly matched team. Privately, though, Cathy and I also knew that Chloe was the perfect balance for Mindy when I was not around to keep her emotions, and most importantly her darker side, in check.

Marty and Abby were testing and re-testing every piece of electrical equipment including the radios. The radios had fucked up only the previous week, almost getting Mindy and Megan killed. Marty had been able to trace the problem to faulty SD memory cards that held the equipment's encryption algorithms. Marty had resolved to replace these every six months and every team member carried a spare card, and each member had been trained to fit the replacement card and activate it.

Even Kyle was helping, packing equipment, inventorying supplies, anything that he could do to assist. In the Warehouse, we had additional vehicles being assembled for transport to Gotham, an eight-hundred mile drive. It was Monday; the plan was to be onsite, in Gotham, on the Friday night. Mindy would send back any information she gathered as she acquired it, until then. On the Gotham side, of things Marty had been very busy assembling equipment for Mindy and Chloe to setup, ready for our arrival.

Naturally, I was worried about Mindy and Josh was almost paranoid about Chloe's well-being. We spent many sleepless nights at West Ridge worrying about our women.

Separation sucked!

The next evening Tuesday

Safehouse F

"I miss you both, you know."

"I know Dave and you Josh, thanks for caring," Mindy said over the video conferencing setup.

Sitting beside her was a tearful Chloe. Beside me, I had a jittery Joshua. I knew that Mindy was very good at hiding her emotions, but I could read her like a book and I could tell that she was sad.

"You two been sharing the bathtub again?" I asked and both girls glared at me.

Joshua turned to me, questioningly.

"Even being eight hundred miles away from those two psychos, does not make me feel safe, so not right now, Joshua."

"Good boy!" Mindy laughed.

..._...

Then the talk became serious.

"Dave, this City is more rotten than a two month old egg sandwich!" Mindy explained with a grimace.

"Sounds a little like Vigilante heaven!" I said. "Knocked any heads together yet?"

"We've been tempted, but we've been good girls, haven't we Chloe."

"I have!" Chloe smiled innocently.

I rolled my eyes and glared at Mindy.

"What has she done?" I asked.

"I have done nothing!" Mindy replied indignantly scowling at Chloe.

"Let's just say that we gift wrapped a couple of cunts for the GCPD!" Chloe explained. "For now, we have not exposed ourselves."

"I should hope not!" Josh quipped trying to add some humour.

"One track mind, you, and that track runs in the damn sewer!" Chloe scowled.

"Runs right beside yours, lover!" Josh replied with a big grin.

"He's right, you know," Mindy said, enjoying Chloe's annoyance.

"What's up Josh?" Chloe asked, seeing Josh's expression and turning serious.

"I miss you..."

"Joshua, I miss you too, more than you can know. Being in bed alone is not fun."

"Well you're not sharing mine; you move about too damn much!" Mindy growled.

"Going back to self-stimulation is just not like the real thing!" Chloe laughed.

"And on that note; I'm out of here!" Mindy laughed. "Love you Dave; stay safe!"

"You, too, I love you," I replied with a smile and then looked at Chloe. "You keep safe Chloe and watch my girl for me."

"I will Dave, I promise," Chloe replied sincerely before she turned back to Josh. "We'll be together soon Josh and then you can fuck me senseless!"

"I'll hold you to that!" Josh said shakily as I killed the connection.

Josh turned to face me and he looked scared.

"They'll be okay, Josh, they've done this before; they're a perfect team," I tried.

"This is the first time that we have been apart since I found Chloe again and it's tearing me apart. It hurts worse than any bullet wound."

I could see tears in Joshua's eyes and they were spilling over and down his cheeks. He also looked ashamed by the tears.

"Josh, don't be ashamed about being human and having human emotions. We all have them; even those two cast-iron bitches in Gotham," I said. "When Mindy went to New York with Chloe, where they both found you? That had been the first time that Mindy and I had been apart since I had found her, here in Chicago. I am man enough to tell you that I cried that first night; it hurt so much. It is the only pain that I feel one hundred percent. It is a little worse because we both know that our girls can be more than a little hot headed at times and get themselves into impossible situations. On the positive side, we can balance that with the knowledge that they are both fully capable of getting themselves back out of those same impossible situations."

"I know. But I've never felt so much hurt inside me before," Josh replied, unable to stop the tears falling.

"It's called love, Josh. I know that you love Chloe with all your heart and I know that she loves you back, just as much."

Gotham City

It was ridiculous!

We were both sitting on the couch and crying our fucking eyes out. So much for being hardened crime-fighters! I was just glad that I had Chloe here with me and neither of us were shy about showing our emotions, or anything else for that matter, in front of the other. She had helped me the last time, in New York, when I was away from Dave. Now, though, Chloe was experiencing the pain of separation from the boy that she was madly in love with.

I was glad that Dave had cut the connection when he had, because Chloe and I had both been on the verge of losing it and I had noticed that Joshua had tears in his eyes and he was struggling to hold them back.

I had not wanted Chloe to see that, it would have just made things worse.

Chapter 175*: Petra At Large

*The following day
Wednesday evening*

Safehouse F

The time had come.

We were ready to depart for Gotham, with two stops on the way to refuel and rest.

Paige and Cathy, along with Tony Morgan were there to say goodbye and to 'lock-up' once we were on our way. For all, it was a very tearful goodbye, especially for the younger ones, not to mention their parents. Paige and Cathy were doing their best to steel themselves and not cry, as that would have made it worse for their charges.

Safehouse D

I eased the eighteen-wheeler, out of the warehouse and onto the streets

On our way out of the City, we were met by the temporary keeper of the peace for Chicago. Petra roared past on her motorcycle and escorted us clear of Chicago, before she waved and returned to the City that was our home.

I would miss Chicago.

Southern Chicago

It was a daunting thought.

I was protecting Chicago, on my own. I alone knew that Fusion had just left the City, for a destination unknown. I knew it was only temporary, as Dave and Mindy had explained to me. I knew the reason, though: Marcus.

My Mom was beside herself with worry over her boss. The revelations about who was who in the City had thrown me, totally. Mindy and Dave had trusted me with their secret and I was not going to let them down. I wished that I could tell Mom, but I could not do that. For now, Mom knew about me, but she had no idea that her boss was the father of Chicago's biggest vigilante and the one, which they were supposed to be hunting down.

Mindy had made me promise not to do anything stupid and not to take risks. If there was any real trouble then I had sealed orders; cool huh! Only certain people knew that I was Petra and currently none of them was in the City. I was a little concerned about Fusion, as they had taken a lot of heavy equipment with them, which indicated to me that they were obviously headed into harm's way.

It was my job to show that vigilantes were still active in the City, so I had to maintain a low profile, while still putting the cunts down.

That evening

Chicago PD, District 21
Organised Crime Taskforce

Being there was depressing.

I sat at my desk and looked through the glass partition, at the empty desk of Lieutenant Marcus Williams. I was temporarily in command of what was a notoriously unpopular department of the Chicago PD.

Our primary role was hunting down vigilantes. However, the Chicago PD loved vigilantes, at least unofficially! I was dreading the day that my boss would find out that I was not only harbouring a vigilante, but that the vigilante in question was my own, rather rebellious, teenaged daughter. It had been her father's idea. Paul had been a scientist and had made quite a name for himself with several inventions, not to mention some good money. Paul's parents had been killed in New York City by some bastard called The Motherfucker. That event had sent Paul on a crazed mission of vengeance. He had taken our then fifteen-year-old daughter, who was already highly skilled at martial arts and he had proceeded to turn her into a vigilante. He provided her with equipment and weapons. I hated the idea, but Hailee loved it and I was fed up with criminals that got away, due to evidence issues and the like.

I firmly believed in what our colleague across the corridor in Intelligence was rumoured to do with the worst scum. My main reason for joining OCT had been to both gain intelligence and protect my only daughter. Hailee had told me that she had met up with Fusion and their leaders, Kick-Ass and Hit Girl. I was also aware that Hailee was desperate to join up with Hit Girl and her team. I agreed; there was only so much Hailee could do on her own before something went badly wrong and she was killed.

Leading a double life had been a struggle for Hailee and several times, I had needed to fudge an alibi for her. She struggled to keep boyfriends as they often clashed with her nocturnal activities. In a way, I was happier with her current nocturnal activities rather than those other nocturnal activities teenagers normally engaged in!

My daughter would be eighteen in a few more months and then out of my control. I was proud of her and of her upholding the legacy of my husband after he was killed in a car-crash only eight months previously.

..._...

I knew that Marcus had a daughter and that he was due to get married to a woman who had a daughter, too. I just prayed that Marcus' daughters had more sense than to prance about dressed up in armoured suits!

There was a knock on my door and business beckoned.

"Boss, that Petra has been sighted, she's put down three criminals so far and they have been picked up by uniform," Detective Jim Halsay said.

"Get the first criminal set up in interrogation and give me a call."

"Yes, sergeant!"

I would now get to see what my daughter had been getting up to, from the criminals.

District 21 Interrogation Suite B

The man looked like he had been beaten.

"What happened to you, then?" I asked, grinning.

"No self-respecting criminal can walk the streets safely anymore; it's disgusting!"

The man had a sense of humour, anyway.

"So tell me about whatever caught you..."

"Biker chick! Wore a blue/grey armoured suit, my bullets seemed to bounce off! She was vicious and she battered me senseless. When I came too, I was cuffed and in the back of a damn Cop car!"

I smirked, but also felt concern, knowing that my daughter had been shot, several times, apparently.

Indian Knoll Road

The drive home had been long, as usual and had taken almost an hour.

I hated the long drive. However, I loved the house we owned, some thirty or so miles due west of Chicago. I parked the car in the garage and rushed into the house.

"Hailee!"

"Up here, Mom!"

I ran up the stairs and found my daughter in the bathroom. She was not a shy girl and sat there topless, examining the welts on her chest.

"I heard that some idiot shot you."

"Yeah, slight miscalculation on my part!" Hailee grimaced as she pulled on her bra.

"You're staying out longer, Hailee; what's up?"

"Nothing, Mom, just juggling my schedule is all."

"Yeah! You eaten yet?"

"No, Mom; I'm, starving!"

"Thought so."

Hailee hated cooking for herself. Given a choice, she always left it to me. Ultimately, I was very pleased that another day had gone past with my daughter still alive.

I headed to the kitchen to make dinner.

The following morning Thursday

Mom was already gone for work by the time I hauled myself out of bed.

I really needed to find a boyfriend. I was actually considering that kid who worked down at D-JAK; he was cute, very cute. Although, as I understood it I was two and a half years older than him, but who cared! We had spoken several times and I had heard from another source that he fancied me.

First things first, breakfast!

D-JAK

"Hey, Mrs Wilson!"

"Oh, hello, Hailee. How you doing, this morning?"

"Good, very good, thanks. Err, is Kyle about?"

"Storage room..."

"Thanks!"

I headed over to the storage room and found Kyle stacking some mats.

"Hi, Kyle."

"Hi, Hailee."

"You free lunchtime?" I asked brazenly.

"Hell, yeah, pizza?" Kyle replied, looking excited.

"At the Mall?"

"See you there about one?" Kyle suggested.

"It's a date!"

The Mall

The place was heaving with people, which was fine.

Crowds were anonymous and I liked anonymous. At five minutes to one, I took a seat in the pizza place. I was joined, a few minutes later, by a grinning Kyle. We ordered and then chatted until the pizza arrived. Kyle was a nice guy who did not take advantage of people and I enjoyed his conversation.

"So how did you get involved at D-JAK?" I asked.

"Long story, but I was going out with a girl called Chloe, when I met Dave and Mindy. They run the place. Mindy was training me before they started D-JAK," Kyle replied.

My heart almost skipped a beat at the mention of Chloe and then Dave and Mindy.

"Cool!" I replied. "You like Dave and Mindy, then?"

"Of course! They are the best. There is nobody kinder in the city. Mindy is a lovely person to know."

That matched.

"They seem like nice people."

The conversation then moved away to other subjects and after finishing our pizza, we wandered around the Mall, before we went to see a movie, which while entertaining was not enough to distract us from each other.

Halfway through the film, we began kissing.

Safe House Petra

That evening I geared up, ready for another night on the town.

My graphite black, Honda CBR1000RR Fireblade was my most prized possession and one of the last things that my father had bought for me. I treasured it like nothing else; I loved the adrenalin rush from the speed and acceleration. I pulled on my grey, full-face helmet over my mask and double-checked my equipment.

I checked my Beretta Px4 Storm Compact pistols, my spare ammunition, my communications and finally, my twin Tactical Katana swords. I was ready. I started the engine and felt the throb of the powerful machine course through me. I kicked the machine into gear and gently eased the throttle open and moved out into the night.

Petra was at large!

Chapter 176*: Mathilda At large

Thursday night

Chicago

The night was quiet.

I liked quiet, but experience had taught me that quiet was not always good. Chicago was a city. A City meant crime. Crime meant criminals. Criminals meant some form of disruption, such as noise.

I cruised the dark streets looking for anything out of the ordinary, but to no avail. I buzzed a few Cop cars, just for some fun and tormented a pair of Cops that worked for my Mom. For some reason Mindy had ordered me to wind them up whenever possible!

"Goddamn vigilantes!" Sergeant Fellowes moaned as he mopped up his spilt coffee.

"Did that bitch put you up to this?" Sergeant Murphy demanded.

"And what bitch might that be?" I asked innocently.

"Hit Girl!"

"That's for me to know and you to find out!" I replied, accelerating away at speed.

"I feel uneasy with the city unprotected."

"I know, Paul, I know, but Mindy did say that we could trust Petra, even if she is another annoying bitch who loves winding Cops up!" Sam Fellowes replied with a grimace.

"At least somebody is out there keeping the flag flying," Paul Murphy commented.

"Let's get back to work. We're supposed to be chasing after the likes of Petra and turning them into Sergeant Richards."

"Yeah! You going to see Marcus, this evening?"

"Why not!"

Northwestern Memorial Hospital

"Evening, Boss!"

"Great, more damn grief!" Marcus moaned.

"Not getting it in here then?" Paul asked, ignoring the presence of Paige.

"I tried!" Marcus replied with a smirk at Paige.

"Is that all you think about?" Paige demanded with a laugh.

"A good chunk of the day, yeah," Marcus admitted.

Paige laughed.

"You've already done enough damage!" Paige said, unconsciously rubbing her belly.

"So I can't do anymore damage!" Marcus persisted.

"You are incorrigible; just like Mindy and Megan..."

Paige tailed off and went silent.

"What is it?" Marcus demanded. "How come Mindy and Megan have not visited?"

"Mindy made us swear not to tell you till they had left..." Paul began.

"What?" Marcus said loudly. "You're more scared of Mindy than me?"

"No offence Boss, but, yeah," Paul admitted with a smile.

"Where are they?" Marcus said after closing his eyes for a minute.

"They are pursuing the shooter. They left yesterday for Gotham," Sam said.

"Gotham! That fucking hell hole!" Marcus exploded. "Who?"

"The whole team, Marcus," Paige said.

"Megan?"

"Yes. Curtis, Tommy, Marty, Abby, Josh, Erika and Dave, too," Paige admitted. "Chloe and Mindy have been in Gotham since Monday."

"Alone!" Marcus was appalled.

"They were the advance team. They're fine; they check in every few hours."

"Okay. Just please keep me informed!"

West 18th Street and South Indiana Avenue

I sensed that something was wrong the minute I set foot outside my apartment building.

I turned east on West 18th Street towards the 18th Street Metro Station. I was just about to cross South Calumet Avenue when there were four large cracks and four cars started to burn from the inside. Next, I could hear the sharp crack of small calibre rounds. I dived for cover, along with everybody else. I was not heading for a job, so was not 'equipped' which was not to say that I was unarmed!

I pulled out my cell and dialled a number, given to me by Hit Girl, whom I understood, was not available for an unspecified amount of time. The call was answered by a voice I did not recognise.

"Good evening, Mathilda!"

Whoever it was, they knew my name!

"Who is this?"

"I am Petra and I have cunts to hunt, so speak fast!"

"18th Street Metro Station. Explosions. Gunfire."

"Cool! On my way, I'll call you when I'm close. Stay safe."

Petra was gone.

Even though I had been on the phone, I had been looking around observing and what I saw was not good. I was out of my element, by quite a bit. I was in the middle of Hit Girl shit. I killed from the shadows, not out in the open. Not to mention that while I was armed, I was not exactly carrying my usual armourey. I debated heading back home, but no, I needed to help Petra put down whatever was going on around me.

My cell rang.

"You having fun, yet?"

It was Petra.

"I assume you are watching me?"

"Take the fun out of it, why don't you!"

"Look, bitch, we have work to do..."

"Temper, temper, Mathilda. One o'clock, down the alleyway."

